Leave msg @ 549-0627

Sick of DC Meal Plan?
Meal Plan in exchange for kitchen work
If interested call
Jim Houston at 253-9015
At 496 North Pleasant St

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

Grand finale Friday at Curry Hicks Cage

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

A raging piece of history will occur down at the Curry Hicks Cage this weekend, as one era ends before another begins.

Fans will climb into the Cage for one last roar Friday night at midnight against the University of Southwestern Louisiana, marking the last time the men's basketball team will play at their home for over 60 years. Next Thursday, the Minutemen move to the 9,493 seat William D. Mullins Center.

Having won 19 of their last 21 games in the Cage, UMass is coasting out on a 13-game Cage winning streak. Suffice it to say that head coach John Calipari's squad is virtually unbeatable in the Cage.

"There's not too many people that can beat us in the Cage," Calipari said earlier this season. "I'd play Kansas here, I'd play Duke."

With nearly 500 students waiting out in front of the Cage for tickets Wednesday night, fans seem to be saving the best for last. SW Louisiana head coach Marty Fletcher said he knows what to expect from the Cage crazies.

"They couldn't find anyone stupid enough to come up there, so they called me," said Fletcher. "We're the sacrificial lambs for the last game at the Cage."

SW Louisiana (11-7) is a team on a roll, having won five of its last six games. Point guard Michael Allen is among the nation's leading scorers, averaging 22.6 points per game. Allen is a prolific 3-point shooter, averaging almost 43 percent from long distance.

Other probable starters include guard Byron Starks (13.5 ppg), and forwards Todd Hill (14.8 ppg, 6.5 rebounds), Cedric Mackyeon and Carroll Boudreaux. No Ragin' Cajun starter is taller than 6-foot-9, which means the Minutemen should match up well.

Harper Williams has performed well since recovering from a broken hand. The 6-foot-7 forward leads the team in points with 17.3 and is second in rebounds with 8.7. In front of a national audience on ABC last week, Williams proved his game was as strong as ever by netting 22 points in a 79-69 win over DePaul.

Williams and company have always thrived in the national TV spotlight. Lou Roe is the best example. Roe is averaging nearly 20 points per game when the camera is on (he had 19 versus DePaul), hence owning the nickname "TV."

The contest itself is obviously shadowed by the hype, hoopla, and history surrounding the last Cage game. With ESPN televising the game live coast to coast, there will be a large throng of UMass alumni tuning in.

"It's the last game at the Cage ever and we want it to be memorable," said Calipari. "Everyone needs to be up for the game, and let the nation know what the Cage has meant to UMass."

Game notes: The athletic department will honor all of the captains and coaches responsible for every NIT and NCAA banner at the Cage. A presentation will be made at halftime recognizing their acheivements.

Calipari has been practicing late at night for the last two nights to get his team ready for the midnight tip-off.

The game, as always, can be heard on WHMP 99.3 FM and WMUA 91.1 FM, along with ESPN. Doors open at 10:00 p.m.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Tony Barbee (22) doing what he does best.

Minutewomen post big win

Lady Hawks fall to women's basketball team 65-56

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

Make no mistake about it: University of Massachusetts women's basketball is back.

After being picked to finish last in the Atlantic-10, the Minutewomen knew they wouldn't get much respect from their opponents this season. That all could change, however, as UMass took control from the opening tip-off last night in the Curry Hicks Cage and played solid defensively the rest of the way to beat conference foe St. Joseph's, 65-56.

St. Joseph's, a team that UMass had not beaten in 20 attempts, was picked to win the A-10 during the preseason, so the victory for Coach Joanie O'Brien's troops is very sweet, to say the least.

"This is a huge win for us," said an elated O'Brien. "We came out very, very aggressive right from the start and played well the rest of the game.

"It's funny, I had no idea that we had never beaten these guys until I got here tonight," she said. "I guess there's a first time for everything."

In the first half, with UMass down 9-8, guard Maleeka Valentine (12 points) engineered a 14-0 run with six points, forcing St. Joe's to call time. But the Lady Hawks came out of the huddle with a vengeance, using pressure defense and some tough offensive rebounding to cut the lead to four at the half behind the hot shooting of last years A-10 three-point queen, and All-America candidate Katie Curry (8 pts. first half, 18 game).

The game would be nip-and-tuck the rest of the way as neither the Minutewomen nor the Lady Hawks could pull away. With 11:38 remaining in the game, a layup by point guard Tricia Hopson (nine pts., four assists) pushed the UMass lead up to six but St. Joe's fought back and tied the game at 50 with five minutes remaining.

UMass' tower of power Melissa Gurile (nine rebs) responded with two consecutive jumpers and the Minutewomen seemed to be controlling the tempo of the game until the Lady Hawks tied it at 56 with 1:25 left on the clock. These would be their last points of the game.

Also playing well for UMass was Octavia Thomas (12 pts, 11 rebs), who was a force on the inside all game long displaying strength, quickness and a never-say-die attitude on the court that every coach loves.

Women's gym opens home schedule

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

Talented. Alfie Mitchell, head coach of the University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team (0-2), would use this one adjective to describe his 1992-93 squad.

However, talented teams do not always reap success, whatever the circumstances may be.

"Whenever you have high talent [in gymnastics], it means you are going to be throwing in more risk. When you have more risk, that means there is more of a chance to break," said Mitchell.

The Minutewomen are gymnasts who are personable, according to Mitchell, but they have very strong personalities. A problem with this is team chemistry, and Mitchell knows this is one of the keys to his team's success.

"[Chemistry] was the biggest concern coming into this season. I felt if we could get everyone to blend, in the right situations, then we would do really well, because the talent was already there," Mitchell said.

Some of this potential includes seniors Tammy Marshall, Lisa-Beth Cronen and Abby May, juniors Margaret Furtado and Angela Jent, and sophomore Gina Demeo.

Even though floor is her strongest event, Marshall is the 1992 NCAA Vault Champion, so her accomplishments speak for themselves.

"Tammy's strengths are almost everything actually. Her weakest event would have to be bars; her beam is fantastic and her floor exercise is more than fantastic.

"She is one of the few gymnasts in the country that uses an Arabian double front for her opening tumbling run. Most people have trouble doing it because of its blind landing," said Mitchell.

The Minutewomen dropped their first two meets of the season to the University of Florida and Towson State, scoring 185.15 and 183.10 respectively in the two losses.

Entering the home opener in Boyden Gym, tomorrow afternoon at 2 p.m. against the University of Rhode Island (3-0), UMass must be wary of this Atlantic 10 foe. Led by All-Around threat junior Shannon Erwin, the WRams are streaking into Amherst, having scored 186.50 and 183.40 in their first two meets.

Other Notes From The Mat: In the Towson State meet, Abby May scored a career best 9.65 on the balance beam. On the uneven bars, Lisa-Beth Cronen scored a 9.55 in Florida, her career best.

Tammy Marshall won the All-Around in both of the meets so far this season with scores of 38.85 and 38.45.

Notes from the NBA Hardwood

It is time for the first weekly edition of Notes from the NBA Hardwood, as I scan and probe the professional ranks in the world of basketball. I kept my nose to the proverbial grind stone over intersession, and now have my observations from around the NBA.

As of press time, the hottest team in the league is the San Antonio Spurs. Yes, what a change from the beginning of the season, when Jerry Tarkanian was in Mr. Robinson's neighborhood.

Arthur
STAPLETON

Before Tark the Shark was canned, many critics hollered that there was a huge need for a point guard. Well, they found one, and his name is John Lucas, the three-time drug loser who now is coaching the scorching Spurs.

Lucas has given life to Avery Johnson, his starting point guard, who was buried at the end of the bench by Tark. Lloyd Daniels, another recovering drug addict, has another reason to celebrate. Just think of the parties Daniels and his coach have on the weekends! Only kidding, Lloyd-fans.

Speaking of recovering drug addicts, Richard Dumas of the Phoenix Suns has burst into stardom at the small forward spot aside Lord Charles. Barkley has been quoted as saying Dumas will be one of the top fifteen players in the league if he keeps his head on straight.

The Suns start three All-Stars in KJ, Dan Majerle, and Barkley, and Dumas eventually could make it four. However, the one position that Phoenix is weak at is center. The combination of Tom Chambers, Mark West and the Big O cannot compete with the supreme pivot men in the game today.

A team that has yet to get huge publicity but will be in the running for this entire season is Seattle, led by the most exciting and innovative player in the NBA, Shawn Kemp. Earlier in the year, the well-balanced Sonics handled the Suns, proving they will stay in the thick of the race for the duration.

In the East, the Tale of Two Pats, Riley and Ewing, has been up and down all season long. After acquiring Charles Smith, Doc Rivers, Rolando Blackman, and Tony Campbell, the Knickerbockers seemed to be bound for greatness.

Well, one thing Riley found out is that too much talent may indeed be just that: too much. By starting erratic Greg Anthony at the point, attempting to replace underrated and now L.A. Chipper Mark Jackson, the Knicks lost a lot of stability when it came to crunch time.

Turn to NBA, page 15

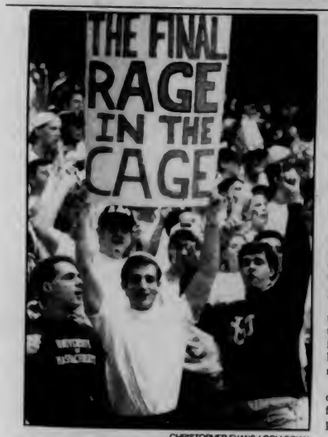
Monday February 1, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 67

Windy, very cold, chance of snow. Temps in the mid-teens.

Arts & Living:
Julie Bozzi's new exhibit "American Food" is now on display at the University Gallery. The display is an ensemble of Americana, including the marshmallows. Page 7.

Sports:
Read Dan Wetzel's conversation with Gene the ESPN cameraman as they discuss booze, TV and The Cage. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890



CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
4,058 fans gathered for a historic, final midnight farewell to The Cage last Friday. See Sports, page 12.

U.N. gives up on Bosnia

Heavy fighting continues after peace talks collapse

By MAUD S. BEELMAN
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — U.N. peacekeepers gave up trying to restore power in Sarajevo after repair crews were shot at in fighting that escalated after the collapse of peace talks, U.N. officials said Sunday.

Heavy fighting also was reported in other parts of the former Yugoslav republic.

In neighboring Croatia, that republic's president threatened to expand a 10-day-old offensive against Serbs in southern Croatia. Meanwhile, a gaping hole that developed in a bombed dam in Croatia was repaired, but the structure still posed a danger is flooding for 20,000 people living downstream.

U.N. officers said three teams of engineers and military observers would not try to fix a main electrical transmission line in Sarajevo after coming under heavy fire Saturday despite written guarantees of a cease-fire by the city's Muslim-led defenders and Serb forces besieging the city.

With temperatures below freezing, only about a fifth of Sarajevo gets any electricity, and most of it is reserved for vital institutions such as hospitals, bakeries and the presidency.

None of the approximately 40 U.N. team members were hurt. Bosnian government forces fired directly on two U.N. crews but it was unknown who shot at the other team, said a U.N. spokesman, Cmdr. Barry Frewer.

President Alija Izetbegovic, a Muslim, urged the international community to get tough with rebel Serbs in his republic but said he had relatively little hope of getting help. He spoke in Zagreb, Croatia's capital, on the way home from the collapsed peace talks.

The mediators at the Geneva talks, Cyrus Vance for the United Nations and Lord Owen of the European Community, said they would report to the U.N. Security Council this week. Owen said it could use "political, economic or military means" to force a settlement of the ten month-old Bosnian war.

But the international community has been unable to agree on enforcing a no-fly zone over Bosnia, trade sanctions against Serbia-dominated Yugoslavia are being violated and there are sharp divisions among Security Council members about how to proceed.

"At this point, we don't see how the war can end," Izetbegovic told reporters.

Owen said Sunday that the United States and European Community members should not take further action while hope remained for a negotiated settlement.

The Clinton administration says it is reviewing U.S. policy on Bosnia, but Izetbegovic said his government was not counting on direct U.S. intervention.

"To be honest, we only believe in ourselves," he said. "Why should American men come to Bosnia to fight for freedom when our men are ready to fight?"

Asian students debate proposed move of center

By KENNETH MAISONET
Collegian Staff

Asian-American students at the University of Massachusetts said they are concerned about the proposed moving of the United Asian Learning Resource Center to an off-campus location.

Students said they want the center, currently located in Knowlton, to be moved to Johnson Residence Hall. Johnson has a greater number of Asian students as well as more space, students said.

Approximately 250 students attended a dance in the Student Union Ballroom Saturday night which served as an opportunity for students to rally and support a petition for the new location for the United Asia Learning Resource Center (UALRC).

Paul Gee, president of the University of Massachusetts Asian American Student Association (AASA), said he believes this issue is of great importance to Asian and Asian-American students who are attending the University.

"There is a need to educate the students regarding our status, and this dance is just the beginning of our coalition building efforts with the other Resident Student Organization's," Gee said.

Issued Jan. 28, 1993 in a press release, the newly-formed Asian Registered Student Organization Alliance criticized the University administration's plans to relocate the United Asia Learning Resource Center (UALRC).

In the press release, students criticized what they perceived as the relocation of the UALRC to a location further off campus and away from the center of student population, because they said they felt it would weaken the purpose of the center.

The purpose, according to students, is to provide the essential advising, counseling, tutorials and overall academic support to Asian students at the University of Massachusetts."

Currently the UALRC is located in the Knowlton basement in Northeast Residence Area and has only two full-time staff members who serve approximately 400 students, according to AASA members. Both the UALRC and the United Asia Cultural Center are situated in the same location.

Amy Chee, a senior and AASA member, said she became involved with the organization because "it's my responsibility to voice concern on issues that directly and inductively have an impact on the lives of Asian and Asian-American students."

"The Asian Alliance not only provides an opportunity for social interaction, but stresses academic support which I consider a very powerful tool that students need in order to ensure that they perform well and stay in school," Chee said. "There is also the question of adequate and sufficient funding for staff and tutorials."

Chee said the space for the Cultural Center and UALRC consists of one office, a 10 by 30 foot open space and two temporary tutorial rooms.

The Cultural Center is a separate entity whose mission is to strengthen community and relations through cultural programming, according to the Center's constitution.

Chee said 36 percent of the first year students were on academic probation for fall 1992. The majority of Asian-American students are not classified as English as a Second Language students because they are born in the United States and not in Asia and speak fluent English.

Asian students are the largest ethnic minority group on campus, Chee said.

Representatives of AASA met earlier last month with the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs Thomas Robinson to discuss and address this problematic issue.

"The meeting was constructive," Robinson said at the end of the meeting. "At best there was a mutual agreement that this issue needs to be further analyzed, in hopes of a more feasible outcome."

Despite the administration's stand on what it perceives to be a "temporary" and viable location for the Resource Center, Chee said she believes the administration has basically provided a no-win situation.

"The administration is gambling with the needs and services of the students — we haven't been given any option, we either take hold of the space or lose it to another program will be considered.

"This presents a inconvenience and the Administration assumes that most Asian students can juggle a 45 minute increase in their daily schedule due to the location," Chee said. "This will impede upon the student's overall academic performance."

Turn to CENTER, page 2

Dorm security upgraded

New committee prompts improvements

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

The harassment University of Massachusetts resident assistants experienced last semester, highlighted by the assault on Arlens Barosy, prompted the University's administration last fall to gather a group of eight students and faculty to "examine RA responsibilities, training, support and supervision."

"I was very concerned with the whole event," Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Thomas Robinson said. "[The Resident Assistant Role Review Committee] worked awfully hard in a short period of time. They really put it together."

Jean Delbrune, a senior who is in his fourth semester as a resident assistant in Southwest, said in the past there has not been a "show of appreciation from Residental Education. Some [RAs] feel uncompensated for things we deal with."

Turn to SECURITY, page 4

Car hits student in wheelchair

University of Massachusetts student David W. Harte, 22, was struck by a car and thrown from his wheelchair as he attempted to cross the Campus Center service walk adjacent to North Pleasant Street on Friday at approximately 1 p.m., University officials said.

A white Chevy Corsica driven by Richard Vear, 40, of Springfield, hit Harte as he moved behind a parked University truck to cross the walk, according to University officials. The Corsica was owned by the the General Services Administration, an agency of the federal government.

Harte, who lives in Amherst but is originally from Chelmsford, was sent to Health Service's Emergency room and was released, according to University Health Services.

Harte suffered facial injuries from the accident.

A crowd of approximately 25 people gathered after the accident.

Vear was cited for driving on the sidewalk, University officials said.

Police said the accident is being investigated.

—CHRISTINA ROTHWELL

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN
WINTER WONDERLAND — The town of Amherst sparkles under a freshly fallen coat of snow yesterday afternoon. Didn't realize it was this pretty out here, did ya?

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inès Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Eric Beal

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

■ center

continued from page 1

"Our proposal in the meeting with the vice chancellor was to seek a location in a residential area and more specifically an area associated with the majority of affiliated UALRC students," Chee said.

In a closing statement issued by the Asian RSO Alliance, members said the concerns of students must be addressed.

"We have an unacceptable number of students in academic jeopardy and this must be resolved and curbed from getting worse," the statement said. "Any unwise movement of the UALRC would be detrimental to the effectiveness of the program."

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, February 1, 1993

Volunteers — The Counselor/Advocate Program at the Everywoman's Center is looking for volunteers to work against violence against women. Application deadline is Feb. 13. Call 545-3474 fore more information.

Support Group — The Everywoman's Center in conjunction with Health Services will be offering a free, confidential, pro-choice post-abortion support group for women. The group will meet for six weeks on Monday evenings from 5:15 to 6:45 beginning Feb. 22, 1993. For more information and to register, call 545-0883.

Support Group — The Everywoman's Center will be offering a free, confidential support group for lesbians who are in the process of coming out. The group will meet for eight weeks Thursday afternoons from 4:00 to 5:30 at Wilder Hall on the UMass campus. For more information and to register by March 5, call 545-0883.

Help Wanted — Earthfoods, a student-run vegetarian restaurant, is hiring! If you are a hard working, energetic individual, and a full time undergrad, stop by Room 209 in the Student Union and fill out an application due by Thursday, Feb 4.

THE COLLEGIAN IS ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR THE POSITION OF

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

PLEASE CONTACT MICHELLE BAYLISS
COLLEGIAN MANAGING EDITOR
IN CAMPUS CENTER 113
545-0719

THERE WILL BE A MEETING FOR THOSE INTERESTED IN WRITING FOR THE

BLACK AFFAIRS DESK

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1993
AT 6 PM
IN THE COLLEGIAN NEWSROOM
CAMPUS CENTER 113
545-0719

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

BIG MONDAY

Two For One
12" Pizzas
• one item • eat in only •
7 pm - Midnight

$50.00 CASH PRIZE
Highest Score - Full Court Frenzy Basketball

All Major College Basketball Games on the 12 Foot Screen

We're the One to Watch!

University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

 WORKSHOPS ***

$$ JOBS $$

J.E.M.S.

Job Employee Matching System

Tuesday, February 2nd

CAMPUS CENTER ROOM 804-808

11:30 a.m.
2:30 p.m.
4:00 p.m.
6:30 p.m.

LAST CHANCE - NO MORE APPOINTMENTS AFTER FEBRUARY 2nd

> > Non-WorkStudy Students ONLY < <

Student Employment Office
243 Whitmore Administration Building
545-1951

Local News

Mullins Center opens doors to public

Community gathers to tour new facility

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

Members of the University community received a long-awaited first look at the Mullins Arena, as the $48.8 million dollar facility opened its doors to the public for the first time on Sunday.

Balloon animals and free brownies marked the grand opening of the Mullins Center. Hundreds of people from both the campus and surrounding communities crowded in to tour the multidimensional sports facility.

Center employees said they were impressed by the crowd turnout.

Maury McCarthy, a sophomore pre-veterinarian studies major, said, "This is really a place for everyone. The facilities are great and we've sold a lot of tickets today. It's a good addition to the campus."

Aside from Sunday's events, the first event in the Mullins Center will be a men's basketball game against West Virginia on Feb. 4, 1993.

The Mullins Center gives the campus the distinction of being "a real school" according to Stacey Salinsky, a senior psychology major. She also said, "It will add a lot to the school and will appeal to prospective out-of-state students."

The Mullins is appealing to many, but the Cage will be missed, according to students.

"This new arena is exciting, but it has a totally different effect than the Cage," said Melanie Chaikin, a senior psychology major.

Tom Labierte, a senior civil engineering major, said, "The Cage was too small, and you couldn't always get seats. Now, with the Mullins, more seats will be available."

"This is incredible. There's not a bad seat in the whole house," said Lee Dagle, a senior history major. The only problem was the lack of a center scoreboard, Dagle said.

"I'm so proud to have this at UMass. It's a lot nicer than I thought it would be," Dagle said.

Many students said they were excited about upcoming concerts and events there.

"I can't wait to come see the concerts and the basketball games," said Matt Kane, a junior zoology major. "There's so many seats and concession stands. This place is great."

"I really wish that this could've been built sooner because I only have one semester left to enjoy it," said Pam Stopek, a senior psychology major. Many seniors said they felt the same way, but they remained enthusiastic.

"Any place that gives away balloon animals is the place for me," said Rich Toomey, a senior communications major.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
Skaters enjoy opening day at the University's new Mullins Center

Students enjoy Year of Rooster holiday at UM

By GEORGE ZHU
Collegian Staff

More than 600 Chinese students and scholars gathered last Sunday night in the Student Union Ballroom to celebrate the traditional Chinese New Year.

Jan. 23 was the first day of the Chinese Year of the Rooster, which followed the Year of the Monkey, the designation for 1992.

The Chinese New Year, which is known as the Spring Festival in China, is generally the most important Chinese holiday in the world.

The event included a wide variety of authentic Chinese food, performances by a number of amateur and professional artists and the most recent movie by Chinese director Yimou Zhang, titled "Qiu-Ju Goes to Court."

Two of Zhang's earlier movies, "Ju-Dou" and "Raise the Red Lantern," were nominated for Academy Awards in 1991 and 1992, respectively.

Among the guests in Sunday night's celebration were Barbara Burn, director of the University's International Program Office, Foreign Student Advisor Janet Johnson and Chinese Consular Officials Tiecheng Lu, Shukang Yang and Yue Lin.

Lu, an education counselor for the Chinese Consulate in New York, told the Chinese students at the meeting that they are welcome to go back to China after completing their study here.

"It's understandable that some students are not planning to return for the time-being," Lu said. "But we hope they can still serve their home country in various ways."

Lu said the Chinese Consulate will provide all necessary means to help students returning to China to find jobs.

Lu, formerly the director of the Sichuan Provincial Education Committee, was appointed last December as the head of the Education Section at the Chinese Consulate in New York. Lu was also a visiting professor at the Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering at UMass from 1980 to 1982.

Chinese Consular Officials attended the celebration for the first time in three years.

Chancellor Richard O'Brien, who was unable to attend the celebration because he was out of town on other business, praised the Sino-American student exchange program.

"The exchange program between China and this country which has been so very valuable for this campus is something which I hope will expand in the years ahead," O'Brien said.

"It provides a valuable bridge between the countries, brings very talented people here and develops not only friendly relations but a flow of knowledge and understanding between our two countries."

Gay romance novels 'improve'

Lecture examines changes in genre since the 1960s

By ANDREW LUMB
Collegian Correspondent

Gay and lesbian romance novels have only recently become accurate sources of support for members of the gay, lesbian, and bisexual communities, according to a graduate student at the University of Massachusetts.

Lori Paige, a Ph.D. student in the University's English Department, spoke in "Love in the Bookstacks: The Gay and Lesbian Romance Novel Boom," at Friday's Brown Bag Lunch. Approximately 13 people attended the meeting.

Changes in gay and lesbian romance novels since the 1960's, the differences between gay and lesbian romance novels, and arguments from advocates and critics of these novels formed the basis of the discussion.

Paige said because homosexuality was perceived differently as recently as 30 years ago, the novels described it as a "perverted world [which] lured innocent strangers." She said in these books relationships were "short-lived" and "violent."

Paige said that gay and lesbian romance novels were different because of an "ingrained literary sexism," which grew out of the portrayal of women in older homosexual novels as objects. She also said this portrayal resulted in more cynical gay romance novels.

She said a gay novel often presented a "mysterious, uncommitted figure" — indeed a very serious problem with gay novels is that the main character has "trouble acknowledging affection and commitment."

In their reviews, critics of gay and lesbian romance novels, including Paige's Passion's Legacy (Naiad Press), attack the genre for not dealing with controversial political issues.

Paige said she was criticized for setting her novel in the Victorian era, but said critics apparently did not know that her doctoral work focuses on Victorian poetry.

Paige claims that current romance novels have only "positive implications" because they focus on issues like social acceptance, sexual identity, promiscuity, addictive behavior, and dealing with parents and co-workers.

Paige said the emphasis on these themes causes gays and lesbians to "turn to the books for reinforcement" and a "sense of community."

PE class uses 'explosive force'

By MELISSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

Editor's note: This story is part of an ongoing series on interesting and innovative courses taught at the University of Massachusetts.

Four years of varsity wrestling at Longmeadow High School and the desire to learn a practical program of self-defense led University of Massachusetts freshman Matt Shaw to Krav Maga, an Israeli self-defense system.

One of less than 20 instructors of Krav Maga in the United States, Shaw said he plans to share his knowledge through teaching the system at UMass this semester.

Shaw said Krav Maga allows students to advance to a high skill level at a quick pace.

"I'm hoping to get Krav Magna out as a system where you can train for six months or a year and go out and defend yourself," Shaw said.

Shaw stressed that Krav Maga differs from other forms of martial arts. "Form really isn't a factor. We don't teach a certain way to punch or kick. Everything goes when you're fighting for your life!" he said.

Instead, Krav Maga is based on the natural body movements and one's reflex reactions, Shaw said.

"If you're being attacked and you want to flail your arms in front of you, we take that natural instinct and work with it," Shaw said.

"We also train in the dark a lot, to teach students to defend themselves under a disadvantage," Shaw said.

Krav Maga has been taught to U.S. federal, state and local law enforcement agencies, Shaw said. These include the F.B.I., U.S. Coast Guard and Connecticut State Police.

On a visit to California last summer, Shaw met a member of the Beverly Hills Police Force, another agency which uses Krav Maga. The officer, who had previously worked as a bodyguard for singer Paula Abdul, cited Krav Maga as "the greatest self-defense course he'd ever gotten," Shaw said.

One of the main principles emphasized in Krav Maga is "explosive force," the use of sharp, quick movements in fighting.

"For instance, if someone is trying to choke you and you grab his hands and try to pry them away from your throat, it's probably not going to work," Shaw said. "But, if you bring your hands up and strike with power and speed, it will be enough to force the attackers hands apart. That's explosive force."

Shaw will be teaching Krav Maga at UMass this semester on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 1 p.m. The course is designated as PE G33, General Self-Defense.

Shaw will also be teaching classes at Hillel House and in Springfield.

Hillary is Wellesley's best PR

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — A record number of applications are pouring in to Wellesley College, and officials attribute the surge to the school's most famous graduate — First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The women's college has received more than 2,800 applications, an 11 percent increase over last year and the highest number of applicants ever.

"The fact that this is the largest applicant pool we've ever had points to the fact that we've never had this kind of national publicity," said Janet Lavin, director of admissions.

"Having Hillary in the White House has made a difference to admissions and I think it's made a difference for young women who are choosing the best college for them."

One applicant, Michelle Drake, 17, a high school senior in Edina, Minn., stated on her application form that Clinton was one of her primary reasons for wanting to attend Wellesley.

"I never thought of Wellesley as being in the same caliber of the Ivy Leagues, but that showed me that Wellesley is competitive with any school in the nation," Drake told the Boston Sunday Globe.

Nancy Kolodny, dean of the college, said she expects the increased publicity to boost job prospects for graduates and bring more funding to the school.

Having an alumna in the White House has also turned some Wellesley faculty into mini-celebrities.

Political Science Professor Alan Schechter, who taught Clinton and was her thesis adviser, has been interviewed by reporters from across the country, as well as some from Italy, Germany and Russia.

Schechter estimated he has spent hundreds of hours discussing Clinton's work, her campus activities, her idealism, her politics and whether she had ever expressed an interest to him about becoming First Lady.

Students inquire about what courses she took, what her theses was about, what her grades were and how they can be like her.

"I have to say, although it's been incredibly time-consuming, I've loved every minute of it," Schechter said. "All along I've been trying to tell people that they shouldn't be surprised that a Wellesley College grad is in the White House."

SHOOT FOR THE COLLEGIAN

SEE MATT IN CAMPUS CENTER 113

Proper Attire For The Well-Dressed Software Graduate.

Although fashions sometimes seem to change as quickly and with as much regularity as the weather, the simplest way to dress for success after graduation is still as easy as putting on a Motorola Codex employee identification tag.

As a wholly owned subsidiary of Motorola, Inc., Motorola Codex is the world's leading independent supplier of complete networking solutions. We provide all the elements for distributed data and voice networks, from a broad line of communication products to a full range of services including systems integration. And when it comes to starting a successful and rewarding career, few companies can offer you the unbounded opportunity you'll find at Motorola Codex.

In order to help us maintain and further strengthen our leadership standing, we seek to add open-minded, forward-thinking individuals to our staff in the following area:

Data Communications Software Opportunities
Canton, MA

Several immediate and future opportunities exist in a variety of challenging product development areas for recent graduate and undergraduate degreed students who have achieved GPA's of 3.0 or better, and possess solid backgrounds in the area of software engineering. These positions will involve performing design, development, test and sustaining engineering functions for our networking products.

To qualify for these opportunities, applicants must possess an MS or BS degree in Computer Science or Computer Engineering, be proficient in "C" programming language, and have experience in a UNIX® or PC environment.

Applicants must be presently authorized to work in the United States on a full-time basis as we are unable to sponsor individuals for the purpose of obtaining visas.

If you possess the intelligence and imagination it takes to be a leader, we invite you to join us – and finish off your wardrobe. To respond, please forward a copy of your resume to: Motorola Codex, College Relations Department-UMASSAM, 20 Cabot Boulevard/C1-60, Mansfield, MA 02048-1193.

We are an equal opportunity employer, M/F/D/V.

MOTOROLA codex

■ security

continued from page 1

Robinson said he has accepted some of the recommendations of the committee in addition to those from ALANA, other RAs, and Housing Services and Public Safety. More security has been added to the towers in Southwest, Robinson said, through a greater number of security receptionists.

Delbrune, a microbiology major, said he has noticed greater security in the towers.

In a letter to the campus community, Robinson said the University has also hired, for the semester, security cluster coordinators, to ensure that security receptionists show up for work. To replace "no-shows," a greater backup pool of security receptionists has been hired, Robinson said.

To prevent those with a restraining order from entering certain dorms, Public Safety will provide security receptionists with lists of people not permitted to enter residence halls. These lists will be updated on a regular basis. Robinson said Public Safety and Housing Services are also discussing the feasibility of instituting a system of visitor or guest passes.

The security sign-in desks have been made more visible and telephones have been added, according to Robinson.

"The current security system in [the] residence halls provides little or no support for RAs in carrying out their responsibilities," the Committee's report said. The report was completed on Dec. 23.

Both RAs and RDs reported that the lack of or poor performance of residence hall security (the security receptionist) is at the root of a number of problems faced by RAs, the report said.

To make sure RAs and security receptionists have a consistent understanding of the alcohol policy, Robinson said the associate director of Housing Services and the assistant director of Public Safety have decided to have regular meetings.

"Problems with the alcohol policy seem to stem from inadequate security and the amount of alcohol that enters the residence halls, rather than from RA responsibilities per se," the report said.

The report said although RAs should not now be carding students, some continue to do so. Some RAs "operate under the mistaken impresssion that an open door makes a student room a public space." Both issues need to be clarified, the committee wrote.

Robinson said the training RAs received this past January included more material on diversity issues.

In addition to these new implementations, Robinson said there will be more changes in the security system.

By next fall, Robinson said he plans to have a 24-hour security system in the towers and in McKimmie/Patterson.

"I think the system is not as smooth as it could be," said senior art history major Haruko Hirose, who assisted in the resident assistant role review committee. "People don't realize how much work [RAs] do."

Hirose, who was an RA for two years in Kennedy, said there was a big problem with residents complying with the bathroom policy.

Robinson said the associate director of housing services will start a committee to examine the bathroom violations, so that changes can be in place for next fall.

COLLEGIAN

MADE WITH PRIDE IN THE U.S.A.

3 Credit Recycling Class

Educ2-354
Intro To Future Studies

Learn about recycling and other waste mgmt issues from the people who deal with them every day!

WHEN: Tues 2:30 - 5:00
SCHEDULE #211663

CALL 545-1153 FOR MORE INFO.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Military's stand is foolish

Gays in the military. The debate rages on and one thing I've noticed is the stunning lack of rational and coherent thought..

First I want to say that lifting the military ban on gays and lesbians (and bisexuals, but who's counting) is not at the very top of my agenda. Legal same-sex marriages, access to health care for all persons, domestic partner benefits for same and mixed-gender relationships (not everyone believes in marriage per se), affordable child care and family leave are all much higher on my post-Christmas wish list. But you've gotta work with what you've got.

Tami MONAHAN

Now to begin, can we all please recognize and understand that gay people serve in the military already. Yes, it's true boys and girls: gay men, lesbians and bisexuals of both sexes have served in the military since its very inception and will continue to serve whether the ban is lifted or not.

What Clinton's action would do is allow those who already serve in the military and those who will serve in the future to do their job to the best of their ability without fear of exposure and discharge. I know, it's radical, but that's what we get for electing a Democrat.

What it would not do is send a legion of six-foot drag queens running into the local recruiting office squealing, "Oh, please put me in the 186th Battalion — they're the cutest!" This is not going to happen.

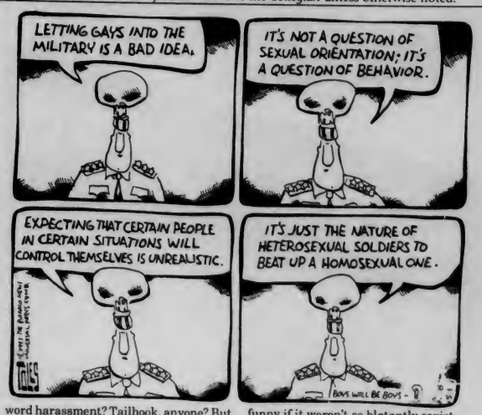
This is not to put down drag queens of any size. In fact it makes an important point: there are many different kinds of gay people out there. Some gay men do dress up in women's clothes. Of course, some heterosexual men dress up in women's clothes, too. The types of men and women who join the military have more in common than not, even if what they do in their private lives is very different.

Now something I've found interesting is the assertion of the top brass that lifting the ban would upset discipline in the military. Horsepucky. I don't profess to be an expert on military life but I strongly suspect discipline isn't really an issue. From what my dad tells me of his army days, if an officer told you to shine the bottom of your boots, you did it. You didn't question.

The top brass knows full well that if they embraced Clinton's initiative, the rank-and-file would accept it and continue to perform as the professionals they are trained to be. They might not like it — I don't think my dad enjoyed shining the bottoms of his boots — but they would accept it.

Discipline was a poor excuse when used to discourage the integration of Blacks and women into the military. And it's a poor excuse now, one that the top brass is using to hide their own homophobia.

And finally, I find it extremely interesting that a number of military men have expressed fear at the thought of gay men in their midst, men who might, say, make unwanted sexual advances. Dare I use the word harassment? Tailhook, anyone? But that, I've heard, was just good, clean, all-American fun. I suspect the women who were made to run through a gauntlet weren't having any fun.



Harassment in any form is deplorable. But to take a sudden interest in the issues of sexual misconduct because men are the theoretical objects of that misconduct, while women deal with that misconduct all the time, is sickening. It would be funny if it weren't so blatantly sexist.

Gay men, lesbians and bisexuals who faithfully, efficiently and professionally serve in the military are not the problem. They never have been and they never will be. Harassment by men or women, of any sexual orientation, for any reason, is a problem that will not be solved by discriminating against anyone.

Tami Monahan is a Collegian staff member.

Marshall's legacy

This past week one of the greatest minds of the 20th century passed away. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall was a man dedicated to attaining justice and peace for our society. As we remember Marshall, let us not forget his call to action and that we must all take up the struggles to which he devoted his life.

Marshall's work affects us all daily. It was Marshall who eloquently argued the 1954 Brown v. Board of Education decision (ending the separate but equal doctrine in public education), changing the face of American education and irreversibly altering our history.

However, he cannot be recalled solely for his struggle against racial injustice. Marshall's adamant position supporting women's reproductive rights, coupled with his efforts toward securing voting rights, demonstrated a multidimensional agenda. His service on the Supreme Court and his efforts as a lawyer for the NAACP (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People) exemplify the dedicated leadership America needs.

College undergraduates are part of the generation who reaped the benefits of the civil rights movement. Much of our education has focused on the achievement and turmoil of that era and has left our generation in awe of the changes that occurred. This awe has often left us in a mode of inaction, yet as Marshall reminds us, apathy is often the worst hinderance to progress.

Let Marshall's life remind us all that change begins when individuals commit themselves to advocating justice. The responsibility for progress is now on our shoulders. Let us rise to the occasion and work with Marshall's ideals as our foundation.

Rachel Grose
Steve Sparling
Amherst

Facing death, writer turns rational?

Wanted: Columnist, should be stupid, perverse and egotistical.

To write a column, it is best to be stupid. Or at least to pretend to be. This occurred to me during a recent brush with mortality which prompted me to wonder hew the ideal replacement columnist would write.

Jesse ARMSTRONG

Strange that at 30,000 feet and facing a watery grave my mind should turn to the Collegian, but it did, and as Capt. Engine Dent's mellifluous voice told us of our small technical problem I was marvelously focused on the ideal qualities of a budding columnist. Apparently the "small" technical difficulty was so small it required a U-turn two and a half hours out over the deep Atlantic, and a return not to Heathrow, London, but to Shannon, Ireland. (I couldn't help but imagine Shannon Airport as a rural cottage and farm track with, maybe, a very powerful C.B. radio.)

Yes, I thought, the primary requirement for a columnist is stupidity, for no one wants to read a reasonable discussion of the pros and cons of, say, gays in the military. The reader desires blood and guts — either a damning indictment of all gays, their life style and fashion sense, or a provocative argument suggesting that homosexuality should not be permitted, but required, in the armed services, including the immediate drafting and naturalization of Quinten Crisp to head the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The pilot's "I'm a man of steel who could land this plane on a falling maple leaf should I need to" voice sounded considerably more shaky when (God, I wish he hadn't) he gave us details of our problem: a lubricating oil leak from the starboard engine. Naturally no one was sure which side was starboard but as the whole airplane examined one engine, then the other, both looked pitiful and ridiculous, shaking on the wings, eminently fallible. The flight number started to sound apocalyptic as I tried it in a variety of t.v. disaster docudrama titles: "Tragedy on Flight 109," "Straight into Oblivion: the True Story of Flight AA109."

As my travelling companion started a frantic note to his girlfriend, I started to think that one also needs to be something of a pervert to write a column, especially in a college paper. After all there is no pay, no perks (it is actually more difficult to get a table in certain restaurants once they know you write for the Collegian), and it is stressful and frustrating. Frustrating because one so rarely elicits a response, a problem not confined to college columnists; one English columnist got so disheartened at never receiving a letter after five years of writing that he took to putting "CRACK IS GOOD FOR YOU" in bold type into all his pieces. He got a visit from the police, but no letters.

To bear the barren weeks of no praise or comment the columnist should be equipped with a third quality: a battleship-sized ego. Who, apart from an ego-maniacal control freak, would wish to inflict their views on the bleary-eyed masses? To be sure one's sense of self must be armor-plated to come out with some startling insight like, "I know the question of race in America is complex, but having thought about it in the Hatch Bar for a quarter of an hour, it seems the solution is for all of us to just get on."

Anyway, as luck would have it our damaged airplane did limp all the way back to Heathrow, where we were transferred to another flight, only to be presented with a fate worse than the hours bobbing in the freezing ocean and dodging oil slicks, used plutonium rods and condoms: for a second time we had to endure the in-flight movie "Pure Country," an appalling tale of the regenerative qualities of country and western music.

Jesse Armstrong, an exhange student from England, is a Collegian columnist.

Generation of imitation seeks its own JFK in Bill Clinton

Willimanticco is a front organization for an enclave of very powerful, evil men whose business one could make some comments about if one knew what they do, which, for my own protection, I do not. Suffice it to say that I was their man in Washington during the week-long bacchanal known as the inaugural. They provided the expense account, I wrote the report. I ask no questions, I get paid and I keep all my favorite organs firmly in place.

I learned a lot in Washington that week. I learned that Fleetwood Mac is a boil on the face of American music. I learned that Stevie Nicks can eat a tray of whipped cream-covered breakfast sausages in just under 60 seconds. I learned that Bill Clinton has an eight-way, floor-standing water bong shaped like a saxophone. And I learned something I have long suspected: that my generation is as unimaginative, morally bankrupt and doomed as vicious little baby piranha swimming in bleach.

Chris J. PETROPOULOS

For the most part, the collegiate masses love Clinton. They think for the first time, the man in the White House reflects their ideals and values. They couldn't be more wrong. Clinton is from another era, a time when America was losing a war and beating its students in the streets. At that time, America needed a certain brand of liberalism to act as a watchdog, and to bring America back in line with its mandate.

The nation is in very different circumstances now. We do not need Mr. Clinton's brand of liberalism. We will see very strange, frightening things happen to this country during the next four years. It is not something to be happy about, and yet those I consider my peers seem to thrilled.

These are the children of the best decade ever in American history, the '80s, and for some reason they are turning their backs on the prosperity that allowed them to grow up healthy and safe and able to watch MTV. There must have been a lot of important MTV to watch, because this generation is the first unable to invent themes and values and heroes of its own, and so has purchased wholesale those of the babyboomers. Packed and sold by MTV.

I asked Clinton about this the night before he became president. He and Hillary and I were all in a limo, and we were all very wasted. "Bill, whadaya think about all these college kids thinking you're the best thing since edible underwear?"

Bill exhaled a cloud of foul smoke and spoke. "Kennedy, they think I'm John Kennedy, the miserable little snot-nosed rats. Hillary, you old sow, we made it, gimme a kiss. . ." We drove on into suburban Virginia, looking for an all night Roy Rogers to get the president-elect some fried meat, or meaty fries, or something.

I must have been in bad shape on the ride home — Willimanticco dumped me in the snow. I gathered my stuff and went inside. I sent out a report to Willimanticco and began preparing for another semester of war with UMass. I settle in to three months of bad craziness, and four years of crass symbolism and vague discomfort coming from 1600 Pennsylvannia Avenue.

Chris J. Petropoulos is a Collegian columnist.

Take a Break from Retail Prices and . . .

YOUR SPRING BREAK IS ON US!

Win a Spring Break Vacation to the Destination of Your Choice or $1,000!

Stop by Wholesale Depot–the members only, cash and carry warehouse–and check out our one and a half acres of first quality, current season, name brand food and general merchandise at super low everyday wholsale prices. Discover the excitement of wholesale prices and enter to win a fabulous vacation or $1,000!

Wholesale Depot is conveniently located at the Mountain Farms Mall Route 9, Hadley

You Don't Have To Be A Member to Check Us Out!

ONE DAY PASS/ENTRY BLANK

Yes! I Want to Take a Break from Retail Prices and win a FREE SPRING BREAK!

Name:
Address:
City/State/Zip:
Daytime Phone#:

Warehouse Hours:
Monday - Friday 11 AM - 9 PM
Saturday 9 AM - 9 PM
Sunday 12 PM - 6 PM

0990000664

Special Hours for Business Members Only:
Mon., Wed., Fri.: 9AM - 11AM
Drawing to be held February 13, 1993.

ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741

Grand Opening Special
at ALPINE COMMONS
Short Term Leases
4 - Bedroom..... $650
3 - Bedroom..... $600
2 - Bedroom..... $550
Includes All Utilities

Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!

Don't wait another day, call today!

256-0741

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Still Tic, Tac, Toeing Through Your Life?

Let us help you make some winning decisions about your future.

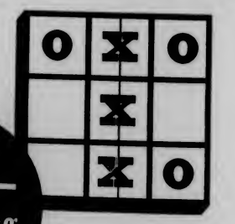
Late register for classes January 27-February 9.



UMass and You – a winning team!

Evening credit courses (over 100 in 37 different departments; most meet just once a week)

UMass Bachelor of General Studies degree — part time!

Noncredit workshops for business or pleasure (nearly 100, all winners)

Available University day courses (hundreds of them, stimulating!)

Division of Continuing Education, 607 Goodell Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Arts & Living

American Food exhibit is a feast for the eyes

By JESSICA TAVERNA
Collegian Staff

While attending an opening reception at the University Gallery last Friday night, a porcelain set of trotters (pigs feet) caught my eye and drew me to an exhibit which, literally, made my mouth water.

Julie Bozzi's American Food entailed a vast array of edibles ranging from salt water taffy to fried corn on a stick. Her audience found themselves enticed by bright colors, rich texture, and everyday materials all transformed into 13 drawers jam-packed with models of every type of food imaginable to the mind.

"Every type of food" is the operative phrase in this instance at Bozzi's delight. She has put a lot of research into gathering a variety of dishes and products.

In 1975 she traveled across the country and began documenting regional similarities. She then realized that there was too great a range and decided to focus on food.

She got her ideas from restaurants, supermarkets, advertising, menus, magazines, trade periodicals and basic observation.

The ensemble was selectively diverse wherein it focused on varied cultural and regional norms. Each of the drawers represented a different genre.

There were drawers restricted to Mexican-American food, Chinese-American food, and soul food, as well as drawers that focused on candy bars, cold breakfast cereals, donuts, packaged snack cakes and carnival food.

A good percentage of the display at hand consisted of ethnically-oriented items such as tacos, hamhocks with black eyed peas, egg rolls, collard green with chitterlings, catfish with hush puppies and mashed turnips, and salmon croquettes with grits and fried eggs. The remaining drawers consisted of items found most commonly in the "fast food" spectrum, such as chili dogs, nachos, fried corn, hamburgers, pretzels, pizza, candy apples, ice cream, chocolate dipped bananas with nuts, and snow cones.

The drawer that got the most attention, though, had to have been the cereal drawer. This drawer consisted of every type of flake, marshmallow, and shredded wheat ever created to be put on the market as cold cereal. She found everything from the Ghostbusters cereal to bran flakes. There were even special edition American flag Marshmallows that were never marketed, and somewhere in that never ending realm of breakfast cereals she'd come across a shredded wheat square as big as my hand.

Everyone seemed enthralled with this concept of commercial food on display and many were quite moved. I overheard a passerby exclaim, "I think that the artist is trying to show us how many breakfast cereals there actually are, so that we can ask ourselves 'Look, how many more breakfast cereals do we need?.'"

I feel that, through mediums such as wood, plaster, sponge, rubber, seeds, rope, sheet metal, porcelain, wax, and styrofoam, Bozzi has achieved a raising of awareness in a most subtle manner.

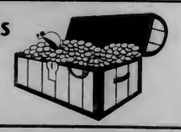
I found her use of 13 cases to display her work quite symbolic. I found myself making a parallel between the 13 cases and the 13 original colonies. These 13 colonies were built on the 'melting pot' theory, in which all immigrants are encouraged to bring the traits and traditions of their homelands to ours so that we're able to create a country which is a compilation of cultures. This description sounds similar to that of Bozzi's exhibit wherein with such stride, she's succeeded in proving that our country is truly a cluster of cultures.

This exhibit will be running through to March 12 and I would encourage all to stop by and be intrigued by Julie Bozzi's depiction of a mere slice of our countries culture.

TOM HALLER / COLLEGIAN
Presenting Julie Bozzis plastered pig's feet now on display in her "American Food" exhibit

TOM HALLER / COLLEGIAN
Bozzi's Donut Drawer also on display at the Fine Arts Center.

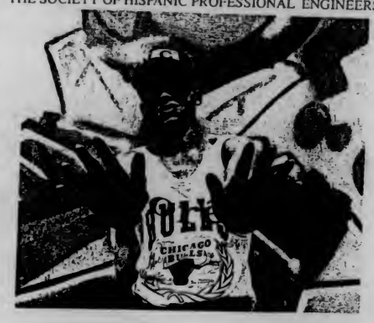
COME SEE WHAT TREASURES AWAIT YOU AT THE COLLEGIAN ARTS DESK CAMPUS CENTER 113



WRITE FOR ARTS & LIVING
SEE JON OR LISA IN CAMPUS CENTER 113

THE SOCIETY OF HISPANIC PROFESSIONAL ENGINEERS

THE OFFICE OF THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS AHORA



UPC RECORDS

LATIN AMERICAN CULTURAL CENTER

Vico C

with Holyoke's own MASS DELIRIUM

YO! IF you like RAP
You'll love Vico-C!
The Best Spanish Rapper is here!

FEB 6th 1993
UMASS AMHERST
Student Union Ballroom
8pm tix: $10 Umass $12 Other
DJed dance following performance!

on sale at: Tix Unlimited, Umass
For The Record, Amherst

Executive Limousine from Northampton

Gleeful Matinee: a return to 50s horror schlock

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

As a rule, I'm a sucker for movies about the movies. Whether it be Fellini's 8 1/2 (for those who think Marcello Mastroianni's career started with Used People, check this one out), the breathtaking Cinema Paradisio, the sly jabs of The Player or even something abstract like Dead Again, there's something validating about the cinema eye turning its gaze on itself.

Joe Dante's charming and imaginative Matinee, turns out to be one of those films. Part coming of age shmaltz, part homage to '50s schlock films, Matinee gleefully works. It creates a nostalgic look back at what was, for many kids of that generation, the very definition of Saturday afternoon entertainment.

Matinee involves itself in two big events that monopolize a weekend in 1962 Key West, Florida. One is the very real threat of the Cuban missile crises, the other is the coming of Lawrence Woolsey (John Goodman), a schlock film producer, who's a jokey hybrid of William Castle and Alfred Hitchcock.

Woolsey is a master showman, who specializes in sometimes elaborate gimmicks to draw people into the theaters. He's in Key West with his actress/girlfriend (Cathy Moriarty) to promote his latest extravaganza, the half-man, half-ant spectacular known as Mant!

The other half of Matinee is a sometimes lame coming of age subplot that involves some of the town's younger denizens. There's the new boy on the Navy base, Gene (Simon Fenton), whose father is on alert over Cuba. He's forced to become surrogate dad to his younger brother and mother.

The other kids, which include Life Goes On's Kellie Martin as a sex kitten wannabee who tries to fend off her reform schooler ex-boyfriend, while trying to snare a good boy (Omri Katz) and Lisa Jakub as a girl who suffers from super-liberal parents, are all engaging and fun to watch.

Everything comes together at the matinee showing of Mant!, and director Dante (Gremlins) let's the comedy go broad and the plot becomes a fast-pace farce. It's here where Dante pulls out all the Speilbergian stops, though some of the forced "magic" never quite sparks.

Most of Matinee is hilarious, especially the clips from Mant! Dante captures the wooden acting, the cheesy effects and the irresistible appeal of those movies that were so bad, they were good.

John Goodman, who has finally found a film role that fits him like a glove, is wonderful. His Lawrence Woolsey is a cigar-smoking P.T. Barnum who isn't in for the money (though it certainly helps) but for the thrill of watching the audience be spooked.

One of the few problems that surface in Matinee is that every once in a while, Matinee's breakneck pace is literally halted by some more serious moments that don't fit. Whether it's silly moments with Gene worrying about his father or some of the more idealistic parallels to the missile crises, Matinee nearly risks losing its delightfulness.

The other problem with Matinee isn't really a flaw, rather a complaint. The film speeds by so fast that I simply wanted more. More of Mant!, more of the relationship between Moriarty and Goodman and more of the kids' characters. As it is now, Matinee's biggest problem is it's too short.

I enjoyed Matinee for how its criss-crossing subplots came together, the lively performances and the clever, nostalgic tone. It's a rollicking good time at the movies, and its few problems just prevent Matinee from being an even better film. Sure, it's as fluffy as a large popcorn, but it's never stale. B

UMOC
UMASS Outing Club
Try:
Hiking • Backpacking • Canoeing
Kayaking • Caving • Cross-Country Skiing
Rock Climbing • Ice Climbing • Mountaineering
...and more!
UMass Outing Club is having it's first meeting of the semester.
Monday, Feb. 1 • Campus Center Auditorium
We Take People Out In The Woods And Do Things To Them...

Want the Boston Globe delivered?
Monday - Friday and Sunday
Call 1-800-858-4275
Then press zero

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Bavarian
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

BANANARAMA
fabulous frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton • Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888
SAME DAY DELIVERY

• MOVIE POSTERS • OLD MASTERS • ROCK POSTERS • CARS • AFRICAN AMERICAN ART • MODERN & ABSTRACT • MATISSE • HUMOR • TRAVEL • POSTER SALE
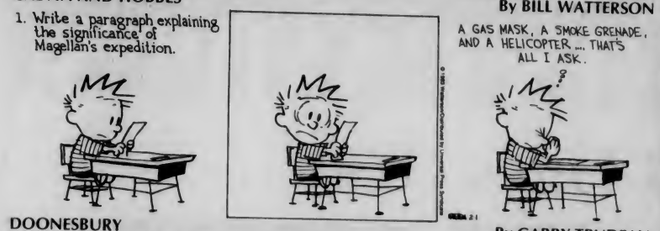
Most Images Only $5, $6 and $7
Sponsor: WMUA
Date: Mon. Feb. 1 thru Fri. Feb. 5
Time: 9 A.M. - 4:30 P.M.
Place: Student Union Ballroom
Biggest & Best Selection
• CONTEMPORARY BLACK & WHITE PHOTOGRAPHY • TALBOT • MONET • VAN GOGH • WYETH • GALLERY PRINTS • ANIMAL POSTERS • ORIENTALS • ROMANCE • FANTASY •
• WARHOL • DALI • ANSEL ADAMS • ROCKWELL • PICASSO • MC ESCHER • NATURE • MUSIC • FLORALS • MARILYN MONROE • EINSTEIN • SKIING •

CALVIN AND HOBBES — By BILL WATTERSON



DOONESBURY — By GARRY TRUDEAU

JIM'S JOURNAL — By JIM

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED — By CHRIS SHADOIAN

PRICE — By PRICE VAN RAY

SKATE BOY AND RURU — By PITT

THE FAR SIDE — By GARY LARSON

Monday night in the woods

Quote of the Day

"But there was a fire in his belly this morning, an intensity and sense of purpose."
– H.G. Bissinger
Friday Night Lights

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DOE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A surprising opportunity will come your way. Dress attractively but on the conservative side. An evening out may include a club function or business meeting.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your desire to implement new methods quickly may have a steamroller effect on your associates. Work your way up by taking smaller steps without fanfare.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put your determination and innovative methods to work, even if you must postpone socializing. Sticking to a strict timetable guarantees you better business results.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Curb a tendency to withdraw when others question your ideas. You must learn to speak out when something is important to you. An older person could prove to be your strongest ally.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An excellent time to find out the truth and clear up puzzling mysteries. A friend is the bearer of terrific news. Financial problems ease. Letters have special importance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Going along with established procedures will let you make faster headway. Do not allow someone's opinion of you to affect your morale. You cannot afford to rock the boat in romance now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Learn how to hold others spellbound. Then you will be in a position to command top dollar for your skills. Get down to brass tacks in financial negotiations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take a firm line this morning. Afternoon will bring many changes. Socializing adds a special dimension to your evening. Listen carefully to teenager's problems before offering advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could find yourself in unusual circumstances by late morning. Do not give way to panic or anger. Things will straighten themselves out if you keep your cool.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It would be easy to make a bad bargain now. Keep your eyes open. Stand up for your rights if someone tries to put you down or stop a wonderful project.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A hasty decision could boomerang. Review your options before announcing your intentions. Self-pity can be dangerous. Look to the future with confidence. Try new methods.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Business obligations and domestic duties will keep you on the run today. You are more aware than ever of your responsibilities. Romance enjoys favorable influences.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Mr. Parot
5 Hand-dyed fabric
10 Exclamation of relief
14 Border on
15 Soap substitute
16 Entertainer Fatima
17 Ready to pick
18 Haphazardly
20 Shoe width
21 Instead
22 — a hand helps
23 Carries on 25 Gone by 26 Combined
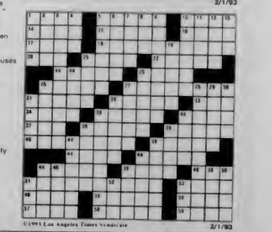
27 February 12, to Lincoln
31 Inklings
32 Huey, Russell and Earl
33 Actress Lupino
34 "My — are soaked"
35 Spanish-American dance
36 Blooper
37 "— for the money..."
38 Window divisions
39 Cornishmen et al
40 Las
42 Highly amuses
43 Acerbate
44 Pres
45 Marriage notices
47 Browse
48 Finesse
51 Trickery
53 Sad
54 Rainbow goddess
55 Dovish deity
56 Fashion magazine
57 Camp cover
58 Fresher
59 Ogles

DOWN
1 Unusual
2 Theater award
3 Marvelous
4 Sault — Marie
5 Cried
6 Faulty
7 Enameled metalware
8 Fated or founded beginning
9 Bogart-Bacall movie
10 Square base
11 Clutch
12 Building wings
13 Route
19 Cozy places
21 12/24 and 12/31
24 Fruit drinks
25 Sharp sounds
26 Swirl style
27 Actress Lisa
28 Loiter
29 Mine entrances
30 Sounds from the kanner
31 Blockhead
32 Knightly arm
35 Nose dive
36 Connery or Young
38 — the Elder Roman naturalist
39 Tartan designation
41 Hemingway
42 One with perseverance
44 — of the crime
45 Wet blanket
46 Allied
47 Misrepresent
49 — of thumb
50 Kickoff props
51 "Top Ten" song
52 Mine find
53 Honey maker

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

R	O	N	A	■	S	E	T	S	■	B	A	T	E	S
A	M	O	S	■	P	T	E	R	■	I	S	A	I	T
J	A	W	A	■	M	A	N	I	N	E	■	H	U	H
A	R	I	A	■	A	R	E	S	■	O	R	E	A	D
■	■	■	L	T	A	■	T	O	N	E	■	■	■	■
C	H	A	R	L	E	M	A	G	N	E	■	C	L	A
L	E	A	K	E	D	■	T	O	O	T	■	L	A	S
A	I	R	S	■	A	R	I	A	■	B	A	I	T	S
I	D	O	■	A	T	L	A	S	■	A	D	A	M	Y
M	I	N	■	G	A	M	A	L	■	A	S	S	E	S
■	■	■	R	O	M	A	■	E	E	R	■	■	■	■
K	L	I	E	G	■	A	R	E	■	U	S	O	■	■
N	I	C	H	O	L	A	S	■	R	O	M	A	N	O
J	O	E	■	O	W	E	N	S	■	S	I	D	E	■
T	O	R	N	■	T	E	A	S	■	S	T	A	R	■

2/1/93



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Sarah LeVesque
Copy Editor ..... Stacey Malone
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Seth Kaye
Production ..... Jim Bruneau, Emily Beebe

Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Meatball Grinders	Mandarin Chicken
Turkey Sandwich	Veal Cutlets
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Humus Sandwich	Mandarin Chicken
Turkey Sandwich	Cauliflower Casserole

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University

BACK ON CAMPUS!

4 Days Only

NOBODY'S PERFECT

"Best Of Both Seasons" Sale

Starts Monday Feb. 1 at 8AM

Ladies & Mens clothing from the 5 best known specialty stores in the United States at 40% to 90% off their original prices!

Spring

Denim Jeans	Knit Tops	SHORTS
$14.99	$5.99 - 9.99	$9.99 - 12.99
Comp. $34.00 - $42.00	Comp. $10.00 - $48.00	Comp. $24.00 - $38.00
	SHIRTS & BLOUSES	SKIRTS
	$9.99 - 12.99	$9.99
	Comp. $24.00 - $60.00	Comp. $24.00 - $60.00

Fall

SWEATERS	SHIRTS & BLOUSES	PANTS
$4 - $12	$6	$8
Comp. $24.00 - $38.00	Comp. $24.00 - $60.00	Comp. $28.00 - $60.00
Knit Tops	SKIRTS
$6	$6
Comp. $20.00 - $40.00	Comp. $28.00 - $60.00

1st Quality & Slight Irregulars

Monday Feb. 1 • 8AM - 9PM

Tuesday Feb. 2 • 8AM - 9PM

Wednesday Feb. 3 • 8AM - 9PM

Thursday Feb. 4 • 8AM - 6PM

UMASS Campus Center
Room 165/169 (Lower Level)
We accept VISA, MASTER CARD, AMEX, & CASH!

Men win on the road

By MIKE CAREY
Special to the Collegian

OLEAN, N.Y. — Sandwiched into the UMass men's basketball schedule between games with Florida State and Cincinnati and a hopeful trip to the NCAA Tournament is a trip to Atlantic 10 opponent St. Bonaventure.

It is one of those games you see so often in professional sports, powerhouse crushes patsy. Which is exactly the way it unfolded on Super Bowl Sunday as the University of Massachusetts basketball team crushed the Bonnies 93-78 in the Reilly Center.

Most people thought the Minutemen (13-4, 5-1 in A-10), who played Southwestern Louisiana in the Last Rage in the Cage Friday, would be tired after having played so late and having gotten to Bonaventure late due to poor weather, but that was not the case.

The Minutemen were in control from the opening tip as Tony Barbee hit a three-pointer to start the game. UMass opened up a 20-9 lead with 14:10 left in the first half when Louis Roe hit a free throw. The lead grew to 15 points, 29-14, midway through the first half when Barbee hit a 12-foot jumper.

UMass then went on a 17-9 run, capped by two Dana Dingle (career-high 14 points) free throws with 3:23 remaining before intermission, to take a 46-23 lead. UMass led 55-33 at the half.

"We just tried to hold them off [in the first half]," head coach John Calipari said. "When you get up, it's hard to keep that intensity up and that's why I was on our kids the whole game.

"That's why I subbed when they weren't rebounding. I was trying to keep the intensity up."

The barrage continued in the second half as the Minutemen went on a 10-5 run to open the half and take a 65-38 lead. The Bonnies just could not handle the power of UMass. The Minutemen began to trap and it caused Bonaventure to commit 10 second half turnovers.

St. Bonaventure (9-7, 0-5) never held the lead and got no closer than the final margin, 15 points. The Minutemen had six players in double figures, with Roe scoring a career-high 21 points.

Barbee added 14, Derek Kellogg scored 13 points and had seven assists and Harper Williams and Mike Williams added 12 points.

"They're a top 25 team," St. Bonaventure head coach Jim Baron said. "They shot the ball well and did a good job on the boards."

■ The Cage

continued from page 12

They're all nerds, yuz guys are just nuts."

"Gene, are you honestly telling me you have never seen anything this loud, this raucous?" I screamed as loud as I could since at that point Calipari and company had just walked on the floor.

"Never," Gene shouted, shaking his head. "This is crazy, I never seen nothing like it."

And now that its gone, there never will be anything like it.

Dan Wetzel is a Collegian columnist.

■ men's hoop

continued from page 12

Harper Williams and Roe than we were about playing in the Cage."

The Minutemen simply outplayed the SW Louisiana at their game: they outlasted them, out-rebounded them and out-fast-breaked them. UMass had 26 fast break points to the Cajuns' six.

The hype surrounding "The last Rage in the Cage" was a subplot throughout the ESPN-televised game, but both Calipari and his players were somewhat unsentimental.

"Just get out of here," Calipari responded when asked what his thoughts were during the final seconds. "We'll miss some things about the Cage, but we need the new building to take the program to the next level."

"The Cage was definitely a sixth man, about 6-foot-7 tall," said Williams. "When they open up the Mullins, it will hopefully be 7-foot-2 tall. They paid a lot to build it, so there better be a rage in it all the time, even when there's no game."

With 42 ticks left on the clock, the raging Cagers serenaded the Ragin' Cajuns by singing "Hey Hey Hey, Goodbye," but the crowd was also serenading something else. They were saying farewell to a building which in 60 years had packed an abundance of memories with names like Billy Tindall, Derek Claiborne, Julius Erving, Jim McCoy, Will Herndon, Matt Zunic, Jack Leaman, Johnny Orr, Rick Pitino, and Al Skinner. It was a well-deserved tribute.

Nah nah nah nah, nah nah nah nah, hey hey hey, goodbye.

Mental Health Groups Spring 1993

Groups that will be offered this spring are:

- Adult Children of Alcoholics Wednesday 3:30-5 (Process group for students with prior ACOA group experience)
- Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families Group I - Mondays, 3:30-5 (in Spanish) Group II - Thursdays, 3-4:30
- Eating Disorder Group Tuesdays 4-5:30
- Self-Exploration Groups Group I - Tuesdays, 3-4:30 (for students over 21) Group II - Thursdays, 3-4:30

Registration and pre-group interview required for all groups. Groups will begin in late February. For information and registration call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North during the month of February.

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 Days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

20% one item discount with this ad
DISCOUNT SURPLUS
• Couches • Carpets • Beds
• Chairs • Desks • Lamps
(413) 586-7202 206 Russell St. (Rt. 9) Hadley, MA
We take in consignments
Cash • Personal Checks • Major Credit Cards Accepted

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students – Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30 Fri. 8:30-2:30 113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Bridge Club/Team Beginners or experienced. Come join for fun or competition. Wed 2/3 7:30 pm Campus Ctr outside coffee shop. 665-7877 ext. 444

Pre Vet AnSci Club Meeting Feb 2 Tues 5:30 STK 114 PIZZA PARTY Skip D.C. and have dinner with us ALL WELCOME Dues $3.00

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Poster Sale, Biggest and best selection choose from over 1000 different images. Rock, old Masters (Monet, Dali, Van Gogh, Picasso, Escher, Matisse, Wyeth and hundreds more.) Movie posters, sports, scenic landscapes, music, dance, skiing, personalities, (Einstein, James Dean, Marilyn Monroe and others), Travel, humor, romance, photography (Talbot, Ansel Adams and others). Most images only $5, $6, and $7 each! See us at the Student Union Ball room on Monday February 1st through Friday, February 5th. The hours are 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. This sale is sponsored by WMUA.

ATTENTION PROFESSORS

Have you been putting of painting your home or homa office? Phillips Brothers painting provides fast high quality interior & exterior painting at reasonable prices. Free estimates flexible rates fast reliable service. Call Brock 584-5979.

AUTO FOR SALE

89 Ford Fastiva Black 60k miles Good condition new tires $275/ must sell Tomo 549-2635

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special Small Cheese $3.50 Large Cheese $5.99 1 or 2 toppings add $1 549-8098 549-8073

ENTERTAINMENT

yeP! is now available for parties and functions. CALL 549-3832

FOR RENT

Room Available in Amherst house. 5 min. walk from campus. Housemates are serious but fun UMass students. Call Wiley, Mary or Kristen at 549-7619

FOR SALE

New Car Stereo Kenwood pull out with warranty & papers 225 call Craig 256-0836

For Sale: Burton afr 6 Snowboard Airwalk boots size 7 $350 call 527-3014

QUEEN SIZE WATERBED $50 or best offer. Call Dana 253-3406

Snowboard – 160cm Barfoot Freestyle $100 584-2976 Golf Clubs Spalding full set plus leather bag $100 584-2976

Yamaha CLP-30 Calvinova keyboard 88 full size, weighted keys with stand, pedals, bench Call Dave 253-9282

HELP WANTED

Att. Excellent income for home assembly work. Info 1-504-646-1700 Dept MA-1307

Evening jobs! Environmantal campaign work. Fight pollution with clean watter action. $100/wk. +. On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon. - Fri. + Sunday. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Join the Masspirg staff and be part of a 20 year history of environmental activism:
The Bottle Bill
Mass. Clean Air Act
Mass toxic use reduction act
Full/Part time positions $40-60/day
Call Carmren 256-8434

"Silver Bullion Coin Program" $$ Paid weekly No individual selling or recruiting 83% commissions paid. Projected income 42-84K 603-964-1876

SPRING BREAKERS. Promote our Florida Spring Break packages. Earn MONEY and FREE trips. Call CMI 1-800-423-5264

The Undergraduate Admissions office is now accepting applications for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Representatives and New Students Program Summer Counselors. Applications available at the Admissions office.

U.S. Tracers is currently seeking motivated students in Amherst area for FT and PT Independent work (800)866-6919

INSTRUCTION

Physics and Meth Tutor M.A. in Physics Experienced teaching assistant Call 256-0260

LOST

Lost Toyota car key With Toyota key chain Call 549-8656

Prescription Rayban Sunglasses In maroon case If found please call 253-3553

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair Home, Auto, Pro ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave W. Springfield 1-781-2327

MUSICIANS

Guitar lessons for beginner and intermediate players $10-$15 per hour 549-2885

HEY YOU

To the pretty student/waitress I met Monday, January 25th at 10 am at the bursars office. Those lines were so long I practically got to know your whole life history except for a few critical details - like your name. I'd like to see you again. If you would like to see me again please respond here.

PERSONALS

Dave Cowan I'm flying away with my Memories of you And leaving behind a piece of my heart I'll miss you-- ILY -- Jen

Jen S. – Get wicked awesome super psyched for a swellmeat-o semester Llama love, Shannon and Kristen

ROOMMATES WANTED

Female roomate wanted Mill Valley Estates 198 heat hot water included Call 256-0247

2 females or couple to share roome $160 each or $275 for single, beautiful apartment 665-7604

Roomate Needed!!! M/F to share two bedroom Brandywine Apt. 175.00/mo. 549-5868

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Legal Services Center offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and confidential caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1906

Tarot Readings Call Chris at 253-7524

 SPRING BREAK '93**

Spring Break '93  Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, South Padre Island, form $429 per person (7 nights, airfare, transfers, taxes, discount card and more!! Daytona Beach (Howard Johnson, Whitehall, Panama City Beach Marti, Fiesta Inn), Key West from $129 per person (Beachfront Hotel only (7) nights, discount card - optional but available) Spacing is limited! Call Breakaway Travel & Tours 1-800-862-7325.

TRAVEL

INEXPENSIVE SPRING BREAK TRIPS Heatwave vacations will beat any advertised price on trips to Cancun, Jamaica, Daytona Beach, Dominican Republic. Call Alex 665-7863

Spring Break '93 Cancun $479! Jamaica $499! Daytona Beach $189! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company! TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL 1-800-328-SAVE

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK Wheat wave to all places Guar. lowest prices or Double diff., free club passes no peak fees Call Debbie 549-1411

WANT A TAN LINE? Cancun, Jamaica, Florida Merideth 549-6284

WANTED

Childcare wanted for 3 yr old. Tue 12:00 3:00 pm, Thur 3:30 4:30 pm. $15 per week Call 253-0866

Sick of DC Meal Plan? Meal Plan in exchange for kitchen work if interested call Jim Houston at 253-9015 At 498 North Pleasant St

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women Need housing for spring semester Desire place near UMass Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. In Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

UMass defeats USL Cajuns in final Rage

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

"It's all over" was the theme of the night.

As the 4,058 fans which filled the raucous Curry Hicks Cage Friday night chanted the phrase before the 84-74 University of Massachusetts basketball team's victory over SW Louisiana, it took on a double meaning.

"It's all over" not only pertained to the impending doom the Ragin' Cajuns would face at the hands of UMass, but also signified the retirement of the Cage for good after the game.

The Minutemen (12-4) held up their end of the bargain by playing well-rounded offensive basketball and by stepping up their defense in the second half. Harper Williams (23 points) led four players with double figures, hitting 10 of 17 from the field.

Williams and sophomore Lou Roe (15 points, 11 rebounds) raised their performance level in the second half with Tony Barbee and Kennard Robinson in foul trouble, although the game's outcome was never in doubt.

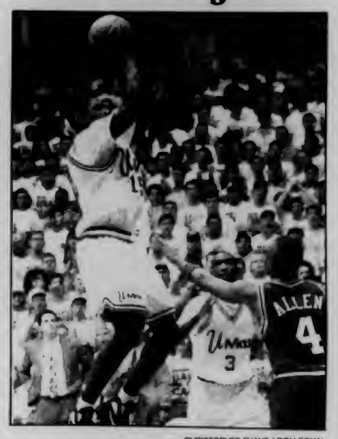
"This is a quality win over a good team," said head coach John Calipari. "In the second half, we leaned on each other. Dana Dingle, Kennard Robinson, Mike Williams, Jerome Malloy — we had a lot of winning performances, especially Lou's."

The Ragin' Cajuns (11-8) proved their grit by hanging close to Massachusetts despite an 8-2 Minutemen run to start the game. To their credit, the Cajuns scored seven of the last 11 points of the first half and only trailed by a 46-42 count.

"They played aggressively," said Roe. "They had big bodies, and they used them. Those 6-8, 240 pound guys really wear on you."

Even after Dingle (five boards, seven points, immeasurable defensive intensity) converted a layup to give UMass a 71-56 lead, SW Louisiana was undaunted. Back they came, led by point guard Michael Allen, who had 23 points. Allen's picturesque one-handed jam and NBA range 3-pointer on back-to-back possessions pulled the Cajuns within eight, 75-67, with 3:39 left.

This was as close as the team would get, as the two Williams put the game away by combining for nine straight points. As is usually the case, the Minuteman squad did things that often do not show up on the stat sheet, finishing up their Cage careers with vintage UMass ball. Roe's one-handed dunk over a helpless Cajun with 1:01 left was reminiscent of William Herndon.



CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
Lou Roe takes a jumper while head coach John Calipari, Dana Dingle, and USL's Michael Allen look on.

"They're a very good team," said SW Louisiana head coach Marty Fletcher. "We were more worried about

Turn to MEN'S HOOP, page 11

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
The Minutemen defeated the Ragin' Cajuns 84-74 Saturday night in the final game at the Curry Hicks Cage.

Minutewomen win again 76-68

BY JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Often when a team earns a big victory, their emotional level wilts and they suffer during their next game. Well, as far as the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team is concerned, nothing could be further from the truth.

On Saturday, one day after upsetting Atlantic 10 favorite, St. Joseph's, the Minutewomen soundly defeated West Virginia 76-68 at the Curry Hicks Cage. With the victory, UMass improved to 8-8 (4-2 A-10) while West Virginia dropped to 7-11 (4-4).

UMass came out firing on all cylinders early on and when freshman Octavia Thomas converted a layup with 10:58 left in the first half, the Minutewomen had a startling 23-4 lead. UMass weathered a Mountaineer rally which had the lead down to as little as 11, to lead 35-19 at the half. Freshman center Melissa Gurile had 16 points to lead UMass for the half.

Midway through the half, UMass senior forward Kim Kristofik was ejected along with West Virginia's Amanda Hayes for engaging in a little brouhaha. Due to the loss of Kristofik, the Minutewomen bench had to step up. The bench did.

UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said she was elated with the way her whole team played.

"I thought our kids played with a lot of emotion," O'Brien said. "Francie (Hansen) and Gloria (Nevarez) both really came in and did what they had to do."

Along with both Hansen and Nevarez, Cass Anderson provided much needed bench help up front.

A key for the Minutewomen, along with their bench, in the first half was their defense as West Virginia shot an abominable 7 for 27 (25.9%) from the floor.

In the second half, UMass opened up a lead as big as 22 while hitting most of their big free throws down the stretch to come away with the victory.

Gurile, according to O'Brien, played a smart game while being saddled with four fouls for the last nine minutes of the game.

"Melissa did all that she could do with the four fouls," O'Brien said. "She could have easily picked up her fifth foul, but she played smart, and we needed her today.

UMass was led by Gurile, who had 26 points and 12 rebounds, while Thomas added 18 points and 12 boards.

Minutewomen Notes: Octavia Thomas was named A-10 Rookie of the Week. UMass is now third in the A-10.

The greatest, Cage closed

Gene leaned over and shouted in my ear,

"I never seen nothing like it." By the time the shout hit my ear its strength was that of a mere whisper. There happened to be a few other people shouting at the same time, about 4,058 other people, and communication had reverted to sign language and smoke signals.

Gene is a cameraman. He currently works for ESPN, but he is a veteran. His resume, if he ever bothered to print one, would list an alphabet soup of experience at ABC, NESN and CBS. Education? Gene graduated without honors from East Boston High School in 1971.

Gene knows cameras and Gene knows sports. And last Friday night/Saturday morning, Gene learned something. He learned about the Curry Hicks Cage.

Dan
WETZEL

"This place is out of control and yuz still got an hour till tip-off," Gene yelled. "We had one kid I grew up with from Eastie go to school here, but he was a geek."

Indeed the current group of undergraduates at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst were slightly out of control.

There were six guys dressed up as coneheads, 32 individuals who chose not to wear a white T-Shirt and painted their bodies and more painted faces then a person could count. One group of guys, each holding a letter, even spelled Lou Roe's first name with one L, and six O's. No geeks here. Geeks can spell.

"What a bunch of lunatics," Gene shouted. "What the hell is in the water out here?"

That would be scotch.

It appeared a few students had taken to the drink at some point in the evening. In the west end zone, six people even wore their choice of beverage as a crown. Empty twelve packs as hats appeared to be a new fashion. Two twelve packs of Bud, two of Busch, one of Bud Dry and one of Black Label.

I can picture the conversation between the Black Label student and his poor parents.

"Son, if you are going to embarrass the family on national television by wearing a twelve pack on your head could you at least splurge for something better than Black Label. Look at the nice McMahon boy, at least he was wearing Bud Dry."

"With this type of a crowd, I can see why ESPN is here," Gene shouted.

The Cage does make for great television. Mike Dowling from Channel 5 tried to do a live remote for the 11 o'clock news. Despite chants of "We like Mike", it didn't go smoothly.

"Right when I went on, students swarmed down from the end zone," Dowling said. "They started jumping on me and getting in the camera's way. I had to cut to a tape of an interview with John (Calipari). It was really wild."

It is what Dowling lives for.

"It was great. That's what this place and college basketball is all about. Your fellow students are crazy. If I broadcast from B.C. (Boston College) nobody even bothers me. "I love this building. Here and Duke are the last places in the country where students sit right down on the floor."

As the Minuteman Hoop Band struck up one of its six renditions of "There's a Rage in the Cage," I turned to Gene and wondered how our little barn stacked up to other gyms around the country.

"Hey Gene," I screamed. "This isn't as wild as Rupp Arena in Kentucky is it? That place holds 24,000 for basketball."

"Rupp is a library compared to this place," Gene screamed back.

"What about the Carrier Dome at Syracuse?"

"Not even close," Gene responded. "At Syracuse they think they're special because they stand until Syracuse scores its first basket. At this place, yuz guys don't sit down at all.

"Besides, they're rich kids up there. No one from Eastie would ever go to Syracuse, its all Jersey. They can't cheer because their Rolexes weigh down their hands."

I decided to ask about the big one, "What about Cameron Indoor at Duke?"

"That's about as wild but the kids are dorks," Gene shouted. "Thez all think their cool because thez got these set cheers and a 1400 on the SAT and stuff.

"In here you just got bedlam. There's no order, no set cheers just a bunch of drunks going crazy. That's better. Those Duke kids couldn't stand it here.

Turn to THE CAGE, page 11

Tuesday February 2, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 68

Sunny today with highs in the mid-20's. Blustery winds.

Local News:
University of Massachusetts students seek to gain a greater voice in Amherst town government by becoming candidates for town meeting. Page 3.

Arts & Living:
The Marshall Tucker Band is blazing its way into Northampton tonight. Get out of the cold and see them at Pearl Street. Page 7.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Select Board seeks funds from UMass

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

The University may soon be faced with a lawsuit from the Town of Amherst, which is trying to recover over $200,000 in traffic citations issued on campus over the last nine years.

The Amherst Select Board discussed the possibility last night of taking legal action against UMass in order to recover fine money the town believes was wrongly sent to the University by Northampton District Court at different times since 1984.

Under state law, a portion of fines for moving violations is returned to the town in which the citation was issued. The money is collected by the local district court, and then transferred to the town.

However, at several times during the last nine years, Northampton District Court routed money collected from tickets issued by UMass police on the UMass campus totaling $203,000 back to the University, even though they were technically issued within the Town of Amherst.

The town contends that the money never should have been given to the University in the first place, and should be paid back promptly.

In a letter to Town Manager Barry L. Del Castilho, Chancellor Richard O'Brien said he had been advised by his legal counsel that the money was legitimately sent to the University, and was not owed to the town.

O'Brien said the University hopes to avoid a lawsuit, wishing instead to have the dispute settled by the state attorney general's office, a process which could leave the matter unresolved for several more months.

In the letter, O'Brien described litigation as "an approach which would be costly to both parties and not reflect the cooperative spirit in which we want to conduct our relationship."

The patience of town officials, however, who are faced with a $600,000 budget shortfall for next year, appears to be wearing thin.

Town Meeting member and select board candidate Larry Kelley, who has been pressuring the University to pay up for several months, said even if the town decides not to sue, he will privately take legal action in the form of a class action suit.

"Someone's going to sue the University for this. If [the Town of Amherst] doesn't do it, I will," said Kelley, who has staged a variety of "media stunts" to draw attention to the dispute in the last few months, such as sending a mock bill to the University for services rendered by the

Turn to AMHERST, page 4

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
THERE'S GOT TO BE A BETTER WAY – UMass students Tayo Oluwasanmi, right, and Makiko Miyazawa shop for books while braving the cold weather outside the Textbook Annex.

Serb-Croat fighting breaks out

Government and ethnic Serb troops end three-day lull

By JASMINA KUZMANOVIC
Associated Press

ZAGREB, Croatia — A three-day lull in Serb-Croat fighting was shattered Monday by fighting between government and ethnic Serb troops in Croatia's southwestern reaches.

Fighting also flared in neighboring Bosnia-Herzegovina. Serb forces allowed besieged Muslims to escape one town, but were pressed by Muslim-led government forces in another.

In Brussels, the European Community endorsed an internationally mediated plan to divide Bosnia-Herzogivina into 10 semi-autonomous provinces.

The 12-nation community considered but did not impose mew sanctions against Serb-led Yugoslavia.

A U.N.-brokered cease-fire held in Croatia for the past year, but was broken when the government launched an offensive Jan. 22 to recapture a key highway through territory in Serb hands.

The Bosnian parties had accepted the plan to divide Bosnia into provinces, but disagreed on proposed provincial borders.

After the failure of the Geneva talks Saturday, the United Nations was expected to try one more time to forge a compromise between Bosnia's Muslims, Serbs and Croats.

The European Community's mediator at the talks, Lord Owen, said U.N. pressure in the next days could still "pull the Serbs and the Muslims together" on the proposed map. Failing that, "I just think we will have to railroad the map through," he said.

Officials of the Organization of the Islamic Conference said in Jiddah, Saudi Arabia, that they were considering calling an Islamic summit because of the failure of the Geneva talks. Some Muslim nations have said they would send arms to Bosnia if the fighting did not stop.

Turn to CROATIA, page 2

Pentagon seeks advice on abortion guidelines

By CAROLE FELDMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With virtually no abortion experience in recent years, the Pentagon's medical officers are consulting Planned Parenthood before allowing abortion at military hospitals once again.

The Defense department requested the family planning organization's medical guidelines for abortion, including patient care before and after the procedure, according to Sally Patterson, Planned Parenthood Federation of America's vice president for public affairs.

Susan Hansen, a Defense Department public affairs officer, said it would be logical for military medical officers to seek guidance from Planned Parenthood, but that she had no information on any contact between the two.

With an alacrity uncommon in large bureaucracies, the Pentagon is moving quickly to implement President Clinton's Jan. 22 order reversing a five-year ban on abortion at military medical hospitals.

Women would have to pay for the abortions themselves. Federal funding of abortions is barred by U.S. law except in cases where a woman's life is endangered.

Still to be worked out is whether Clinton's order will affect all U.S. military hospitals or just those overseas.

"It would be ironic that women overseas have better access to services than women here in America," Patterson said.

Also at issue is whether military doctors will need extra training to perform abortions. "It is up to the commander of the local facility to make certification as to the abilities of his staff," Hansen said.

Douglas Johnson, legislative director of the National Right to Life Committee, said "conscience clauses" in the past gave military doctors and nurses a way out if they didn't want to perform abortions. "We hope that those will be maintained," he said.

FBI questions funding

Arab-Americans linked to radical group

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The FBI believes some Arab-Americans are raising money for the political and welfare activities of Hamas, a Palestinian Muslim movement in Israeli-occupied territories, officials said Monday.

Law enforcement agencies are monitoring several groups of Hamas supporters — including those in northern Virginia, in Dallas, in the Detroit and Chicago areas and in Tucson, Ariz. — that are disseminating anti-Israel propaganda and raising funds for Palestinian welfare and religious causes, said one official.

They dispute claims in the official Israeli media, repeated following last week's arrest of three Arab-Americans in Israel, that Hamas' main command and control center is in the United States.

"This is a great exaggeration," said one U.S. official familiar with the issue, who spoke only on condition of anonymity. The command and control of the military branch of Hamas, which Israel blames for the killings of at least 11 Israelis in the past four years, is located in the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank, this official said.

Israel has detained two Arab-Americans from the Chicago area, accusing them of being sent to rebuild the radical movement which advocates the creation of an Islamic state in what is now the Jewish one.

An Israeli security official told reporters the two men had given $350,000 more. He said documents about armed Hamas attacks were discovered among one of the men's possessions.

A U.S. official said the majority of financial support for Hamas comes from religious foundations in Saudi Arabia, and some from the Iranian government.

In fact Iran, said the official who also asked not to be identified, has been trying to forge closer links with Hamas in recent months even though it practices the Shia branch of Islam while Hamas follows the Sunni branch.

A small number of Hamas activists are receiving training in Lebanon from Iranian-backed Hezbollah-Party-of-God-guerillas, said the official.

The movement, which was born in the poverty-ridden Gaza Strip in late 1987, also gets money from Muslim fundamen-

Turn to FBI, page 2

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor .....

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

HELP WANTED

The Collegian is currently accepting applications for the position of Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor.
To apply, or to get information about the position, please contact Michelle Bayliss at 113 Campus Center.

P.S. This is a PAID position. The Collegian is an E.O.E.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Tuesday, Feb. 2, 1993

Photography Contest — LSSE is holding an amateur Winter Photography Contest. Photos must be unmatted, black and white, and 8x10. The theme is winter. For more information, contact Debbie or Laura at 256-4065.

Wednesday, Feb. 4

Help Wanted — Earthfoods, a student-run vegetarian restaurant, is hiring! If you are a hard working, energetic individual, and a full time undergrad, stop by room 409 in the Student Union and fill out an application.

Bill proposed to combat violence

By KEN GUGGENHEIM
Associated Press

BOSTON — Deterring domestic violence will require a coordinated effort by all sectors of society, advocates for battered women told a Senate Judiciary committee hearing.

Speaking at a hearing Monday on the proposed Violence Against Women's Act, six witnesses called for cooperation among government, business, educators and physicians.

The issue of domestic violence "is not just for the Senate or for the House or for the shelters for battered women or for the doctors or for the lawyers, it is for everyone of us," said former state Rep. Marjorie Clapprood, co-chair of the Jane Doe Safety Fund, which benefits battered women.

The hearing, at Northeastern University, was chaired by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., a co-sponsor of the bill. About 150 people attended.

The act would penalize spouse abusers who cross state lines to continue their abuse, provide $300 million to law enforcement agencies to combat violence against women, and extend civil rights protection to gender-based assaults. It would also provide funding to re-establish a national domestic violence hotline.

"What is really needed is a total and comprehensive approach for any individual victim of domestic violence and the purpose of today's hearing is to find out how this comprehensive approach can be worked through," Kennedy said.

Speakers discussed the need for federal, state and local agencies to coordinate their work to stop violence. But they also said the effort must extend beyond the government and domestic violence agencies.

James Hardeman, manager of counseling for Polaroid Corp. and founder of a battered women's shelter, said a "self-image group" formed at his company linked spousal abuse with tardiness, poor job performance and other work-place problems.

Super Bowl airs in Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — The Berlin Wall toppled in 1989. The Communist Party was banned and the Soviet Union fell apart in 1991. But not until 1993 did the Super Bowl make it to Moscow.

"I never thought I'd be sitting in Moscow watching a Super Bowl. It's amazing!" said Dallas fan Kevin Lillestrand, a Los Angeles native who is in the Russian capital with the Campus Crusade for Christ.

He was one of 750 bleary-eyed football fans who paid $15 a head to sip beer and soft drinks, eat sandwiches and pretzels, and watch a live broadcast of the Super Bowl.

For all the Americana, the fans couldn't forget they were in Russia. It may have been short-sleeve warm at the Rose Bowl, but at 18 degrees Fahrenheit, the Moscow River was solid ice and the parking lot at the Raddison-Slavyanskaya Hotel looked like a snow bowl.

And then there was the time difference. Kickoff was at 2:18 a.m. Moscow time, 11 hours ahead of Pasadena, Calif., and long past the normal bedtime for the businessmen, U.S. Embassy employees, missionaries and other Americans who stayed until the final whistle, at 5:41 a.m. local time.

"I'm going to take a `personal day' off," said Kirsty Spence of Toronto, a disappointed Bills fan who teaches physical education at Moscow's Anglo-American School.

"I never thought I'd be sitting in Moscow watching a Super Bowl."
Kevin Lillestrand, Dallas fan

The hotel ballroom resembled a giant sports bar, as the cheering drowned out the TV commentators. The broadcast, picked up from the NBC-TV satellite feed to Europe, dropped the half-time show, so organizers substituted a Michael Jackson dance-alike competition.

Glenn Moorehead, a Cowboys fan from Attleboro, Mass., won with a smooth moonwalk.

"I'm feeling good!" the 28-year-old Moorehead crowed, tossing his prize, a football, across the ballroom.

Correction

The application deadline for volunteers to work at the Counselor/Advocate Program at the Everywoman's Center is February 3, not February 13. For more information, contact the Everywoman's Center in Wilder Hall or call 545-0883.

■ FBI

continued from page 1

talist groups in Egypt, Sudan, Jordan, Syria and other countries, he said.

In the United States, said a third official, supporters of Hamas have been trying in recent weeks to raise money for the families of the 415 Palestinians deported by Israel to a no-man's zone in southern Lebanon.

The efforts are located in the metropolitan centers where many of this country's estimated 3 million Arab-Americans reside, officials said.

■ Croatia

continued from page 1

In Croatia, the government offensive on Serb positions in the Dalmation region shattered a truce worked out by U.N. peacekeepers.

After a three-day lull, Croatian state radio reported the Croatian army and Serb rebels fought with heavy artillery Monday.

Zadar and the neighboring resort of Biograd were under their 10th straight day of general alert, the radio said.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported a "major offensive" along a 30-mile front by Croatian artillery, infantry and armored units, apparently directed at the Serb-held towns of Obrovac and Benkovac.

Serb Gen. Mile Novakovic, in a protest letter to U.N. peacekeeping forces in the region, warned his troops would "do everything to stop this aggression."

Croatian state radio reported three explosions near Serb positions outside Karlovac, a city just 27 miles southwest of the capital, Zagreb.

It said Serbs were mobilizing troops in Okucani, along the Zagreb-Belgrade highway.

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖

The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15

NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

Auditions For
Not Ready For Bedtime Players

Everything You Thought PARENTHOOD Was... NOT READY FOR BEDTIME PLAYERS You Were About Sex...And More Most

February 3, 1993
8:30 PM
Campus Center Rm. 169

For more information call the Health Education Division and ask for Nancy or Dee 549-2671 x181.

IF ONLY THEY CAME WITH INSTRUCTIONS.

American Red Cross

Local News

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN

BUNDLE UP! – Junior Jim Brunet, left, a civil engineering major, freshman political science major Kathleen Daignault and sophomore electrical engineering major Chad Jennewine look relatively comfortable despite yesterday's frigid temperatures.

Students urged to take part in Town Meeting

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

Students need to become involved in Amherst Town Meeting in order to gain a greater voice in making policies which affect them, according to several members of the Undergraduate Student Senate.

Higher student enrollment helps make Amherst residents aware of student's issues, according to Matt Pavesi, chair of the senate's Public Policy Committee.

This is the third year that students have been involved in the 240-member board, and senate members said they hope to encourage participation from students in the five precincts across campus and in town.

Several times in the past, students and townspeople have been in conflict. Student involvement would ease tension and provide workable solutions to the problems, Pavesi said.

The Senate hopes to tackle many issues that directly affect students. Zoning, the four person bylaw, and noise bylaws are all ways in which the town monitors student behavior.

Without a student voice in the past, measures would have been passed to disband the Housing Review Board, which controls rent, and to turn off more streetlights, decreasing the safety of residents, according to Pavesi.

The Senate also hopes to have a polling station located on campus for students to cast their votes. Mike Poster, speaker of the Undergraduate Student Senate and a senior political science major, said, "A polling place on campus would boost student voter turnout. Half the students here don't even know where to go to vote."

"It's very important that students get involved, because without participation the townspeople aren't aware of our needs," Pavesi said. "We have a pretty good working relationship with the town, but we need more of a voice."

The town meeting is a good forum to discuss student needs, but Pavesi said he is frustrated by how little attention the town pays to the campus that neighbors it.

"We pump $111 million into the Pioneer Valley. This town exists solely on our income," said Pavesi. "Without the university, this area would be nothing but tumbleweeds."

"The Mullins Center will bring in more revenue to this area with conventions and concerts and it was built on the backs of students," Poster said.

The Senate has three people ready to run write-in campaigns for the position of town meeting member, but Pavesi said more are needed.

"We're the consumers that keep this town alive, and we're also a part of the town," Pavesi said. "Student attendance at the town meetings is important so we can make an impact on the community."

Elections for town meeting members will be held on Feb. 23 and anyone interested in running a write-in campaign should stop by the SGA office on the fourth floor of the Student Union.

Leadership qualities discussed

Speaker says leaders must be 'lens' to focus people

By MIMI FELLNER
Collegian Staff

Leaders must be able to subordinate their own needs to those of their people in order to be truly effective, according to a noted Rabbi who spoke last night at Chabad House.

Rabbi Shlomo Jaffee of Hartford, Conn. spoke last night as part of a celebration to mark the passing of the famous Rabbi Joseph I. Schneerson and the inauguration of Rabbi Manachem M. Schneerson, the present Lubavitcher Rebbe. The Chasidic gathering also honored the day of Yud Shvat on the Hebrew calendar.

Rabbi Jaffee spoke about the tenth of Shvat which marks the beginning of Rabbi Schneerson's leadership. He spoke of the nature of the leader in relationship to his people.

"A Jew needs no intermediary between himself and God because there is a personal and absolute connection between himself and his creater," Jaffee said. "Therefore we need someone to show us what level an individual can really achieve. Being Human is not a shortcoming — being a human means there is no limit as to what we can reach and become."

Rabbi Jaffee explained how a Jewish leader gives his whole life over to guide the Jewish people and reveal to them what levels they can reach. He expressed the potentiality of the Jewish people and said in order to be a leader one must be humble and possess a total lack of egotism.

Rabbi Jaffee made the analogy that "a leader must be like a lens — to focus and illuminate the eyes of the people. However the minute the lens is dirtied, he can no longer lead — meaning the moment his own sense of self-importance becomes apparent, he can no longer lead correctly."

He gave examples of how this can be seen in both the previous Lubavitcher Rebbe as well as the present one. It was a year before the present Rebbe finally accepted upon himself his stands of leadership.

As Rabbi Jaffee said, "only when one is totally unconcerned with his own problems can he totally care for another."

The Rabbi stated that this memorable evening is not a sad occasion but instead a celebration in Chasidic belief in which evrything a person is merited for is revealed and celebrated.

MassPirg lobbies gov't

Group seeks to influence policy-making

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Erica Craven, a senior social thought and political economy major, said she raised over $100 from sponsors in three hours when she helped at the North Amherst Survival Center two years ago.

"I thought it was a very worthwhile time," Craven said.

Two years and many causes later, Craven is now MassPirg's UMass Chapter Chairperson. Last November Craven said MassPirg, which was started on the UMass campus in 1972, helped coordinate students to fast from a meal at the Dinning Commons.

When students gave up their meal, the profit that would usually go to the DCs went to Oxfam. Craven said the effort raised $1,189.

MassPirg, which had over 150 volunteers last semester, helped the Resident Student Association to register almost 2,000 students to vote in November.

They also worked during Halloween going through the dorms to collect canned food. Working with the Newman Student Association, they purchased a video recorder for a Latino organization in Holyoke.

"It not only gathers student power, but our efforts are multiplied across the state, because of all the students involved in the 27 chapters of MassPirg," Craven said.

Heidi Hill, MassPirg's campus staff organizer, said this semester members are planning to go down to Washington, D.C. on Feb. 22. to lobby with the other "pirgs" from across the country for campaign finance reform. Hill was a part of FloridaPirg while attending Florida State University.

Hill said students can earn one to nine internship credits while working at MassPirg.

Some of the events Masspirg will be focusing on this semester include the Endangered Species Act, hunger and homelessness and energy efficiency. Students can get internship credit by working on any of these issues, Hill said.

"We want to make sure the Endangered Species Act gets enough funding, and it is supported by the president and Congress," Craven said.

To ensure MassPirg has influence in policy-making, Craven said members will be collecting petitions, having press conferences and researching various issues.

MassPirg plans to focus on energy efficiency in April.

"I want to see [MassPirg] continue to recruit students, teaching them skills to affect the changes at the local, state and national level," Craven said. "Any volunteering at all is worthwhile and can affect a lot of change."

UM faculty praise president for assuring abortion rights

By KRISTEN LANS
Collegian Correspondent

President Clinton's decision to carry out his pro-choice campaign promises have reversed the trend toward decreasing women's freedom of reproductive choice, according to several University of Massachusetts professors.

Clinton removed the restriction on abortion counseling at federally funded clinics, removed the restriction on medical research using fetal tissue, allowed abortions to be performed at military hospitals and ordered that federal dollars go to international family planning clinics.

Clinton signed his campaign promises into executive orders on the 20th anniversary of Roe vs. Wade, the Supreme Court decision which legalized abortion on Jan. 22, 1973.

His executive orders reversed acts of the past two Republican presidents.

During the presidential campaign Clinton said, "Our vision should be of an America where abortion is safe and legal, but rare."

Clinton has also proposed testing by the Food and Drug Administration on the French abortion drug RU486. The drug, which former President Bush banned, was designed to induce abortion.

Since the Roe v. Wade decision, six of the seven Supreme Court Justices that participated in the Roe majority are no longer on the court.

According to Dean Alfange, professor of political science at the University, Harry Blackmun, the last Justice that ruled on Roe vs. Wade, has indicated that he will retire soon.

"Whoever is his replacement could change the position of the Supreme Court on Roe vs. Wade," Alfange said. "But, any additions to the court during the Clinton administration would be people that would not be anti-abortion."

Sheldon Goldman, a professor of political science at UMass, said, "If the Supreme Court overturned Roe vs. Wade then it would be up to the states or up to Congress to decide."

The Freedom of Choice Act is the next step to assure women the right to an abortion. If the act is passed by Congress, it would codify Roe vs. Wade, making it a federal statutory law.

"Codification' is important so that womens' rights are not at the mercy of majorities on the Supreme Court."

Turn to ABORTION, page 6

■ Amherst

continued from page 1

Amherst Fire Department.

Money from fines currently being issued on campus is going to the town, in accordance with a non-binding judgment by Judge Samuel E. Zoll, chief justice of the state's District Court Department. Zoll ruled that fine revenue should go to the town in accordance with state law. He did not, however, say what should be done about the money that already went to the University.

Kelley has gone so far as to suggest the town should also seek to recover interest the $203,000 would have earned since the dispute began last October, which he estimates would be over $5,000.

Kelley's suggestion about the interest met a lukewarm response from the selectboard members, but according to Select Board Chairwoman Carolyn M. Holstein, a lawsuit is a realistic possibility.

Regarding legal action she said, "[w]e could [sue]. We've discussed it. We just might do it."

She said the town would be "vigorously pursuing" the matter, and that "That money belongs to the town."

Select board members are still considering O'Brien's proposal to have the matter settled by the attorney general, the possibility of legal action, or, as Kelley advocates, doing both.

"I think we should go on the offensive on two fronts: legal action and the attorney general's office. Either way we're going to get that money," Kelley said.

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN

SNAGGED – An illegally parked car in front of Whitmore waits for its owner to come and rescue it. Some lucky student will receive part of the proceeds from this ticket from the Parking Ticket Scholarship Fund.

Cigarette tax inhales revenues

January hike drags in $9 million for Commonwealth

By EVE EPSTEIN
Associated Press

BOSTON — Cigarette tax collections jumped nearly 55 percent in January — the first month of a tax hike — over collections for the same period a year ago, the Department of Revenue reported Monday.

The cigarette tax increased by 25 cents per pack January 1, as approved by voters in the fall.

Revenue Commissioner Mitchell Adams said the increase in cigarette tax revenues, from $13.1 million in January 1992 to about $20 million last month, was entirely due to the tax hike.

"It's predictable, and it's right in line with what we expected," Adams said.

The state predicts the tax increase will bring in an additional $170 million over the next 189 months. That figure is based on an estimate that the state would lose about 4 percent of its business across the border to states with lower cigarette taxes, and see a 4 percent shrinkage in demand due to the price increase.

Overall, tax revenues in January totaled $999 million, up 5.3 percent from tax collections for January 1992. That puts revenue collections at the mid-point in the fiscal year about where state officials estimated they would be.

Year-to-date collections are $5.5 billion, or about 4.3 percent above collections for the same time last year.

"This is good news because we're right on target to hit the new estimate," Adams said.

Jewish Affairs may affect you. Be a part of them.

Report Events. Express Your Opinions.

The Collegian's JEWISH AFFAIRS DESK is looking for writers

Contact Mimi Fellner at 6-6317.

 WORKSHOPS *****

$$ JOBS $$

J.E.M.S.

Job Employee Matching System

Tuesday, February 2nd

CAMPUS CENTER ROOM 804-808

11:30 a.m.
2:30 p.m.
4:00 p.m.
6:30 p.m.

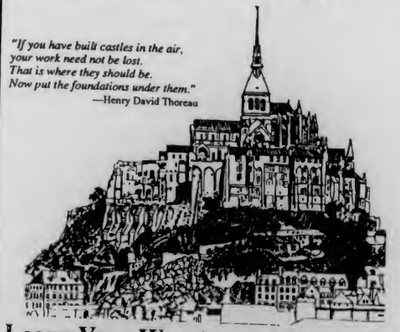
LAST CHANCE - NO MORE APPOINTMENTS AFTER FEBRUARY 2nd

> >Non-WorkStudy Students ONLY< <

Student Employment Office
243 Whitmore Administration Building
545-1951

University of Wisconsin-Platteville

"If you have built castles in the air, your work need not be lost. That is where they should be. Now put the foundations under them."
—Henry David Thoreau



Learn Your Way Around The World

- Study abroad in London, England or Seville, Spain, for a summer, for a semester or for a full academic year
- Courses in liberal arts and international business
- Fluency in a foreign language not required
- Home-stays with meals
- Field trips
- Financial aid applies (except for summer session)

Application deadlines:

- April 1 for summer session
- April 30 for fall semester
- October 20 for spring semester

For a program description and an application, call toll free:
1-800-342-1725

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

UMass sorority rush isn't the myth of 'Delta Delta Delta'

"Oh ma gawd! It's time for sorority rush!"

The above quote could have come from any number of places as it follows the common misconceptions of a "typical" sorority girl's vocabulary. The continuing image of sorority women is that they are snobby, cliquey and downright obnoxious. Hate to "burst that bubble," but there exists no "typical" sorority girl.

As a UMass sorority woman, I probably should take more offense at these stereotypes, but I once felt that way myself, at least until I went through sorority rush. And after a very successful Fall '92 rush, I feel it's time to dispel those ridiculous myths created and perpetuated by an ignorant media (e.g. Saturday Night Live's "Delta, Delta, Delta") and narrow-minded people. Unfortunately, these ridiculous myths keep some terrific young women away from the rush process every year.

Rush is the time sorority houses open their doors and invite all women to join the process of searching for a sorority. It is an incredible experience that gives young women a chance to become more acquainted with sororities and Greek life as a whole. Each night of rush is broken into rush parties, giving both the sororities and the "rushees" a good chance to get to know each other. To outsiders this process might seem catty, but in actuality rush is more of a mutual matching between a young woman and a particular sorority. Rush is a terrific learning experience and a great chance to make new friends. It opens minds and doors, and allows non-Greeks a glimpse of what sorority life is about.

Stephanie
EISENBERG

The myths I've heard (and I'm embarrassed to admit that I once thought were true) range from the fear of losing your own identity to the most horrific one — that in a sorority friends are bought, not earned. Nothing could be further from the truth.

I have never been involved in any other organization that has offered me so much to be myself and seek out my own ideals. Sororities are not comprised of brainwashed sheep — they are comprised of intelligent young women who have come together to share and enjoy a common bond. The myth about "buying your friends" is a preposterous lie. In any organization there are dues, and sorority dues go to much more than social functions. Dues go to altruisms and philanthropies (in addition to the extra money and service sororities donate each semester), as well as scholarships.

Academics play a strong role in Greek life. Women are only permitted to rush if their G.P.A. is above a 2.0, and many houses have higher personal standards. In recent years, UMass statistics have shown that women's cumulative averages tend to rise after they join a sorority.

UMass is a huge place and often it is easy to lose sight of your goals and your friends. Joining a sorority makes UMass a lot smaller. The Greek area is like a family, enjoying many positive interactions both socially and academically. I know rush can be both exciting and overwhelming, but all who have gone through have tremendously enjoyed their experiences.

This semester's rush starts Wednesday, so hurry and sign up. There will be tables set up on the Campus Center Concourse for sign-up and question answering. There is a fee of five dollars to help out all of the houses with rush costs.

Sorority life perpetuates and furthers your sense of self while providing an incredible experience filled with friends, love and great memories. It opens up new doors, furthers leadership experience and allows women to make some incredible bonds with other women. I didn't know what I'd find when I went through sorority rush last semester; I found a home away from home and a family. I hope you find the same thing — I think you will!

Stephanie Eisenberg is a Collegian columnist.

Cruel fun isn't very funny

We all like to have fun. We all do. Why not? We all have different senses of humor. That's where the problem is.

There's one specimen who lives on your hall. You are lucky if there's none. It is the kind of person who enjoys doing things that, if you are like me, make you really upset.

Evelyn A.
DE JESUS

I am talking about the hogs on the hall. The hog is the person who comes back drunk on Friday night and rips off the bulletin board your R.A. made the week before you returned to school so your floor would look decent and welcoming.

The hog urinates on the brand new or old carpet your dorm might have, zips his pants and leaves. The hog rips off the ceilings in your bathroom. He does not discriminate by gender. He destroys women's and men's in the same way. The hog takes the few furniture in your study lounge and throws it down the balcony. He takes pride in that.

The hog has "artistic abilities" also. He is the kind of person who "decorates" your walls with graffiti of racist, anti-Semitic, sexist or homophobic nature.

The hog also takes a fire extinguisher and sprays it on all the floor walls and ceilings. He also collects them in the trunk of his car.

The hog pees on heating vents.

The hog throws up outside toilets, sometimes on the floor or in the sink, which is worse.

The hog thinks all of this is fun. But you know what? It is not. I am writing this on the behalf of those anonymous heroes at this University — the custodians in dorm halls.

They are the ones who scrape the walls. They are the ones who clean the area where you live every day.

Every morning when I wake up and I go out of my room, one of the first people I see in the morning is the housekeeper.

"Good morning," I say to her. "How are you today?" I always ask. I have seen many people just walk by and ignore them. Don't they see that that is the human being who keeps their living area clean?

Housekeepers are human beings who get very upset when they see all the things people with the "hog" attitude do.

I look at them and I think of my grandmother or my grandfather or maybe just my mom or dad. I just think of them and how I would despise having people like the "hog" for being so unfair and cruel to them.

I would not like my grandfather to come back every afternoon telling me that he had to scrape I don't know how many walls because of some funny kid.

We all like to have fun, I know. But why should we have fun by making someone who can be part of your family upset and being unfair and inconsiderate to them? College years should not be having cruel fun. That is not part of it.

If you feel angry because of these lines, maybe it is because you feel you are looking yourself in a mirror. Do not worry, being a "hog" is a behavior and it can be corrected — in your attitude.

Evelyn A. De Jesus is a Collegian staff member.

Why resolutions go cold

The beginning of February is a special time of year. Yes, we students at UMass are settling back into school and the basketball team, at least in recent years, is doing well. Some people are spending the money they got over the holidays on account of the generosity of others, and some are paying off the large debts they acquired on account of their own generosity. But what makes the beginning of February so special to me is watching people cave in on their New's Year's resolutions.

Jeff
McKENZIE

Only a few weeks into the new year and everybody is falling apart. Trying to start something good, trying to quit something bad — it's just not happening.

The smokers have inevitably started smoking again. Any holdouts are walking around chewing gum at a feverish pace, covered with nicotine implants and shaking violently. The loungers have put away the running shoes they got for Christmas and traded them in for the old slippers, and are taking a well-deserved break from thinking about exercise so much. And the crowd of 1993 dieters? Well, they lost about 12 pounds each and then decided that Ultra Slimfast tastes about as good as blended hay in milk.

But why?

Why do these people, these motivated, courageous, self-respecting souls who just want to improve their lives in small but significant ways, ultimately fail? Are they simply slackers who have little willpower to overcome their hedonistic tendencies? Did they make these promises to themselves with no intention of keeping them, as part of some sick ritual designed to show them their utter powerlessness in the face of a precalculated universe? I think not. The answer is simple.

It's too damn cold.

If the holidays were somewhat mild, if not altogether green, the end of January into February usually puts us into the deep freeze. For the most part, it is not humanly possible for these well-meaning folks to stick to the plan.

The first time that poor guy laced up his sparkly new kicks and headed out the door on the way to a healthier body and a new belt notch, he was blown clean back into the living room by an Arctic blast that removed a wart on his thumb and shattered his lips like a pane of glass. Is this a positive experience? Who could blame him for returning to his velour jumpsuit, fitting himself back into the groove on the couch, and calling it a day?

How about those addicted smokers? Although I'm not partial to cancer, the thought of a flaming stick hanging out of my mouth, warming my face while I stand at a frigid bus stop seems like a good idea, not to mention the smoldering cloud of poisonous gases heating my lungs and keeping my core temperature up.

The dieters would have the most to lose. The successful dieter can leave him or herself vulnerable to hypothermia of the bottom, frostbite of the chin and a host of other spot reduction-related problems. You don't see walruses lining up at the Weight Watchers clinic, and for good reason. Throwing away insulation in the middle of winter doesn't make any sense.

By the time the weather turns warm enough to make a good attempt at your resolutions, you've forgotten what they were, and it's nice enough to work in the yard in your spare time anyway.

So it is simply out of the question in most cases to even begin to realize a new behavior pattern during a harsh New England winter. The survival instinct will not allow it and you will be forced to continue your slovenly, albeit warm, habits.

I wonder why people in the South can't change either.

Jeff McKenzie is a Collegian correspondent.

Equality is not a dangerous goal

You have some warped views on what a feminist is, Mr. Morrissey [Collegian, Jan. 29]. Feminists are people (not just women) who believe women are equal to men, and that this equality should be publicly recognized. You have mistakenly taken one extreme feminist and classified her as a typical feminist, or as you would say, a "fem-bian." This is extremely irresponsible.

Feminists are not lesbians who hate men! And we do not simply want women to take over the world. The goal of feminists is to transform society so that women can have access to the same opportunities men have had for centuries, not to overthrow it. I do not feel that this is a radical notion, and I'm sure that many women and men on this campus would agree with me.

You stated that women are now nearly equal to men. The fact is that women earn about 75 cents to every dollar men earn for the same job. I do not call this equality.

Furthermore, if a married woman wants to keep her maiden name, she is not a horrible, unloving person. Why should a woman have to sacrifice more than a man in a marriage? This is extremely unfair. By the way, name changing is a trivial issue that you brought up, considering all the other problems women have to face, such as sexual discrimination and sexual harassment.

There are many women on this campus who are feminists and do not even realize it. The problem is that they do not want to admit that they are feminists because of the stereotype that all feminists are "militant lesbians," as projected in your article.

In the future, please do not make generalizations about women's issues when you do not have anything to base them on. By promoting women's rights so that women can have equality, feminism is a positive ideology, not a harmful one.

Dahlia Horowitz
Northeast

'Poor Man's Bible' on sale for wealthy

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press

LONDON — With its sparkling gold leaf, goatskin binding and detailed miniature drawings, the "Poor Man's Bible" was hardly that.

Produced in Holland about 600 years ago and once owned by King George III, one such book is a treasure in the British Library.

Now, a reproduction is within the budget of the moderately wealthy. Its creators painstakingly copied the art and included every imperfection and smudge.

About 980 copies are being printed. Each costs $3,950, but the price goes up to $5,700 after April 30. For their money buyers get 31 leaves, each illustrated with three brilliantly painted miniatures in a red goatskin binding.

"In the original form it was a medieval pop-up book, with each leaf of three drawings folded so that you saw the drawings in a sequence as the folds were opened," said Janet Backhouse, curator of illuminated manuscripts at the British Libary.

The format of "Biblia Pauperum" or "Poor Man's Bible," originated in what is now Austria or southern Germany in the mid-13th century. About 80 examples survive from before the age of printing.

James H. Marrow, author of a volume of commentary that accompanies the reproduction, said the format initially was intended for teaching monks and students. Copies were circulated around monasteries in Europe.

Marrow, an art history professor at Princeton University in Princeton, N.J., said the British Library copy is the most splendid example to survive.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

ONE LAST TIME IN THE CAGE – Six UMass students show their school spirit to mark last Friday's 84-74 win over Southwest Louisiana, the final men's basketball game in the Curry Hicks Cage.

■ abortion

continued from page 3

Goldman said.

State Rep. Ellen Story said, "Impetus for the Freedom of Choice Act started when Bush was president. People still have the feeling we should press ahead with it even when we have a friend in office."

"The major thing ,especially for students, is to keep an eye on this issue," Story said. "When candidates run for office, make sure you know where they stand on this issue. Let them know that you are watching them."

Joyce Berkman, professor of history at UMass, said she is excited about Hillary Clinton's efforts at steering health reforms.

"You can't speak of genuine reproductive choice without quality health care for every woman in this country regardless of their social class or color of skin," Berkman said.

Berkman said whe sees the government's role in contraception and abortion as two-fold.

"It is the government's responsibility to assure safe, inexpensive and available contraception and abortion," Berkman said.

"The government also needs to provide the means for women who want to have children the ability to do so."

Berkman said there is a need for what she calls "real choice."

"The choice whether or not to have children when women want," Berkman said.

The Collegian. We write stories about a lot of stuff. Sometimes we have pictures so you can see what the stuff looks like. What a deal.

CAMPUS MASTER PLAN SURVEY
University of Massachusetts

This survey is being conducted by the Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning Department to provide student, faculty and staff input to the UMass Master Plan, currently in progress. The plan will guide the development of the campus for the next 15 years and recommend policy on locating future buildings, new roadways, the addition of new facilities and many other potential changes. It is important to base this planning effort on a clear understanding of the existing campus, so that the best is retained or enhanced, and the problems are addressed through growth and change. Thank you for your assistance.

Completed surveys may be dropped in designated boxes at all dining commons, the Student Union, Lincoln Campus Center, Whitmore Hall, and all University Libraries, or sent by Campus Mail to: UMass Master Plan, c/o Ahern/Lindhult, 109 Hills North.

Status:
_Undergraduate _Graduate Student
_Staff
_Faculty
_Other (specify)

Where do you live?
_On campus
_off campus, within 10 miles _off campus, more than 10 miles

1. What are your 5 favorite places, buildings, or views on campus?

2. What 5 places, buildings, or views would you change on campus?

3. Please add any other comments.

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE AND WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
Presents:

"Somalia and Beyond: Foriegn Policy in the Clinton Administration"

A Five College Faculty Panel with:
Vinnie Ferraro, Mt. Holyoke College
Michael Klare, Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies
Susan Peterson, Smith College

Tuesday, February 2nd
7:30 PM
Neilson Library Browsing Room
Smith College

This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible. Sign interpreting is available with two weeks notice. For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT
ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS
THE BROOK AT AMHERST GREEN
QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE
253-3834

Arts & Living

Marshall Tucker Band is Still Smokin'

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

Celebrating its 20th anniversary together as a country rock group, The Marshall Tucker Band will give one of their customary smokin' performances tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton.

"After 20 years, you don't call them fans anymore — you call them friends," says Doug Gray, founding member of TMTB.

The Marshall Tucker Band members, who borrowed their name from a piano tuner in Spartanburg, S.C., where the group began, have taken on rigorous concert schedules, sometimes playing up to 300 shows a year.

Both Gray and Jerry Eubanks were founding members of the band. The other members include Stewart Swanlund and Rusty Milner on guitar, veteran bassist Tim Lawter, drummer Frank Toler and pianist/vocalist Don Cameron.

Since playing together, TMTB has recorded seven gold records and two platinum. Their latest album, released just a few months ago, entitled Still Smokin' has received impressive reviews from people involved in both the rock genre and country.

"You can't label our music, you really can't — we play all kinds of music. One week we opened for .38 Special and the next week we opened for Hank Williams Jr.," Gray told the Klamath Falls, Oregon Herald and News.

The opening cut of Still Smokin', "Frontline," is a song tribute to those who served in Operation Desert Storm. Other new songs include the upbeat Southern rock tale of mysterious places, "Tan Yard Road," and "Carolina Party," an up-tempo, foot-stomping, dancing tune. "Full Moon Rising" slows the pace of the album with its smooth flowin' blues style.

The band blends rock, R&B, jazz, gospel and country stylings, complete with Eubanks' signature flute and saxophone playing.

"Good country bands almost never come to the northeast," says Jon Peters, booking agent for Pearl Street. "It's hard to get these good country bands."

Especially ones like TMTB, whose appeal ranges from the original fans of 20 years ago, to the young fans of today getting caught up in the resurgent popularity of country-rock. "My roomate and I got one of their eight tracks at a tag sale and we play it all the time, while playing bumper pool in the kitchen," says Tamir Lipton, a 21-year old political science major. "I'd never really heard any of their music before, but once I started listening to them, I realized that they're not bad at all."

Bear Mountain, "the most popular country band from Springfield," according to Peters, will open for TMTB.

Tickets are $13 in advance and $15 at the door for this 21 and over show. Doors open at 8 p.m.

COURTESY D.R. GOFF

The Marshall Tucker Band is celebrating 20 years as a country rock group at the Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton

The Collegian's Arts Desk is looking for writers. Are you looking to write? Don't let this opportunity pass you by like a ship in the night. Practice your similes at the Collegian. 113 Campus Center 545-3500

ONE WAY SCREEN DESIGN
T-Shirts • Sweats • Boxers
Posters • Bumper Stickers
WE DO IT ALL!
Full Art Department, Free Delivery
584-0091
47 East Street, Hadley
5% OFF all orders with this coupon

The Spa
Hot Tubs & Tans
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
FRIDAY, FEB. 19
Single Project/Event Grants for music, theater, visual art and design, performance art, literature, film and video, and other arts related events.
PROPOSALS ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
APPLICATIONS GUIDANCE/INFORMATION STOP AT STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE OR UMASS ARTS COUNCIL 203 HASBROUCK OR CALL 545-0202

UPC PRODUCTIONS
First Meeting!
We are the 2nd largest student concert production Co. in the U.S.A.!
all are welcome!
COMING SOON....
VICO-C
BRAND NUBIAN
Spring Concert!
Tues. Feb. 2nd 6pm in Earthfoods
Be A Part of:
stage crew
security hospitality promotion

The
UMASS Theatre Guild
Wants You!
Newcomers of all majors
Artistic Team positions still available for:

Bedroom Farce

Technical Director
Stage Manager
Props Master
Poster Artist

If interested, contact
Christianna Pearce at 253-0782
or the Guild office at 545-0415

The Mystery of Edwin Drood

Dramaturg
Choreographer
Vocal Director
Technical Director
Assistant Stage Manager
Props Master
Rehearsal Pianist
Publicity Coordinator

If interested, contact
Jen Welty at 546-5838
or the Guild office at 545-0415

Our first General Membership Meeting is Wednesday, February 3, at 7:00 p.m. in Campus Center Room 162
New Members Welcome!!

Auditions for The Mystery of Edwin Drood are Friday and Saturday, February 5 & 6

Auditions for Bedroom Farce are Saturday and Sunday, February 27 & 28

For information about times and room numbers for the auditions or any other questions about the Theatre Guild, please call at 545-0415, or stop by our office at 423 Student Union

Jarboe's solo effort evokes many styles

By IAN CANADINE
Collegian Correspondent

Jarboe
Thirteen Masks
Sky Records

Thirteen Masks is the first solo effort by Jarboe, whose ethereal vocals have previously graced the work of New York avant-gardista Swans and their offshoot project, World of Skin. Swans were probably the most extreme and ear-destroying band of the New York noise scene, which also spawned Sonic Youth.

But when Jarboe joined them on their third album, Greed, a haunting note of fragility was introduced to the monolithic bleakness of their sound — a counterpoint which was further developed in their subsequent work. Her delicate and yearning voice was then utilized to even more prominent effect on the more mellow World of Skin albums which were recorded as a side project with Swans mainman, Michael Gira.

The last few Swans albums were only intermittently interesting, having abandoned the extremity of their old sound without establishing anything strong enough to take its place, but I was curious to see what Jarboe would make of the possibilities of a solo project. It certainly starts promisingly with "Listen," which gestures towards the more avant garde leanings of Jarboe's earlier Swans/World of Skin work, with her mantra-like vocal backed up by an abstract mosaic of bells and xylophones.

Unfortunately the expectations which this track raises are disappointed by what follows, which tends to shy away from doing anything very experimental. There is certainly a variety of styles played with here, from the cocktail jazz of "Wooden Idols," which recalls Julee Cruise, to the hyped funk rhythms of "Red" and "The Believers." There is even a return to the crashing percussion and demolition site guitars of the old days on "I Got a Gun." However, the predominant style is a combination of keyboards and acoustic guitar which tends to plod along without really convincing the listener that it is going anywhere.

Lyrically, Jarboe obviously has trouble escaping the shadow of Michael Gira, who wrote pretty much everything that he has sung up to this point. This basically implies a fascination with the dark side of life, and with mysticism, ritual, sadism and obsession. Titles like "The Lonely Voyeur" and "A Man of Hate" sum up the kind of landscape we can expect here. Again unfortunately, Jarboe's songwriting lacks the economy of expression and devastating power which Gira's has previously captured, and a lot of the time her lyrics end up

Turn to JARBOE, page 11

90210 Sr. Year - 2nd semester

Cutter and Art discuss the kids at W. Beverly High

By ARTHUR STAPLETON and CUTTER GARCIA
Collegian Staff

We tried to keep them silent, but you wouldn't let us. After last semester's stories we had thought (and more importantly we had HOPED) that you, our readers, would let the issue go. But after all of your cards and letters demanding their return we decided to let Art and Cutter out of the pen.

Once again the lives of America's most revered teens from 90210 — David, Donna, Andrea, Brandon, Steve, Dylan, Kelly and Brenda — will be lain out before us and discussed in depth.

Cutter Garcia (Singing in the mock tone of a sarcastic four year old): Dylan picked Kelly! Dylan picked Kelly! He dumped the haggy Brennnda! He should've done it soooooner!

Arthur Stapleton: Well, Cutter, the Walshes better lock the medicine cabinets, 'cause their daughter is about to go off the deep end. I kind of feel sorry for Brenda. Wait, no I don't! I'm glad Kelly ended up in the pool with rich-boy McKay. How about that gratuitous scene underwater for these clean cut teens?

CG: It didn't hurt me much, Art. I don't think it was the first time that Kelly found herself in a situation where she and Dylan got wet together.

I'm just hoping that the producers of the show finally give Americans what they truly want to see, the grisly annihilation of the teen-set antichrist — Brenda Walsh!

AS: Funny, but didn't Mr. Walsh say from the beginning of this relationship that it was doomed, and Brenda would end up that much worse? Remember, "Father always knows best." Ever since she started up with Dylan, Daddy's little girl became this country's whining nightmare. Maybe now that she has no one, Brenda will become an angel again. Hey Cutter, do you know the number of a good private school on the East Coast for Ms. Walsh?

CG: No, but I do know the number of the Good Samaritans if Mr. & Mrs. Walsh find themselves having to talk Brenda off of a ledge (heh, heh, heh!).

It's going to be very interesting to see what happens. Brenda will invariably blame her father for not letting her go to The Felon's prison release party, thinking that her absence made it that much easier for Jordan, or John, or Donnie, or — Hey Art! Which New Kid did Brenda go out with?

AS: No, no, no - he's not a New Kid. His name is Dylan.

CG: Oh, yeah. Sorry about that. I get them mixed up sometimes. Well anyways, she'll get all pissed off about Kelly being the chosen-one and will most likely try something drastic. Maybe she'll just sit in front of a mirror in her bathroom and practice cheesy French accents while smoking cigarettes until she bores herself to death!

AS: You know what? Drop the French accent, and envision Brenda saying this: "Mirror, mirror, on the wall, why is Kelly the fairest of them all? Why not me? Whaaaaa!

Anyway, the Walsh family has other problems with their other dream child, the one and only Brandon. It seems our hero has decided to try his hand in some gambling. I wonder what the odds were against Dylan picking his sister. Oops, we won't get into that again, but I hope he had the Cowboys minus a touchdown in last Sunday's game.

CG: Here's the ultimate plot scheme; Brandon gets in deep dutch to the mafia to the tune of 25 G's after betting heavily against the chances of MC Davy Fresh graduating a year early. After finally having sex with the goddess of light and love — Donna — MC Fresh suffers a brain seizure thereby rendering him stuck to W. Beverly and Brandon must crawl to the only man who can save his pitiful behind. The Wall Street Wonder, The White Collar Wizard, The Guy-Who-used-to-be-the-Dad-on-The Hogan Family who-is-now-a-convicted-Felon, — Mr. McKay!

He'll convince Brandolina to help him steal his son's trust fund in return for the cancellation of his reservations to sleep with the fishes. Oh, the possibilities!

AS: What is up with that? Dylan is soooo happy now that his crooked father is back in the picture? Hmmm, did he gain so much trust for him since Thanksgiving that he could trust him with his future? Who really cares, though, because the Super Dad, i.e. Jim Walsh, will probably save the day for the HoDad-Wonder, thus creating a rift between Brenda and her father.

CG: Creating a rift? Wake up Artie! Jim Walsh is living on one side of the Grand Canyon and Brenda is on the other. Maybe this will bring them closer and Mr. Walsh will be able to kill two birds with one stone. A) He'll let The Felon help to destroy "the- boy-who-would-do-Brenda-wrong" by releasing the trust to him and watching him blow it all on some stock scam. And B) By doing so it will enable the causes of justice to truly vanquish the forces of evil (which are embodied by The Felon and all he stands for) with true Minnesotian courage.

AS: Ya know, Cutter, a lot happened to our friends in that famous zip code over Winter Break. Some shows were good and some were bad, but were you ever expect-

Turn to 90210, page 11

COURTESY FOX BROADCASTING CO
Shannon Doherty, "Brenda" on 90210.

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

SHARK NIGHT • RETURNS •

Single Elimination Pool Tournament

- Free Pizza for Players
- $2.00 entrance fee

Sign Up - 7:30-8:00

WINNER TAKE ALL!!

University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

DOMESTIC EXCHANGE PROGRAMS

National Student Exchange

February Information Sessions
For 1993-94 Exchanges
4-5 pm in the Campus Center

Mondays
February 1 rm 811
February 8 rm 902
February 22 rm 805

Tuesdays
February 2 rm 811
February 9 rm 902
February 16 rm 811
February 23 rm 805

It's a BIG COUNTRY! Discover it!
The National Student Exchange Program transports you to new and exciting places that will transform your educational experience forever!

Spend a semester or year at one of over 100 colleges and universities across the country for no more than your current educatiuonal costss.

APPLICATION DEADLINE: MARCH 5, 1993

Five College Interchange

Register Today!
In The Five College Office
E-26 Machmer

Deadline is Tuesday Feb 9

COME TO THE NSE
FIVE COLLEGE INTERCHANGE OFFICES
E-26 MACHMER
5-5351 or 5-5352

Take classes at Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges. Included in UMass full-time tuition, most courses 4 credits!

INTERCHANGE DEADLINE: FEB 9, 4pm

EXCLUSIVELY FOR STUDENT CARDMEMBERS

We're here for you.

It seems wherever you go, there we are. Offering a helping hand whenever you need one, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Helping you to stretch your budget with special savings when you fly, shop, call long distance, and now, even when you ski.

As the official Card of Killington, home of some of the greatest skiing in the East, we're happy to bring you a free one-day ski pass just for using the American Express® Card to purchase a Killington ExtraCredit card.

The ExtraCredit card allows you to get 40% off the regular price of each additional one-day ski pass when you ski Killington.*

It's just a small part of our commitment to be there for you, all the way. The fact is, we want to do all we can to make Cardmembership as rewarding as possible for you.

So consider the offer below a glimpse of the good things to come. We know you're going places in life. And we hope you'll take us with you.

We'll get you to the top of the mountain with a free ski pass. How you get down is your business.

To get a free one-day ski pass, courtesy of American Express, simply purchase the Killington ExtraCredit card using the American Express Card.*

The ExtraCredit card costs $25 and entitles you to purchase a Killington one-day ski pass, valid on all six interconnected mountains, for only $25 each day, Sunday-Friday (non-holiday), through May 1, 1993. That's a savings of 40% off the regular price!

Call Killington Travel Service toll-free, at 1-800-372-2007, to sign up for the ExtraCredit card today. Have the American Express Card ready. Your voucher, redeemable for the bonus ski pass, will arrive with the ExtraCredit card. Please allow two weeks for delivery.

To get the Killington ExtraCredit card and voucher good for a free one-day ski pass, simply return the coupon below or call now: 1-800-372-2007.

Fill in information below, tear out and mail to:
Killington, RR1 Box 2450, Killington, VT 05751-9975. Attn: ExtraCredit card

Name
Address
City State Zip
Phone Number
School
American Express® Card Number
Expiration Date
Signature

If you're not an American Express Cardmember, call 1-800-942-AMEX today to apply.

* ExtraCredit card restrictions: Offer valid for full-time college students 18-24 years old only. ExtraCredit card is non-transferable, and only one ski pass per day may be purchased. A current college identification card and valid photo ID must be presented at Killington when you purchase your one-day ski pass.

©1993 American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc.

Cards
AMERICAN EXPRESS IS THE OFFICIAL CARD OF KILLINGTON.

Summer CD heats up

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

Indian Summer
Go West
EMI Records

Horace Greeley may have been the man to coin the phrase,"Go west young man," but I bet he never imagined that a musical group would evolve with a take on his famous words by naming their singing duo Go West.

Yes, it was Go West's Peter Cox's voice that spawned the 1990 smash hit "King of Wishful Thinking" from the movie Pretty Woman. And now, the same refreshing voice that has been blaring from radios all break long with their latest hit "Faithful" is back.

Go West's latest LP, called Indian Summer is heating up stereo systems with their latest 13 songs. If you thought "King of Wishful Thinking" was a feel-good musical sensation, let me be the first to tell you that the songs on Indian Summer continue with the same magnitude of feeling and quality.

The first track "Faithful" is probably the most familiar to you because it has been given plenty of air time on local radio stations. "Faithful" is like a spin-off song of "King of Wishful Thinking" because it is filled with the same singing spirit and charisma.

Indian Summer is one of the hottest discs around to date with vivacious tunes such as "That's What Love Can Do," "Count Me Out" and "A Taste of Things to Come." Each song spins off the disc with an upbeat feeling that can only be found in the movies. You know, the part of a film that plays music from the soundtrack that you've got to have — well, this is one of those.

Aside from the "up" songs that cause an instant natural high, this LP includes a fair share of those love inspired songs such as "Still in Love." Rather than being a typical slow song, it's instead a upbeat love song similiar to Bob Seger's "Living Inside My Heart" from the About Last Night Soundtrack.

In addition, Cox's voice reaches certain heights on the musical scale (no, nothing like Mariah Carey) that at times it sounds suspiciously like Michael Bolton.

With a beautiful sax introduction, "Tell Me" is a phenomenal tune that you won't be able to stop singing along with. Trust me, or better yet, see for yourself. This song has somewhat of a gospel-90s insert near the end, making this superior track one of the finest songs I've heard in a long time.

Maybe it was the words of Horace Greeley that inspired these boys to "go west" and to give their talent a try. But it will be their own talents that will push them along further. All I have to say in the memory and spirit of our Horace Greely is go west young men and women — you won't regret it.

Go West's Indian Summer COURTESY EMI RECORDS

Eiko and Koma will dance like the Wind

By ALLISON MASTERS
Collegian Correspondent

Japanese dancer-choreographers Eiko and Koma will give a preview of the world premiere of their latest full-length work, "Wind" at the Kirby Theatre in Amherst College Feb. 4 and 5.

The partnership of Eiko and Koma began in 1971. Both were law and political science students in Japan who came together as an experiment which developed into an exclusive partnership. Their American debut was in 1976, and since then they have presented their works at theatres, universities, and festivals across the world.

Eiko and Koma have described "Wind" as "the breath of life. . . it is what moves us through and beyond this world." Full of intensity and mystery, "Wind" will focus on the beauty of the body.

"Wind will be performed in a style similiar to their other works which have been classified as "non-traditional." The couple typically choreograph and perform only works of their own which exemplify stillness and suspense.

Eiko and Koma have designed a set which transforms the stage into a watery, not of this world space, full of spirits which have briefly passed through this world. The music for "Wind" will be medieval chants that have been recorded by the San Francisco choral group, Chanticleer.

"Wind" is one of Amherst College's events in their series "Imaging Peace: The Corliss Lamont Arts Project" and is in part sponsored by the Corliss Lamont Lectureship for a Peaceful World.

Performances will begin at 8 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, February 4 and 5. Admission is free but reservations are suggested. To reserve seats call the box office (542-2277) between 1-4:30.

■ 90210

continued from page 9

ing to see the worst 90210 of all time. . .

CG (Cutting in with a shrill cry): NO ART! PLEASE! NOT THAT! GOUGE OUT MY EYES! RIP OUT MY SPLEEN! MAKE ME WAIT IN LINE AT WHITMORE! BUT DON'T MAKE ME THINK ABOUT THE CHRISTMAS BUS SPECIAL!

AS: Yep, with all of its holiday splendor, too. It was bad enough that most of the episode was narrated by two angels who were so stupid they couldn't even get into this fine University! But, Mrs. Teasley's gopher boy, Steve, who was banished to detention hell for the remainder of his West Beverly career for the legacy-key fiasco, doesn't even notice the buses mysteriously fusing into each other, then exiting untouched and as safe as before! What is this, the Magic of David Copperfield?

CG: No — the failure of Aaron Spelling. The idea was sort of cute.

Screenwriter #1: "Let's introduce today's teens to the wonder of Frank Capra's perennial classic, "It's a Wonderful Life". We'll teach the kids a lesson about learning to appreciate what they have and we won't have to work very hard because we'll just rip off the concept from an already established classic!

The only things that we'll have to throw in will be: 1.) to make sure that Brandon gets dumped once again by a girlfriend so that we can win the office pool of it happening 14 times in one academic year at West Bev. and 2.) We'll have to have some miraculous event take place."

Screenwriter #2: "How about if we have the kids on a bus which is about to be totalled by a drunk trashcompactor driver. And at the last minute — right when the two vehicles are about to crash into a bloody, twisted pile of steel and rich kid in the middle of the day and at one of the busiest intersections of L.A. — the bus and truck will just sort of phase through one another?

Screenwriter #1: Yeah! I like it! Type it up!

All I'll say Art is that I hope my hero Jimmy Stewart wasn't watching. He'd have cried, I'm sure.

■ Jarboe

continued from page 9

sounding like they are just playing with devices rather than really having any point to them. "Red" is the worst culprit in this respect, consisting as it does basically of a list of things that are red, with a few morbid references thrown in for good measure, "A Virgin's mattress, red as sin, red as ink in Ted and Norman's skin."

Jarboe's voice can be breathtaking when used effectively, taking in childlike innocence, infinite melancholy, and the vengeful passion of a lover spurned, but her voice is easily the best thing here, and the material does not really do it justice. This is not a terrible album, it just does not live up to what it could be, and what Jarboe has done in the past when harnessing her voice to the stronger songwriting talents of Michael Gira, particularly in the earlier stages of their partnership. Thirteen Masks is probably worth checking out if you're into this sort of thing, but anyone who is really interested in what Jarboe can do as a singer should seek out World of Skin's eponymously titled first album.

Mental Health Groups
Spring 1993

Groups that will be offered this spring are:

- Adult Children of Alcoholics Wednesday 3:30-5
  (Process group for students with prior ACOA group experience)
- Adult Children of Dysfunctional Families
  Group I - Mondays, 3:30-5 (in Spanish)
  Group II - Thursdays, 3-4:30
- Eating Disorder Group Tuesdays 4-5:30
- Self-Exploration Groups
  Group I - Tuesdays, 3-4:30 (for students over 21)
  Group II - Thursdays, 3-4:30

Registration and pre-group interview required for all groups. Groups will begin in late February. For information and registration call 545-2337 or stop by 127 Hills North during the month of February.

Come See Our Valentine's Day Goodies
Boxers ♥ Briefs ♥ G-Strings
cotton and silk
Starting at $5

J•RICH
CLOTHING FOR MEN

191 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2013
Open 7 days • Thursday nights in Northampton
22 Masonic St. Northampton 586-6336

Black Affairs
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues
Jewish Affairs
Multicultural Affairs
Third World Affairs
Women's Issues

If you'd like to join the staffs of any of these desks, call or come to the Collegian offices.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

113 Campus Center • 545-3500

THE BOSTON GLOBE ON CAMPUS AT 50% OFF!

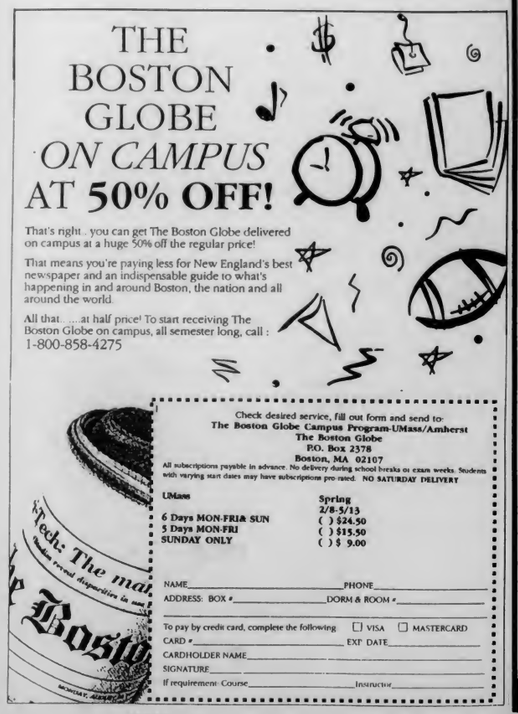
That's right... you can get The Boston Globe delivered on campus at a huge 50% off the regular price!

That means you're paying less for New England's best newspaper and an indispensable guide to what's happening in and around Boston, the nation and all around the world.

All that.....at half price! To start receiving The Boston Globe on campus, all semester long, call : 1-800-858-4275



Check desired service, fill out form and send to:
The Boston Globe Campus Program-UMass/Amherst
The Boston Globe
P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107

All subscriptions payable in advance. No delivery during school breaks or exam weeks. Students with varying start dates may have subscriptions pro-rated. NO SATURDAY DELIVERY

UMass	Spring 2/8-5/13
6 Days MON-FRI & SUN	( ) $24.50
5 Days MON-FRI	( ) $15.50
SUNDAY ONLY	( ) $ 9.00

NAME_____PHONE_____
ADDRESS: BOX #_____DORM & ROOM #_____
To pay by credit card, complete the following: ☐ VISA ☐ MASTERCARD
CARD #_____EXP. DATE_____
CARDHOLDER NAME_____
SIGNATURE_____
If requirement: Course_____Instructor_____

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Still Tic, Tac, Toeing Through Your Life?

Let us help you make some winning decisions about your future.

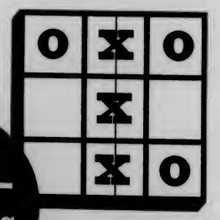
Late register for classes January 27-February 9.



UMass and You – a winning team!

Division of Continuing Education, 607 Goodell Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

Evening credit courses (over 100 in 37 different departments; most meet just once a week)

UMass Bachelor of General Studies degree — part time!

Noncredit workshops for business or pleasure (nearly 100, all winners)

Available University day courses (hundreds of them, stimulating!)

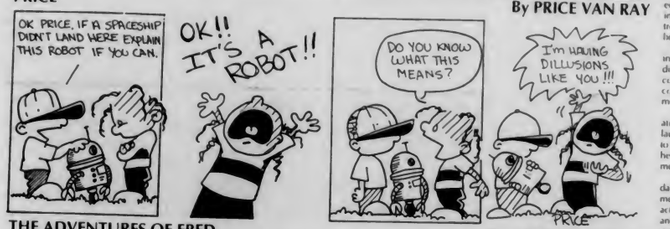
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY



THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Quit school? Quit school? You wanna end up like your father? A career lab rat?"

Quote of the Day

"I don't necessarily consider McDonald's junk food. You know, they have chicken sandwiches, they have salads."

– Bill Clinton

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The creative juices flow freely today — you feel ready for almost anything! Say "no" to invitations that cut into the time you and your mate want to spend alone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You would be wise to postpone a business errand or special project; confusion is in the wind. Wait until all traces of trouble have blown over. A sermon brings home a message of hope.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Taking a calculated risk could pay big dividends now. You are able to accomplish something that no one else could do. Drive defensively if you must venture out this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Creative or speculative venture can be launched in great style. Look forward to a splendid day for romance and heart-to-heart talks. Kindred souls meet and merge.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A fabulous day for getting together with family members and close friends. Group activities prove even more fun than anticipated. You resolve to do more entertaining at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spending a carefree day with those you love will deepen your rapport. Mate is supportive. Tend to personal matters in the late afternoon. A creative project could result in additional income.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Many hands will lighten the work load today. Be appreciative. Evening is the best time for a heart-to-heart talk with your mate. You arrive at a new understanding.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A shared spiritual experience will bring you and a loved one closer together. Remain true to your high ideals. Stay within your budget if you dine out tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A quiet private meeting could have a rejuvenating effect on a troubled relationship. Emphasize areas of agreement. Arriving at a more realistic budget is essential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Draw close to your friends and voice your concerns. You could find that they share your secret desires. Romance is in the air. There is a special person that would like to get deeply involved with you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get on the phone and arrange meetings with people who share your goals. Voicing controversial ideas publicly is risky. Emphasize your desire for calm discussion and analysis.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Prosperity can be found in new faces and places. Make sure you do things with style! A stormy encounter could leave you a wreck. Be conciliatory. Avoid rash acts and verbal battles.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

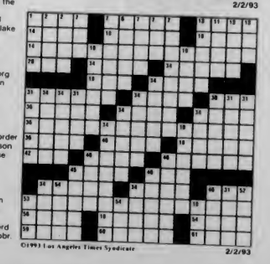
ACROSS
1 Bible weed
5 Leaves out
10 Japanese aborigine
14 QED word
15 Knobby
16 Windy City feature
17 Advice to Smith and Wesson?
20 Half a score
21 Brook
22 Canadian fliers
23 Doctors' go
24 Culture medium
25 Ali Baba word
29 Footnote abbr.
30 Comic Caesar
33 Chilled
34 Collections
35 King of Siam's friend
36 Advice to Captain Bligh?
39 Pub drinks
40 Small rodent
41 Perfume ingredient
42 Cut wood
43 "Those — the days..."
44 Quenched
45 Mountain lake
46 Summer, in Nice
47 Excalibur, for one
49 Fraternal org.
50 Zodiac sign
53 Advice to Wynton Marsalis?
56 Preserve
57 Pass over
58 Heraldic border
59 Very early son
60 Riding horse
61 Honey producers

DOWN
1 Examination
2 Commedia dell'—
3 Weatner word
4 Common abbr.
5 Punctual
6 Dough
7 Pastoral poem
8 Chinese Religious Principle
9 Incident
10 Author Horatio
11 Promises to pay, for short
12 "— of the above"
13 Often seen with "downs"
18 Playwright Larry —
19 Peruse
24 Lessen
25 Fountain drinks
26 "— Gay" historic plane
27 Thew
28 Goes on stage
29 Linen tape
30 Game fish
31 Fatuous
32 Obsolete
34 Future oak
35 Cadahra lead-in
37 Carries to excess
38 "My Sister —"
43 Suspicious
44 Packed
45 "Throw in the —" quit
46 Lyric poem
47 Chunk
48 Made fabric
49 French cheese
50 Knowledge
51 Author Gardner
52 Certain bills
53 Youth org.
54 Farthest Abbr.
55 Cutting tool

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

R	O	S	S		B	A	T	I	K		P	H	E	W
A	R	U	E		A	M	O	L	E		L	O	L	A
P	U	P	A		W	I	L	Y	N		O	L	E	O
E	E		E	L	I	S	E		D	E	N	D	S
		R	A	V	E	S		P	A	S	T
A	D	D	E	D		D	R	Y		M	O	N	D	A	Y
C	L	U	E	S		L	O	G	S		I	D	L	E
C	L	I	P	S		T	A	N	G	O	S		E	L	S
O	N	E		P	A	N	E	S		C	E	L	L	S
D	E	S			R	I	L		S	T	A	N	D
		D	A	N	N	S		S	C	A	N		A	R	T
H	O	K	E	Y		P	O	K	E	Y		B	L	U	E
I	R	I	S			N	E	W	E	R		E	L	V	E
T	E	N	T			N	E	W	E	R		E	Y	E	S

2/2/93



©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/2/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jason George
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Curtis
PhotoTechnician ..... Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor ..... Mike Carvalho
Production ..... Sandy Bogage, Michele Bakis

Menu

LUNCH
Tri-County Fair-wich
Chicken Burrito
BASICS LUNCH
Tomato/Egg/Cress-wich
Bean Burrito

DINNER
Fettuccini w/Sauce
Glazed Ham
BASICS DINNER
Fettuccini w/Sauce
Cheese Spinach Squares

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ Notebook

continued from page 16

could all be chosen as the best player without much arguement, but I'm going to have to go with Michigan's Chris Webber.

Webber has really developed this season from a raw, talented player into a true superstar. Webber is quickly adding moves to his low post game while continuing to astound athletically. It was a tough choice but when Chris Webber starts burying threes, leading the fast break, and swatting shots into the stratosphere, it makes the decision just a little bit easier.

Best Comeback: Easily the return of Ed O'Bannon. The highly touted O'Bannon's knee blew out him prior to his freshman campaign, and the way he looked last season was as a just a shell of his former self. But this season O'Bannon has returned with a vengeance, shining on the court, with an all-around game reminiscent of Billy Owens. Wake Forest's Randolph Childress (7 treys against UNC) rates a close second.

Biggest Surprise Team: How about Vanderbilt? Billy Mcaffrey has added immeasurable court presence for the Commodores. How about Long Beach State? First, they beat UNLV, then Kansas. How about Pitt? Paul Evans has his team winning in the Big Least. Nope. I'm going to have to go with Cincinnati. How can a team that made the Final Four last year be a surprise team, you ask? Very simple. One word. Repeat after me, expectations.

The Bearcats were picked in nearly everyone's Top 25 but not Top 5. Well, that is exactly where Bob Huggin's club is, the Top 5. Anyone who saw UMass-Cincinnati game, knows that the Bearcats can play defense with anyone, and that Nick Van Exel can shoot with anyone. Now the return of Corie Blount bolsters the Cincinnati frontcourt. The Bearcats have been surprising, make no mistake about that.

Biggest Team Disappointment: Another team had great expectations hurled on them, Memphis State. Well, one injury to super soph David Vaughn and a bushel of losses later, the Tigers find themselves in the midst of a muddled season. While Anfernee Hardaway is incredibly talented, he sometimes attempts to do too much and it hurts his team. Now, the Tigers, a preseason Top 10 team, are clinging to NCAA hopes.

Best Pick Set in a Long Time: Mr. Hurley meet Malcolm Mackey, he'd like to help you down.

Best Turnaround of the Year: UMass Women's Basketball. Two years ago: 0-27, last year: 4-24, this year: 8-8 and counting. Wow. Joanie O'Brien has done one hell of a job rebuilding this program. The improvement should not cease either. Check 'em out at the Curry Hicks Cage, and check 'em out soon.

Best Transformation from Orca the Whale to Body Beautiful: Hands down, this goes to Seton Hall's Luther Wright. Wright used to be, as my scholarly neighbor Jon "Lubo" Luviano (who watches Dukes of Hazzard reruns and has to have them explained to him) "a fat piece of [expletive]" but now he is a svelte, imposing specimen.

Best Suggestion about the Cage: This has got to come from UMass Assistant SID Lamar Chance, who suggested that Coach Cal leads his troop into the Cage for one game every year. Can you imagine what the crowd would be like for that game? It'd be bedlam, absolute bedlam.

Best Game: It might have been ugly for awhile, but for sheer emotion, dramatics and passion, nothing can compete with the UMass-Temple battle at the Cage. From Harper Williams' return to Tony Barbee's last-second heroics, this game exemplified what college basketball is all about.

The Cage crowd was as wild as ever, and this emotion spilled onto the floor. Bodies flew, shots were missed, dunks were thrown down, Temple's William Cunningham fouled out to chants of "Lo-Jac," runs were made and of course UMass won. Hard to beat that.

Best Imitation of a Toothpick: Hands down, Todd Hill of SW Louisiana. Hill at 6'7" is listed at 170 pounds. I'd have to say he looked to be about a buck fifty soaking wet. I have two words for Hill: Meal Plan. Get on one.

Best Article by A Sportswriter: Earlier in the year, Alexander Wolff of Sports Illustrated wrote an epic piece on the demise of the Big East. Wolff brought up great points about the floundering conference, the best being that it was the coaches in the Big Least that made the conference what it was and what it wishes it could be.

While we're on the subject of basketball scripture, over the break I read John Feinstein's book A Season Inside. The book chronicled the year in college basketball in which Danny Manning-led Kansas won the National Championship.

A Season Inside is a compelling book which can still be read feverishly some five plus years after it was written. John Calipari was an assistant for Paul Evans at Pitt for this year, and Feinstein has some funny andecdotes about Coach Cal. Feinstein, who writes for the Washington Post, is a sportswriting giant who has written other great books like Hard Courts, which is a look at a year on the professional tennis tour, and A Season on the Brink, which is a look at a year with Indiana and, of course Bobby Knight.

Best Conference: ACC Six teams in Top 25. No Big 10, ACC definitely. We'll see you next week on that note.

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian columnist who believes it is sometimes better to slip with your foot than your tongue.

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Exercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

IF ONLY THEY CAME WITH INSTRUCTIONS.
American Red Cross

STUDENT AFFAIRS SPECIAL SERVICES
236 WHITMORE

Is there something you would like to say before graduating?

You are invited to submit proposals for consideration as the

STUDENT COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Eligibility:	Graduating UMass-Amherst senior.
Format:	Submit not more than three word-processed or typewritten pages, double spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time.
Subject Matter:	Text should concern higher education, and be relevant to the University and your experience(s) here.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Director, Disability Services, (non-voting Committee Chair), 231 Whitmore, 545-0892
Selection Process:	A committee of students (majority), faculty, and staff, will review proposals. Authors' names will have been deleted to ensure objectivity. Ratings will be assigned. Selected authors will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March). A final selection will then be made by the committee.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 17, 1993, 4:30 p.m.
For additional information:	Paul R. Appleby, Selection Committee Chair, 231 Whitmore, 5-0892.

Join a team... without flipping burgers.

Can you write a news story, shoot a great feature photo or write better ad copy than this? If you answered "sort of" to any of these questions, or if you have any interest in working for a newspaper, come on down to the Collegian and get involved.

The Collegian. No embarassing initiation procedures and you'll never, ever have to flip any burgers.

113 Campus Center Basement • UMass/Amherst • 545-3500

Limited Time Offer
Lowest Prices of the Season
on college rings
selected Women's Rings $239 regularly priced up to $350
selected Men's Rings $299 regularly priced up to $435
JOSTENS
UNIVERSITY STORE
February 2, 3, 4 and 5
10 am to 4 pm
Prices are for 10K gold rings. For 14K gold rings, add $100.

UMass men's swimmers victorious once again

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

Buoyed by the support of a good crowd — partly because it was the semester's only home meet, and partly because it was Parent's Weekend — the men's swimming team ran their record to 10-1 in a 193-104 romp over the University of New Hampshire Saturday at Rogers Pool.

"It was a nice day because all the parents were there," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth, "and they enjoyed seeing their sons and daughters swim. Basically we keyed on getting through the meet — swimming well, but we didn't have to put much emotion into it. And they needed it, because they've been working pretty hard for the past couple of weeks."

The 193 points is a season high for the Minutemen, but it could have been much worse had Yarworth swam his charges in their true events.

The meet began with the UMass team of Sean Clark, Tim Milbert, Jay Peluso, and Aaron Osborne establishing a new Rogers Pool record by swimming a 1:36.58 in the 200 Medley Relay.

Later in the meet Tim Nubar set another Rogers Pool record by swimming a :50.90 in the 100 Butterfly.

Stacked in and around those performances were Minuteman wins in 14 of the meet's 16 events. There were only three events where UMass did not place a swimmer in the top three.

Justin Murphy easily outdistanced the UNH competition in both the one meter (287.60 points) and three meter (229.35) dives to lay claim as the meet's only multiple individual winner. Several of the team relay swimmers won other events: Clark won the 100 Backstroke; Jay Peluso, on the winning team in the 200 Freestyle Relay, won the 100 Breaststroke; Osborne, on both of the winning relay teams, won the 50 Freestyle. Chris Barrett won the 200 Backstroke and was also on the 200 Freestyle Relay.

The Minutemen, ranked number one in the New England League, travel to Boston this Saturday to battle the Northeastern Huskies.

MEET NOTES — Last Thursday, Yarworth said there was no way his team was one of the top 40 in the country. When the national poll was released over the weekend, lo and behold, there was Massachusetts, tied at number 36 with the University of Miami.

SETH KAYE / COLLEGIAN
Tim Nubar, shown here in the 100 yard butterfly, led the University of Massachusetts men's swim team to a win over the weekend against the University of New Hampshire.

Injured women finish in third

By JASON NASH
Collegian Staff

On Saturday, with three key athletes missing, the UMass Women's Track team found themselves finishing third in a four team meet in Dartmouth, New Hampshire, bringing their record to 4-6. The sub-par performance saw the University of Vermont finishing first with 57 points, followed by Dartmouth College with 48, UMass with 35, and the University of New Hampshire with 22.

The Minutewomen were forced to compete without Jaime Meeks (sore shins), Lenice Johnson(pulled quad) and Natalie Hart (ineligible), and with all three being outstanding in their individual events head coach Julie LaFreniere was left in a tight spot.

"I think we're stronger than we showed," said LaFreniere. "Jaime (Meeks) probably would have been good for another ten points alone and Natalie (Hart) could have easily beaten the best shot put of the day at 42 feet."

As for Johnson, she started off the day in grand fashion by winning the 400 meters, but only to pull her quad in the process creating another liability for UMass.

"Lenice was a top runner in both the 200 meters and 4x4 relay and her injury really hurt us," said Lafreniere.

Johnson's performance was not the only bright spot for UMass a the Minutewomen received a fine day from Junior Kim Liljeblad who finished first in the mile with a time of 5:29. Oddly, this was only the first time Liljeblad had ran the event.

"I had been basically running the 800 all season," said Liljeblad. "Coach decided to give me a try and it wasn't a great time, but I was pleased with the results."

In addition UMass got help from two freshman in Sherry Booker and Dahamana Shakespeare. Booker placed third in the long jump, the 200 meters and the 4x4 relay. Shakespeare created poetry of her own by finishing fourth overall in the shot put.

Moreover, UMass showed their ability in the distance events by placing Kelly Liljeblad (second), Tricia Matheison (third) and Julie Moreau (fourth) in the 5000 meters.

"The success of cross country has really carried over." said LaFreniere.

While Saturday's contest might seem disappointing, LaFreniere is positive about their upcoming meet on Friday at the University of Rhode Island with Holy Cross and New Hampshire.

"I believe we'll be back at full strength and it should be a dog fight between us and URI," said LaFreniere. "We have already seen URI once this year and they only beat us by ten points."

Men's and Women's Fencing results for this past weekend

MEN

UMass vs. Brown	13 wins 14 losses
UMass vs. UNH	18 wins 9 losses
UMass vs. Amherst + Hampshire Unified	16 wins 11 losses

WOMEN

UMass vs. Brown	9 wins 7 losses
UMass vs. UNH	5 wins 11 losses
UMass vs. Amherst + Hampshire Unified	9 wins 7 losses

UMass Sports in the Collegian. Gotta love it!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Bridge Club/Team Beginners or experienced. Come join for fun or competition. Wed 2/3 7:30 pm Campus Ctr outside coffee shop. 665-7877 ext. 444

Pre Vet AnSci Club
Meeting Feb 2
Tues 5:30 STK 114
PIZZA PARTY
Skip D.C. and have dinner with us
ALL WELCOME
Dues $3.00

UPC FIRST SPRING 93 GENERAL COMMITTEE MEETING
Tonight, 2/2, at 6 pm in EARTHFOODS (at the Student Union). UPC is a completely student run organization dedicated to bringing concerts to UMass (including Spring Concert!) Everyone is welcome

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Disability Services is in search of volunteer readers for disabled students. The job of a reader consists of reading books onto tape and/or reading aloud for students. No experience is necessary. We will train. Please contact Lorie Bell at Disability Services for further information at 545-0892.

Poster Sale. Biggest and best selection choose from over 1000 different images. Rock, old Masters (Monet, Dali, Van Gogh, Picasso, Escher, Matisse, Wyeth and hundreds more.) Movie posters, sports, scenic landscapes, music, dance, skiing, personalities, (Einstein, James Dean, Marilyn Monroe and others), Travel, humor, romance, photography (Talbot, Ansel Adams and others). Most images only $6, $8, and $7 each! See us at the Student Union Ball room on Monday February 1st through Friday February 5th. The hours are 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. This sale is sponsored by WMUA.

UMass Blood Drive
Today 11:00 - 4:00
in the Student Union Ballroom

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a new car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

89 Ford Festiva
Black 80k miles
Good condition new tires
$2750 must sell Tomo 549-2635

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-6098
549-6073

ENTERTAINMENT

yo?! is now available for parties and functions. CALL 549-3632

FOR RENT

Room Available in Amherst house. 5 min. walk from campus. Housemates are serious but fun. UMass students. Call Wiley, Mary or Kristen at 549-7618

FOR SALE

Don't Be Afraid to walk alone at night Personal alarms alert others With ear piercing noise Call Jon Bayuk 665-0288

For Sale: Burton air 6 Snowboard Airwalk boots size 7 $350 call 527-3014

Iguana with everything $100.00
Lights etc. 6-1709

QUEEN SIZE WATERBED $50 or best offer. Call Dana 253-2406

Snowboard – 160cm Barfoot Freestyle $100 584-2976
Golf Clubs Spalding full set plus leather bag $100 584-2976

HELP WANTED

Att. Excellent income for home assembly work. Info 1-504-646-1700 Dept MA 1307

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with clean water action. $100/wk. +. On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours – good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon. - Fri. + Sunday. Early hours good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Join the Mesaging staff and be part of a 20 year history of environmental activism:
The Bottle Bill
Mass. Clean Air Act
Mass toxic use reduction act
Full/Part time positions $40-60/day
Call Carmen 256-8424

Postal Jobs Available! Many positions. Great Benefits. 1-800-436-4365. ext. P 3306

Sick of DC Meal Plan?
Meal plan in exchange for kitchen work if interested call
Jim Houston at 549-4910
At 496 North Pleasant St

"Silver Bullion Coin Program"
$5 Paid weekly
No individual selling or recruiting
83% commissions paid.
Projected income 42-84K
603-964-1676

SPRING BREAKERS. Promote our Florida Spring Break packages. Earn MONEY and FREE trips. Call CMI 1-800 423-5264

The Undergraduate Admissions office is now accepting applications for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Representatives and New Students Program Summer Counselors. Applications available at the Admissions office.

U.S. Tracars is currently seeking motivated students in Amherst area for FT and PT independent work (800)886-6919

INSTRUCTION

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

Prescription Rayban Sunglasses in maroon case
If found please call 253-3553

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

MUSICIANS

Guitar lessons for beginner and intermediate players $10-$15 per hour 549-2685

HEY YOU

To the pretty student/waitress I met Monday, January 25th at 10 am at the bursars office. Those lines were so long I practically got to know your whole life history except for a few critical details - like your name. I'd like to see you again. If you would like to see me again please respond here.

PERSONALS

Kathy Maya
Where are you?
Lets get together
Paewoman

ROOMMATES WANTED

Female roomate wanted
Mill Valley Estates
198 heat hot water included
Call 256-0247

2 females or couple to share roome $160 each or $275 for single, beautiful apartment 665-7604

Roomate Needed!!!
M/F to share two bedroom Brandywine Apt.
175.00/mo.
549-5868

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and confidential caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

TRAVEL

Spring Break '93***
Cancun $479! Jamaica $499!
Daytona Beach $169! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company!
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL
1-800-328-SAVE

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK
Wheat wave to all places
Guar. lowest prices or Double dlrr., free club passes
no peak fees
Call Debbie 549-1411

TAKE IT OFF!!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

WANT A TAN LINE?
Cancun, Jamaica, Florida
Merideth 549-6284

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Make Money at Home!
FREE DETAILS
Box 5927 -FG, Shreveport, La. 71135

SPRING BREAK '93
Non-Stop Air • (7) Nights Hotel • Taxes • Club Discounts • Transfers • Activities Program
CANCUN ..... from $429
BAHAMAS ..... from $439
JAMAICA ..... from $459
DAYTONA (Holiday) from $149
FLORIDA (Panama City) from $129
For free brochure call
Breakaway Travel
1-800-862-7325
(Sponsoring In Stanford Cup Hockey)

Sports

UMass, A-10 Tidbits

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts coach John Calipari has high expectations for sophomore forward Lou Roe, but none higher than leading the nation in rebounding.

"If Lou Roe plays to his potential he should be the top rebounder in the country," Calipari said. "Sometimes he plays that way, sometimes he doesn't. It all depends on how much he wants it."

Roe, who is averaging 8.9 rebounds a game, to go along with 14.7 points, agrees with his coach.

"Yeah, I think I could be leading rebounder in the country," the 6-8 Atlantic City, N.J. resident. "Sometimes when I going up for a rebound, I get my eyeballs right up there with the rim. I can get up with anyone."

Warren Kidd of Middle Tennessee State currently leads the nation in rebounds with 14.5 a game, but Calipari says catching Kidd is just a matter of desire.

"If Lou wants it, he's capable," Calipari said. "He needs to go after it. Sometimes he jumps and gets the board, he goes after it. Other times he just lets the ball come to him. When he just sits there, then he gets beat. It depends on what Lou wants to do."

After most drills during practice, Calipari makes Roe stand under the net, jump up and dunk the ball ten times in a row, in an effort to increase Roe's vertical leap.

"I just need to keep crashing the boards and I'll get my rebounds," Roe, who's lowpost game has improved drastically over the past month, said. "It's effort, so I just need to keep trying."

• George Washington freshman Yinka Dare looks to be a lock for Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year honors. The 7-1 native of Nigeria, who is averaging 12.7 points and 9.5 rebounds a game, has been named A-10 Rookie of the Week five times already this season.

• UMass recruit Tyrone Weeks, of Philadelphia's Franklin Learning Center, has been on fire as of late.

Weeks, a 6-7 power forward, poured in 33 points and grabbed 20 boards in a victory over Philadelphia North last week. Franklin Learning Center is ranked No. 10 in the nation by USA Today.

"We signed Tyrone as a player who could come in and bring us some physical play," Calipari said. "He has the talent and he plays hard. We don't play with a center, just forwards, so he'll fit into our system well."

Weeks was also recruited by Villanova.

• UMass will likely play in the Preseason NIT next year. The tournament, which begins in mid-November, is one of the most competitive in-season tournaments in the country.

Sixteen teams are selected and the first two rounds of the tournament are held on the home courts of the highest seeds. The Final Four is held in Madison Square Garden in New York City. This season's Final Four consisted of Florida State, UCLA, Seton Hall and eventual champion Indiana.

Look for the Mullins Center to host a round or two next November.

• Harper Williams was named Atlantic 10 Player of the Week for his play against DePaul and Southwestern Louisiana.

Since his return from his injury Williams has been playing his best basketball of the season, raising his averages to 17.4 ppg and 8.4 rpg.

Swimmers dunk UNH

UM women outswim Wildcats 205-95

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Staff

Boyden Pool attracted its largest crowd Saturday when the Universtiy of Massachusetts swim teams joined forces and annihilated the University of New Hampshire Wildcats in a parents weekend co-ed meet.

For the women's team, this was their last dualmeet before the New England championships. The Minutewomen claimed a hefty victory, defeating the Wildcats by a colossal 110 points, boosting their record to 7-4-0. The final score was UMass 205, UNH 95.

After coming off of a significant win in Wednesday's B.C. meet, the Minutewomen did not want to underestimate the Wildcats. To ensure victory the team set three goals.

"We wanted to break the 200-point barrier, win all of our events and have no sixth-place finishes," assistant coach Ed Melanson said.

A first and third place finish kicked off the first event in the 200-yard medley relay, starting a solid momentum that led the team into dominating the meet. They landed first place finishes in 14 of the 15 events and settled for a sixth place finish in only three.

"The team is swimming extremely fast with only two weeks left until New Englands," co-captain Kari Edwardsen said. "We have more confidence and drive now and realize our potential.

For graduating seniors Edwardsen, co-captain Teresa Konieczny and Lori Sheehan, this was the last time they would compete in the waters of Boyden Pool. In the 1000-yard freestyle, distance swimmer Konieczny dropped a few seconds from her time to capture a lifetime best at 11:25.96.

Sheehan also secured a lifetime best in both the 200 and 100-yard freestyles with a time of 2:04.48 and 56.99 respectively. Edwardsen was invincible in the 100 and 200-yard backstrokes, seizing two first place finishes.

"The seniors put a lot of time and devotion into the program and the success of the program as a whole," said head coach Bob Newcomb. "They will be tough kids to lose."

Payoff also came in the form of lifetime bests for junior Jennifer Saunders, sophomores Kristen Miles, Karen Hodges and Jen Sheehan, and freshmen Jessica Griffth and Meghan O'Connor.

Junior diver Allison White again impressed the judges with her finesse and consistency, landing her a first in both the one and three-meter diving events. White also qualified for Zone Nationals on the one-meter. The divers swept first second and third place in the one-meter event, courtesy of White, freshman Amanda Moynihan and sophomore Deirde May respectively.

In a concerted effort to clench the 200-yard freestyle relay record, the Minutewomen missed by only one second. "We are peaking at the right time." Melanson said. "We're really looking forward to New Englands."

College hoops: Midyear report

It is the midseason in College Basketball and it is time for the College Basketball Notebook's Mid-year Report:

College Basketball Notebook
By Jeff Crofts

Best Team: With the top teams falling all over the place now, the best overall team is... Kansas. The Jayhawks earn high marks in every part of the game. For guard play, there is Adonis Jordan and "Super" Rex Walters. In the low post, Kansas has Richard Scott and Eric Pauley. Off the bench, Steve Woodberry leads a merry crew of talented players. Roy Williams is as good a coach as there is in the NCAA.

Best Player: Grant Hill, Bobby Hurley, Glenn Robinson, Jamal Mashburn, Calbert Cheaney, Anfernee Hardaway, J.R. Rider, Rodney Rogers

Turn to NOTEBOOK, page 14

Football recruiting in full swing

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

It's the off-season for the University of Massachusetts football team, but Head Coach Mike Hodges and his fellow coaches are still working hard to improve their football program.

The Collegian has learned from sources recently that 12 high school prospects, highly recruited by the Minutemen, have verbally committed to playing in Amherst next season. On Feb. 3, barring any unforeseen changes, the letters of intent will be signed.

One recruit who is already on campus in his first semester is Breon Parker, a cornerback out of Nassau (Long Island) Community College.

"I'm excited about playing here," Parker said. "Coach Hodges seems like a players' coach and the players really made me feel comfortable when I visited."

Bryan Mooney, a standout at Atlantic City (New Jersey) High, will also come into the UMass football program as a highly touted prospect.

"I liked everything about the UMass football program," said Mooney, who will probably play cornerback, "especially the defense (#2 rated defense in division 1AA)."

Also verbally committing to play at UMass were a number of local prospects, all of whom seemed very excited about playing for coach Hodges.

"Everything about UMass really impressed me — the coaches, the campus, the kids," said Andre Fournier, a tailback from St. John's Prep who will probably play wide receiver. "I'm looking forward to playing here, especially since they play such a great level of football."

One player who said he'd love to come in next fall and make an immediate impact is Michael Dawson, a linebacker from North Middlesex High.

"There are plenty of factors that influenced me to (verbally commit)," Dawson said. "The coaches (at UMass) seemed really pumped about the program and they've had a great recruiting year — we're going to be a super team."

Other locals who have verbally committed include running back Bill Tucker from Reading High and Mike Wing, a tight end from Westfield High. Mike Batelli (Ramsey [N.J.] High), Lauringle Mitchell (Mamaroneck [N.Y.] High), Anthony Graham (Bassick [N.J.] High), Matt Rocha (Lyndhurst [N.J.] High), Mike Chichester (DeMatha [Ba[timore]) and Darryl Thomas (Cranford [Ct.] High) round out the UMass recruits who have verbally committed.

Minutewomen roll past WRams

Marshall's record-setting day leads women's gymnastics

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

Records are made to be broken.

The University of Massachusetts' women's gymnastics team (1-2) proved this old sports cliche true in defeating the University of Rhode Island WRams Saturday afternoon in front of a packed house in Boyden Gymnastics Center. With their team score of 189.65 to URI's 188.2, the Minutewomen set a new school record, one of three to fall on the day.

Senior Tammy Marshall dominated the field of gymnasts, winning the all-around for the third time in as many meets. With her performances on balance beam (9.85), vault (9.7), bars (97.5), and floor (9.9), Marshall shattered her own school record (39.00) for the all-around with a total score of 39.20. Her score on beam was also a new school record, surpassing a 9.8 mark set by teammate Margaret Furtado last year.

However, another Tammy was on the minds of the UMass team as they entered Saturday's meet. Freshman Tammy Noel, who was slated to compete in the meet against the WRams, dislocated her ankle in practice Friday night, and could not even attend the meet. The Minutewomen dedicated the victory to their fallen teammate.

"We stressed a lot of team unity and pulling for the team. This win was for Tammy, and she was in the back of my mind a lot today," Marshall said.

Freshman Shaheda Keels had her career-best performance on the day, helping the Minutewomen to their first victory on the season.

"The first two meets were rough for Shaheda, but today she pulled it all together. Shaheda has that little extra that she can bring to a floor line-up that no one else can. It is a different type of electricity," UMass head coach Alfie Mitchell said.

When asked about his team's uncanny knack for breaking records on Saturday, Mitchell attributed their success to the up-and-coming talent.

"We put the record board here in the gym for an incentive so people can see what to shoot for," Mitchell said. "I think each week as we get better and better the records are going to keep falling."

The outcome of the meet hung in the balance as the Minutewomen entered the floor exercise, their final event on the afternoon. Mitchell said he anticipated the close contest with the WRams, and enjoyed the tension.

"We did not know if we would win or not until Lisa-Beth [Cronen] hit her career best (9.75) on floor. Sometimes I like it this close and sometimes I don't. Today, I liked it because we came out on top," Mitchell said.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
Senior Tammy Marshall holds every individual school record for UMass women's gymnastics.

Wednesday February 3, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 69

Today look for temps. in the 40s. Tomorrow a little cooler; 30s.

Local News:
A pipe bursts in the Graduate Tower, causing floods and cancellation of classes. The cause of the break is under investigation. Page 3.

Arts & Living:
Jon Lupo gives a detailed critique of Spike Lee's films in anticipation of his visit. See how he rated your favorite movie. Page 7.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Hidden gov't tapes could be released

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — Secret Oval Office tape-recordings from the Kennedy administration may be hearing release under a compromise worked out by the John F. Kennedy Library and the National Security Council.

"What we're looking at is the possibility of loosening the existing logjam with regard to transcripts, and that's a hopeful sign," said library spokesman Frank Rigg.

The development follows public complaints by researchers and historians, foremost among them Nigel Hamilton, the author of "JFK; Reckless Youth," who blasted library officials in an co-ed column in the New York Times Jan. 22.

"I am cautiously optimistic, because for so many years so little has been done," Hamilton said Tuesday.

No tapes have been released by the library since 1983, with the exception of a recording of a conversation taped during the Cuban Missile Crisis that was made available in 1987. The other previously released audiotapes related to the 1962 integration crisis at the University of Mississippi.

Library officials blame a bureaucratic Catch-22 for the logjam.

The National Archives, of which the library is part, has refused to prepare transcripts of the tapes. Archives officials said they want to avoid responsibility for misinterpretations.

"The National Archives is not in the business of interpreting records," said Susan Cooper, a spokesman for the agency. "The record itself is the tape, not the transcription."

But the National Security Council has refused to declassify the tapes unless the library provides transcripts.

Under an agreement Rigg said has been hammered out, the National Security Council will be furnished tape recordings and a detailed list of the identities of all the speakers on an experimental basis.

"If the National Security Council were to agree to declassifying tapes based on simply listening to the tapes, it would speed up the process," Rigg said.

He said tapes would be furnished to the council "shortly," but that there was no timetable for a decision on declassifying the recordings.

Other government agencies, such as the Central Intelligence Agency or Department of Defense, also could intervene to block the release of some material, library officials said.

Turn to TAPES, page 4

MATTHEW SIMONEAU / COLLEGIAN
WHAT A MESS — Maintainers work to clean the Lederle Graduate Research Tower after a pipe burst. See related story on page 3.

UM grad. says he was beaten near campus

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Amherst Police are investigating a claim by a University of Massachusetts graduate that he was kicked, beaten and racially harassed on fraternity row last weekend.

Andrew Chu, a 1990 graduate of the University, said he and a friend were attacked by a group of men who repeatedly shoved them down and kicked them while shouting racial epithets on North Pleasant Street between the Iota Gamma Upsilon sorority and the Hillel House at about 2 a.m. Sunday.

Amherst Police said the incident is currently under investigation.

Chu said he and his friend were treated for minor injuries at University Health Services and released.

Chu, who presently works and lives in Boston, said he had been in Amherst for the weekend to visit brothers at his old fraternity. Chu asked that the name of the fraternity not be printed.

He said he and a friend had been at a fraternity party Saturday evening, which they later left and went to Iota Gamma Upsilon to visit an acquaintance and wait for a ride home.

Chu said they were waiting in the lobby of Iota Gamma Upsilon when a fight broke out on the sidewalk in front of the sorority house. He said while the fight was going on, he and his friend were approached by a man and a woman who told them to leave the house.

He said he tried to persuade them to let him and his friend stay inside to wait for their ride, when the woman grabbed him by the jacket and the man started yelling in his face that they had to leave.

He said he and his friend were preparing to go when several men who had been involved in a fight outside came in, grabbed them, and threw them out the door.

Chu said he and his friend began to walk away from the sorority house when they were shoved down and kicked in the head, ribs and legs by

Turn to ATTACK, page 10

Spike Lee has campus contacts

UMass professors have worked with famed director

By MARTIN JONES
Collegian Staff

Filmmaker Spike Lee, the director of the widely acclaimed epic film Malcolm X, will address the University of Massachusetts tonight at the Fine Arts Center Auditorium.

Sponsored by the Afrik-Am Society to begin African-American History Month, the event has sold out.

During his lecture Lee is expected to address the campus on a variety of issues, ranging from his work as a Black filmmaker to social issues such as racism which is a commonly used theme in his films. Lee will also address the audience for a half-hour question-and-answer period.

Dr. David DuBois, a visiting professor of journalism at UMass worked as a consultant to Spike Lee during his shooting of Malcolm X. DuBois, who has been living in Egypt since 1960, was living in Cairo during Malcolm X's 1964 visit to the Middle East and spent a great deal of time with him.

"Spike Lee sent a producer to Cairo to prepare for a shoot there and eventually had myself flown to New York where I discussed Malcolm's trip to Egypt with him," DuBois said.

DuBois described Spike Lee as "a serious young man with a desire to get as full a knowledge of Malcolm as possible." DuBois went on to praise Lee for his work on Malcolm X, saying, "he deserves a great deal of credit for undertaking such a task."

Two other faculty have also worked with Lee in the past. Diane Brooks, an associate professor in the legal studies department met Lee when he was writing the script for his first feature film, "She's Gotta Have It." Brooks was asked by Lee to critique the script for the film.

English professor John Edgar Wideman, who was recently inducted into the Academy of Arts and Sciences, also traveled to Egypt to cover the filming of Malcolm X for a major magazine.

Lee's visit marks the first of a month-long series of events for African-American History Month, which is sponsored annually by the Division of Student Activities. This Friday and Saturday, New World Theater will be sponsoring "Miss Ida B. Wells," a play about the life of the famous African American journalist who crusaded against

Turn to SPIKE, page 10

Clinton plans to give $30 billion

Lawmakers say they have plenty of ways to spend it

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — New England governors conferred with the region's Washington representative Tuesday as the Clinton administration geared up to provide economic assistance to the nation.

A day after President Clinton told the governors he is planning some $30 billion in tax incentives and public works expenditures to stimulate the economy, lawmakers from Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut were busy devising ways to spend it.

"If the president's going to have an economic stimulus program, then we've got a lot of projects ready to go," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., Rep. Rosa DeLauro, D-Conn., and Rhode Island Gov. Bruce G. Sundlun seized on Clinton's infrastructure spending proposals.

Sundlen told a House economic development panel that the new administration should funnel federal funds to states who have public works projects through the design stage and ready to go.

"In Rhode Island we have a list of projects we could immediately begin work on," Sundlun said. "We can't wait the five or 10 years it will take to put our economies back together. We need your help for now — if we are ever to have a chance in the future."

Lieberman, in a statement on the Senate floor, urged the passage of an economic stimulus package that would steer most of its funds to states hardest hit by the recession.

Connecticut, Lieberman said, has lost more than 200,000 jobs since the recession began.

What makes these cutbacks so disastrous is that the job losses are in manufacturing, a sector that has been particularly hard hit over the last decade," Lieberman said. "Connecticut and New England need an economic stimulus package to get manufacturing moving again."

Rep. Nancy Johnson, R-Conn., meanwhile, picked up on another Clinton theme Tuesday by proposing welfare reform legislation designed, as Clinton said, "to end welfare as we know it."

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor .....

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Ordeal deepened couple's love

By DENNIS GEORGATOS
Associated Press

CASTRO VALLEY — A young couple who were stranded for eight days in the snow and spent nearly a month recovering in the hospital say the ordeal strengthened their love.

"We've learned a lot about the importance and depth of our love," said Army Pfc. James Stolpa, his 5-month-old son, Clayton, on his lap and his wife, Jennifer, by his side.

"We have had times of fear and times of great love. Some times have been like a nightmare and some have been like a wonderful dream."

The Stolpas, both 21, were in wheelchairs, having lost part of their feet to frostbite. They spoke to reporters Monday before leaving a Reno, Nev., hospital, where they were brought after their Jan. 7 rescue.

Their truck became stuck in deep snow Dec. 29 in Nevada on their way from Castro Valley to a funeral in Pocatello, Idaho. Mrs. Stolpa huddled with the baby in a cave while her husband walked about 60 miles through waist-deep snow for help.

After their rescue, Mrs. Stolpa described her husband as her hero. But on Monday, Stolpa praised his wife's courage. "I consider Jennifer my hero because she saved my baby and kept him alive while I was gone," he said.

Doctors amputated part of their feet and reconstructed blood vessels and muscles so they could walk again using special shoes but no prostheses.

The baby survived unharmed and has been staying with his parents in the hospital.

Dr. Norman Young, an orthopedic surgeon, said the couple would undergo physical therapy. "We will not know for sure the success for another two months, perhaps longer," he said.

$2 million gift for Radcliffe library

CAMBRIDGE (AP)- Radcliffe College has received a $2 million donation to endow a library on the history of women in America.

The gift, one of the largest ever made to the all-women college, was to be announced on Wednesday. It was given by the Carl and Lily Pforzheimer Foundation.

"No event in the recent history of the library is as important as the donation of this gift," said Joan R. Challinor, a historian and chairman of the advisory committee of the Arthur and Elizabeth Schlesinger Library on the History of Women in America.

The money will be used to endow the salary of the library's director.

The library was founded in 1943 when suffragette Maud Wood Park donated her collection on women's rights to the college. It opened to the public in 1947. Last year, 8,300 researchers used the library, officials said.

The library holds the archives of the National Organization for Women and National Women's Political Caucus and the papers of Susan B. Anthony, Julia Child, Betty Friedan, Amelia Earhart and Harriet Beecher Stowe.

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN–
IT'S NEVER TOO LATE TO GET INVOLVED.
COME DOWN TO 113 CAMPUS CENTER
OR CALL 545-3500 FOR MORE INFORMATION

Position Available
Gay
Lesbian
Bisexual
Issues
The Collegian is accepting applications for the position of GLB Editor.
Please see Michelle Bayliss in room 113 or call 545-3500.
the Collegian is an E.O.E.

Walking Distance
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive, Amherst • 253-3539
Free Weights Supreme
Best Cardiovascular

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Boxercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

We have health careers down to a science.
The Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences at Northeastern University offers graduate studies for those who want to excel in a health-related profession.
You'll be taught by faculty who have distinguished themselves in both teaching and research. Your studies will be enriched through Bouvé's affiliations with some of Boston's world-class medical and research facilities. Study may lead to a master's degree, certificate of advanced graduate study (CAGS), or doctoral degree. Most programs are offered on a part-time as well as a full-time basis. For your convenience, courses meet in the late afternoon and early evening.
For more information, call (617) 437-2708 or write Graduate School, Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, 203 Mugar Life Science Building, Northeastern University, Boston, MA 02115.

Graduate programs are offered in the following areas:
• Applied Behavior Analysis
• Audiology
• Clinical Exercise Physiology
• College Student Development and Counseling
• Counseling Psychology
• Doctor of Pharmacy
• General Biomedical Sciences
• Health Professions
General Option
Health Policy
Physician Assistant
Regulatory Toxicology
• Hospital Pharmacy
• Human Resource Counseling
• Human Services Specialist
• Medical Laboratory Science
• Medicinal Chemistry
• Pharmaceutics
• Pharmacology
• Rehabilitation Counseling
• School Counseling
• School Adjustment Counseling
• School Psychology
• Speech-Language Pathology
• Special Education
• Toxicology
Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences
Northeastern University
Northeastern University is accredited by the New England Association of School and Colleges, Inc.
An equal opportunity/affirmative action educational institution.

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
Coach Cal Show
WHMP Live Radio
6–7
50¢ PIZZA SLICES
9 TIL 12
COORS Gold - COORS Light - Cutter
$1.50 12oz. Bottles
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

Local News

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
TICK TOCK — This, the gear mechanism for the clock on the Old Chapel, is located one flight below the face. We knew you'd want to know.

Grad Tower pipe bursts classes are cancelled

By KENDRA WILLETT
Collegian Staff

A pipe burst on the 15th floor of the Lederle Graduate Tower at approximately 1:45 a.m. yesterday, flooding the building and causing it to be closed for the day.

A burst pipe was discovered at the coupling between an 8-inch main and a 2-inch pipe connecting the building's sprinkler system, according to Danny Chun, a University spokesperson.

Officials said the cause of the break is still under investigation.

Chun ruled out last night's below-zero temperatures as a cause of the burst, noting that the break occurred inside the building.

As senior economics major Jonah Gelbach tried to attend his 11:15 statistics class, he said he noticed people walking away from the building.

"They were turning everyone away at the door," Gelbach said.

"Some professors put up signs for where the classes were being held instead."

The estimated cost of the damages and cleanup is approximately $50,000. At least nine feet of water was measured in the pit of the elevator shaft, Chun said.

The building reopened at midnight last night.

Chun said physical plant and environmental, health and safety officials studied the building for possible fire and electrical hazards, before the building was eventually cleared for reopening.

"The Amherst Fire Department assisted in pumping out the water," Chun said. "They worked on the removal of the water all morning."

Officials starting pumping water from elevator shafts at around 6 a.m., leaving at approximately 12 p.m., but the building remained closed.

Staff of the building did not report to work, and no classes were to be held in the tower, according to Chun.

Many of the graduate students in chemistry, engineering and polymer science who use the building were allowed to sign into the building to check their equipment for potential damage before being ushered out for safety reasons.

Ida B. Wells brought to life by UMass theater

By JULIE OLSON
Collegian Correspondent

The New WORLD Theater will be bringing the life of African American journalist, suffragist and civil rights activist Ida B. Wells to Browker Auditorium Friday and Saturday night.

"Miss Ida B. Wells" was written by Endesha Ida Mae Holland, a New York University professor and is directed by the New WORLD Theater's Roberta Uno. The cast consists of two women, Nefertiti Burton and Ingrid Askew. Both women are local actresses and NWT veterans.

NWT Assistant Director Yvonne Mendez described the play as "captivating and phenomenal. Ida B. Wells was instrumental in the development of modern political thought, yet few people know who she was." Mendez urged the public not to miss this production.

Both performances begin at 8 p.m. Admission is $5 for the general public. Students and senior citizens get a $2 discount.

Other upcoming productions for February include "Word!", which will encompass an evening of student one-act plays on Feb. 12 and 13. Admission is free.

Also appearing this month is a west-coast based theater group called Pomo Afro Homos (short for Post Modern African American Homosexuals). They will be at Bowker Auditorium on Feb. 19 and 20, performing "Fierce Love," a production which depicts the gay African American experience, and "Dark Fruit," a compilation of scenes, poems, and monologues which address such topics as racism, AIDS, integration, and homophobia. Tickets are $3 for students and senior citizens. All others pay $5.

On Feb. 26 through March 6 the New WORLD Theater will be presenting August Wilson's "Joe Turner's Come and Gone," a play set in Pittsburgh in 1911 which "portrays the experiences of slavery and freedom, and the feelings of dread and hope among freedmen transposed to the North." It will be playing at the Rand Theater. Students and senior citizens get a $2 discount. All others pay $5.

Turn to WELLS, page 10

World famous activist to visit Campus Center

By SEEMA MALHOTRA
Collegian Correspondent

Political activist Angela Y. Davis, internationally renowned for her contributions to movements for racial equality, women's rights and world peace, will be the keynote speaker at the 1993 Women's Conference to be held on Feb. 27 in the Campus Center.

The conference titled "Empowering Women-Prospects and Challenges for the 21st Century" sponsored by University Housing Services, will feature a series of events including seminars on women of color, violence against women, women and AIDS, women from developing Nations, and women as activists and leaders.

Davis came to national attention in 1969, when she was taken from her post in the philosophy department at University of California-Los Angeles due to membership in the United States of America Communist Party.

In 1970 she was placed on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted List and subsequently jailed. During her incarceration a massive international campaign known as "Free Angiela" was organized which led to her acquittal in 1972.

Over the last twenty-five years she has lectured all over the world, and is the author of numerous essays and books. She is presently professor of history of consciousness at the University of California, Santa Cruz.

A big theme of the conference is unity, according to Shyamala Iyatury, program committee chair.

"We need to unite in a way that women are not excluded by race, class, nationality or sexual orientation without ignoring cultural differences or subsuming them under an umbrella of a universal womanhood," she said.

"The goals of the conference are to educate students and the community about issues affecting women," said

Turn to DAVIS, page 10

UMass graduate selling safe sex in condom store

SETH KAYE / COLLEGIAN
A sample of the wares available at the Safe Exchange in Amherst.

By RACHEL D. MEDANIC
Collegian Staff

If the spiraling costs of safe sex are getting to you, come on down to "Safe Exchange," a new Amherst business which specializes in affordable prophylactics.

Jon Brown, a 1992 UMass graduate who majored in economics, officially opened the store on Feb. 1. In the works for next week is a grand opening, which promises customers additional discounts for the day.

For the grand opening, Brown said he anticipates having a stock of 25 different brands (over 100 different boxes including number and type specifications within each brand) on hand.

Safe Exchange also carries a selection of safe T-shirts and a few joke items such as condom patch kits and "Moreblow" condoms (a marketing and packaging takeoff on Marlboro cigarettes).

At Safe Exchange you can purchase a box of three Kimono condoms, which Brown said are rated to be the best, for $2.75 whereas at other stores, they would sell for $3.95.

Brown said he decided on a condom store because, "There's a market here, basically. There's a need. It's a win/win situation."

Safe Exchange will also be expanding to carry home pregnancy tests, female condoms, spermicides, jellies and a line of pro-environment products. Brown also has plans to open a branch store in Northampton.

A Valentine's Day condom mail off will be sponsored by the store as, "a way of getting people to learn about the store." Customers will be able to come in and sign up to have their sweethearts sent condoms in the mail.

For students who lack the time for a trip into Amherst to check out the store, Brown will also be selling Safe Exchange products and handing out AIDS/STD awareness literature at a table on the Campus Center Concourse.

One wall of the store is devoted to the display of art that "conveys a message" in promoting AIDS awareness and disease prevention.

Anyone may submit, but must meet with Brown's approval beforehand.

A native of Amesbury, Mass., Brown said he got a bad reception to his idea in Lowell, Mass., his first intended location for the store.

When he presented the idea to the Amherst Design Committee, one member said, "What a great store." He said the committee wished him "good luck."

Safe Exchange is located at 178 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, directly behind Tibetan Treasures next to Harvest Moon Bakery.

Store hours are Mon. through Sat. 9 a.m. to 11 p.m., and Sun. 12-6 p.m.

State officials accused of bias

Nuclear panel's tie to industry raises many questions

BOSTON (AP) — Some state officials involved in plans to build a low-level nuclear waste disposal plant in Massachusetts have financial ties to the nuclear industry, according to a report published Tuesday.

At least four members of the Low Level Radioactive Waste Management Board have direct financial links to institutions and companies that both produce nuclear waste and are expected to use future disposal facilities, The Telegram & Gazette of Worcester reported.

The nine-member board sets fees for shipment of nuclear waste and is charged with developing disposal systems.

Gov. William Weld last year issued exemptions from state conflict-of-interest laws for three board members with financial conflicts, saying their expertise is essential to the board.

One of them has left the board, but Weld could accommodate two new appointees with similar exemptions.

Some board members, including John Mayer Jr., a Worcester Polytechnic Institute nuclear engineering professor, agree the board needs industry expertise. Without the exemptions, Mayer said, "you would have a board charged with operating in a highly technical area, devoid of that technical expertise."

The board recently began working toward a decision this summer on whether the state should spend up to $45 million for engineering and legal studies to develop a disposal facility for low-level radioactive waste. The facility would accept waste from Massachusetts and possible other states.

The state public health and environmental protection departments, meanwhile, have proposed regulations for licensing radioactive waste-disposal facilities.

Massachusetts conflict-of-interest law prohibits state officials from participating in official actions in which they have a personal financial stake. It also recognizes that the objectivity and integrity of public officials may be compromised if they act on matters affecting the financial interests of people or businesses to which they are closely related.

Charles Killian Jr. of Duxbury, the board's acting chairman, recently retired from his job as manager of external affairs for Du Pont Medical Products, a division of E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

In 1991, the last year for which statistics are available, the company's Boston plant produced 91 percent of all low-level nuclear waste generated in Massachusetts, based on total radioactivity. Killian receives a pension from the company and owns stock in it.

Board member Mayer, of Holden, is head of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute's Nuclear Engineering Department, which periodically generates small amounts of low-level nuclear waste.

In his academic post, Mayer said, he has contact with a number of nuclear industries that occasionally provide services and personnel for school programs. He said he also has small personal investments in out-of-state nuclear power companies.

■ tapes

continued from page 1

"It's important that people understand that the library itself doesn't make the determination as to whether an item is declassified," Rigg said.

The tapes and other papers and historical materials were given to the library in 1965 by Kennedy's widow Jacqueline and his brothers the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Sen. Kennedy said this week that he supports the tapes' release.

But 87.2 percent of the recordings still are classified, according to the library's own estimates.

"It' is outrageous that no attempt has been made to open those transcripts," Hamilton said. "They have been sitting in the Kennedy Library for almost 20 years. It is a public scandal that tape recordings transcribed at public expense cannot be seen by scholars."

Kennedy had recording equipment installed in the White House secretly, and many intimates expressed surprise when the existence of the tapes was made known in 1973. The apparatus was dismantled on the day the president was killed.

The library holds 127 audiotapes of meetings in the Oval Office and the Cabinet room between July 30, 1962 and Nov. 8, 1963; and 73 dictabelts of telephone conversations between Sept. 10, 1962 and Oct. 29, 1963.

The tapes hold a total of 260 hours of discussions on such subjects as disarmament, Vietnam and Laos, nuclear testing, taxes, the international monetary situation, Cuba, various civil rights issues, wheat sales to the Soviet Union and Lyndon Johnson's gall bladder problems.

There also are personal conversations, like one in which Sen. Edward Kennedy talks with his brother about a speed-reading course he's taking.

PLEASE RECYCLE THIS COLLEGIAN THANK YOU

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 Days
8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

UMASS Owes Amherst $203,000
DEAD BEAT?

HELP WANTED!!
We need 20 students who want to earn extra spending money at their convenience.
Earn $10-$20 per hr.
Previous sales experience helpful, but not necessary
Call 1-747-9249 for details

NEW SCHOLARSHIP AVAILABLE!!! TO FALL 93 JUNIORS
$1,000 PER SEMESTER TO QUALIFIED STUDENTS + $100 MONTHLY TAX-FREE STIPEND
No specific academic major required--minimum GPA and age requirements apply
--OFFER ENDS SOON--
Call Major Koren at 413-545-2451 or stop by Room 205 Dickinson Hall
AIM HIGH WITH AIR FORCE ROTC

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Insanity rooted in history

"Why shell the National Library?"

The commander looked without expression into the face of the American reporter. "We did not bomb the library. It was found to be destroyed from the inside out, which indicates the people living in the area demolished the historic building themselves. We regret the occurrence, but we are not targeting the city."

Nathan CRICK

There is a state which we call insanity that encompasses the vast indescribable anomalies of the human condition which we cannot or choose not to explain. People who kill without conscience. Men who rape their neighbors. Generals who bomb ancient libraries and blame it on the caretakers. It is quite a versatile expression. I find it very handy when watching the news.

The interview with the Serbian military commander really was amazing, and I regret that I could only remember that one exchange. However, it goes far to show just what is really happening in the ex-Yugoslavia. There is a twisted history to that area that is once again coming back to torture the inhabitants with the memory of violent hatreds and ethnic rivalries, and the insanity it causes is something that is hard for us in America to truly understand. We have the habit of neglecting history in our views of the world, and even ourselves. The past is the past, what happened has happened, and it's time to move on and forget about it. Yugoslavia, Iraq, Somalia: all have come about because of the sordid world of politics and war.

You would never know this by watching the everyday media, however. Our culture thrives on creating Good Guys and Bad Guys in any conflict so that we can root for the underdog and act like the Lone Ranger of international politics. You hear of Serbian aggression, Serbian "ethnic cleansing," Serbian rapists and the general state of the Serbian mind as being one of a cruel death and blackness. Bosnians are just the poor families being blown out of their homes and frozen to death in powerless nursing homes. There is indeed a mindless cruelty suffocating the population of Sarejevo, but the tale of the one-sided aggressor is misleading when looking at the whole country. All Serbians do not rape and pillage. All Bosnians do not die quietly. All Croatians have not disappeared from the conflict even though the news does not mention them.

Indeed, Croatia has played a major role in the escalation of the war. In World War II, Croatia was the one who initiated the practice of concentration camps, but this time being filled with populations of Serbian Orthodox. When they declared independence from Yugoslavia two years ago, the Serbian populations in Croatia feared the repeat of their annihilation and appealed to Serbia for protection. Serbia responded, and began the escalation of the military conflict and the additional claims of independence from Bosnia and Slovenia. Temporary alliances were formed and broken between the breakaway nations, and meanwhile Serbians tried a land grab to protect the Serbian populations living in the neighboring territories. And concentration camps sprouted in every country of the former Yugoslavia.

We in the west are outraged and sickened by the images we see in Sarejevo, but unfortunately there is not much we can do to stop the killing with our great military arm besides to simply stop the weapons from getting in. There is no Great Satan to destroy, no "Hearts and Minds" to turn; only a lot of neighbors killing each other for the crimes of their ancestors. Their only fault is being born into a mindset of mistrust and hatred, and they are too human to question it. We might look upon them and feel like we are somehow above their cruelty, but I think the graves in Gettysburg would cry out against that ignorance.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

The age of UMass-ism

It hasn't even been a week and I've already heard the cries bellowing up out of the depths of UMass. Racism. Sexism. Homophobia-ism. Chauvinism. The isms hiss like the steam out of that strange grate in front of the Campus Center Garage.

E.C. THOMAS

Well, I have a new ism to add to the plethora at this esteemed university: UMassism, defined as fighting for a cause, any cause — without knowing both sides or even what your fighting for — but fight none the less; and when your fight isn't getting enough exposure — call a TV station, grab a building, file a lawsuit or accuse random people of random utopian violations.

Within the last six months I've defended UMass more than I've defended myself in the last five years. I went home during break for a few days and from parents to friends the first question after the initial "how are yous" was "what is going on up their in Massachussetts? I've heard your school has been having a lot of problems." Problems, of course, was often replaced with an ism. Even more frustrating was the fact that no matter how many questions I fended off or how many explanations I came up with, there would undoubtedly be more after the spring semester.

UMass — home of the radical, where freedom of speech is our school's motto, the bandwagon gets ridden more often than PVTA and the usual college idealism has taken on new heights. By the turn of the century, UMass' campus tour will include "the computer bank where the names and whereabouts of students lacking in our PC values are kept on file."

I have nothing against fighting for what you believe in; I'm a strong advocate for that. But the fact is when you protest at UMass, no one listens. No one really could give a damn — everyone's heard it before, everyone will hear it again and everyone's pretty fed up.

I don't think anyone's realized just how foolish this university looks in the eyes of New England, let alone America. We've all been branded a bunch of whining radicals. Sadly enough, a lot of people truly believe in their causes, but they're getting a bum rap and their causes are losing credibilty because a few individuals have jumped on the bandwagon just because it's trendy.

I find it hard to believe that virtually no one at UMass has taken a step back and seen our foolishness. We want freedom of speech, but we won't allow conservatives an opinion. A university is supposed to be the birth place of new ideas and discussion. What's the point when you only have one voice? Where's the struggle if there's no opposition?

What really frustrates me is the fact that people run around, complaining about their problems, blaming someone else for them and then look to someone else to solve them. We've blamed Whites, Blacks, males, gays, American Society, the U.S. government, the newspaper, Amherst, the administration, Gov. Weld.

Has it occurred to anyone that the problems don't lie anywhere but within ourselves? We've changed nearly everything that could possibly be changed — and we're still where we started. The problem is not with anyone but ourselves, and its not anyone else's to problem to solve, but our own.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

Sub-categories spawn racism

I just finished reading an article concerning the proposed relocation of the United Asian Learning Resource Center [Collegian, Feb. 1]: it was the last straw.

The article stated, "The majority of Asian-American students are not classified as English as a Second Language students because they are born in the United States and not in Asia and speak fluent English." That does not make them Asian-Americans. They are Americans! When a person is born in this country or takes an oath of citizenship, they keep their cultural heritage but they become Americans!

Why does the Collegian have a separate section for Black or Hispanic concerns? People say "multiculturalism." Why not continue to report on those important issues and mix all the articles together; by setting aside a special section, a difference is being implied that should not exist.

By accentuating the differences between people in the name of multiculturalism (i.e., Black Americans, Hispanic Americans, Asian Americans, Native Americans, etc.), we are being subdivided into categories that do not end racism, but spawn it. What made this country great was the melting pot effect, there are people here from every nation and culture in the world and in their own way they have contributed to this country. Let the student organizations work to create a center to help tutor American students as they work their way through the University. There should also be cultural activities so that we, as Americans, can learn from each other about our cultural heritages. The key to ending racism is to work together and learn from each other, not being divided for the sake of multiculturalism.

Matthew Okasinski
Southwest

Morrissey is flagrant, misinformed hypocrite

Michael Morrissey [Collegian, Jan. 29] exemplifies the hypocritical, unaware and misinformed chauvinists who exist in huge quantities in the diarrheal bowels of our society. He referred to feminism as "a front for militant lesbians." Mr. Morrissey, is it doubt of your own masculinity that drives you to seek oppression of strong women by alluding to their limited femininity? That, along with your description of Sheila Cronen as a "psycho," makes one wonder if you have any idea how much you personify cliche, sexist attitudes.

But Mr. Morrissey further embarrasses himself with his completely unsubstantiated statement that women are now nearly equal with men. Mr. Morrissey, I pity you for unquestioningly accepting this cover-up myth our society has so easily force-fed you. Just because there are several amendments and laws meant to protect women's rights doesn't mean they are followed, nor does it mean they have had any impact on generations of hand-me-down perceptions of male superiority. Women are still paid 40% less than men for performing the same jobs. Women who kill their abusive husbands still serve 10-15 years for every 2-6 years served by their male counterparts. The list goes on but I believe I have made the point that the gap has shrunk only minimally.

Mr. Morrissey has shown that he is either incapable of understanding the fundamental feminist goal or he has twisted it to fit his own argument when he interprets their message as: "Screw the world; just give us power." Women have been men's slaves since the beginning of humankind; this has continued to manifest itself upon every facet of our society. Its presence is so old and accepted that it is rarely recognized and thus we all fall victim to it.

The fundamental basis of feminism is the acquisition of long overdue, 50-50 equal treatment and opportunity with men. It is unfortunate yet cliche that this has been interpreted as power lust. Michael Morrissey is a flagrant hypocrite. He claims to strive for equality of the sexes, then criticizes women who choose to keep their own names. Taking on someone else's name is tantamount to adopting their identity and becoming a subordinate possession. His statement is equivalent to saying that a woman is incapable of giving her love to her family unless she puts herself below her husband. Mr. Morrissey, I'm afraid that you and others who attest to their desire for equality of the sexes will never be free of your pathological hypocrisy until such time as you begin to view the sexes as unilaterally and completely equal.

Kirsten Andelman
Central

Laser show sexist

As members of the UMass community, we feel compelled to express the frustration and anger we experienced while attending the laser show at the opening of the Mullins Center this past weekend. We found that this portion of the celebration was not to include us, as women.

The images included a male basketball player and a male rock star, contrasting sharply with the portrayal of several dancing scantily-clad and even topless female figures. This, unfortunately, was the only image of women found in the entire show. Where was the female basketball player? Or the male dancer? We were offended and shocked, expecting more from this university which has cultivated an "enlightened" reputation. Images such as these are not benign and their presentation as entertainment indicates the continued lack of understanding of their impact on people's perception of women (conscious or not) both on this campus and in our society.

Laura Sicignano
Nica Poser
Shutesbury

New EPA Chief urges ways to stop pollution

RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government needs to adopt a new way of thinking about environmental regulation that thwarts pollution at its source and focuses on ecosystem protection, Environmental Protection Agency head Carol Browner says.

"We have to be able to look more broadly" at the whole question of environmental protection, she said in an interview Monday. That means manufacturers will have to figure out ways to produce their products without harming the environment.

"Pollution prevention and source reduction are going to be very important," she said. She said she will try to move away from the traditional regulatory mode that tells polluters how much they can emit or discharge, an approach that could set her up for combat with industry used to operating under the decades-old regulatory framework.

One of the first issues she'll have to deal with as new EPA administrator is a theory pesticide issue that also plagued the Bush administration.

Browner said she will release a list today of carcinogenic pesticides used in processed foods. The action will comply with a court order that requires the government to ban any carcinogen in processed foods, even those that in the past have been determined to pose no health risk.

Congress has tried since 1984 to reform the 1950s-era Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act to give EPA greater latitude in approving pesticides for use on crops used in processed foods.

The New York Times reported in today's editions that Browner would ask Congress to relax the law, which prohibits even trace amounts in food of chemicals that cause cancer in animals.

Browner's spokeswoman, Loretta Ucelli, said late Monday that Browner had "no plan to try and change or relax the law," but was likely to "open a dialogue" with Congress to review the issue in general.

In the interview, Browner said she has suggested several jobs-creating ideas for President Clinton's economic stimulus program.

She said possibilities include efforts to restore degraded watersheds and estuaries and build wastewater facilities.

Accountant uses ruse to catch a fake Bruin

PEABODY (AP) — An accountant, who was almost conned into giving $5,000 to a phony member of the Boston Bruins, helped police catch the man by pulling a little ruse herself.

Cori Conor says she met a man who called himself Anthony Barrasso and claimed to be a rookie for the Bruins. He told her he was about to sign a $3 million contract and needed financial advice.

For her help, the man offered Conor a chance to buy into his contract for $5,000, which would entitle her to receive $65,000.

Conor isn't much of a hockey fan, so she wasn't aware that the Bruins have no Anthony Barrasso on the roster. As it turns out, the man was really Leonard F. Giso, 30, of Peabody, who us no stranger to the police.

"This guy is totally creative," said Peabody Police Capt. J. Stephen Begley. "It's my opinion that this certainly wasn't his first time at this."

Giso was arranged Monday in Peabody District Court on charges of attempted larceny of more than $250 and giving a false name to a police officer.

Police arrested him with help from Conor, who says she initially trusted the man, but later became suspicious.

Conor duped Giso into thinking he would get the $5,000 and arranged a meeting. But unknown to him, she also called the police.

"I'm a respected, well-educated person and I was taken in," Conor told The Times of Beverly.

"One of the detectives said, 'Gee, you don't watch hockey much, do you?'" she said. "It was so embarrassing, this whole thing."

COME SEE WHAT TREASURES AWAIT YOU AT THE COLLEGIAN ARTS DESK CAMPUS CENTER 113

The Collegian is always looking for new writers.
Please come down to the basement of the Campus Center (room 113) if you are interested.
The Collegian a fun place to work!
The Collegian is an E.O.E.

THE BOSTON GLOBE ON CAMPUS AT 50% OFF!

That's right...you can get The Boston Globe delivered on campus at a huge 50% off the regular price!

That means you're paying less for New England's best newspaper and an indispensable guide to what's happening in and around Boston, the nation and all around the world.

All that.....at half price! To start receiving The Boston Globe on campus, all semester long, call : 1-800-858-4275

Check desired service, fill out form and send to:
The Boston Globe Campus Program-UMass/Amherst
The Boston Globe
P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107

All subscriptions payable in advance. No delivery during school breaks or exam weeks. Students with varying start dates may have subscriptions pro-rated. NO SATURDAY DELIVERY

UMass — Spring 2/8-5/13
6 Days MON-FRI& SUN ( ) $24.50
5 Days MON-FRI ( ) $15.50
SUNDAY ONLY ( ) $ 9.00

NAME_____PHONE_____
ADDRESS: BOX #_____DORM & ROOM #_____
To pay by credit card, complete the following: ☐ VISA ☐ MASTERCARD
CARD #_____EXP. DATE_____
CARDHOLDER NAME_____
SIGNATURE_____
If requirement: Course_____Instructor_____

"WHAT'S LEFT" Sale

Savings from 30-70% off winter shoes, clothing & accessories

ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

"Even if animal research resulted in a cure for AIDS, we'd be against it."

Fed up with the "animal rights" movement?

"Animal rights" groups equate the life of a child with that of a rat. They are stifling medical research through disinformation, harassment, and terror. Now you can do something about the disinformation on your campus. Students for Medical Progress, a program of Americans for Medical Progress, will help you work locally to support biomedical research, bring speakers to your campus, and organize to start campus chapters. Support biomedical research. Call: 1-800-4-AMP-USA

RESEARCH SAVES LIVES

Arts & Living

He's gotta have it: a Spike Lee filmography

COURTESY DAVID LEE

Director Spike Lee (L., who also appears as Shorty) directs Denzel Washington (R., seated), in a scene from Lee's critically acclaimed film, "Malcolm X."

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Six different films, one Spike Lee. Though the director has been called everything from a genius to a megalomaniac, he has remained at the forefront of the emergence of black cinema, winning praise from some, condemnation from others. Each of Lee's movies raised as much controversy as they have educated and entertained. While his frequently lofty goals may have never always hit the mark in his films, they each remained a telling example of a director whose vision is ever evolving.

She's Gotta Have It (1986) — Lee burst onto the scene in this frequently hilarious and deftly probing study of sexual manners in the life of a freethinking woman (Tracy Camila Johns) and the three male lovers she coolly balances. Of course, the men don't like the tables turned, and what develops is probably Lee's freshest film; the most loose and the least pretentious.

High marks go to Ernest Dickinson's smooth visuals and both Johns and Lee's sparkling performances. No one could foretell how much Lee would change black contemporary cinema because he virtually invented it with this enjoyable, crisply written comedy.

A-

School Daze (1988) — Ambitious and mostly just-for-fun college comedy that tries to do way too much. Lee explores black identity in a mix of film genres that extends from Busby Berkely musical numbers to slapstick comedy to male/female relationships in a tale of one weekend at Mission, a fictional black college.

The film falls flat more often than not, simply because we're never clear of Lee's intentions or that he is even completely sure of what he wants to do. I enjoyed myself here, mainly because I'm a diehard

Turn to SPIKE LEE, page 8

How would you like to write for the Largest College Daily in New England? Come to 113 Campus Center to find out how.

STA TRAVEL STUDENT TRAVEL 1-800-777-0112
the world's largest student & youth travel organization.

The Spa
Hot Tubs & Tans
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

UMASS Owes Amherst $203,000
DEAD BEAT?

LONDON • PARIS • WASHINGTON • PADOVA • GRENOBLE • HAIFA • BEIJING • SYDNEY • MOSCOW • OXFORD • NIAMEY • MADRID • INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS BOSTON UNIVERSITY
LEARN HOW THE WORLD WORKS
Global Internships and Language/Liberal Arts Programs

Name:_____
Address:_____
City/State/Zip:_____
Phone:( )_____University:_____
Fall ☐ Spring ☐ Summer ☐ 19__
Internship Programs: ☐London ☐Paris ☐Moscow ☐Sydney ☐Washington, DC ☐Beijing
Language Programs: ☐Grenoble ☐Oxford ☐Haifa ☐Madrid ☐Padova ☐Oxford ☐Niamey
Summer Programs: ☐London ☐Madrid ☐Padova ☐Paris ☐Sydney ☐Moscow ☐Beijing ☐Washington, DC
return to:
Boston University, Division of International Programs
232 Bay State Road, Box G, Boston, MA 02215 or call (617) 353-9888

- WANTED -

Associate Business Manager
Assistant Finance Manager

EXPERIENCE is a must to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World...

We are looking for:
Ambitious • Responsible • Organized
SOPHOMORES
with good communication skills

Applications are available at the Collegian
113 Campus Center
and must be submitted no later than Friday, February 12th

■ Spike Lee filmography

continued from page 7

fan of excessive musical numbers and because I never knew what Lee was going to throw my way next.

However, even a credible cast (including Giancarlo Esposito and Larry Fishburne) and some funny moments unfortunately get lost in Lee's bag of tricks. And the out of nowhere conclusion left me wondering if it was a sly take on 'happy endings' in musicals or a misguided social statement. It's up to you to go with it or not.

C+

Do the Right Thing (1989) — Simply put, the most compelling American urban drama of the 1980s. Lee's sometimes funny, sometimes searing study of powder-keg rage is a lot more than just filmed aggression. It's filled with rich, detailed characters — played with guts by Danny Aiello, John Turturro and Spike Lee — and a tight, uncompromising narrative.

You may remember Do the Right Thing for its intense images — Rosie Perez knockin' out the title credits to Public Enemy's "Fight the Power" to Lee throwing the trash can into the window of Sal's pizzeria — yet Lee's vision is unmistakably fierce, his lessons all too real.

A

Mo' Better Blues (1990) — Lee's ponderously dull morality play does have its small pleasures: some grandiose camera play by Ernest Dickinson, a few electric dialogue exchanges, a crafty musical score and a pair of decent performances. But Blues is so tedious that its story of a jazz trumpet player (Denzel Washington), along with everything else, gets lost in the smoky background.

Blues' narrative (and its unhinged, confounding ending) is both confusing and boring. Washington and Wesley Snipes (as a sax player) have the makings of some intricate characterizations, but not enough to save this film.

Maybe it's because I'm not a huge fan of jazz, but I've always regarded Mo' Better Blues as a film whose mood was more convincing than its story.

C-

Jungle Fever (1991) — Lee tackles an interracial love affair in this well acted but all over the place drama where once again Lee tries to do too much. This time, however, each of its elements do work, though they all seem to encroach on each other for screen time.

The main plot is headed by Annabella Sciorra (The Hand that Rocks the Cradle) and Wesely Snipes, who give into their passion and have an affair. This is initially interesting, and certainly loaded enough that it could fill more than just one movie.

Yet Lee chooses to branch off into too many directions. Attention is paid to Snipes' upbringing and his crackhead brother (played sharply by Samuel L. Jackson), and to some excessive visuals.

While these diversions are certainly compelling, they distract from what should be the central story here: Snipes and Sciorra's relationship and how it affects the people around them. Lee also has another problem with endings — this one tries to tie up the plot lines a little too patly. A sterling supporting cast (including John Turturro, Tyra Ferrell and Lonette McKee) make Jungle Fever worth it — but hardly revelatory. Lee overloads and ultimately booby traps his own film.

B

Malcolm X (1992) — Lee knew everything was on the line with this engrossing, triumphant marriage of superior visuals and a vital subject. It's more than stylized images — Malcolm X tells an explosive, far-reaching story behind its imaginative illustrations.

It serves textured drama without being cumbersome, at times vividly entertaining, at others solemn and introspective. Anchored by a brilliant performance by Denzel Washington (as well as untouchable supporting work by Al Freeman, Jr., Angela Bassett and Delroy Lindo), Malcolm X is both expertly shot and wonderfully acted — it's a richly emotional movie experience.

From the intriguing decision to shoot the stages of Malcolm's life in four different film styles to its attention-demanding prologue and masterful epilogue, Lee has never done better work. It's almost poetic rhythm and structure only adds to Malcolm X's passionate and potent filmmaking.

And if you think about it, Malcolm X combines elements of all of Lee's previous work — interracial affairs, an exuberant musical number, questions of black identity and rage — and it shows Lee at a more assured and mature stage in his life.

Malcolm X is the best film of 1992 and stands among the likes of Lawrence of Arabia as a classic film biography as well as an example of what the best of American cinema has to offer.

A

WRITE FOR ARTS! WE NEED YOU!

BANANARAMA
Kahalong from YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton - Holyoke
584 4112 • 535 1888
SAME DAY DELIVERY

20% one item discount with this ad
DISCOUNT SURPLUS
• Couches • Carpets • Beds
• Chairs • Desks • Lamps
(413) 586-7202
206 Russell St. (Rt. 9) Hadley, MA
We take in consignments
Cash • Personal Checks • Major Credit Cards Accepted

Judicial Advisors Program

Sponsored by the Student Attorney General's Office and the Dean of Students Office. Applications are now being accepted for the Spring 1993 semester.

Training will take place on February 23 from 7:30 to 9:30 in room 903 in the Campus Center.

Applications will be accepted at both the Student Government Attorney General's Office at 432 Student Union and the Dean of Student's office at 227 Whitmore.

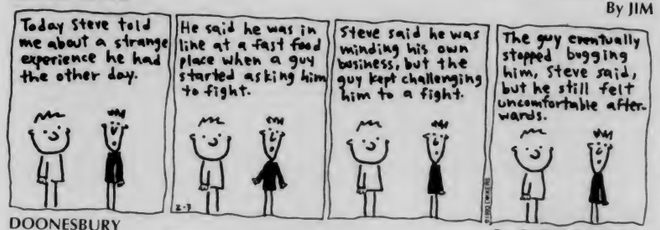
Applications are due on February 17th at 5pm.

If you would like more information about the program, contact Paul Vasconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students, at 545-2684; or Deirdre Bannon, Coordinator of the Judicial Advisors Program, at 545-1272.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Still Tic, Tac, Toeing Through Your Life?
Let us help you make some winning decisions about your future.
Late register for classes January 27-February 9.
UMass and You – a winning team!
Evening credit courses (over 100 in 37 different departments; most meet just once a week)
UMass Bachelor of General Studies degree — part time!
Noncredit workshops for business or pleasure (nearly 100, all winners)
Available University day courses (hundreds of them, stimulating!)
Division of Continuing Education, 607 Goodell Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM



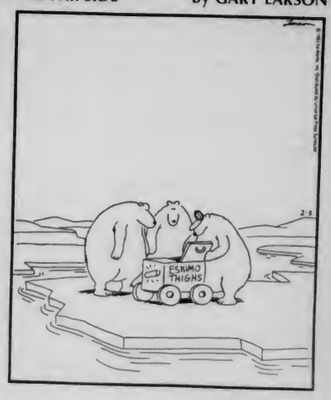
DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON



Quote of the Day

"There are other classes, you know."
– Stephen Oates, instructor
Kennedy Era Through Film

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (Mar. 21-April 19) — Concentrate on career and business matters early in the day. A third party brings you together with an attractive member of the opposite gender. Be realistic about a romantic relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — A wise bull steams ahead with a personal project. Beautifying your home will give both it and your spirits a needed lift. Examine investments carefully.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — As you may have discovered, this is not a good time to throw your weight around. A little degree of diplomacy is needed to gain the upper hand. Maintain a positive outlook.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Fatigue tenders caution on nervous nerves and overwork. Your exciting attitude and focus on a fine time provide. Check out your heart's desires and follow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Stick up for yourself when dealing with [illegible] your creativity. An unexpected [illegible] is involved. Time is grand [illegible] together with romantic partner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Keep your composure when dealing with VIPs. A tenacity, welcoming approach will make up for any minor mishaps. Put the finishing touches on a project.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Conflicts could arise in business or in your dealings with authority figures. Avoid sounding too confrontational. Help an older sibling with financial difficulties.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — A good day to mingle with others and widen your confidence. Extra power, intelligence and wisdom are yours.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Innovative ideas lead to new career triumphs. They also help put you on your home and enhance important people. Reassure worried partners.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Financial deals or shared resources need a source of nourishment, rich in [illegible] and love. Don't be afraid to express your feelings. Your employers respond to new ideas. Put professional plans. Focus on projects that promise the biggest gains. Don't own way, misunderstand your partner's heart. Once there, reassurance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Your career progress is linked to your sensitivity to a co-worker's down-to-earth problems. Research and knowledge increase tremendously. Your improving in the bosom of your loved ones tonight.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Side arm
8 Workplace
10 Marceau; e g
14 Provincetown's neighbor
15 Argyllshire island
16 Frankfurt's river
17 Preakness winner, 1942
18 Like a sunny day
20 — guilty
21 Make the cake
23 Just in 24 Golfer Ballesteros
25 Abominate
26 Kind of sale
30 Like a diamond in the rough
34 Hearty
35 Saroyan hero
37 Numero —
38 Angry
39 — ski
41 Courtroom tig
42 Make a mistake
43 Verve
44 Mission
46 Sidetrack
48 Discerning
50 Vincent Lopez's theme song
52 Covers
53 Hussein of Iraq
56 Rev. the engine
57 Floor cover
60 Happiness
62 Levitate
64 Cupid
65 — about, approximately
66 Be superior
67 "Auntie" of Broadway
68 Child containers
69 Courageous acts

DOWN
1 Enos' Cardinal teammate
2 A Guthrie
3 Museum piece
4 Are anagram
5 Crooks, of a sort
6 Cause revulsion
7 Pit
8 Yoko
9 Ms. Prentiss of films
10 Flowing, like lava
11 Thought, to Voltaire
12 Confusion
13 Formerly, formerly
19 Fact
22 Hindu incarnation
24 King Faisal's brother
25 Present
26 Sobbed
27 Peter of "Casablanca"
28 Movie critic
29 Sing joyfully
31 — Salk
32 Release
33 Trifled
36 Beset
40 Type size
41 War god
43 Wide
45 Used a catalog
47 Last
49 Tribal advisors
51 Alphabet run
53 Coincidence game
54 Gluck of opera
55 Condemn
56 Privy to 57 Parody grass
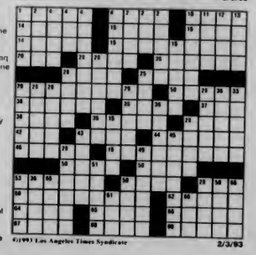
58 Manipulated
59 Sets
61 — jiffy, fast
63 Paul Bunyon's tool

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

T	A	R	E		O	M	I	T	S		A	L	I	N	U	P
E	R	A	T		N	O	D	A	L		L	O	O	P	U	S
S	T	I	C	K	Y		O	U	R	G	U	N	S
T	E	M	P	L	E			G	I	S	E	L	E
			A	M	A		A	G	A	R
S	E	S	A	M	E		B	I	D		S	I	D
O	N	C	E		A	N	A	S		B	A	N	N	A
D	O	N	T		R	O	C	K		T	O	A
A	L	E	S		V	O	L	E		T	R	O	N	E
S	A	W		E	W	E		S	L	A	K	E	D
		T	A	M		M	E		T	I
S	W	O	R	D		P	O	I	S	E
B	L	O	W	Y	O	U	R	O	W	N	H	O	R	N
S	A	V	E		S	I	O	P	E		P	O	R	E
A	B	E	L		S	I	E		E		E	G	E	S

2/3/93



Today's Staff
Night Editor ..... Tami Monahan
Copy Editor ..... Christina Rothwell
PhotoTechnician ..... Andrea Migliassi
Production Supervisor ..... Nicole Dumas
Production ..... Dana Dorman, Theresa Giamattei

Menu

LUNCH
TOP YOUR OWN PIZZA!
BASICS LUNCH
TOP YOUR OWN VEGGIE PIZZA

DINNER
Pan Shish Kebab
Roast Turkey
BASICS DINNER
Vegetable Croquettes
Roast Turkey

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/3/93

■ Wells

continued from page 3

The New WORLD Theater was founded in 1979 in a effort to present the dramatic works of people of color.

According to organizers, the objective of New WORLD Theater is "to broaden the experience of the University and the Five College community by presenting a season of plays which reflects both the beauty and the diversity of people of color."

Tickets for all New WORLD Theater events are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office.

■ Davis

continued from page 3

Theresa Frecker, chair of the conference steering committee.

"The program was organized in the light of recent racial incidents on campus and acts of violence against women nationwide," said Frecker, who also said she hopes that all will feel welcome. "We want to make this a multicultural event."

Registration for the conference begins on February 10 in the Campus Center Concourse. All are required to register and a $3 donation is requested.

■ attack

continued from page 1

approximately 10 men. He said they continually got up and were shoved down again, beaten and kicked as they moved along the sidewalk towards Hillel House.

According to Chu, after they were off Iota Gamma Upsilon property, several men came from the direction of another fraternity house and joined the assailants in attacking him and his friend.

Chu, who is of Chinese descent, said while they were being attacked at least one of the men began shouting racial slurs at him.

Chu said they were finally left alone after an unidentified woman intervened on their behalf, telling the assailants to let them go.

He said they then went to the nearby Dairy Mart, where they found an Amherst police officer who called a patrol car to take them back to the scene of the alleged attack to identify witnesses.

Fraternity row is under Amherst police jurisdiction.

Chu returned to Boston Sunday night, and said he has not yet decided whether to press charges against the assailants.

The Dean of Students Office and the Office of Greek Affairs both said the incident is under investigation and declined further comment.

■ Spike

continued from page 1

lynchings and championed for women's suffrage. The show is scheduled for 8 p.m. and will take place in Bowker Auditorium.

And on Tuesday, February 9, at 8 p.m. in Bowker auditorium, the Black Mass Communication Project will sponsor "Our Young Black Men are Dying and Nobody Seems to Care." Written by playwright James Chapman, the play focuses on Black men in jail, on the street, and examines the forces he sees as threatening their survival.

The rest of the month's activities include musical concerts, several other plays, and lecture by activist Angela Davis.

Several exhibits and programs will also be shown throughout February. The Augusta Savage Memorial Art Gallery, located in the New Africa House, will feature "Black, Brown, and Beige," an art exhibition of Black women. The University Library will be holding an exhibition of the papers of W.E.B. DuBois.

You love the Collegian – your mom told me so

My Valentine Boxers
Glow-in-the-dark

J•RICH
CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St. Amherst • 253-2013
22 Masonic St. Northampton • 586-6336
Open 7 days • Thursday nights in Northampton

Limited Time Offer
Lowest Prices of the Season
on college rings
selected Women's Rings $239 regularly priced up to $350
selected Men's Rings
$299 regularly priced up to $435
JOSTENS
UNIVERSITY STORE
February 2, 3, 4 and 5
10 am to 4 pm
Prices are for 10K gold rings. For 14K gold rings, add $100.

DAYTONA BEACH
The BREAK of a Lifetime $19.93*
Break away! Break out! Big Beach-Big Fun- BIG VALUE!
Quality Oceanfront Resorts.
Beachcomer Oceanfront Inn
2000 N. Atlantic Ave.
Mayan Inn - newly renovated
103 S. Ocean Ave.
1-800-874-7420
Oceans Eleven
*per person, per night, based on 4 per room. Limited availability at this rate.

Mike's Westview Cafe
Mike's Westview
Specials This Week:
Captain Morgans and Coke
$1.50
Wednesday Night is Guest Bartender Night
This week's bartender is:
Jonathan Kelly
Thursday Night is Party Night
Captain & Coke $1.50
Best Pitchers $3.50
Miller Pitcher $4.50
Friday afternoon brings back our famous all-you-can-eat buffet
The menu includes:
Roast Beef, Seafood Fetuccine, Roast Turkey, Oriental Rice, Beef Stroganoff, Veal Parmesan, Pasta & Meatballs, Assorted Salads, etc.
Sunday, try our all-you-can-eat brunch
from 11:30 - 1:00
Bloody Marys $2.00
Pitcher of Mimosa $5.50

Another Super blowout

NFL needs conference realignment

52-17! This year's Super Bowl could hardly be described as a nail-biter. In fact, the only real suspense came over who would win the coin toss. Calling heads turned out to be the only thing Buffalo did all game. Unfortunately, these "Super blowouts" have become commonplace, while Super Bowls where the fourth quarter really matters have become painfully rare.

Matt
VAUTOUR

The last nine Super Bowls have been won by NFC teams. The 1984 Oakland Raiders were the last AFC team to triumph on Super Sunday. It has become a January tradition for the NFC champion to expose how inferior the AFC has become. I have replaced my traditional Super Bowl party with one for the NFC championship game, because it has been a far more interesting game. When Bud Bowl becomes more competitive than the Super Bowl, something has to change.

The Buffalo Bills and the Denver Broncos have represented the AFC in six of the last seven Super Bowls. Both teams have come away empty-handed three times. During these seven years, Buffalo and Denver have dominated the AFC, yet they've gotten destroyed by NFC foes in January.

AFC teams have to build themselves around beating the Bills and Broncos, which has proved to be insufficient when competing against the NFC. Restoring regionalism and making the conferences competitive makes realignment seem logical.

Here is a possible realignment set up that restores regionalism and balances out the conferences.

NFC East: Washington, New York Giants, New York Jets, Philadelphia Eagles and New England Patriots. This division keeps two current powers intact, while replacing the misplaced Dallas Cowboys and Phoenix Cardinals with the improving Jets and the Patriots. The first of several new interstate rivalries is created in this division. This will boost attendance as well as TV ratings.

NFC Midwest: Kansas City, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland, and Indianappolis. The NFC Midwest would be comprised of mostly AFC Central teams with the absence of Houston and the addition of Indianappolis and Kansas City. All of these teams have young talent which has their teams ready to become contenders.

NFC Central: Dallas, Denver, Houston, and Phoenix. This division takes the misplaced Cowboys and Cardinals, and places them in a more regionally correct division. Anybody that has been to Texas, or knows someone from Texas or Houston knows that there is an intense rivalry between these two cities. Playing each other twice a season would create a great rivalry.

AFC West: San Francisco, Los Angeles Raiders, Los Angeles Rams, San Diego, and Seattle. This division includes all the California teams and Seattle, finally uniting all the Pacific time zone teams in one division. Putting the Forty-Niners in the AFC establishes a legitimate powerhouse in a conference that needs some credibility.

AFC Midwest: Chicago, Green Bay, Detroit, Buffalo, and Minnesota Every team in this division will have a chance to contend for its title. In the past three years, every team except Green Bay, in this division, has made the playoffs at least once. With emerging stars like Brett Favre, Sterling Sharpe, and Terrell Buckley, Green Bay will be a contender in this division as well.

AFC Southeast: Miami, Tampa Bay, New Orleans, Atlanta. This division will crown the "Champion of the South." This division will create an inter-Florida rivalry as well as keeping the New Orleans-Atlanta rivalry intact.

Realignment is the solution to the lopsided conference problem and will bring regionalism back to the NFL. Paul Tagliabue, please take note!

Matt Vautour is a Collegian correspondent

■ Scott's Shots

continued from page 12

his shirt), Eddie Forfa "Four from the line" (a Worcester wowza) and Mark "No, not the quarterback" Wilson (the only entrant from Maine). But still ahead on points and creativity is yours truly.

• Like you're not looking forward to the Westminster Kennel Club show next week. My dog Bo was disqualified for testing positive for generic dog food. An appeal is pending.

• The Shirl's betting that Bill Parcells will have the Pats in the Super Bowl within five years. Hate to disagree with my mom but they'll be there next year.

The Shirl, coming to an arena near you.

• Mullins is something else and the pretzels are tasty, but when the locker room has mirrors at each cubby you begin to think the "image and perception" deal has been taken a bit too far.

• The "Final Rage" T-shirts were one thing, now there's "Mass Mullins" (lottery spin-off) and someone had a "Cal-Zone" tee as well. We're reaching a saturation point.

• NHL All-Star weekend signifies the midway point of the season and 14 teams have already clinched playoff spots. The other ten should be in by March 1.

• "Seinfield" to Thursday night, next to "Cheers" is the equivalent of Reggie Lewis stepping in for Larry Bird. A changing of the guard.

• Bird's retirement ceremony on the same night as Mullins Grand Opening - it's a tough twist of fate.

• Keep your feet in bounds and your eyes on the Phoenix Suns.

David Scott is a Collegian columnist.

■ Final Pigskin Picks

continued from page 12

sideline when the front office canned the lovable Coach MacPherson (possibly future mayor of Syracuse, New York).

Don't get me wrong, because I think a change had to be made, and Bill Parcells will get rid of all the dead wood that sits on the bench over at Foxboro. But, I don't think fans should celebrate yet, because it did take Dallas two grueling seasons to even get out of the basement of the NFC East.

Who should they pick with their number one? I'm all for Drew Bledsoe, because Parcells won't have the patience to deal with Hugh Millen. He'll probably bring in a veteran quarterback to take hold of the reins until Bledsoe is ready. However, the Jets would be in deep trouble if the Pats took Marvin Jones, because he is their man.

Emmitt does it again: Emmitt Smith won the rushing championship for the second straight season, edging out Barry Foster for the coveted crown. Smith now has earned the title of "Best Running Back in Football," snagging it from the grasp of Barry Sanders and Thurman Thomas.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist

The Collegian.
113 Campus Ctr.
545-3500

CEDAR TREE
BUSINESS SERVICES
11 Garage Rd • Sunderland, MA 01375
Word Processing
Resumes - Personal Taxes
Laser Jet Printing
Copies - 10 Free per visit
ON BUS ROUTE
M-F 8am-5pm • Sat. 8am-5pm
CALL 665-8499

UMASS Owes Amherst $203,000
DEAD BEAT?
UMass has stiffed $203,000.00 worth of area businesses. If you've been ripped off, call a special, dedicated hotline to report the story.
Sincerely,
Larry Kelley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Bridge Club/Team Beginners or experienced. Come join for fun or competition. Wed 2/3 7:30 pm Campus Ctr outside coffee shop.
665-7877 ext. 444

International Student Association
GENERAL MEETING
February 4th 7 pm
Campus Center room 911
Elections will be held

Sorority Rush
STARTS TODAY
Stop by our table on the concourse to sign up or come to orientation meeting tonight at 4:30 CC room 163. Come find out everything sorority life has to offer! All university women welcome.
Rush Rush Rush Rush Rush Rush Rush

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Disability Services is in search of volunteer readers for disabled students. The job of a reader consists of reading books onto tape and/or reading aloud for students. No experience is necessary. We will train. Please contact Lorie Bell at Disability Services for further information at 545-0892.

Need Money? Hire yourself! Six money making ameprises for college students. Details: Rebe Associates, PO Box 329 Gilsum, NH 03448

Poster Sale, Biggest and best selection choose from over 1000 different images. Rock, old Masters (Monet, Dali, Van Gogh, Picasso, Escher, Matisse, Wyeth and hundreds more.) Movie posters, sports, scenic landscapes, music, dance, skiing, personalities, (Einstein, James Dean, Marilyn Monroe and others), Travel, humor, romance, photography (Talbot, Ansel Adams and others). Most images only $5, $6, and $7 each! See us at the Student Union Ball room on Monday February 1st through Friday February 5th. The hours are 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. This sale is sponsoredby WMUA.

AUTO FOR SALE

89 Ford Festiva
Black 60k miles
Good condition new tires
$2750 must sell Tomo 549-7635

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-6099
549-8073

ENTERTAINMENT

yePi is now available for parties and functions. CALL 549-3832

FOR RENT

4 Bed House Northampton - Winter rate $700/mo. plus. Also avail. June and Sept. 584-3428

FOR SALE

Don't Be Afraid to walk alone at night Personal alarms alert others With ear piercing noise Call Jon Bayuk 665-0286

For Sale: Burton air 6 Snowboard Airwalk boots size 7 $350 call 527-3014

Iguana with everything $100.00
Lights etc. 6-1709

MAC SE/30
40 MB HD, 2 MB RAM
Extended keyboard & carrying case
1700b.o.
Call 256-0260

QUEEN SIZE WATERBED $50 or best offer. Call Dana 253-3406

Snow Tires (2)
1992 Goodyear Ultra Grip 300,
185/70R14, Good condition, $40/pair
Call 546-3319

Snowboard – 160cm Barfoot Freestyle $100 584-2976
Golf Clubs Spalding full set plus leather bag $100 584-2976

GREEKS & CLUBS

$1000 AN HOUR!
Each member of your Frat, Sorority, team, club, etc. pitches in just one hour and your group can raise $1000 in just a few days! Plus a chance to earn $1000 for yourself! No cost. No obligation 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 65

HELP WANTED

Att. Excellent income for home assembly work. Info 1-504-646-1700 Dept MA-1307

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with clean water action. $100/wk. + On Bus line 584-9830

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon-Fri. + Sunday. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Join the Masspirg staff and be part of a 20 year history of environmental activism:
The Bottle Bill
Mass. Clean Air Act
Mass toxic use reduction act
Full/Part time positions $40-60/day
Call Carmen 256-6434

Sick of DC Meal Plan?
Meal plan in exchange for kitchen work if interested call
Jim Houston at 549-4919
At 496 North Pleasant St

"Silver Bullion Coin Program"
$5 Paid weekly
No individual selling or recruiting
83% commissions paid
Projected income 47.84K
603 964-1676

SPRING BREAKERS. Promote our Florida Spring Break packages. Earn MONEY and FREE trips.
Call CMI 1-800-423-5264

The Undergraduate Admissions office is now accepting applications for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Representatives and New Students Program Summer Counselors. Applications available at the Admissions office.

U.S. Trocers is currently seeking motivated students in Amherst area for FT and PT independent work (800)888-6919

INSTRUCTION

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

At Totman Gym Saturday Jan 30th Mens Seiko digital watch with green velcro band $50 reward call Mike 665-8282.

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

HEY YOU

To the pretty student/waitress I met Monday, January 25th at 10 am at the bursars office. Those lines were so long I practically got to know your whole life history except for a few critical details - like your name. I'd like to see you again. If you would like to see me again please respond here.

PERSONALS

Dear Andrea
HAPPY ANNIVERSARY
Love,
Mike

Happy Birthday Bonito
We hope your Afghan keeps you warm on your 21st! Have fun!
love, Heather
& Alicia

Kathy Mays
Where are you?
Lets get together
Freewoman

LORI RIEDEL
Happy 22nd Birthday
Is that a wrinkle
I see!
Have a great day!
I LOVE YOU!
Bill

So, its the big 20!
Happy Birthday Sue!
With Love & Friendship,
Peter

RENTAL PROBLEMS?

Question about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of you new house or apartment? Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

ROOMATES WANTED

Female roomate wanted
Mill Valley Estates
198 heat hot water included
Call 256-0274

2 females or couple to share room $160 each or $275 for single, beautiful apartment 665-7604

Room for rent Amherst behind Boybanks 213.00 per month call 549-4388

Roomate Needed!!!
M/F to share two bedroom Brandywine Apt.
175.00/mo.
549-5868

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and confidential caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1906

Scholarships Guaranteed
1-800-666-2137

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

TRAVEL

Spring Break '93
Cancun $479! Jamaica $499!
Daytona Beach $189! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company!
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL
1-800-328-SAVE

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Floridafrom $149. Organize groups travel free! 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK
Wheat wave to all places
Guar. lowest prices or Double diff., line club passes
no peak fees
Call Debbie 549-1411

TAKE IT OFF!!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

UMASS SKI CLUB
Sign ups being taken now for ski trips Feb 19-21 Quebec wknd. $145 Social age 18 March 15 22 Spring break Steamboat 7 day trip $749
March 14-19 Killington Spring Break 5 day trip $279
Contact: UMass Ski Club 545-3437 or Dominic Santarsiere 546-2107 ASAP

WANT A TAN LINE?
Cancun, Jamaica, Florida
Merideth 549-5284

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

Men move into Mullins, get set for WV

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Mike Williams and the rest of the UMass hoop team moved into Mullins on Monday in preparation for Thursday's West Virginia game.

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

While some fans are still thinking about the Last Rage in the Cage, the University of Massachusetts basketball team has been busy moving into the William D. Mullins Center.

Head coach John Calipari and staff were getting settled in their spacious new surroundings in an effort to call the Mullins home before Thursday night's grand opener versus West Virginia (9 p.m., ESPN). Assistant coaches John Robic, Bill Bayno and James "Bruiser" Flint said they were pleased with their new offices.

"This is the only office I've ever had with a window," said Flint. "I don't have to share [an office] with Bill any more."

Robic, who is in charge of the scouting and helps with X's and O's, had expensive video equipment installed in his office to analyze opposing teams. All three coaches have separate offices. As nice as the assistant's quarters are, Calipari's office is even nicer.

In addition to pure office space, the Mullins Center has a number of other facilities designed to make life easier on the basketball team. Tim Kingston, academic advisor for basketball, said the new study area will help the players get more work done.

"We're putting computers in the study room, to be used by the kids and Ogden employees," Kingston said. "Having this in the same facility as the basketball court makes it easier for the players."

Brian Gorman, team manager, assessed the complex like this: "It's going to be a lot better, having the weights, the videotape room, the locker rooms, the study room, the offices and the court in the same building. It's an impressive place all around."

Off the Glass: Calipari said he wants the building filled with maroon shirts for the inauguaration of the new building and through the rest of the year. He praised students and season ticket holders alike for buying up almost 6,000 white shirts and wearing them at last Friday's game versus SW Louisiana.

"I'd love to see all 9,493 fans out wearing maroon for Maroon Madness at the Mullins," Calipari said. "Friday night was special because all the fans came out, and we wanted to do it again".

Gorman, who handles T-shirt sales for the team, said sales of the maroon "Cal-Zone" shirts were brisk.

"ESPN told us that visually, that was the best game they had done all year," he said. "If we can keep that up in Mullins, hopefully it will force them to put us on TV even more next year."

Glantz and Culver's Power Rankings had Massachusetts 14th last week, ahead of all Big East teams. With wins over SW Louisiana and St. Bonaventure, UMass may move up further when new rankings come out today.

Scott's shots

After much deliberation and what appears to be the end of the hype, I have decided to go with Dallas in the Super Bowl. Yes, definitely Dallas. Too much Aikman, not enough Kelly. Dallas.

• Intersession became a time for hellos and good-byes. What we thought was a good-bye to Harper became a raucous hello two minutes into the Temple game. We bid good-bye (but not forgotten) to her majesty, The Cage and offer a gracious hello to the new AD Bob Marcum.

We won't say good-bye to Glenn Wong, instead we'll offer an enormous THANK YOU, for a job well done (any UMass sports fan should do the same). Hello, your eminence the Mulllins Center, and good-bye to the peace and quiet that was January. A special welcome back to Ruthie Drew - the Candy Lady rides again.

Dave
SCOTT

• Have you ever danced with the devil by the pale moonlight? One gets the feeling that Cal's Pals may be doing just that, with five road games in a row after Saturday's noontime affair with Rutgers. It would appear that when you sell your soul to TV there are hidden ramifications, but in terms of exposure, it might not be that bad of a trade-off.

• A moment of silence for Andre The Giant please. Make that a BIG moment of silence. He was never the same after Bobby Heenan corrupted him (NOTE: This now appeases all wrestling fans for another month).

• Don't be afraid to head back to The Cage for a UMass women's basketball game, it's a team on the rise that can flat out play defense.

• The battle for Cravat King became a free-for-all with everyone from the Daily Hampshire Gazette's Jeff Thomas to Dicky V throwing their neckwear into the ring. Glenn Wong (a rarity to be mentioned twice in the same space) came out of the gate fast with a Santa Special in Springfield. Pre-season favorite Milt "I'm out of control" Cole had the sweet silk for his halftime tribute against the Yinka Dare's (for the record, it interfered with his missed free throw) and even "Bruiser" Flint outdid some fellow coaches.

Other fashionable neckwear came from Mike "I come from the land down" Unger (a vintage Rutgers number that even matched

Turn to SCOTT'S SHOTS, page 11

Women's hoop on the way back

Where can I buy a women's basketball T-shirt?

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team has become the sacred moo-cow of the campus, and with good reason. They are a highly visible, positive extension of the University, as well as a source of revenue. But there's another basketball team on campus, and like the men, they have made tremendous strides in a short amount of time.

Greg
SUKIENNIK

You know all about the men's accomplishments. But meanwhile, the Massachusetts Minute*women* have been laboring in obscurity, recovering from years of musical-chairs coaching changes, virtually non-existent recruiting budgets and the rather heavy albatross of the disastrous 1990-91 season (0-27).

The obscurity is undeserved — these women can play. Here's an update: the Minutewomen are currently in third place in the Atlantic 10 after defeating longtime A-10 bullies St. Joseph's and West Virginia. By the way, UMass was picked to finish dead last.

So why are the women still an unknown commodity while the men bask in the glory? They practice just as hard, sweat just as much and balance a demanding schedule with classes. Yet, the Cage is far from full at most UMass women's games.

What's more, when a team from an athlete factory school like Ohio State or "Rut-gahs" comes to call, sometimes there are as many out-of-town fans as there are UMass supporters on hand at the Cage — the same building Coach Cal's Crew left behind because they had outgrown it. When you can't outdraw the opposition in your own building, there's something wrong with your fans.

The women's basketball team used to be as bad as the Whalers are now. But unlike the Whalers, the Minutewomen are a college team. UMass women's basketball has a potential built-in fan base of 19,000 loyal supporters who can attend every home game, free.

I covered the Minutewomen during 1990-91. I know the players didn't enjoy it; after all, there's nothing fun about 0-27. You could sense the frustration in the players' expressions after games and in coach Kathy Hewelt's voice. At the bitter end she told me she wasn't sure about her future here as coach, but in retrospect I think she knew the axe was poised to fall. It did.

Until this season, UMass had won 4 games in the past two years. They've already doubled that total in one season. Two years ago, UMass had virtually no recruiting budget and no recruits. Now four or five freshman are making an immediate impact, and there's a promising class due to arrive next year.

Saturday afternoon at Curry Hicks Cage, 12 hours after 4,000 screaming, maroon-faced crazies roared with approval for a titanic Lou Roe dunk under the glare of television lights, the Minutewomen took a 23-4 lead over West Virginia. There were no TV lights, no standing room only fans and no "Rage in the Cage" singalongs. But the sight of UMass beating the WVU women, who had run up the score on them countless times before, made up for all that. The carnival stuff is nice, but the players will tell you it comes second.

I suspect fans don't come out because they think women's basketball isn't as exciting a game as men's hoops are. Wrong. Okay, they don't dunk, but so what? It's fundamentally the same game — same hoop, same rules — and the only things the men have on the women are height and media attention.

I don't know how the women's team feels about drawing a fraction of the fans the men do. I don't know how they feel about not having a separate T-shirt made up for every game they play. But I'm willing to bet that doesn't matter much to them in light of the dramatic improvement they have made the past two years.

Saturday night, after UMass' win over WVU, I met reserve center Francie Hansen on North Pleasant Street. She was a medical redshirt in 1990-91 and had to watch all 27 of those losses from the bench, in street clothes. This year, she's contributing quality minutes in a reserve role and a lot happier.

It's so much better now," she said. I had to agree.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

The UMass women's basketball team has been steadily rising up, thanks to players like Kim Kristofik and Maleeka

Dallas Cowboys prove columnist correct

"The Dallas Cowboys will make it through the treacherous NFC . . . before meeting the Bills in the Super Bowl. It will be an offensive war, with Troy Aikman and Jim Kelly shooting it out and pouring on the points. In the end, I think that Dallas will complete the rebuilding quest and allow me, along with many other football fans, to be proud of the best Super Bowl in years," (Collegian, 9/11/92).

Art Stapleton's PIGSKIN PICKS

Well, I hate to say I told you so, but I just did. For those of you that have been in a coma since the Last Rage in the Cage, Dallas did in fact bury Buffalo on Super Sunday, 52-17. Despite Kelly's injury, my prediction of an offensive onslaught was on the money.

Aikman played well enough to garner the MVP honors, along with the other spoils the winner receives, like a trip to Disney World, a spot on The Tonight Show, fifty interviews the morning after, and his name once again in Stapleton's Pigskin Picks.

As I put the NFL season to rest, we will take one final trip around the league, recapping some of the highlights in the 1992-93 season:

The Pack is back, unlike Coach Mac: Green Bay made the fans of the underdog happy as Sterling Sharpe, Brett Favre, and their coach Mike Holmgren gave the Cheeseheads from Wisconsin a reason to celebrate. Sharpe had the best season out of any of the receivers, and Favre is one year away from the Pro Bowl.

On the other hand, your New England Patriots got rid of the only spark on its

Turn to FINAL PIGSKIN PICKS, page 11

SPORTS NOTICE

There will be a field hockey meeting on Monday, Feb. 8 at 4 p.m. in Boyden 117 for all interested in trying out for the team.

Tickets for Thursday nights men's basketball West Virginia game and Saturday's Rutgers game will be given out Thursday morning starting at 7 a.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage. No lines will be formed before 6:30 a.m. and there will be 4,000 student tickets, or twice as many as were given in the Cage.

Thursday February 4, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 70

Mostly sunny with highs in the 30s, same for Friday.

This Weekend:
David Mamet's vulgarity–drenched tragi–comedy American Buffalo comes to Southwest's Hampden Theater. Read the interview with director Nathan Schechter

Sports:
Men's basketball readies itself for today's game against West Virginia in the brand–new Mullins Arena. Page 16.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Spike Lee details his rise in film industry

Speaks to capacity crowd at UMass

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Famed filmmaker Spike Lee spoke to a sold-out audience in the Fine Arts Center Auditorium last night.

By KRISTIN J. ST. JOHN
Collegian Staff

Filmmaker Spike Lee told a capacity crowd in the Fine Arts Center last night "Do for self" was the motto he used to help get Malcolm X on the big screen. Lee shared stories about his film making and even gave out some advice.

Coming out to a standing ovation, Lee wasted no time. "Massachusetts. . . home of the hated Red Sox and Celtics," he said.

Lee went on to say that Larry Bird asked him to be at the Boston Garden to help retire his jersey. "You know me and Magic will be hanging out," he said.

Lee said he originally read The Autobiography of Malcolm X by Alex Haley in junior high as required reading. "For me the book changed the way I viewed the world around me," he said.

According to Lee, he didn't want to be a filmmaker then.

"I wanted to play second base for the New York Mets, but I stopped growing," he said.

It wasn't until he was attending Morehouse College did he consider making films. During the summer between his sophomore and junior year Lee bought a 8mm camara and spent the whole summer documenting the New York City Blackout.

After graduation, Lee applied to New York University's 3-year film program. "Luckily I didn't need an astronomical score on the GRE's to get in," he said.

Joe's Bed-Stuy Barbershop was Lee's thesis film that won a Student Academy Award. "I thought I was the man after that. . . film offers were bound to come in."

It was when Lee saw his fellow class-

Turn to LEE, page 5

Urges student unity to bolster strength

By MARTIN JONES
Collegian Staff

Prior to the lecture at the Fine Arts Center Auditorium where he addressed a capacity crowd, Spike held a brief press conference where he answered questions from the press.

One student asked how to survive as a minority on a predominately White campus. Lee emphasized education as the primary solution.

"Get a degree, get as much as you can, and get the hell out of Dodge," he said.

"Your parents and grandparents needed the National Guard to escort them to school," he said. "Compared to them, you have it made."

Lee did cite the small percentage of minority students at UMass saying, "those numbers need to change."

Turn to LECTURE, page 4

More unfolds on alleged assault

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Members of Iota Gamma Upsilon sorority said they gave a statement to Amherst Police yesterday offering an account of the alleged Sunday morning assault on University of Massachusetts alumnus Andrew Chu that differed from the version Chu gave to the Collegian.

Iota Gamma Upsilon officers also said they were considering filing trespassing charges against Chu.

Iota Gamma Upsilon member Sasha Potzka said in her statement she told police she was in the lobby of her sorority house on North Pleasant Street where Chu and his friend were seeking a ride. She said she told police that she and others present repeatedly asked Chu and his friend to leave because "they didn't know anyone there."

Potzka said Chu and his friend originally came to the house looking for a woman Chu's friend said he had met that night at a party.

Potzka said the woman did not wish to speak to them, and told them they had to leave. Potzka said police were told that Chu refused to leave, and became verbally and physically abusive when she attempted to escort him out.

Sophomore Kristen Keane, also of Iota Gamma Upsilon, said in her statement to police that several men present in the lobby then dragged Chu and his friend out of the house, but "they were not violent with him."

Keane said she told police that Chu continually provoked the men as they escorted him off Iota Gamma Upsilon property, and a fight broke out only after they were near Hillel House, well away from the sorority house.

Chu graduated from the University in 1990 and now lives and works in Boston. He said he had been in Amherst to visit friends at his old fraternity, and spent the evening at a party on fraternity row. He said after the party he and a friend went to the Iota Gamma Upsilon sorority house to look for a woman his friend said he had met that night.

Chu, who is of Chinese descent, said racial slurs were shouted during the fight in reference to his Asian appearance.

He said he went to University Health Services Sunday morning, where he was treated for minor injuries and released. He said he returned to Boston Sunday night.

According to Mary O'Brien of the Office of Greek Affairs, a meeting is being planned between Greek Affairs officials and those involved in the incident to discuss what action should be taken.

Amherst Police officers declined comment.

Clinton pledges welfare reform

By JOHN KING
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton pledged Tuesday to transform welfare into a "hand up, not a handout" by giving recipients training and then requiring them to work. He said he would allow governors broad freedom to experiment with welfare changes.

"Most people on welfare are yearning for another alternative, aching for the chance to move from dependence to dignity," Clinton said in a speech to the National Governors' Association. "Welfare should be a second chance, not a way of life."

Clinton broke little new ground, largely repeating, rhetoric and all, an array of campaign promises he said would "end welfare as we know it" and give dignity to families who work but still find themselves below the poverty line.

And aides said that despite Clinton's detailed campaign proposal and Tuesday speech, many critical questions about the policy were unresolved. Among them was what, if any, sanctions would be imposed on welfare recipients who refused to work, and who besides the disabled would be exempt from the work requirements.

During the campaign, Clinton said his proposal would cost $6 billion a year for its first four years. But Bruce Reed, the White House deputy domestic policy adviser, said that was "not necessarily what is going to be included in the president's budget."

To answer such questions and draft the legislation, Clinton said he would name within 10 days a White House-led task force made up of officials from government departments and agencies involved in welfare, education and job training. Their goal would be to draft a legislative proposal by spring or early summer.

As much as restating his welfare policies and goals, Clinton's speech appeared designed to shift public attention onto one of his popular, conservative-sounding campaign themes after several days of focus on more

Turn to WELFARE, page 4

Federal trial for L.A. cops commences

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A second trial began Wednesday for four policemen who beat Rodney King, and more than 300 prospective jurors were asked if they participated in deadly riots that followed the first trial.

The prospective jurors also were asked whether they could reach a verdict without fear of a new outbreak of violence.

The defendants in the federal civil right trial — Sgt. Stacey Koon, Officers Laurence Powell and Theodore Briseno and former Officer Timothy Wind — faced the prospective jurors as U.S. District Judge John Davies introduced them.

It could take at least two weeks to select a jury.

The 333 prospects were promised that their answers on a 53-page questionnaire would be kept secret forever. But one man skeptical of that promise rose in the jury assembly room and walked toward Davies.

"Can I ask a question of the judge or whoever is in charge?" the man said.

"You are asking us to solemnly swear but you are not solemnly swearing that our questionnaires will be kept confidential. Why don't you take an oath?" he asked snappishly.

A deputy marshal stepped toward the man and said, "That's enough."

"I'm a citizen! I have a right to speak," the man replied.

Davies declared the man's question was fair. But, the judge added, "I don't think I need to take an oath. An order has been issued."

Davies assured prospects that their identities and written answers could remain secret forever. And he told them the jury will be sequestered at a hotel away from families for the duration of the trial, expected to be eight weeks.

The half-hour proceeding was closed to the public, except for a three-reporter news media pool.

Turn to TRIAL, page 9

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor .....

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

READ THE COLLEGIAN. RECYCLE IT TOO.

安城中國飯店
AMHERST
CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOMESTYLE COOKING
• FRESH VEGETABLES FROM OUR FARM
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS • NEWLY REMODELED
MASTERCARD & VISA ACCEPTED
253-7835 253-2813
62 MAIN STREET, AMHERST

UMASS Owes Amherst $203,000
DEAD BEAT?
UMass can afford a $5,000,000 arts & convocation center, but can't spend 10¢ a day to uphold its integrity
Sincerely,
Larry Kibler

THE LAUNDRY CLUB
The Most Fun You Can Have in a Laundromat!
8 am-11 pm • 7 days
◆ Coin Operated Washers and Dryers
◆ State of the Art Machines
◆ Snack Bar
◆ Big Screen T.V.
◆ Pool Table and Video Games
◆ Senior Citizen Discount
COUPON
$1.00 OFF any size washer
Limit 1 coupon per customer
Coupon Expires 3/31/93
$3.00 OFF DRY CLEANING ($10 or more)
Limit 1 coupon per customer
Coupon Expires 3/31/93
Dry Cleaning
6 University Drive • New Market Center • Next To Victory Supermarket & Scott's Liquors • Amherst • (413) 549-2640

Rich's Army/Navy and casual clothes store
Pea Coats $45
Flannel Shirts $10
BLOW OUT OUT OUT OUT OUT SALE
Reversible Winter Coats $30
Sweaters $10
Sweats $5
All Merchandise 1/2 Price
(All sales final)
(No other coupons or discounts apply)
Sale January 28 through February 14
24 Center St. Northampton • 586-0275
- Next to the Iron Horse Cafe -

Walking Distance
FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive, Amherst • 253-3539
Free Weights Supreme
Best Cardiovascular

Harassment found in med school

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press

BOSTON — A small survey of young doctors found that three-quarters of the women and one-fifth of the men believed they were sexually harassed during their training.

Most of the incidents involved offensive comments, such as off-color jokes and remarks about people's anatomy, or persistent unwelcome flirtation.

Women reported nearly all of the unwanted attention came from male doctors. The men said they were more often harassed by nurses, about half of the other males.

The study was based on a written survey of 133 interns and residents in internal medicine at the University of California, San Francisco. Eighty-two of them — 33 women and 49 men — responded.

One female resident said she was asked on dates by two different doctors who were supposed to write letters of recommendation or evaluations for her. Another said a senior resident repeatedly rubbed his groin against her during an operation.

Among other findings:

• Of the 66 episodes reported by the women, 18 were physical. They included leering, standing too close, unwanted kisses and pats and one case of sexual bribery, described as offering good grades and other advantages in exchange for sex.

• Two of the women said they reported the harassment to someone in authority, and both said they were resolved. Three-quarters said they did not report the incidents because they doubted they would be helped.

• Three of the women said the harassment caused them no problems. The rest said the episodes created an intimidating environment, interfered with their ability to work or made them uncomfortable.

The survey, directed by Dr. Miriam Komaromy, was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The authors noted the difficulty of establishing whether a comment or look really amounts to sexual harassment. Viewpoints often differ.

"One student may feel flattered by frequent compliments on her dress and hair, whereas another may feel demeaned," they wrote.

They said some kinds of physical contact, such as hugging or putting an arm around a colleague, can be viewed as harassment in one professional context and inoffensive in another.

"Mutually enjoyable flirtation is not the same thing as sexual harassment," they wrote. "The circumstances surrounding the event are crucial in determining whether sexual harassment has occurred."

The authors recommended that schools and hospitals concentrate on preventing sexual harassment, rather than punishing it.

"The most important parts of a prevention program are education and training," they wrote, including establishing a strong policy against sexual harassment.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Frances K. Conley wrote that the study is a reminder that "more blatant forms of sexual harassment are remarkably prevalent even in our prestigious profession."

Conley, a brain surgeon, created a furor two years ago with her claims of sexual harassment at Stanford University.

Dreams may trigger heart attacks

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press

BOSTON — Now it looks like even dreaming may be hazardous to your health.

A new study has found that the periods of sleep when dreams occur kick the body into high gear. The heart speeds up. The blood pressure climbs. And stress hormones prepare the body to run or fight.

Researchers believe all this internal turmoil, which happens while the sleeper is tucked peacefully into bed, may trigger heart attacks.

Their study found that during dream sleep, the sympathetic nervous system cranks up in a surprisingly powerful way. In fact, it is twice as active as is normal when people are awake.

"Even at four in the morning when you think the body should be fast asleep and quiet, everything is pounding away. The sympathetic nervous system is in overdrive," said Dr. Virend K. Somers of the University of Iowa.

The idea that dreams may be bad for the heart is still highly speculative, but researchers say it makes sense.

Doctors have long noticed that angina attacks, which occur when the heart fails to get enough oxygen, sometimes happen at night. Furthermore people dream the most just before they wake up. And this might help explain why heart attacks are more common in the morning than any other time of day.

Even if dreaming does prove to be bad for weak hearts, there may not be a lot anyone can do about it. Avoiding dreams entirely is hard to do and could be unwise, since dreams may play some role in keeping people mentally healthy.

"But maybe we can protect the heart from the sympathetic nervous system activation that occurs during dream sleep," said Somers, who directed this study.

One way to do this is to take beta blockers, drugs that blunt the effects of stress hormones on the heart.

Somers' study, published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, was conducted on eight healthy volunteers. While they slept, researchers measured their heart rates, their blood pressures and the activation of their sympathetic nervous system.

They found that during most stages of sleep, the heart rate and blood pressure fell and the sympathetic nervous system grew less active. The exception was during REM- or rapid eye movement-sleep, the stage when dreams occur.

During REM sleep, the heart rate and blood pressure rose to the level seen during waking hours. And the sympathetic nervous system spurted to twice the state normal during the day.

REM sleep accounts for about one-fifth of sleep time and comes and goes during the night. However, periods of REM sleep are longest just before people awaken.

The sympathetic nervous system prepares the body for action. It causes the release of stress hormones that stimulate sweating, slow digestion and widen the airways in the lungs, among many other things.

The researchers say it could also make the blood stickier, so it clots faster. While this is good when people are cut in fist fights, most of the time it's not, especially if it launches a blood clot that plugs an artery in the heart.

Local News

Sam I Am

The University of California at San Diego has acquired the manuscripts of one of America's favorite authors, none other than Dr. Suess.

UCSD will display more than 4,000 manuscripts and drawings of Theodore "Dr. Seuss" Gissel, the Pulitzer Prize winning author who died last year.

The collection of works, which include notebook doodles and rarely seen poems has been appraised at almost $2.3 million.

Geisel's widow, Audrey, selected the works which have been donated to the school.

A Botany project?

At Clemson University in South Carolina a student was recently charged with growing marijuana in his dorm room.

The student, a sophomore, was arrested after police searched his room and found marijuana seedlings, according to The Tiger, the student newspaper on campus.

Police Lt. Johnnie James made the arrest and reported finding approximately ten plants. Only three of the plants had sprouted and the rest were germinating seeds, but McCullough can be held accountable for all the plants under South Carolina law. The law allows police to charge a person with manufacture if they plant seeds and water them.

Clemson Police Chief Lonnie Saxon said the department will continue to crack down on drug dealers.

"As for targeting people, we're out to get the dealers," Saxon said. He likens the situation to cleaning a house. "You're going to sweep as you go along and everything is going to fall into place — but you can't ignore the little things."

A penny saved

In some encouraging news for the University of Massachusetts, a report issued yesterday said state spending on UMass-Boston provides the Commonwealth with a return of $1.57 for every $1 spent, according to The Boston Herald.

The report states UMass-Boston graduates will earn, in their lifetime, $1.05 billion more in Massachusetts than they would have without their education.

"If you treat state government as though it were a private bank, investments in UMass-Boston have not only been economically prudent but indeed highly profitable in a strict business sense," the 40-page study concludes.

"This is the equivalent to an investment that pays 8.9 percent nominal rate of return," the study said.

There has not been a study of UMass-Amherst but economist Barry Bluestone, who conducted the UMass-Boston study, said he would like to see studies done at all the state's schools.

Ren and Stimpy rejected

At Kent State University, the Undergraduate Student Senate denied funding for a Ren and Stimpy program at the university.

The Daily Kent Stater reported the senate rejected the plan which would have brought the animator of the popular Nickelodeon cartoon series to campus. The series never-before-seen first episode of "Ren and Stimpy" would also have been shown.

The All Campus Programming Board, who wished to sponsor the lecture, said the program would have been "educational to design, television, radio and graphics majors."

The program would have cost $4,025.35.

Just sporty

If you are looking for the university with the most successful athletic programs, you may not have to look much farther than the University of Michigan.

Football finished its season undefeated at 9-0-3, with a Rose Bowl victory and a No. 5 ranking in the final Associated Press poll.

The Basketball team is currently ranked No. 7 in the AP, following up to last season's trip to the NCAA Championship game and the school's hockey team is currently ranked No. 3 in the country and the top team outside of New England.

Mullins opening affects parking

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

The Mullins Center changes both the landscape of the rural town of Hadley and the face of parking at the University.

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

With the opening of the Mullins Center, some changes have been made in parking at the University of Massachusetts.

Effective tonight, for the UMass-West Virginia men's basketball game, evening users of designated parking lots will be directed to park elsewhere, giving access to Mullins Center patrons.

The affected lots will be Lot E (West of 25), 21, 25, 26, 31, 33, 40, and 41. On any given Mullins Center event, some or all of these lots will be required.

Parking control staff will be present in these lots by 5 p.m. for weekday events and variable times for weekend events. After this time, only people with tickets to the event will be permitted to enter the lot. No one will be required to vacate the lot if they are already parked there.

Access to every other lot on campus will be unrestricted during this time.

This plan was developed by a small task force for traffic and parking control and reviewed by BSC Group of Boston, a traffic engineering firm.

There will be shuttle buses running from some of the affected lots, which extend as far as Southwest residential area, to the Mullins Center, said Keith Terry, a radio operator for UMass Transit.

Some students that will be affected by the parking changes showed concern.

"I'll probably want to use the computers on campus and I won't be able to find parking," said student Veronica White, who has parking privileges in Lot 25.

"I won't be able to leave and come back at night. That's kind of annoying," said Adam Lomartire, a senior industrial engineering major.

Clinton foreign policy discussed

Expert says bureaucracy will force U.S. intervention

By TOM KNIGHT
Collegian Staff

Though President Bill Clinton faces a number of difficult foreign policy problems, his administration will try to solve them with as little cost and effort as possible, according to several area foreign policy specialists.

Hampshire College Government Professor Michael Klare, Smith College Government Professor Susan Peterson and Mount Holyoke International Relations Professor Vincent Ferraro spoke in a panel discussion on foreign policy problems facing the Clinton administration Tuesday night at Smith College. The panel was sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies.

The panelists focused on the situations in Somalia, where U.S. troops are helping combat the ravages caused by civil war and famine, as well as Bosnia.

"I think they'll be there forever," said Michael Klare, director of (PAWSS), when asked how long U.S. troops would have to stay in Somalia.

Ferraro's former Mt. Holyoke colleague, Anthony Lake, was named to be Clinton's national security advisor.

All three panelists said they have noticed a more interventionist attitude from President Clinton than they did from candidate Clinton.

Klare said Clinton's "personal bias is against intervention," but that the military bureaucracy he inherited as well as most of his foreign policy advisors "are much more inclined to use force."

Although foreign policy issues have figured prominently so far, Klare predicted that "Clinton's fortunes will rise or fall on the success of the domestic conditions."

Ferraro quipped that "it's still the 'economy, stupid.'"

The panelists said they felt the United States is selective in the places in which it chooses to intervene.

Peterson said the reason the United States sent troops to Somalia and not Bosnia was because she believes the U.S. is "willing to [send troops] where it's cheap, safe and the outcome is relatively certain."

"Rather than asking what our interests are or the goals we hope to achieve," Peterson said. "[The new administration] will be asking what are the costs we seek not to incur. Clinton will try to ignore foreign policy when he can."

Peterson also said she was "profoundly pessimistic on the prospects for peace," in Eastern Europe. "The conflict is unresolvable," Peterson said.

Ferraro said he believed that "there never been a situation more deserving of intervention of something being done [than Bosnia]. But what that something is, I don't know."

Ferraro said situation in the former Soviet Union is another potential problem spot.

"If something happens to Yeltsin, we're talking about July 1914 all over again," Ferraro said. "We'll have learned nothing," if another totalitarian regime is established in the Soviet Union.

PAWSS will be sponsoring panel discussions in the coming weeks on the global AIDS epidemic as well as more focused discussions on the turmoil in Russia and the war in former Yugoslavia.

LGRC sustains $50,000 in damages

Students are back to classes at the Lederle Graduate Research Towers, but repairs are still being made after yesterday's early morning flood that University spokesperson Danny Chun said caused an estimated $50,000 in damages and cleanup costs in the Graduate Research tower.

A break between a connector from a larger pipe to a smaller pipe leading to the sprinkler system caused water to flow down a staircase in Tower B and pour into the elevator shafts, Chun said. Police are still investigating the cause of the burst.

Two elevator repairmen from Otis Elevator Company were working on one of the towers' four elevators.

"The elevator pits were full of water and on top of the elevators," said Connie Goodreao. He also said there was water in front of the cars.

Jeff Griswald who was also working on the elevator said they had to drain the board where the floor button switches are because they filled with water.

Goodreao said the water had gotten into the electrical equipment.

Brian Cope, a sophomore majoring in physics, and Supriya Prabhakar, a sophomore majoring in electrical engineering, said they unable to go to their Linear Algebra class in the towers yesterday.

"Before we even got to the building, people were coming back telling us, 'don't even go there,'" Prabhakar said.

— CHRISTINA ROTHWELL

■ lecture

continued from page 1

Spike Lee also urged Black students to become more unified and draw strength from each other.

"The history of our people is to make do what what we have and build on it," he said.

Students and staff cited Lee as an important role model.

Sid Feriera, a student advisor on campus, said that Spike Lee gave him a "better understanding" of his personal struggles as a Black filmmaker.

"He showed us that despite the racism and obstacles we should keep on struggling," said Feriera. "He also struggled against racism to make his films and his perseverance has paid off."

Pete Ribiero, general manager of the Black Mass Communications Project, commented on Spike's emphasis on self help.

"He really wanted people to used him as a role model to succeed as he did," Ribiero said. "In his film, he used Malcolm X as an example of self-empowerment."

Delphine Quarles, a Student Activities advisor and coordinator of Black History Month, called lee's visit "a great beginning that will benefit the entire community" and encouraged participation in the remainder of Black History Month activities.

Faries Odom, a senior psychology major, said it was important that Spike Lee came during Black History Month, citing the need for "more Black people to give back to the community."

Following the lecture, Lee attended a special reception at the Malcolm X Center. Mai Sam, student coordinator of the center, said it was "a great honor" to host the actual director of the film Malcolm X.

■ welfare

continued from page 1

controversial matters such as homosexuals in the military.

Fittingly, he delivered the speech to an organization in which then-Arkansas, Gov. Clinton cut his teeth on welfare issues in the mid-1980s as an architect of national reform legislation.

"I think all of us want what most people on welfare want, a country that gives you a hand up, not a handout," Clinton told the governors. "No one likes the welfare system as it currently exists, least of all the people who are on it."

Clinton told the governors Washington could not mandate "top-down" reforms for varying state problems. So he pledged to look favorably on most state requests for waivers from federal rules-even when he was personally opposed to the specifics of a state experiment.

"And the only thing I want to say, to ask you in return, is let us measure these experiments and let us measure them honestly," Clinton said. "And if it works, let's tell everybody it works so we can all do it, and if it doesn't, let's have the courage to quit and admit it didn't."

Highlights of Clinton's proposal include:

- Expanding education and training programs for recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the federal welfare program which has gone from helping 3.7 million families in 1988 to 4.7 million last year. In return, recipients would be limited to two years eligibility and required to work. If no private jobs were available, some sort of community service would have to be performed to collect benefits.
- Clinton and aides said such training and strict work requirements were critical to breaking the long-term dependency of 25 percent of welfare recipients.
- Expanding the Earned Income Tax Credit so that no family with a parent who worked 40 hours a week would live below the poverty line. "If there is dignity in all work, there must be dignity for every worker," Clinton said.
- Creating a national database of "deadbeat dads" to track fathers delinquent in making child support payments and using the Internal Revenue Service to collect from egregious violators.

The Jewish Arts Festival Presents:
Award -Winning Scholar and Author
Dr. ROBERT ALTER
"Adventure in Madern Hebrew Literature"
Dr. Alter has lectured worldwide on the European & American novel, the literary art of the Bible, and modern Hebrew Literature.
Monday, February 8 at 8:00PM
Campus Center 168
General Public $3 Students FREE
Sponsored by: UMASS Hillel, Judaic & Near Eastern Studies with additional support from UMASS Arts Council & Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund.

Judicial Advisors Program
Sponsored by the Student Attorney General's Office and the Dean of Students Office. Applications are now being accepted for the Spring 1993 semester.
Training will take place on February 23 from 7:30 to 9:30 in room 903 in the Campus Center.
Applications will be accepted at both the Student Government Attorney General's Office at 432 Student Union and the Dean of Student's office at 227 Whitmore.
Applications are due on February 17th at 5pm.
If you would like more information about the program, contact Paul Vasconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students, at 545-2684; or Deirdre Bannon, Coordinator of the Judicial Advisors Program, at 545-1272.

ALL BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
QUARTER POUNDERS
BURGERS • HOT DOGS
FRIES • ONION RINGS
PHILLY CHEESE STKS
SHAKES • FLOATS
PETE'S
ROUTE 9 HADLEY 585-0241
ONE MILE WEST OF THE HAMPSHIRE MALL

UMASS Owes Amherst $203,000
DEADBEAT?
UMass can afford a $3,000,000 access & conversion center, but can't spend 100% of that to uphold its campus fire safety laws.
Sincerely,
Larry Kohn

The Spa
Hot Tubs & Tans
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

Limited Time Offer
Lowest Prices of the Season
on college rings
selected Women's Rings $239 regularly priced up to $350
selected Men's Rings $299 regularly priced up to $435
JOSTENS
UNIVERSITY STORE
February 2, 3, 4 and 5
10 am to 4 pm
Prices are for 10K gold rings. For 14K gold rings, add $100

How much is too much?

Gov't haggles over food contamination

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration on Tuesday jumped into the explosive debate over cancer-causing pesticides and food, seeking public comment on how much contamination is too much.

The Environmental Protection Agency released a list of 35 pesticides that it said would likely be barred by a pending court order to ban cancer-causing pesticides in processed foods under provisions of the 1958 Delaney Clause.

EPA Administrator Carol Browner said because only small amounts of the chemicals have shown up in processed foods, she is viewing the matter as a question of legal interpretation rather than public safety.

"EPA does not believe that the pesticides in the following lists pose an unreasonable risk to public health, based on available data," she said.

EPA officials said the chemicals on the list have been found to cause cancer in animals. EPA already has banned those it considered a risk to humans.

The food industry contends that modern technology has made the Delaney law obsolete because such minute traces of carcinogens can now be detected that they are meaningless.

Browner said her intention is not to relax the Delaney Clause, which is part of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. However, in an interview Monday she called the law outdated.

The pesticides do not have familiar public names. For instance, among them is benomyl which is used on grapes and tomatoes but has appeared in raisins and ketchup made from them. Also, mancozeb which is used on wheat, barley, oats and rye and has turned up in flour and bran made from those grains.

The outcome could affect thousands of processed foods.

The EPA said it is faced with barring the 35 pesticides to comply with a July order by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco.

The court ordered EPA to adhere to the Delaney Clause that prohibits the presence in processed foods of substances that cause cancer in humans or in animals, no matter how tiny the

Turn to PESTICIDES, page 10

■ Lee

continued from page 1

mates actually working that he decided to start working on doing his own films.

Lee thanked his friend Earl Smith for having faith for giving his life savings to him for She's Goatta Have It. "Don't fool yourself. We didn't start out making $35 million movies," he told the crowd "We had to make due. There's always people in the background that you don't read about. . . holding you up."

Lee went on to talk about his inspirations for School Daze, Do The Right Thing and Jungle Fever.

After Do The Right Thing, Lee said he felt that it was time for Malcolm X. When he heard that Malcolm X was being directed by a White director he started to protest.

"I feel that it would be very hard for a White director to direct this film," he said. "That is not to say that Whites can only do films with White matters and Blacks do film with Black matters."

After having problems getting money from Warner Brothers and the bonds company threatening to shut production down, Lee started to call on his friends for help. Super stars such as Bill Cosby, Oprah Winfrey, Magic Johnson and Michael Jordan contributed to help Lee finish production.

Lee's reasons for making Malcolm X was "to show the road that he took. . . from point A to point Z, the whole road. The Malcolm from the Nation of Islam was not the Malcolm that came back from Mecca."

After his speech there was a question and answer session. Lee commented on inter-racism and racism, "one is a by-product of the other," women's roles in his movies and even his views on Jewish-Black relations.

When asked about advice he would give to African-American UMass students, Lee replied, "Number one realize why you're here, to get an education, get that degree and go back and apply that to your community. You have to turn negatives in positives. . . you just can't quit. Try to draw strength from your community. Just get the people who are down and roll with that."

Celebrate With Scotts Before and After the Game!
Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M. Tel: 549-2692
Rolling Rock & Rolling Rock Light $6.99 + dep. 12 pk. bottles
Robert Mondavi Woodbridge White Zinfandel $8.99 1.5 L
Molson Golden & Light $8.39 + dep. 12 pk. bottles
Anheuser-Busch's Natural Light $8.99 + dep. 24-12 oz. cans
Natural Light 1/2 Kegs $32.99 NO PERMIT KEGS
Fleischman's Vodka $10.99 1.75 L
NEW! Castillo Spiced Rum SALE PRICE 6.99 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 $4.99 750 ml
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
Tele-check for your personal check.
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games!
FULL SELECTION OF NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE & BEERS

THE BEST DEAL
$119.95
OLYMPUS Infinity Stylus
•Incredibly compact
•Fully automatic
•Real-image viewfinder
WITH FREE EXTENDED WARRANTY
OLYMPUS 3000 $259.95
•38-110mm Power Zoom Lens
•Red Eye Reduction flash
•Auto focus-Auto exposure
Sale Ends 2/14/93
the CameraShops
AMHERST 98 N Pleasant St
SPRINGFIELD Baystate West
NORTHAMPTON 219 Main St

Don't get mad. Get promoted.
THE TEMP
OPENING FEBRUARY 12

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Big Brother alive and well

Time and time again, the University of Massachusetts bureaucracy proves it is the best at throwing money away.

Housing Services had a problem with drunken fools in Southwest causing chaos and mayhem on weekends. They tried alcohol policies, but they didn't work — in fact, they led to resident assistants being assaulted, harassed and intimidated.

So what's Housing's solution to the problem? Desks and swivel chairs.

Greg
SUKIENNIK

I liked the new phones, even though they break if you merely shoot a dirty look at one. I can live with a bed that's too small and recreates the sensation of sleeping on concrete. I don't mind the cable service, since they show cartoons and that neat elevator safety film every so often. I even grew to admire the crowning triumph of technology that is Microfridge. But this was too much.

Upon re-entering my building for the first time this semester I saw a tall, counter-height desk where the old sign-in table had formerly been. What had been a lobby was now a border patrol substation, complete with a plexiglass-shielded sign that says "Stop!" in big red letters.

Oh, I see. Drunken vandals from off-campus who pull fire alarms and throw furniture out windows won't run past security receptionists because the sign says "Stop!" The hell they will. What's next? Armed guards, police dogs and armed border guards in riot gear? Don't laugh — Housing once proposed building a fence around Southwest. Imagine the following scenario:

Security guard: "Anything to declare?"
Beer smuggler: "Uhh, no, nothing."
"May we see what's in your bag, sir?"
(Rip, rumple, rumple.) "Sir, are you aware there is a six pack of an alcoholic malt beverage in your bag?"

"But I'm 23. Look —"

"Up against the wall! [Whump!] You're under arrest for smuggling Knickerbocker into Southwest without a permit. Go directly to alcohol re-programming class, do not pass go, do not collect $200. Next!"

The sad part is that UMass students have largely brought this sort of "police academy goes to college" mentality upon themselves. It only takes one moron a few seconds to pull a false alarm, throw up in a stairwell or harass a RA. The rest of us pay for these silly security desks through higher tuition and fees.

My first thought upon seeing this new furniture was "Why?" My second thought was "How much?" Third, I wondered "Y'know, if I could get this up to my room it would make a great bar."

The "Why?" part, Housing will tell you, is a concerted effort on their part to improve security in Southwest, the "Babylon of New England." More security officers and foot patrols are a good start, true, but why did Housing need new desks? Is this really East Germany and do we need a "Checkpoint Charlie" at every door?

As for the all-important issue of cost, estimates from various sources quoted the cost of these miniature customs desks at roughly $600. That's a lot of money for a fancy desk and swivel chair. Money that would be better spent on the escort service, on student security salaries, or better yet, books for our crumbling library (now there's a thought).

So what do we have? Yet another grandiose waste of valuable resources from our Big Brothers at Housing. As always, you, the student, pay for it.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist.

A new semester — a new beginning?

Oh, it is good to be back at UMass where something is always happening. Honestly, I was tiring of my sister's refusals to wear gloves on sub-zero days or get the sneakers she needed for basketball because the only ones available in her size were ugly. Not at UMass, though, people revel in ugly here!

"What do you mean?" you ask.

Let me explain. Think of all the ugly things here. We have the Fine Arts Center, Lederle Tower, that red thing in front of the Fine Arts Center, we have racism, sexism, homophobia. . .

"Whoo, wait a minute. Racism, sexism, homophobia?" you ask.

Yes. It doesn't just go away over intersession; it was here last term, it will be here this term. The way I see it, last semester people tried to eliminate these problems by dwelling on them. Everyone had a possible solution they wanted to try. Unfortunately, much of this healing medicine acted more like salt rubbed into the wounds. Even the immediates of the most publicized racial attack on campus seem to want to let the incident remain with last semester.

"So what's your point?"

Good question. Ladies and gentlemen, we have a new semester, a new year, so why not have a new start? I suggest that we all, on your next day of classes, turn to the person next to you and say hello. Human nature, or at least common courtesy, will cause the person to respond. So talk more. Is the person interesting? Then get their name! Meet them to study, or have a snack in Blue Wall.

"But they are a different skin color than I am. They are different sex, a different sexual persuasion. . ."

And isn't that part of what makes them interesting? May we enjoy the cultural diversity the campus offers, and let common experiences bring us together. So, if my suggestion worked, then do it again the next day, and if it didn't, well, everybody has a bad day; try it again tomorrow. See you in class.

Steven Lee Orchard Hill

. . .but is she qualified?

White House watchers have been focusing on a new topic of late. Temporarily putting aside the pressing issues of where the president's daughter is going to school and what kind of cat food Socks prefers, the spotlight has again turned to Hillary Clinton.

Peter J
ORVETTI

There is a group in America known as the "perennially discontent," who, for sport, spend hours upon hours searching out trivialities to gripe about. The latest gripe by this troupe is President Bill Clinton's decision to make attorney Hillary Clinton the head of a special health care commission. She is highly qualified for such a post, and even political opponents concede that she is an exceptional lawyer. The problem, then? She happens to share a last name with the president.

Nepotism is indeed a political problem. Unscrupulous representatives have been known to make it a practice to fit each aunt and uncle on the public payroll. But the fear of nepotism should not ban the legitimately qualified from political posts.

A young lawyer who had fought Joe McCarthy and Jimmy Hoffa became John Kennedy's attorney general. The crusading environmentalist who now bears the title of vice-president is the son of a senator. Al Gore is certainly a competent public official. The wheelchair-bound man from New York who brought about the end of the Great Depression had a famous uncle; Franklin Delano Roosevelt was a relative of Theodore Roosevelt. For even greater evidence, one need look no further than the man who has represented this state in the Senate for the past 32 years.

"Ah, yes," chuckles the Loyal Opposition, "but all these people are Democrats." You are merely serving to prove our point." This is not a correct assumption. The Republican ranks have produced leaders who happen to be related to other leaders. The head of the Loyal Opposition himself, Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, is married to ex-Cabinet member Elizabeth Dole. And the man who recently left the White House is the son of a senator.

How do we draw the line between nepotism and "fair" appointments? This is not a simple question. But it seems reasonable to most political observers that Hillary Rodham Clinton, a highly successful, very talented attorney, is a "fair" appointment. Perhaps this is because she was chosen based upon the same standard that would be applied to any candidate — talent, ability, knowledge. This is slightly different from an aunt or an uncle answering phones in a Senate office.

Government is not, and should not be, a family business but should a qualified person be chosen for a post, that person must not be discarded based solely upon his or her surname or parentage. In our obsessive drive to omit the unfair from our politics, we must occasionally re-evaluate just what "fair" means — for if we disqualify the Hillary Clintons and the Robert Kennedys of the United States from ever holding high office, appointed or elected, are we truly being fair to ourselves as a nation?

Peter J. Orvetti is a student at Hampshire College.

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

If Thorr the ticketmaster reigns then why did over 300 students wait in line overnight for tickets to the last game to be played at the Cage?

Wonder how much the University made on that whole white T-shirt scam?

The Cage is cramped, small, claustrophobic and intimidating for visiting teams. Why are we closing it in favor for a huge antiseptic and impersonal beast that will bring David Copperfield to UMass? Besides, "The Cage" sounds so much better than "The Mullins Center."

I really don't understand what the big idea is. Why not let transvestites in the military? Men who dress like women. Men who dress like trees. What's the difference really?

Things I'd like to see before I die:

- UMass Social Thought and Political Economy majors working at a Colorado-based Coors bottling factory while singing the theme to Laverne and Shirley.
- Zoe Baird running a day-care center for real working mothers.
- U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn tending bar at the North Star in Northampton.
- Bush discovering how much minimum wage really is just before he starts his job pumping gas for Exxon.
- Fresh Hatch fries.
- Sinead O'Connor rip up a picture of me.

Marc
ELLIOTT

According to The American Heritage Dictionary, "Feminism n. Advocacy of the political, social and economic equality of men and women."

Has anyone considered Dean of Students Jo-Anne Vanin for the soon-to-be-vacant chancellor's post? Anyone who can shut up the boisterous former Student Senate speaker Jeff Turco strikes me as a woman with the stuff that can handle power with the kind of decisiveness and authority this campus needs. 'Course I'm going to need a job soon, myself.

For all those who are wondering, "Multicultural Musings" printed in Friday's Collegian was a paid advertisement written by Provost Glen Gordan, a nice guy and a fine actor. All those who bet it was Human Relations Director Grant Ingle lost money on that one.

By the way, in that Multicultural Musings ad, the words "community" or "communities" were mentioned 13 times, "multiculturalism" or "multicultural," 15 times, "diversity" or "diverse," 13 times. Oh, and the word "commitment" was included only twice. Interesting, eh?

Big news! Tuesday's Collegian did not included the words "diversity" or "multiculturalism" or any administrators pleading their "commitment."

Evil, evil, evil, evil, evil. What?

I know everyone is really excited about the brand-new Mullins Sports/Concert/Monster Trucks Arena but here's a little tid-bit I got from my pal Deep Throat: "The arena will cost around $52 million, with $25 million paid for by the state and the rest to be paid for by the students of this campus in the form of a $97 fee per student, every year until the building is paid for. Yet the students are getting no preferences for buying tickets, no automatic discount on tickets, and up to a $3,000 fee for student groups to rent the facility. What the students are getting is free athletic tickets — nothing new there." Eh.

Marc Elliott is a Collegian columnist, eh.

Someone better wake up and smell the spoiled innocence

It started as the harmless banter of three males excited about the upcoming Super bowl, but it quickly turned into something else. "Ow," said the squeaky voice. "I'd like to lock Claudia Schiffer up in a room for a while. Teach her a few tricks. Then she wouldn't have to guess no more."

Just the typical conversation of a few heartily oversexed, heterosexual guys out for a night on the town, right? Not exactly. The place was Stop and Shop, and the guy's voice was squeaky because he was only about 12 years old. Dressed in the grunge garb that is now the valley's dress code for wayward urchins with something to prove, Little Johnny Lewd and friends huddled around the magazine giggling about said supermodel's abduction.

My, what charming children. The kind that just make you want to pinch their cheeks. Hard. I shot them an icy glare, and one of them defiantly blew me a kiss. Wow. Long gone are the days of Legos and tree forts. A thing of the past is that adolescent nervousness and uncertainty about sex, which is good in this age of AIDS. But when the snails and puppy dog tails that make up little boys are replaced by apparent date rape potential, knowledge has gone too far.

A year ago I would have argued that we've come a long way since the early '80s, when music videos from bands the likes of Motley Crue featured caged women writhing about in bondage gear. Yes, women in hot pink bikinis are still selling stereos in Bayside Expo commercials. In last night's "I Dream of Genie Still" special, Barbara Eden chased a man down the street, begging him to be her master. It's tongue in cheek, yet it is still offensive and undeniably dangerous.

Lori
O'CONNOR

But the pairing of scantily clad, groveling women with violence has been for the most part absent from recent mainstream culture. A quick look around tells me that it is slowly oozing its way back into vogue.

The video for the song "Sex Type Thing" by Stone Temple Pilots recently made it to number one on Dial MTV's Video Request Hour. In it, a bare-chested man stalks a woman through an abandoned factory. Here are some lyrics: "I wanna get close to you. . . You wouldn't want me to have to hurt you too. . . I know you want what's on my mind. . . I'll give you something that you won't forget. . . Here I come."

This video was number one, as requested by viewers.

Last week, in the Springfield area, an eighth grade boy was arrested for raping two female classmates in the bathroom of his junior high school.

Someone had better wake up and smell the spoiled innocence. It's splattered all over every peep show populated, nudie dance clubbed corner of our society. Sex education classes aren't enough to keep our kids from growing up to be debasers. We need to provide them with clear information about what constitutes sexploitation of women. And we need to start earlier, before some animal with a recording contract plants an idea, and gives them a head start in the wrong direction.

Most of all, we need to be afraid. You see, I have a friend who works in a local record store. He says that the new Stone Temple Pilots album is quite popular with those who have yet to get their driving licenses.

"I'd like to lock her up. . . teach her a few tricks.

Here they come indeed.

Lori O'Connor is a Collegian columnist.

I am not a 'feminist'!

Sometimes I get thinking about my part in the women's movement. Sometimes I think that I might not be playing a part at all, but I should. I've never considered myself a feminist, but occasionally I wonder if that is even true.

I'm taking a course this semester entitled 'Philosophy of Woman' and I feel as if being fanatically passionate about the women's movement is some sort of prerequisite. The truth is, it's the farthest thing from my mind.

Amy
SCOTT

Too many women are missing the point about what the goals of the movement should be. I strongly believe in equal rights. I'm a woman, so I'd be dumb not to. The problem is, it seems the feminists define equal rights differently than I do. I don't believe that men and women are equal. I'm not saying that either gender is superior or inferior to the other gender, just that they are not equivalent — you can't compare apples to oranges. It's not only that men and women differ physically, but also chemically — even their brain waves are different. What does that mean? It means that some rights that men have should not necessarily apply to women, and vice versa.

I am not a conservative; I guess you could say I'm a bit moderate sometimes. I just think that too many of these feminists are wasting their time fighting over stupid privileges for stupid reasons. I don't want to be associated with them; that's why I don't think about feminist issues a lot.

For instance, it seems that some of you get real uptight if there's a club for men only. You want the right to join. Well, crashing men's clubs does not mean you have achieved equal rights. You have the right to start your own club, and that is an equal right. Besides, men have this strange need to bond — let them do it some place where they won't be bothering anyone.

I once read of a court case somewhere that involved a woman fighting for the right to go topless in public. Her lawyer argued that women's breasts were biologically like those of men. Exactly where did they do their research and come across these buxom men? A Ringling Bros. side show?

At any rate, I want to make it clear that I believe in equal rights, but that doesn't make me a feminist. I think these days the rights and respect I ask for have already been won for the most part. They should be, obvious to everyone. But these rights do not include things like going topless just because men do.

Basically, I'm not devoting any serious time or effort to an equal rights crusade. It's just there, and I sort of support it, only now I'm wondering if I need to be some frothing, passionate feminist to get any thing out of this class I'm taking.

Sometimes I wonder if calling yourself a feminist means you're obsessed with the whole deal. I'm confused. Feminist issues are relevant to me since I'm a female, yet I am not a feminist. Maybe I just never knew how relevant feminist issues are to me. Is concern for such issues all it takes to be labeled a feminist? Is it unfair to use the word "label"? Perhaps the only person doing the labelling is me.

So, am I a feminist? No. I don't think so. But I'm certainly not anti-feminist. So what does that make me, "not a feminist"? Yes. Not a feminist.

Amy Scott is a UMass student.

Ticket to Hell, Part Two

Continued from last week: Creative Driving, Hellbound.

My car hates me. I detest my car. Yet without it I would have to walk four miles to the grocery store. I resign myself: I'll have to drive it.

Week Four (home): I start the car, get it rolling with some shuddering and jerking, shift quickly into second and pretend like everyone's palms sweat like this when they drive. What I dread most is that historically, I stall at every intersection.

Brooke C.
WHEELER

Hence, I have decided not to stop the car until I reach my final destination. This might raise certain difficulties, stop signs and traffic lights being pretty common and all, but stalling does rotten things to my blood pressure. I'm sure the car usually sniffing up my rear end doesn't like it any more than I do.

I roll slowly down the drive to the road, eyeing a stop sign with distrust. Frantically I look right, look left, look right, look left, before I reach the sign. All clear. I coast right on by, not even touching the brakes, praying the local cops aren't bored enough to be around.

Minutes later: a traffic light. My palms are dripping sweat into my shoes, my heart is doing the bossa nova, my thoughts are full of cops. ("But officer," I will say matter-of-factly, "I simply must keep the car in motion.")

I slow way down. Come on, turn green pleeease. Miraculously, it does and I thank Someone for this small favor. Now smoothly cruising along, I note with a certain amount of panic another traffic light looming in the distance. It's green. Do I floor it and screech through, or dawdle enough to let it change back to green again? Plan C hits me instead and I careen around the corner of the next street. I'll take the long way.

After about five minutes, I realize I'm probably being silly — the store was four miles away, but due to my cowardice I'm taking a detour through eastern Pennsylvania. I find my way back to the main road and smile defiantly at the light looming up ahead.

"You don't scare me," I said right out loud, ignoring the tremor in my voice. It's green. Almost there. Fifty more feet. It's yellow. I floor it. It's red. I go through, pretending everything's okay. Behind me, something flashes. Numbly, I slow down and pull over. I stop, turn off the engine and listen to my heartbeat: it's doing the merengue.

There is a tap on my window. I roll it down and a big, disapproving face looks down at me. "Oh, officer," I sob, "My brakes, my brakes. . ."

Brooke C. Wheeler is a Collegian columnist.

The dinosaurs must be stopped

Patrick P. Robblee is an oaf and somewhat of a moron too. To actually believe that the government is covering up the fact that dinosaurs are still among us is completely absurd [Collegian, Jan. 27]. The information is available. That is why we must keep commie spies and other subversives from using our libraries. This information should never be let into the wrong hands.

It was not long ago I came across the Alvin Committee Report of 1979. The Alvin Committee did extensive research into the existence of dinosaurs in the 42nd parallel and came to a shocking conclusion: there is no food in the 42nd parallel. So the dinosaurs are coming back. The Alvin Committee also reported that dinosaurs are very distressed by our use of their remains in automobiles, power plants, plastics and so on.

This report is important in understanding why we cannot allow a dinosaur gap to affect our nuclear stock piles. Atomic missiles are the only known weapon effective against such a beast. We must stop left wing pinko Communists from aiding the dinosaur's crusade to exterminate us all.

I am also shocked that Mr. Robblee has the audacity to suggest that religion was the dinosaur's "most important" cultural achievement. If the dinosaurs existed before Christ they could have been nothing other than devil worshippers. It is a well known fact that if a person can transcend his or her body, he or she is most surely a Satan worshipper. One sickens at the thought of dinosaurs dancing naked around a fire praising the Prince of Darkness. I can only cry when I think of the way dinosaur teachers corrupted innocent young children's pure and sinless souls with their satanic filth. We need more weapons! In the name of God the dinosaurs must be stopped!

Eric Coakley Northampton

Watching the Mullins 'morons'?

On Sunday afternoon, while using a radio spectrum analyzer to identify the security communications frequencies in use at the new Mullins Center (for inclusion in a new regional frequency directory), I came across a most revealing conversation between two security personnel.

A male and a female officer were involved. After they moved their operations to "Channel 2", and the male guard had offered the female guard the hospitality of his apartment after the open house, the following remarks were made:

MALE SECURITY GUARD: It gets pretty boring watching all these morons milling around the place.

FEMALE SECURITY GUARD: I know. But it's a good money maker. You taught me well.

I'm sure the 15,000 "morons" who showed up to celebrate the dedication of the new Mullins Center might have something to say about the level of regard in which they are held by Mullins security personnel.

Considering that our "moronic" tax dollars financed this facility, through generous grants of the sate legislature, at a time when other University budgets were starving to death, such a snide and cynical attitude toward the public on the part of Mullins personnel is particularly irritating.

It might be wise for all radio-bearing personnel to remember that their conversations take place on open public frequencies, and can be heard by anyone with a cheap Radio Shack scanner at a distance of several miles. Derogatory comments about the public, especially a public as well-behaved and enthusiastic as this gathering of "morons", do not place either Mullins management, Mullins security, or the place itself in a very positive light.

Dave Drake Beauvais KB1F Radio, Amherst

State funding for education said unconstitutional

By ROBERT W. TROTT
Associated Press

BOSTON — The state and the plaintiffs agreed that lawmakers should make sure Massachusetts children receive adequate educations, but they differed over whether the state constitution mandates it.

The Supreme Judicial Court heard oral arguments Tuesday in a 15-year-old lawsuit, now called McDuffy vs. Robertson, that challenges the state's reliance on local property taxes to fund education.

The state funds about 25 percent of the total education cost, half the national average of 50 percent, according to the plainfiffs. Proposition 2 1/2 forbids communities from raising property taxes more than 2 1/2 percent without an override vote.

Michael Weisman, lead lawyer for the 19 plaintiffs, told the justices that using property taxes to fund education is unconstitutional because students in poor districts have a distinct disadvantage because their schools can't afford up-to-date textbooks and resources, have larger classrooms and underpaid teachers.

"Children in many communities are not receiving a meaningful chance to learn to read," Weisman said.

Filed in 1978, the case was revived in 1990 after the state, responding to the economic recession and state fiscal problems, cut local aid payments to cities and towns.

Weisman urged the SJC to rule that the state has an "enforceable duty" to provide equal education opportunities. Then, he said, the courts should order the Legislature to come up with a fair system.

"The court could provide substantial guidance to the Legislature," he said.

Architects of the Massachusetts constitution, particularly John Adams, wrote that the state has a "duty to cherish" education. "they meant that it was necessary for the preservation of liberties," Weisman said.

"Children in many communities are not receiving a meaningful chance to learn to read."

Michael Weisman, attorney

Assistant state attorney general Douglas Wilkins countered that use of the word "duty" did not require state action. Massachusetts has a "political duty, a moral duty, but not a legal duty" under the state constitution to provide "an adequate education" to the state's children, he said.

Citing hikes in state education spending in recent years. Wilkins said "there is definitely an attempt to address these concerns" by the Legislature and the Weld administration.

Gov. William Weld, in announcing his fiscal 1994 budget last week, omitted a planned increase in education spending, saying he would not earmark the money until the system is reformed.

The SJC gave no indication when it would hand down a ruling.

The 19 Massachusetts districts involved in the lawsuit are Belchertown, Berkley, Brockton, Carver, Hanson, Holyoke, Leicester, Lowell, Lynn, Rockland, Rowley, Springfield, Whiman, Whitman-Hanson, Winchendon, Lawrence, Salisbury, Worcester and Revere.

Results of the similar lawsuits in other states have been mixed. The Texas Supreme Court barred any education spending after June 1 unless that state's funding system, which relies heavily on property taxes, is reformed.

Tennessee and Montana also are awaiting court rulings. Kentucky's high court ruled that reliance on property taxes was unconstitutional there, and New Jersey lawmakers reformed their education system in time to head off an unfavorable court decision.

Last week the House passed education reform legislation that includes a new formula that its sponsor, Rep. Mark Roosevelt, cochair of the education communities pay roughly the same per pupil after seven years.

Weisamn said the bill, which now is before the Senate Ways and Means Committee, "will not come close" to providing equal education for all children because it still relies on property taxes.

Noting the state's history of waiting for court action before acting on important matters such as school desegregation and the Boston Harbor cleanup — Roosevelt, D-Boston said, "I certainly understand what he's trying to say. . . if I were him I'd be cynical too."

THIS SPRING BREAK TELL YOUR PARENTS YOU WANT TO STUDY PRIMITIVE CULTURES.

The sun worshiping. The primitive dances. The mating rituals. The primal screams. Only one beach can hold this much culture on its 23-mile sandy stretch. This Spring Break, head for Daytona Beach. For more information, call 1-800-854-1234 for your free Spring Break Planning Kit.

Daytona Beach — BIG BEACH. BIG FUN. BIG BREAK.

4 Seasons "A New Family Owned Business"
Rte. 9 • Hadley • 584-8174
Between Burger King & Dunkin Donuts

DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE

KEGS
MILW, BEST .....32.90+dep
Natural LT.....32.90+dep
BUSCH.....38.99+dep
Lite • M.G.D • M.G.D LT.....38.99+dep

BUD DRY 24 Bar Bottles $10.99 +dep
4 Seasons VODKA 1.75L $8.99 +dep
MILLER 24-12 oz cans $9.99 +dep
M.D. 20/20 All Flavors $2.00 750 ml
PURPLE PASSION 2 0L $3.50
BUSCH & LIGHT 24/12oz. CANS $9.99 +dep
4 Seasons RUM 1.75L $10.49 + dep
AMERICAN KOCH's GOLDEN NARRAGANSETT 24/12 oz. CANS $7.29 + dep
SOUTHERN COMFORT $7.99 750 ml
$7.99 375 ml JAGERMEISTER
Tired of Stores with BAD ATTITUDES? At 4 Seasons you'll be treated with GRATITUDE!!! And... WE DELIVER
HADLEY ICE
10 LBS - 50 LBS 10¢ LB
50 LBS - 100 LBS 9¢ LB
100+ LBS 8¢ LB
Cheapest Ice Prices in W. MASS!!!

HOURS: Mon-Sat 9-11 • Delivery Mon-Sat Late Afternoon/Evenings
Keg Deposits Held Up To 30 Days on VISA/MC/CHECK/CASH

Indicted lawmaker blasts laws

By EVE EPSTEIN
Associated Press

BOSTON (AP) — A former state lawmaker called state conflict of interest laws "confusing and vague" in response to his indictment for allegedly benefiting indirectly from state contracts.

Former state Sen. William Q. MacLean Jr., a seven-term Democrat from Fairhaven, retired last month. He faces two indictments, including allegations he received $278,000 through an indirect link to the sale of public employee retirement savings plans. Both indictments mention business dealings that involved former Attorney General Edward J. McCormack Jr.

MacLean indicated in a statement released by his attorney Tuesday that he is prepared to settle the misdemeanor charges with the attorney general's office, but he defended his actions.

"Nothing in the charges contradicts what I have always said," MacLean said. "I never knowingly or intentionally violated any conflict of interest law."

Any settlement would be subject to court approval. Attorney General Scott Harshbarger's office was still working out an arraignment date Tuesday.

The charges against MacLean carry a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a fine of $3,000 on each indictment.

Harshbarger said the conflict of interest law "is designed to ensure that public servants obey only one master, and that is the public."

In his statement, MacLean noted that he sought advice. "More than any other legislator, I repeatedly sought guidance on how to conduct my private business without violating the public trust," he said.

Harshbarger acknowledged that MacLean had relied on opinions by prior attorney generals and the state Ethics Commission in conducting business related to the marketing of deferred compensation plans to cities, towns and counties. But he said he was fully satisfied that the state could successfully prosecute the case on the basis of alleged indirect benefits from state employee sales.

One indictment alleges that MacLean had an unlawful indirect financial interest in Fairhaven Village, a partnership formed by McCormack to develop, construct and manage a housing development.

Fairhaven Village was financed in 1979 by the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency, a state agency.

The indictment alleges that McCormack formed a realty trust in 1981, whose sole beneficiary was MacLean's wife, Marjorie, and that McCormack deposited $440,000, or half the development fees from Fairhaven Village, into Sky High Realty Trust between 1982 and 1989.

Although the indictment does not indicate how much money MacLean received from that account, the state alleges he received some economic benefit from it.

Harshbarger's office also alleged that Maclean received $278,000 related to commissions earned by another firm run by McCormack, Pilgrim Insurance Ageny (PEBSCOMass.), which agreed to pay Pilgrim a percentage of commissions it received from the sales of a deferred compensation plan to state and local public employees.

Though MacLean did not provide services in connection with the marketing of the plan to state workers, Harshbarger alleged he received the money from Pilgrim in connection with the state employee sales.

News reports had raised questions about MacLean's role in winning passage of a bill in 1981 allowing PEBSCO to expand its business in Massachusetts by pitching its service to local governments.

Questions were also raised in newspaper account about MacLean's dealings with Aetna Life & Casualty Co., but the firm was not mentioned in these indictments.

MATTHEW J. SIMONEAU / COLLEGIAN
FIND THE VEIN — Matthew McKibben, undeclared, is prepared by Red Cross nurse JoAnn Howard to donate a pint of blood.

Smith office staff seeks to unionize

NORTHAMPTON (AP) — Saying they want more respect, a group of secretaries and other office workers at Smith College are seeking to unionize.

"Smith College is all about empowering women," said Nancy Slator, a spokeswoman for the union organizing committee at the women's college. "The issue that comes up is respect and being able to take control of our own work lives the way Smith wants its students to."

Slator, a secretary to the dean of faculty, said most of the 350 workers at the school targeted by the organization are women.

She said no date has been set for an organizing election, but the workers are talking about the possibility of affiliation with District 925 of the Service Employees International Union. The union already represents custodial workers and housekeeping and dining hall employees.

Smith President Mary Maple Dunn called the college a "very good employer, not an exploitative one."

"I feel I respect our workforce a lot and have tried to give them an increasing voice in management" decisions, Dunn said.

Tax return clears Silber

BOSTON (AP) — A purported income tax return showing Boston University President John Silber profited from BU's sale of Seradyn Inc. apparently was an inaccurate rough draft, university officials say.

The form was later rewritten to correct confusion over whether Silber exercised an option to buy shares of the bio-technology firm, the official university newspaper reported. The newspaper, Boston University Today, said Silber never bought any shares.

There have been reports that Silber made $386,700 when Seradyn was sold in 1989. He has denied the stories, but the state's attorney general is investigating several financial transactions at BU.

Silber was offered the chance to buy 200 shares of Seradyn for $28,000, the newspaper said. It said he declined.

But one of several drafts of the president's 1989 tax return "showed what the preparers inaccurately believed to be the case-that he had invested in Seradyn," the newspaper said in a front-page defense of Silber.

A copy of the allegedly mistaken income tax form was published in the Boston Herald last month.

"The document presented as being Silber's tax return is still false," university spokesman Kevin Carleton said Wednesday. "It is not his tax return."

He said the document was never filed with the Internal Revenue Service.

Boston University Today, which is published by the school's administration, said attacks on Silber have been "inspired by personal animosity or other considerations."

■ trial

continued from page 1

The officers are charged in the videotaped beating of King after he was chased and stopped for speeding on March 3, 1991. Wind, a rookie who was still on probation, was fired after the beating; the others have been suspended since then.

The officers' federal trial opened a year after they went on trial on assault charges in state court in the mostly White suburb of Simi Valley. Verdicts last April acquitting them of most charges triggered deadly riots. More than 50 people died and $1 billion in damage was done.

Fill this space.
Write for the Collegian.
113 Campus Center 545–3500

Recycle this Collegian. It's the right thing to do.

Pearl Street

DANCE CLUB

Wednesday -
DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R.
Feb. 10 - Gay Valentines Party - Win a Romantic Weekend Getaway to Boston, Other Prizes/ Feb. 17 - Mardis Gras Party/ Masquerade Ball - Prizes for Best Costume, Giveaways All Night

Thursday - WHMP EIGHTEEN & OVER DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R.
WHMP's Ann Spenner Broacasting Live

Friday -
DANCING WITH DJ JEFF
Playing the Best Dance Music
• Free Admission Before 10pm•
••Free All Night With College ID••
Ladies Night-Ladies Get In Free All Night

Fri. Feb. 5 - FOODIES NIGHT
Free Pizza All Night Courtesy of Foodies

Saturday -
THE AREAS BIGGEST & BEST SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY WITH DJ DAVE
Featuring The Best Dance Hits From The 70's, 80's & 90's
Mt. Tom Ski Pass Giveaways

Sat. Feb. 13 - WMAS VALENTINES PARTY
Win a Romantic Weekend Getaway to Vermont, Flowers For Every Couple, Chocolate Hearts Courtesy of Ben & Bills, Other Giveaways All Night - Listen to WMAS For Details.

LIVE MUSIC

Thurs., Feb. 4-9:00pm/18+
Led Zep Tribute
PHYSICAL GRAFFITI

FRI., Feb. 5-9:00pm
Free Rock Friday
U2 Tribute Band
RATTLE & HUM
Free Before 10:00pm
Free All Night w/College I.D.

Sat., Feb. 6-9:00pm/WRSI/
Live & Unplugged
JAMES COTTON
featuring Luther Tucker & David Maxwell
WILDCAT O'HALLARAN

Mon., Feb. 8-8:00pm/18+/
WIDESPREAD PANIC

Thurs., Feb. 11-9:00pm/18+/
MURPHY'S LAW
Patchwork Revolution

Mon., Feb. 15-9:00pm/18+/
THELONIOUS MONSTER

Thurs., Feb. 18-9:00pm/18+/
SHOCKRA
Jiggle The Handle

Fri., Feb. 19-9:00pm
TEXAS FLOOD

Sat., Feb. 20-9:00pm
EIGHT TO THE BAR

Thurs., Feb. 25-9:00pm/18+/
BIM SKALA BIM

Fri., Feb. 26-7:00pm
THE SIGHS

Sat., Mar. 6-9:00pm
JOHN CAFFERTY & THE BEAVER BROWN BAND

Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Box Office, For The Record in Amherst; Ticket Pro (800) 828-7080
10 Pearl Street Northampton 584-7771

■ pesticides

continued from page 5

risk. The court overturned an EPA interpretation that allowed exceptions for amount the agency believes pose negligible risk.

An appeal by the Grocery Manufaturers Association is pending with the Supreme Court. If the court refuses to hear the case, EPA will be forced to ban the pesticides, agency officials said.

Browner said she will work with Congress on laws governing food safety, but was noncommittal on whether she would support new standards that would allow minimal risks from pesticides. Such standards have been part of bills sponsored by Democrats that would otherwise tighten pesticide regulation.

"All options for improving food safety remain under review," Browner said.

In its action Tuesday, EPA said it also was seeking public comment on whether it should extend the ban to raw produce that contains the pesticides and whether products used as animal feed rather than human food should be included in the ban.

Sometimes, late at night - at around 3 a.m. - I start hearing noises. They aren't normal, certainly not human, but I hear them just the same. They call to me... no, they haunt me. Sometimes I can't handle it anymore and I start to scream at the noises. "Stop it! Leave me alone!" But then the noises get louder and the pitch gets higher. "Aaaggghhh! Please no! Make them go away!" Then, on the table next to the ruler and the proportion scale I see an X-Acto knife. The noises say, "Give us the knife." And sometimes, just to make them stop, I take the blade and force it into the part of my head where the noises come from. It hurts, but the noises stop and I can sleep.

Romantic Relationships & You

The Dynamics of Romantic Relationships

Spring Semester Course, 1993

If you believe, as I do, that one of the most important decisions that you make determining the quality of your life, is who you choose as a romantic partner, then you may be interested in this course.

It is devoted to the issues of:

Compatibility (who we choose & why)

Understanding the forces that formed our personalities, and

Gaining clarity as to how we can best realize our romantic hopes & needs.

If you have a personal history of picking the wrong partner, or have difficulty with commitment and/or intimacy - including not knowing how to begin a romantic relationship, this course may be of use to you, whether you regard yourself as straight or gay.

You should know that this is NOT a University course, and carries no credit. It will be held on campus, Thursdays, 1:00-3:30PM, and will run for ten weeks from Feb. 11, through April 19, 1993. This course will be taught by Bill Griffith who holds a Masters Degree and a Certificate of Advanced Graduate Study in Education, and who maintains a private therapy practice with a special interest in couples work.

Registration is on a first-come-first-serve basis. The course fee is $50.00.

For more information, or to register, call (413) 436-7836.

PUT US TO THE TEST.

SSAT • PSAT • SAT • ACHIEVEMENTS • ACT • LSAT • GMAT • GRE • MCAT • DAT • GRE PSYCH • GRE BIO • OAT • TOEFL • NMB • NDB • NCLEX-RN • MSKP • FMGEMS • FLEX • CGFNS • CPA • BAR EXAM • NTE

If you have to take one of these tests, take Kaplan first. Our students get the highest scores. We've proven it to over one million students. Let us prove it to you

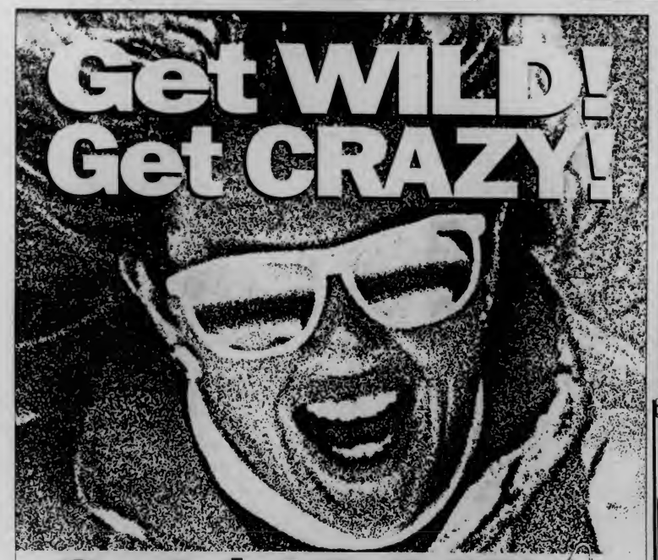
KAPLAN

The answer to the test question

New Location: 150 Fearing Street

549-5780

Get WILD! Get CRAZY!



Get $10 Off!

Stratton has a lower price for anyone pursuing a higher education. $24 midweek. $29 weekends. $34 holidays. So you can save $10 every day but holidays (when you'll still save $5), and you'll also get up to 92 exciting trails, a 12-passenger gondola, plus all the extracurricular fun you can handle. Now, how's that for financial aid?

Current and identifiably valid college photo ID required at time of purchase. If your college ID has no photo, please provide other photo ID. Sorry — no pix, no tix.

Stratton VERMONT COLLEGE DISCOUNT

© Stratton Corporation 1992

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL OF AMERICA

If you are over 18, and would like to earn Full Time Income Working Part Time Be a Bartender

- Day/Evening / Week
- Local/National Placement
- Limited Openings Remain For March and April Classes
- Make Your Move Today and Receive Additional Savings on Tuition Fees

Call Today! 747-9888 • 1655 Main St., Suite 202 • Springfield MC/VISA/AE

Cooking at your table

SPECIAL

Tues.-Wed.-Thurs.-Fri. & all day Sunday

Two Dinners for $15

Steak& Chicken Combo

Two Dinners for $18.00

Shrimp & Scallop Combo

Both include soup, salad, vegetables, noodles, steamed rice, tea, & ice cream

Full Bar • Exotic Specialties

Goten OF JAPAN

Gift Certificates Available

Rt. 116, Sunderland 413-665-3628

Open Tues.-Sat. at 5pm, Sun at 2

Reservations welcomed

JOHN MCKENNA / COLLEGIAN

BRAVING THE WINDS — Telephone linesman Cheryl Stevens makes sure the citizens of Shutesbury can reach out and touch someone.

Doctors say recycling can help the heartless

BOSTON (AP) — Surgeons worried about the shortage of hearts available for transplants have found one solution — recycling.

In a medical journal report, they describe an unusual case in which a heart transplant patient died a few days after his operation. Doctors took out his new heart and put it into another patient.

As a result, one heart has beat inside three different people.

Hearts are in critically short supply. In the United States, about 2,000 patients need new hearts each month, but only 100 operations are done because of the lack of hearts for transplants.

The recycling approach was tried by doctors from University Hospital Zurich in Switzerland.

"This extraordinary case suggests an unorthodox method of alleviating the organ shortage," wrote Dr. Miralem Pasic and others in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors acknowledged that recycling is unlikely to make much impact on the shortage, since transplant patients rarely die suddenly with still-healthy hearts.

"Nonetheless, it is interesting to note that this twice transplanted heart functioned well in three people," the doctors commented.

The heart came from a 20-year-old man who had shot himself in the head. First, doctors implanted the heart into a 47-year-old man with a failing heart. The surgery went well, but the patient suddenly suffered a stroke five days after the operation and died a week later.

Tests showed the heart was still healthy. So the doctors asked another patient on the hospital's waiting list if he wanted it. This patient, a 58-year-old man, agreed, and the operation went smoothly.

A year later, this patient — the third owner of the heart — "is fully active, without limitations on his daily activity," the doctors wrote.

Bacteria linked to ulcers

BOSTON (AP) — A new study provides some of the strongest evidence yet that bacterial infections are a major cause of recurring digestive ulcers.

In recent years, researchers have found that people with peptic ulcers are often infected with a germ called H. pylori. While many authorities now accept the idea that the bugs cause ulcers, some doubts remained.

To help settle the issue, Austrian doctors studied 104 people who were infected with H. pylori and had suffered at least two recurrences of duodenal ulcers. They were randomly assigned to take ranitidine, a common ulcer medicine, or ranitidine plus antibiotics.

Ulcers initially healed in 92 percent of those who got antibiotics and 75 percent of those who did not. After one year, the ulcers had come back in 8 percent of the antibiotic patients and 86 percent of those in the comparison group.

"Our results support the concept of a cause-and-effect relationship between H. pylori infection and recurrent duodenal ulcer," wrote Dr. Enno Hentschel and colleagues from Hanusch Hospital in Vienna.

In an accompanying editorial in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. David Y. Graham of the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Houston said that wiping out the germ changes the natural history of ulcers.

"The disease is cured, and the risk of recurrence is virtually eliminated," he wrote.

Graham said that H. pylori is the leading cause of ulcers. Most others are caused by the use of nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs. Another far less common culprit is conditions that cause too much acid secretion,such as an ailment called Zollinger-Ellison syndrome.

Graham said the most common treatment for the disease in the United states is a combination of two antibiotics — tetracycline and metronidazloe — plus busmuth subsalicylate.

"Do I Have a Case?"

The attorneys at your Legal Services Center can answer fee-paying UMass student's questions on a wide variety of legal problems, including:

Housing, Criminal, University-related, Civil Rights, Consumer, Labor, Family, Personal Injury, and more

"Do I Need a Lawyer?"

The LSC is your first source of law-related assistance. Located in room 922 of the Campus Center, the LSC is open Monday through Friday, 9am to 5pm. Please call 545-1995 or drop by to make an appointment.

In Honor of Black History Month

AN ORIGINAL MUSICAL PLAY BY JAMES CHAPMAN

"One of the best plays in New York." -Vilage Noice

"...engageing....outstanding....excellent by any standard." - City Sun

"...absolutely superb! Never have I seen a large audience so thoroughly captivated by a series of scenes." - Youngstown State University

Sponsored by BMCP • February 9th, 8pm

$3.00 5-College Students • $5.00 General Public

Bowker Auditorium

THE BOSTON GLOBE ON CAMPUS AT 50% OFF!

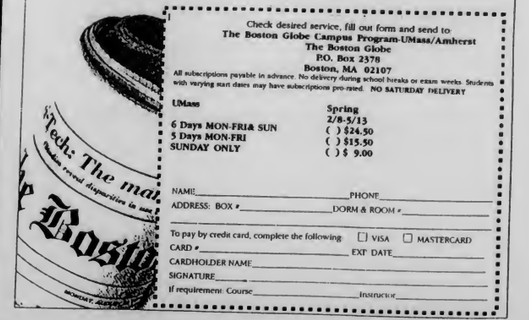
That's right.. you can get The Boston Globe delivered on campus at a huge 50% off the regular price!

That means you're paying less for New England's best newspaper and an indispensable guide to what's happening in and around Boston, the nation and all around the world.

All that.....at half price! To start receiving The Boston Globe on campus, all semester long, call : 1-800-858-4275



Check desired service, fill out form and send to:
The Boston Globe Campus Program-UMass/Amherst
The Boston Globe
P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107

All subscriptions payable in advance. No delivery during school breaks or exam weeks. Students with varying start dates may have subscriptions pro-rated. NO SATURDAY DELIVERY

UMass	Spring 2/8-5/13
6 Days MON-FRI& SUN	( ) $24.50
5 Days MON-FRI	( ) $15.50
SUNDAY ONLY	( ) $ 9.00

NAME_____ PHONE_____

ADDRESS: BOX #_____ DORM & ROOM #_____

_____

To pay by credit card, complete the following: ☐ VISA ☐ MASTERCARD

CARD #_____ EXP. DATE_____

CARDHOLDER NAME_____

SIGNATURE_____

If requirement: Course_____ Instructor_____

■ Bird

continued from page 16

should have his own month, because it would take a good 30 days just to recognize him for all his accomplishments.

Not only did he turn around the fortunes of a sagging Celtic franchise, but he, along with Magic Johnson, made the NBA the media and marketing giant it is today.

You wouldn't know it by looking at him. He looks more like someone who would accidentally shoot someone else during deer season than like one of the greatest players in the history of professional basketball.

Bird grew up in a rural, make that very rural, town in Indiana called French Lick. One of several children, Bird grew up in absolute poverty. Basketball was his only avenue out of destitution. And he almost didn't make it.

After dropping out of Indiana, he eventually enrolled at Indiana State University and led the Sycamores to the NCAA championship game. Bird then went on, as everyone knows, to the Celtics, where he won the NBA Rookie of the Year award for the 1979-80 season.

In the course of four years, LB went from being a trash collector to the next great player in the league. That's a bigger turnaround than the Dallas Cowboys.

Bird took off the moment he stepped on an NBA court. He was on a mission. He was out to prove himself to everyone who doubted whether or not he had the goods to be a pro.

All Bird did to prove everyone wrong was to guide the Celtics to three NBA titles (1980-81, 83-84, and 85-86), twice picking up the finals MVP (84 and 86), win three league MVP awards (1984-86), go to 11 All-Star games (winning the game MVP in 1982), led the league in free-throw percentage four times (84, 86-87, and 90), won a gold medal as a member of the Dream Team this past summer, scored over 22,000 points, and grabbed over 10,000 rebounds in a most glorious career.

My apologies if I left anything out.

Larry Bird was the consummate example of the overachiever. He worked tirelessly to perfect every facet of his game. He arrived at practice early and was the last one to leave.

The thought of somebody else working harder than him did not sit well with Bird. Red Auerbach called him the most self-motivated player he had ever been around, and Red's been known to have been around many great ball players.

Bird once said, "It makes me sick when I see a guy just watching it go out of bounds." That's the kind of player Bird was- diving, clawing, and scratching to chase down a loose ball headed for the seats.

There may not have been a greater clutch player than Larry Bird. He lived for the pressure of taking the last shot with the game in the balance. Just give the ball to Larry, get out of his way, and chalk it up as another Celtic victory. A few of his amazing moments:

Playoffs of 1988. After escaping the Omni with a victory over the Atlanta Hawks in Game Six, Bird guaranteed victory in Game Seven at the Boston Garden. In one of the most celebrated quarters in basketball history, Bird scored 28 points in the fourth to defeat Dominique Wilkins (22 fourth-quarter points) and the Hawks.

Playoffs of 1987, Game Five. Trailing the Detroit Pistons by one with five seconds left and defeat imminent, Bird somehow stole Isiah Thomas' inbounds pass and got it to Dennis Johnson for the game-winning lay-up with no time left.

All-Star Weekend, 1990. In the three-point shoot-out, Bird needed to hit his last shot to win the contest. Bird let it fly and walked away with his crooked index finger raised in triumph. He never looked back at the hoop. Swish.

Larry, enjoy your night, you are sadly missed.

Sean P. Hayden is a Collegian correspondent

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Exercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

The Collegian Sports Desk.
A crack team of athletic experts whose combined decades of experience and well-honed writing skills are at your disposal five days a week. Read them often and read them carefully. Only in the Collegian.

SPORTS NOTICE

From the Intramural office: Squash deadline extended. Enter now for men's and women's leagues. It is not too late to put together your Intramural 5-on-5 Basketball team. Thursday league still being formed.

Wrestling officials and Fit for Life instructors are still needed. For further info, call the intramural office 5-2693.

There will be a field hockey meeting on Monday, Feb. 8 at 4 p.m. in Boyden 117.

Tickets for Thursday night's men's basketball West Virginia game and Saturday's Rutgers game will be given out Thursday morning starting at 7 a.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage. No lines will be formed before 6:30 a.m. and there will be over 4,000 student tickets, twice as many as were given out in the Cage.

Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586 5726
213 MAIN ST

SON OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586 1707
21 STATE ST
NORTHAMPTON

BANANARAMA Fabulous Frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

INDEX
YEARBOOK
General Meeting
Monday, February 8, 6:30 p.m.
304 Student Union
ALL WELCOME
ORDER YOUR 1993 INDEX NOW!
A 300+ page copy with full color sections for only $30!
Send coupon to address below and watch for us on the Concourse!
Make checks payable to: INDEX Yearbook
NAME _____
PERMANENT ADDRESS _____
LOCAL PHONE # _____
INDEX, 304 Student Union
UMass, Amherst, MA 01003
545-0848

BMCP & UPC PRODUCTIONS present
BRAND NUBIAN
PositiveK
DOUBLE XPOSSE
DIAMOND & THE PSYCHOTIC NEUROTICS
feb 17th 1993
S.U.B UMASS Amherst doors open 7:30
tix: $10 umass $13 other
17+ ONLY (unless accompanied by an adult) available at: Tix Unlimited & For The Record in Amherst

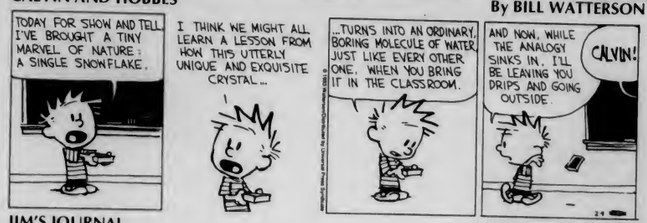
CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON



JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Quote of the Day

"Grandpa died and was resurrected after three days, but no one called him the Son of God; they just said, "Hey, that's Gramps.."

– Steve Martin

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be prepared to deal with heavier responsibilities this month. Your ability to adapt quickly stands you in good stead. Teamwork puts you in a positive frame of mind.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stay out of the spotlight today. Making full use of your social and business contacts will help you get the jump on your competitors. Family problems require tactful handling.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A gift in the mail will get the day off to a flying start. Influential people are willing to give your ideas a hearing. Do your homework. Your exuberance leads to achievement.

CANCER (June 21-July 20): The time is right for seeking a property loan or doing your tax returns. Win favors through private channels. Make play and relaxation part of your evening agenda.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The aura of success surrounds you now. You can expect a favorable response from those in a position to fulfill your needs. Health matters return to the spotlight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A project you have been counting on could be threatened by last minute delays. Seek help from someone who can pull this one out of the hat for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have excellent instincts about the best way to impress VIPs and pull financial strings. Pursue your aims on a confidential basis. Be firm with friends who may not see things your way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Creative ideas flow, enhancing your chances for advancement. Try to limit the time you spend on routine tasks. The domestic scene is tranquil.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Traveling with someone close to you could have a significant impact on your work or business. A friendship is exhilarating. Take a deeper look at what is happening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Candid conversations prove enlightening. You are attuned to other people's wishes and able to accomplish a lot. The friends you make today can help you with a major project.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It is easier to get your plans approves by business associates or higher-ups today. Use charm and your powers of persuasion. A good evening to catch up on your correspondence.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Activities linked to home life are favored. Your co-workers could decide to join forces with you.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

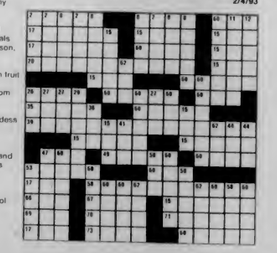
ACROSS
1 Section of Tel Aviv
6 Borscht base
10 Dieter's last resort?
13 Teasers?
15 Eight Comb. form
16 Danson of "Cheers"
17 Fast
18 Exam
19 Blushing
20 Indian warrior
22 Sheep
23 Card game
24 Tear
26 "— Spake Zarathustra"
30 Very fast
34 Eight homophone
35 Ancient region of Asia Minor
37 Restacts
39 Actor's dream
45 Obfuscate
46 Artistic style
47 Soup or shooter
49 Mode
52 Red chalcedony
53 Exceed
55 DDE's command
57 Royal initials
58 O.J. Simpson, was one
66 Uris hero
67 Blackthorn fruit
68 Up
69 Kind of room: Abbr.
70 Burden
71 Moon goddess
72 Hesitant sounds
73 Singer Merriman and namesakes
74 Ice shoe

DOWN
1 Chinese idol
2 Opponent
3 Decree
4 Lee or Knox
5 Blacksmith's need
6 Schmo
7 Tan
8 Catchall abbr.
9 Bridge fees
10 Right-of-way
11 Baseball's Reese
12 Put 2 and 2 together
14 Madrid mister
21 Gazelle of Tibet
25 Gives
26 "My country, —"
27 Just off the press
28 Actress Merkel
29 "Arabian Nights" sailor
31 Entertainer Lee
32 Wedding words
33 Half of MVIII
36 Lemon or lime enhancer
38 Child's game
40 No —, ands, or buts
41 "Wayne's World" word
42 — twinkling instantly
43 Bruins' Bobby
44 Composer Florem
47 Socks, at times
48 Rules of conduct
50 Garland
51 Lab vessels
53 Chicago's airport
54 Welles
56 Grimm characters
59 Arm bone
60 Part of speech
61 Costner role
62 Swindle
63 On the briny
64 Copper
65 Word with high or deep

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

S	A	B	E	R		S	H	O	P	M	I	M	E
T	R	U	R	O		I	O	N	A	D	D	E	R
A	L	S	A	S		C	L	O	U	D	L	E	S	S
N	O		B	A	K	E	D		A	L	A	S	K	A
			S	E	V	E	N		H	A	I	R
C	L	E	A	R	A	N	C	E		U	N	C	U	T
R	O	B	U	S	T		A	R	A	M		U	N	O
I	R	E		A	P	R	E	S		A	I	T	Y
E	R	A		J	O	S		S	O	R	T	I	E
D	E	T	E	R		C	L	E	A	R	E	Y	E	D
			N	O	L	A		L	I	O	S
S	A	D	D	A	M		I	D	L	E		R	U	G
C	L	O	U	D	N	I	N	E		R	A	I	S	E
A	M	O	R		O	N	O	R		E	X	C	E	L
M	A	M	E		P	A	N	S		O	L	E	O	S

2/4/93



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Copy Editor ..... Michelle Robbins
PhotoTechnician ..... Aram Comjean
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Jim Ganley, Amanda Mead, Sean Ramsey, Mike Carvalho

Menu

LUNCH
Broccoli Casserole
Chicken Pucks
BASICS LUNCH
Garden Sandwich
Chicken Pucks

DINNER
Fried Shrimp
Chinese Beef
BASICS DINNER
Fried Shrimp
Stuffed Peppers

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

EXCLUSIVELY FOR STUDENT CARDMEMBERS

We're here for you.

It seems wherever you go, there we are. Offering a helping hand whenever you need one, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Helping you to stretch your budget with special savings when you fly, shop, call long distance, and now, even when you ski.

As the official Card of Killington, home of some of the greatest skiing in the East, we're happy to bring you a free one-day ski pass just for using the American Express® Card to purchase a Killington ExtraCredit card.

The ExtraCredit card allows you to get 40% off the regular price of each additional one-day ski pass when you ski Killington.*

It's just a small part of our commitment to be there for you, all the way. The fact is, we want to do all we can to make Cardmembership as rewarding as possible for you.

So consider the offer below a glimpse of the good things to come. We know you're going places in life. And we hope you'll take us with you.

We'll get you to the top of the mountain with a free ski pass. How you get down is your business.

To get a free one-day ski pass, courtesy of American Express, simply purchase the Killington ExtraCredit card using the American Express Card.*

The ExtraCredit card costs $25 and entitles you to purchase a Killington one-day ski pass, valid on all six interconnected mountains, for only $25 each day, Sunday-Friday (non-holiday), through May 1, 1993. That's a savings of 40% off the regular price!

Call Killington Travel Service toll-free, at 1-800-372-2007, to sign up for the ExtraCredit card today. Have the American Express Card ready. Your voucher, redeemable for the bonus ski pass, will arrive with the ExtraCredit card. Please allow two weeks for delivery.

To get the Killington ExtraCredit card and voucher good for a free one-day ski pass, simply return the coupon below or call now: 1-800-372-2007.

Fill in information below, tear out and mail to:
Killington, RR1 Box 2450, Killington, VT 05751-9975. Attn: ExtraCredit card

Name
Address
City State Zip
Phone Number
School
American Express® Card Number
Expiration Date
Signature

If you're not an American Express Cardmember, call 1-800-942-AMEX today to apply.

* ExtraCredit card restrictions: Offer valid for full-time college students 18-24 years old only. ExtraCredit card is non-transferable, and only one ski pass per day may be purchased. A current college identification card and valid photo ID must be presented at Killington when you purchase your one-day ski pass.

©1993 American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc.

Cards

AMERICAN EXPRESS IS THE OFFICIAL CARD OF KILLINGTON.

Men's gym improving every meet

By ANDREW BRYCE
Collegian Correspondent

When a team is going through a rebuilding process, the one attribute a coach looks for is improvement. University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics coach Roy Johnson is seeing just that.

The first meet of the season for the Minutemen was the UMass Open, held on Dec. 2, where they finished second to the talented Syracuse Orangemen. The Minutemen finished ahead of Temple, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Southern Connecticut.

Next up was the West Point Open on Jan. 8, where UMass finished tenth out of thirteen teams from around the country. Then, it competed in the Windy City Invitational on Jan. 16, where the Minutemen again finished tenth out of 13 teams.

This past weekend, UMass visited Navy and defeated the Midshipmen in their first Eastern Interscholastic Gymnastics League meet, 239.55-234.05. Junior Jason Braud garnered two first place finishes, one in the floor exercise (9.40) and one in the vault (9.10).

Senior captain Steve Christensen tied his own school record of 9.65 in the pommel horse, and freshman Andy Fulmer finished second in the vault (9.05).

"We started off kind of slowly," said sophomore Tim Smith, who sat out his freshman year with a shoulder injury. "With a younger team, that is normal. By the end of the season, we should have a pretty good team."

"We should do fairly well," said sophomore Stu Bacher. "We have the potential to do the same as we did last year." Last season, the Minutemen won eight out of 11 meets.

With four starters back from last year's team (Christensen, Braud, Joe Santos, and Bacher), and the addition of young, talented competitors like Fulmer, UMass can only get better. The Minutemen realize that they have improved since day one, yet the improvement cannot end here.

"We've had a definite improvement since the beginning of the year," said Christensen. "However, we have lots of room for improvement — 10 to 20 points."

UMass assistant coach Stan Gatland agrees. "Yes, we have improved quite a bit, yet there is a lot of improving to do."

According to Gatland, the stronger events for the Minutemen include vaulting, led by Braud and Fulmer, and the parallel bars, headed by Christensen and Santos. Bacher is the UMass standout on the rings.

Coach Johnson has given his UMass Minutemen team three goals to strive for.

"To win the New England Championship for a fifth straight year, to finish in the top half of the EIGL, and, to have two or three guys make it to the Eastern Regionals held in Illinois, and one or two guys in the Nationals, which are held in New Mexico," said Johnson.

Collegian Sports. Bringing you coverage of UMass Athletics, in all their various incarnations, since 1890.

UMASS Owes Amherst $203,000
DEAD BEAT?
UMass can absorb a $203,000 loss as a corporation could, but can't repeat that % of fee increase as a single year. Sincerely, Larry Ellery

TONIGHT THE GAME IS ON AT THE Top of the Campus
Sports Bar & Lounge
UMASS Vs. West Virginia
Tip-off 9pm
Monday-Saturday 2PM-12:30AM • Munchies 'till 11PM
Positive I.D. Required

Montague Mini Mart
12 to 6 in Montague Ctr.
from Amherst: 10 miles North on Rte. 63 toRte 47N
from Northampton: 14 miles N North to 116 to 47N
Follow Signs to Montague Center
Beer & Wine Sold On SUNDAYS

Bud suitcase cans	$13.99 + dep.
Bud 12 pack bottles / warm	$13.99 + dep.
Keystone / Busch 12 pack cans	$5.90 + dep.
Natural light 12 pack cans	$5.59 + dep.
Rolling Rock case, bottles	$15.60 + dep.
Rolling Rock 12-pack, bottles	$8.39 + dep.

Reasonable cigarette prices
A wonderful selection of Australian & Chilean wines as well as the French & domestic classics 367-9551
Many other specials!
Proper I.D. Required

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

AASA FIRST GENERAL MEETING
Feb. 4
Campus Center Rm 163
7:00-8:30 pm

International Student Association
GENERAL MEETING
February 4th 7 pm
Campus Center room 911
Elections will be held

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Europe this summer? Only $189!! Jet there anytime for $189! Reported in Let's Go! & NY Times. Caribbean $189 r/t air to somewhere sunny, California - $129 one way either way AIRHITCH212-864-2000

Poster Sale. Biggest and best selection choose from over 1000 different images. Rock, old Masters (Monet, Dali, Van Gogh, Picasso, Escher, Matisse, Wyeth and hundreds more.) Movie posters, sports, scenic landscapes, music, dance, skiing, personalities, (Einstein, James Dean, Marilyn Monroe and others), Travel, humor, romance, photography (Talbot, Ansel Adams and others). Most images only $5, $6, and $7 each! See us at the Student Union Ball room on Monday February 1st through Friday Febuary 5th. The hours are 9 a.m.- 4:30 p.m. This sale is sponsored by WMUA.

AUDITIONS

Auditions for UMass Theatre Guild's production of "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" will be on Fri, Feb 5 at 7 pm and Sat., Feb 6 at 11 am et 6pm in rm 163 of the Campus Center. Only one session need be attended. Please be prompt. Any Questions? Cal the UMTG office at 545-0415

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-8098
549-6073

ENTERTAINMENT

yaP! is now available for parties and functions. CALL 549-3832

FOR RENT

4 Bed House Northampton -- Winter rate $700/mo. plus. Also avail. June and Sept. 584-3428

FOR SALE

Don't Be Afraid to walk alone at night
Personal alarms alert others
With ear piercing noise
Call Jon Bayuk 665-0266

Iguana with everything $100.00
Lights etc. 6-7109

MAC SE/30
40 MB HD, 2 MB RAM
Extended keyboard & carrying case
1700/b.o.
Call 256-0260

QUEEN SIZE WATERBED $50 or best offer. Call Dana 253-3406

Shortwave radio, typewriter, VCR, monitor, keyboard. Reasonable prices. @ 546-5698

Snow Tires (2)
1992 Goodyear Ultra Grip 300,
185/70R14. Good condition. $40/pair
Call 546-3319

Snowboard – 160cm Barfoot Freestyle $100 584-2976
Golf Clubs Spalding full set plus leather bag $100 584-2976

FOUND

Woman's necklace found near parking lot 34 call M-F days 545-5270 ask for Barbara to describe.

GREEKS & CLUBS

$1000 AN HOUR!
Each member of your Frat, Sorority, team, club, etc, pitches in just one hour and your group can raise $1000 in just a few days! Plus a chance to earn $1000 for yourself! No cost. No obligation. 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 65

HELP WANTED

Artist seeking male and female models for part time work flexible schedule no experience necessary $10/hr 586-4692

ATTENTION STUDENTS Excellent opportunity to make great money, own your own business. Distribute self-defense products and earn big profits. 1-800-758-3210

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with clean water action. $100/wk. + On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon. - Fri. + Sunday. Early hours good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Join the Masspirg staff and be part of a 20 year history of environmental activism:
The Bottle Bill
Mass. Clean Air Act
Mass toxic use reduction act
Full/Part time positions $40-60/day
Call Carmen 256-6434

Postal jobs available! Many positions. Great benefits. Call 1-800-436-4365 ext. p-3306

Sick of DC Meal Plan?
Meal plan in exchange for kitchen work
If interested call
Jim Houston at 549-4919
At 496 North Pleasant St

The Undergraduate Admissions office is now accepting applications for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Representatives and New Students Program Summer Counselors. Applications available at the Admissions office.

UTAH SKI JOB OPPORTUNITIES!!
For information on housing, night life, and hiring practices of Snowbird, Alta, Park City, etc., send $6 to Wasatch Information Services – MA, P.O. Box 788, Sandy, UT 84091-0788

INSTRUCTION

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

At Totman Gym Saturday Jan 30th Mens Seiko digital watch with green velcro band $50 reward call Mike 665-8282

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

ONE EYED JAKE

Trumpet player needed. Blues-rock inf. Management. Gigs. Compact Disk. Record Contract pending. Graduating senior preferred. Not Serious? Don't Bother!
Call Steve 549-8120

PERSONALS

Beth Rinaldi!
Happy Happy
Birthday Birthday love DLR

Jon,
Happy 21st bday! It's been an eventful 2 years, but I wouldn't trade them or you for anything.
Love always,
Denise

Luke–
Who did you say that you had _____ with and who gave you what?

OH YEAH!!
Happy 21st Josh
GET SLOPPY!!
See ya later bye!
Kyle and Vu

ROBB BARNITT
Happy Birthday
Our passion has no boundaries
Love David

RIDE NEEDED

Ride to Rochester/Syracuse area 2/12 (long weekend). Will share ALL expenses. Rebecca 256-3181

ROOMATES WANTED

Female roomate wanted
Mill Valley Estates
198 heat hot water included
Call 256-0274

2 females or couple to share room $160 each or $275 for single, beautiful apartment 665-7604

Room for rent Amherst behind Baybanks 213.00 per month call 549-4388

Roomate Needed!!!
M/F to share two bedroom Brandywine Apt.
175.00/mo.
549-5868

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst Area
for free testing and confidential caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

SYMPATHY

Vu and Kyle
Hope you survive
Josh's B Day!

TRAVEL

Florida SPRING BREAK
7 nights Beachfront $139-158
RESERVE rooms NOW
Call CMI 1-800-423-5264

Spring Break '93***
Cancun $478! Jamaica $499!
Daytona Beach $169! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company!
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL
1-800-328-SAVE

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK
W/heat wave to all places
Guar. lowest prices or Double d/ff., free club passes
no peak fees
Call Debbie 549-1411

TAKE IT OFF!!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

UMASS SKI CLUB
Sign ups being taken now for ski trips
Feb. 19-21 Quebec wknd. $145 Social age 18 March 15-22 Spring break Steamboat 7 day trip $749
March 14-19 Killington Spring Break 5 day trip $279
Contact: UMass Ski Club 545-3437 or Dominic Santarsiere 549-2107 ASAP

TURKISH STUDENTS

Turkish Student Association
Spring Semester meeting
Feb. 4th 8 pm Marcus Engineering Lounge

WANTED

BAND SEEKS
Singer & Guitarist experienced!
ALL STYLES of music. Joe G. 6-4782

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young Mi 546-0580 or Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton
Starting in January. 546-2296

Sports

Men's hoop ready for Mullins opener

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Tonight is what University of Massachusetts coach John Calipari has been working five years for.

It is this evening (9 p.m., ESPN) Calipari opens up his new $53 million Mullins Center against West Virginia (10-6, 3-3), in front of 9,493 maroon-clad fans and a national television audience.

"The Mullins Center is a big step for our program," Calipari said. "We outgrew the Cage and to be able to showcase the Mullins Center on national television is great.

"It is always tough when you move into a new building," he said. "But we are looking forward to it."

The one thing Calipari wants left over from the now-retired Curry Hicks Cage is the fan support.

"We want everyone there with painted faces, basketballs on their heads and wearing the maroon (T-shirts)," Calipari said. "When the fans leave the arena, they are going to say 'Wow, what a great place to watch a basketball game.'"

If there are any questions about West Virginia's ability to win in Amherst, look no further than last year to get your answer. The Mountaineers upset the Minutemen 76-75 on Jan. 8 at the Cage right after UMass upended Oklahoma to vault into the Top 25.

After that first game, the Mountaineers and Minutemen met two more times with UMass winning both. The first game was in Morgantown, W. Va. where UMass prevailed behind Jim McCoy's 31 points.

The stakes were raised in the next meeting between the two clubs as they competed for the Atlantic 10 championship.

At the Cage, the Minutemen jumped out to a 31-7 lead and never looked back as UMass won 97-91 and took home the A-10 championship.

This season West Virginia has had big wins (Ohio State at home) and some tough losses (Rutgers away). There is no question, however, that head coach Gale Catlett has a talented squad.

At the point, Marsalis Basey has proven this season he has recovered from injuries which hampered him last season. The diminutive Basey poured in a career-high 36 points in a double overtime victory against St. Joseph's earlier in the year.

At the shooting guard spot, the talented senior Tracy Shelton is still trying to find his niche two years after an injury cut short his sophomore year while the other main shooting guard for West Virginia is junior Mike Boyd.

Up front West Virginia returns one of the premier forward combinations in the league in juniors Pervires Greene and Ricky Robinson. The muscular (6-8, 225 lbs.) Robinson made the First Team All-A-10 last season while the wiry Greene can jump out of the building.

In the center slot for the Mountaineers is burly (6-9, 240 lbs.) senior Jeremy Bodkin, who takes up space inside if nothing else. Junior Phil Wilson provides help up front for the Wildcats.

The Minutemen come into tonight's contest in the midst of a season long seven-game winning streak. The return of forward Harper Williams has especially sparked UMass as of late.

Williams' return has done wonders for fellow frontcourt mate, Lou Roe, who has now been allowed to not only post up, but roam the baseline where he is most comfortable. Roe scored a career high 21 points in UMass' last game, a 93-78 victory at perennial A-10 doormat, St. Bonaventure.

MEDIA NOTES: The game will be on ESPN at 9 p.m. with John Saunders doing play-by-play and Dan Bonner providing color commentary. The game can be heard on WHMP with George Miller, play-by-play, and Kevin Kennedy, color commentary, and WMUA with Dave T. Oldread and Brian Jones.

Collegian staff member Dan Wetzel contributed to this article.

ANDY CARVALHO / COLLEGIAN
Dana Dingle in action against Boston University earlier this season. The Minutemen play tonight in the new Mullins Center.

Minutewomen to invade St. Bonaventure tonight

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Senior forward Kim Kristofik puts one up from the charity stripe during a recent A-10 victory over St. Joseph's in the Curry Hicks Cage. The Minutewomen travel to Olean, N.Y., to face St. Bonaventure tonight.

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Revenge is a two-sided sword; it can help you or it can hurt you.

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team (8-8, 4-2 in the Atlantic 10) will be facing the brunt of this sword Thursday night when the team travels to Olean, N.Y. and the home of the St. Bonaventure Lady Bonnies (11-5, 1-4 A-10).

On Jan. 23, the Minutewomen drubbed the Lady Bonnies 74-54 at the Curry Hicks Cage. Now UMass, winners of seven of their last nine, will attempt to vanquish a revenge-hungry St. Bonaventure on the road. UMass coach Joannie O'Brien said she knows what to expect on the road.

"We have got to go in [on the road] and make no mistakes," O'Brien said. "The key is to try and go in and play your game."

Playing their game is exactly what the Minutewomen did against Bonaventure earlier on in the year. Senior forward Kim Kristofik led a balanced attack with 16 points while freshman Octavia Thomas led the board crashing party with 10 rebounds.

UMass' defense sorely limited the St. Bonaventure offense in their first meeting. The Lady Bonnies took a season low 52 shots and a season low 30.8 percent from the floor. The result was the season low 54 points.

St. Bonaventure was paced in that contest by Susan Dailer's 14 points, six below her season average. O'Brien knows that Dailer is a key to the ballgame.

"We cannot let Dailer get easy threes," O'Brien said. "We have got to make her work hard both ways, we have to make her play defense."

"Another key for us is to hit the boards," she said. "We need to have all five players hit the glass."

UMass appears to be peaking right now, with two consecutive big wins in the A-10 conference at home (against St. Joseph's and West Virginia). St. Bonaventure, meanwhile, has had just one game since the UMass loss, a 90-71 victory at Colgate.

MINUTEWOMEN NOTES: After the Bonaventure game, UMass will be on the road Saturday in Morgantown, W. Va. where the Minutewomen will face another A-10 team with revenge on it's mind, West Virginia. UMass defeated West Virginia 76-68 last Saturday at the Curry Hicks Cage.

Do not look for a defensive game from the Lady Bonnies; they average 78.4 points a game and give up 74.0 points a contest. Dailer can really bomb; she has 52 treys on the year.

One more note from O'Brien on her team's mindset headed on the road. "I think that the team feels like they can win on the road," O'Brien said.

Prized football recruit verbally commits

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

The most proficient passer in New Jersey State history and 14 others have verbally committed to playing football at the University of Massachusetts next season.

Vito Campanile, a 6-foot, 195-pound quarterback from Paramus Catholic High in Paramus, N.J., was also heavily recruited by Division-1 University of Pittsburgh and was offered a scholarship but ultimately decided on Division 1-AA UMass, which will grant him a full athletic scholarship.

"I met with Coach [Johnny] Majors last Tuesday and had it narrowed it down to UMass and Pitt," said Campanile. "I finally decided on UMass.

"It was a joint decision between me and my Dad who's been my coach since I was seven years old," he said. "The people and players won me over up there. They have a great recruiting class and a chance to win a national championship."

Campanile, who broke current Boston College quarterback Glenn Foley's high school N.J. state passing record by throwing for 6,736 yds. (compared to Foley's 5,928), comes to the Minuteman gridiron with high hopes but will have to first battle with incumbent QB Andrew McNeilly for the starting job.

"I'm going to [UMass] with the chance of being a starting quarterback," said Campanile, who threw for 26 touchdowns this past season in a run-and-shoot offense. "I have all the confidence in the world that I can do the job."

Leading the rest of the 1993 recruiting class are 6-foot-9, 295 pound offensive lineman Anthony Graham of Bridgeport, Conn. and 6-4, 310 pound OL Keith Durden from Lasalle Academy (R.I.). Both will be needed after the 1993 season (if not before) as UMass will graduate four offensive linemen: guards Phil Hallard and Andy Rice, tackle Bill Durkin, and center Andy LeBlanc.

Other recruits who have committed to play for the Minutemen are 6-3 205-pound Mike Dawson of Middlesex Regional High (possible inside linebacker), Mike Wing (6-5, 220), a tight end out of Westfield (MA) High and Boston Globe Player of the Year Bill Tucker, a projected linebacker with 4.6 speed.

Larry Legend: true Celtic pride

Sorry, University of Massachusetts hoop fans, but the Minutemen and their first game in the new Mullins Center will have to take a huge back seat tonight. You see, tonight the state of Massachusetts and most of the country have focused their attention on one man.

Sean P.
HAYDEN

One man? Yes, a 6-foot-9 slow-footed, no-jumping, sweet-shooting, crisp-passing man named Larry Bird.

Tonight is Larry Bird Night at the Boston Garden, home of innumerable Bird miracles. Actually, Bird deserves more than one night. He

Turn to BIRD, page 12

THIS weekend

for February 4th – 7th

inside the Collegian's weekly arts & entertainment guide for UMass & the Five College area

Film Review: Jon Lupo on Louis Malle's "Damage"... on page 4
Profile: Lisa Curtis on This Is It... on page 2
Calendar of Events... on page 3

David Mamet's AMERICAN BUFFALO

"In every soul there is violence. In every life there is pain. Somewhere in between, there is friendship."

COLLEGIAN PHOTOS BY ANDREA MIGLIASSI
Pictured are (far top) Paul Anthony Spatarella (left) and Owen Conneely, (center) Spatarella and Matthew Giambrone, and (bottom) Giambrone (standing) with Conneely.

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

When I asked junior theater major Nathan Schechter why he chose David Mamet's 1977 play American Buffalo for his first directing job, he compared my question to inquiring "why do you love someone?"

Schechter's 'love' affair with American Buffalo has been a long and involved one. After seeing Buffalo in 1987, Mamet's study of one man's conflict over business versus friendship stayed with Schecter long after the house lights went up.

Schechter began scrawling notes on the margins of a script of Buffalo and after transferring to UMass last year, he helmed a scene for a directing class.

"It went very well," he said. But directing one scene proved too tempting, and after toying with directing a second sequence, Schechter decided to go all the way.

With the help of producer Corey Pearlstein (who directed last semester's Entertaining Mr. Sloane) and the "invaluable" support of Residential Arts, Schechter's dream of American Buffalo began to be realized.

American Buffalo tells the story of three men and a crime in the works. Donny (Matthew Giambrone), the owner of a cluttered pawnshop that serves as the play's main setting, has just been paid $50 for a buffalo-head nickle that Donny had considered worthless.

The plot surrounds the plans of Donny — with the help of his quiet gofer, Bob (Owen Conneely) and a fellow crony named Teach (Paul Anthony Spatarella) — to break into the man's house and steal his assumed coin collection.

Those expecting a vulgarity-drenched tragi-comedy won't be disappointed. Just a few years after penning Buffalo, Mamet would win a Pulitzer Prize for his original script for Glengarry Glen Ross, another all-male tale of theivery and conscience.

Schechter says that the isolation of the characters was the first thing that drew him to Buffalo. "It's about these men's need for each other; their inability to touch each other and the rage that results."

While Schechter's vision touched every facet of this production, he insists this is not an ego-stroking thing. He credits Buffalo's cast and crew for working together and ensuring its success.

"I tried to stress synergy and the need for diversity, understanding and above all, respect," he said. "We needed to see our differences as strengths."

He hopes people will learn of themselves by watching the three characters and their dilemmas. "Mamet said that by viewing human beings acting courageously — we are all made better."

Synergistic Company, in association with Residential Arts and Tabula Rasa, present David Mamet's "American Buffalo." Presented Feb. 5-6 at Hampden Theater in Southwest at 8 p.m. Tickets $5 general; $3 for five-college students.

A wry look at the American Classroom

By KEN MAIURI
Collegian correspondent

That graffiti on the desk two rows up or the half-erased blackboard at the front of the lecture hall could be a work of art, as Catherine Wagner shows in American Classroom, her exhibit currently running at the University Gallery.

Made up of 40 black and white photographs of classroom interiors, Wagner's work highlights the form and texture of everyday school sights, such as blackboards, chemistry labs, desks, dirty dishes at the dining commons, and trash strewn around the floor of a lecture hall. She transforms the average classroom into a striking arrangement of shapes and lines, and even manages to inject humor into photographs where people and emotion are absent.

Wagner spent time over the past decade traveling to grade schools, high schools and colleges all across the country for her American Classroom series. All of the photographs of rooms are taken during lunch time, or after the end of the school day, but before the rooms are cleaned, thereby keeping traces of the students in the photograph, though not the people themselves. One photo highlights an open apple juice can on the floor next to a graffiti-covered desk, while another is a close-up of a dissected fish in an oceanography lab.

Though a dry sense of humor seems embedded in Wagner's work, it leaps out particularly in the 1985 Emerson College photograph, which consists of the front half of a classroom with an empty teacher's desk (without a chair) and three blackboards, the right-most of which has written on it in large, lopsided letters, "I DON'T KNOW!"

A stark and simple 1983 photo of an acupuncture classroom from the College of Traditional Chinese Medicine in San Fransisco includes only the front two edges of two student desks, a teacher's desk with chalk chunks on it and a perfectly clean blackboard. The photo is so strikingly enigmatic that it looks like it could be a still from Stanley Kubrick's 2001: A Space Odyssey.

Also featured in the University Gallery is an exhibit entitled Assorted Objects for the Home and Garden, which is the collected work of 14 artists who designed "functional objects for domestic use." One of the objects on display, "Wall to Wall Carpet" (1988), created by Gerhard Richter, is a nylon woven carpet that resembles a bright, multi-colored crossword puzzle. David Deutsch's "Standing, Folding Writing Desk" (1989) looks exactly like an everyday beach chair, complete with two-color, interwoven nylon fibers. Other works in the exhibit included a sundial by McDermott and McGough, an iron birdbath by Joe Andoe, and botanical wallpaper by Joan Nelson.

For a quiet and relaxing look at everyday objects from a unique viewpoint, take some time between classes and take advantage of the often overlooked University Gallery.

American Classroom: The Photographs of Catherine Wagner will be shown through March 12 at the University Gallery. Call 545-3670 for gallery hours.

COURTESY UNIVERSITY GALLERY

Moss Landing Elementary School, First Grade Classroom, Moss Landing, Calif., 1984 now on exhibit at the University Gallery.

This Is It releases CD

Bite It contains tribal beach music

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

How do you know when a band has really attracted a serious following?

When their most enthusiastic fan takes all of his clothes off and runs around the bar, dancing to the music.

Linda Goodman, vocalist for the psychadelic, funk rock band, This Is It, knew her music had a special power when just such a fan, caught up in the jammin' tunes, lost his head and his clothes.

The band was playing on the corner of Bleeker and Broadway in New York at a place formerly known as the Pool Bar when that certain fan removed his garments.

"Once or twice a month this guy would come to see us," Goodman explains. "The Pool Bar is pretty small, and one night he began dancing really close to me. He bowed down, praising me on his knees. He hit the microphone by accident which hit me right in the mouth!

"The next time he came in, he took his clothes off — running around the bar naked. He was just buggin'. Everyone said, 'That's Linda's biggest fan,'" says Goodman.

She takes the crazy fans with an admirable dose of good humor. After all, "I've dedicated myself full time to the band. I'm totally dedicated. This comes first."

Goodman's co-members in the band include, Sean Boyd on vocals and lead guitar, Marlin Slutsky on drums and occasionally rappin', and Geoff Green vocalisin' and playing bass.

"We all write the music together," explains Goodman. "And we all take turns with lead vocals."

This Is It's first album, Bite It, has been described by the New York Review of Records as being "straight out of a raunchy old bag left by the side of the George Clinton Road. Slap happy bass and sharp guitars combine soulfully in a pure live sound."

"Someone said we have a sound like James Brown meets the Grateful Dead," laughs Goodman. But the phrase that has stuck the

TURN TO THIS IS IT, PAGE 5

Looking for New Career Opportunities?
Register Now to Attend our February Sessions

Workshop:
▷ Saturday, Feb. 13, 1:30-5:00 p.m.:
Organize and Implement Non-Profit Job Campaigns
w/ Dennis T. Baylor, ACCESS,
(publisher of Community Jobs)
Director Career Development Services,

Seminars:
▷ Saturday, Feb. 20, 10:30-1:00 and 2:30-5:00
Careers in Writing and International Media
▷ Saturday, Feb. 27, 1:30-4:00
Careers in Teaching

Avanti is a general Career Services firm, specialized in non-profit and international careers. We provide resume advisement, career counseling, a computerized Employment Databank, an extensive library, and a variety of other services. Contact Avanti for information on any of our services.

Avanti: (413) 584-8409
17 New South Street
Sullivan Square
Northampton, MA 01060
AVANTI Career Management

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Schlitz - 12 oz cans
$7.99 case (Super Close Out!)
(Quantity Discounts Available)
S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75 L
MILLER HIGH LIFE $9.99 case cans
Old Milwaukee & Old "Mil" light 12 pk cans $4.99
Bud Dry bottles $10.99 case
Moosehead bottles $7.99 12 pk
American Beer Still Only $7.29 case cans
Sutter Home White Zinfandel $3.99 750 ml
1/2 pints Tequila, Whisky, Rum, Schnapps, Vodka $1.49 each
Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) Delivery Available

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
Park and Ride to Mullins
to ALL UMASS Home Games and Most Mullins Center Events
Friday and Saturday Night
Continuous Round Trip Shuttle Service Between Fleet Bank and Rafters
9 PM Til 1 AM
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

Calendar of events in the 5 College Area

THURSDAY

CONCERT — "Music in the Noon Hour." Robert Miller and John Van Buskirk, piano. Four-hand works by Debussy, Hindesmith and Dvorak. Sweeney Concert Hall, SC, 12:30 p.m.

RECEPTION — Hart Gallery at the Guild Art Centre, in collaboration with Ferrin Gallery at Pinch Pottery presents an exhibition of work by artists who create in a variety of media. Artworks are on display in both galleries until March 6. There will be concurrent opening receptions at both locations today from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

CONCERT — The Smith College Dance Department presents "A Joint Effort," the MFA Thesis Concert of Nancy Raines, Jennifer Norton-Diedrich and Kathy Keillor. Scott Dance Studio, SC, 8 p.m. Also Friday and Saturday at 8. Tickets are $3, $2 students, senior citizens and children. Call 585-3232 for reservations.

EXHIBIT — Residential Arts, a program of the Fine Arts Center, presents "Cultivation of Knowledge," a site-specific installation by artist David Teeple. The exhibit will run until March 9 with an opening reception tonight from 5-6:30. At 6:30 David Teeple will present a lecture/demonstration entitled "The Conceptualization and Realization of a Site-Specific Installation." All events are free and open to the public. Gallery hours are Monday-Friday 3-7 p.m., Sunday 2-5 p.m.

ICE CREAM SOCIAL — The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Group is having an ice cream social from 3-5 p.m. in the Program for GLB Concerns' Office, Crampton House, Southwest.

COURTESY DAVID TEEPLE
David Teeple

THEATRE — Auditions: Jay. Lab Theatre, MC, 7-10 p.m. Roles for six women, one 10-12-year-old girl, and one man. Women performers must be currently enrolled at one of the five colleges.

VISUAL ART — Opening reception: Mr. Perfect. Student Union Gallery, 5-7 p.m. Free.

WORKSHOP — Robin Ochs, Ed.M., co-founder of the Boston Bisexual Women's Network will give a presentation on "Understanding Bisexuality: Beyond Stereotypes," from 4-6 p.m. in Campus Center 174. She will also give a workshop entitled "Lesbian and Bisexual Women: A Dialogue," for lesbian and bisexual women from 7:30-9:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 165.

CONCERT — Physical Graffiti, a Led Zeppelin tribute band, will perform tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton at 8:30. Tickets $6/ Adv. 18+.

FRIDAY

CONCERT — Salamander Crossing. Original and traditional bluegrass with four-part harmonies, fiddle, banjo, guitar & double bass. Iron Horse, Northampton, 7 p.m.

THEATRE — The play Ida B. Wells will be performed tonight and tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

THEATRE — The Church of the Apostles' theater company, Moveable Feast Theater, is presenting The Wilder Show tonight and tomorrow night at 8 p.m. and at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday at Belchertown High School. The evening consists of three short plays by Thornton Wilder, "Pullman Car Hiawatha," "Infancy," and "The Long Christmas Dinner." $5.

DINNER THEATRE — The Wicked Cooks, a comedy by Gunter Grass, will be performed at the Peoples Institute, Gothic Street, Northampton, tonight and tomorrow night at 7:30. The performance will be preceded by a light dinner. Admission is $10. Reservations are encouraged and can be made by calling 584-8313.

GALLERY TALK — Jennie McCahey (Smith '94) will present "A Sixteenth-Century Carved Rosary Bead: A Tool for Religious Propaganda" at 12:15 p.m. at the SC Museum of Art.

SLIDE SHOW — Thelma Golden, Associate Curator at the Whitney Museum of American Art will give a slide lecture on artist Pat Ward Williams today at 4:30 p.m. in Hillyer 117, SC.

ART RECEPTION — There will be an opening reception for "The Art of Jordan Martin," a dynmaic exhibit of clay sculpture, at Wheeler Gallery, Central, from 5-7 p.m. Gallery hours are Monday- Thursday 4-8 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m.

CONCERT — Tom Savoy will perform at The Coolidge Park Cafe at The Hotel Northampton from 5-8 p.m. At 8:30, Hal Benoit takes over until 12:30.

THEATRE — American Buffalo, by David Mammet, will be performed at the Hampden Theatre at 8 p.m.

COURTESY GUNTER GRASS
The cast of The Wicked Cooks

SATURDAY

CONCERT — Amy Hart's one-woman show, "Voices from Birth to Burial," is a series of soliloquies and songs, some poignant, some comical, artfully woven together in a stream-lined program that takes us on a tour of the human experience. The performance will take place at the Book Mill in Montague at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $5.

HOBBY SHOW — The 1993 Big Railroad Hobby Show will take place at the Eastern States Exposition Grounds Better Living Center on Memorial Avenue in West Springfield from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The show will also be open tomorrow from 10-5. Admission will be $4 for adults and $1 for children under 12. Children under 5 are free.

COURTESY CORDELIA'S DAD
Cordelia's Dad

CONCERT — Latino rap artist Vico-C will perform this evening with Holyoke's Mass Delirium at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are $10 for UMass students and $12 for all others. Following the concert will be a dance with DJ Mendo.

OBSERVATORY OBSERVING — There will be free observing tonight at 9 p.m. at the AC Wilder Observatory. For information, call Tom Whitney at 256-6234.

CONCERT — The UMass Department of Music and Dance presents the 8th Annual All-Senior Honor Band, under the direction of Professor Walter Chestnut, tonight at 7 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. Free.

CONCERT — Charlie Schmidt will be performing at The Coolidge Park Cafe at the Hotel Northampton tonight from 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

CONCERT — Chalyce Blair will be performing tonight at Wiggin's Tavern at the Hotel Northampton from 6:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.

CONCERT — The South End Dixieland Jazz Band will perform tonight at the First Unitarian Universalist Church on Porter Lake Drive in Springfield at 8 p.m. Admission is $7.50 in advance and $10 at the door. For information call 737-8844.

SUNDAY

RECEPTION — The art of Jane Broderick and her daughters will be featured in the gallery at the Book Mill in Montague all month. Call 367-9206 for gallery hours. There will be a reception for the show today from 2-4 p.m.

OPEN HOUSE — The Performing Arts Division of UMass is presenting an open house at the Old Chapel today from 3-5 p.m. Participate in music, theatre, and dance mini-demonstrations, enjoy mini-recitals and information sessions, and more.

A CAPPELLA COMPETITION — The Silver Chord Bowl, a singing competition of a cappella groups from throughout New England, will take place at the Academy of Music Theater in Northampton today at 2 p.m. Tickets are $5.

CONCERT — Cordelia's Dad will perform tonight at 8:30 p.m. at the Iron Horse with special guests The Schramms. Tickets are $6 and all ages are welcome.

CONCERT — "Jefferson Starship: Unplugged," an acoustical concert , will take place at 8 p.m. at Buckley Recital Hall, AC. Tickets are $12 for the public and $5 with an Amherst College ID.

Obsession-drenched Damage entrances

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Damage is a film quite unlike any other. Most films today wear their romantic cliches on their sleeves, rarely exposing any emotions beyond the surface. Damage is different, in the way that is oozes with obsessive despair while remaining curiously devoid of almost any emotion.

Damage is nothing more than a well-acted but thinly veiled morality play. With twinges of Greek tragedy and Shakespearean melodrama, Damage is an exploration of a common theme: an idea that no one is truly innocent nor truly guilty.

Jeremy Irons plays a 50-ish member of the British parliament who falls under the spell of his son's girlfriend and eventual fiancee, played by Juliette Binoche.

Binoche has a busload of arty emotional baggage, mostly concerning her brother's suicide. It seems he killed himself because he became obsessed with her. Hmmm. Do we sense a pattern, here?

Irons and Binoche consumate their lust (or is it?) without hardly saying a word to each other. This is indicative of the film's overall distant tone. With Damage, the surface plot is advanced in a familiar way, but the real action is going on inside all those glances the characters give each other. It's mostly apparent between Binoche and Irons, whose eyes do prove to be the windows to their souls.

The supporting characters, Irons' son (Rupert Graves) his wife (Miranda Richardson) are the only tangible characters in Damage. They're easily the most sympathetic, mainly because they are the ones who ultimately bear the brunt of damage. Not to say that Irons and Binoche escape unscathed. The damage is levied with varying intensity.

So what's the big deal, here? Obsessive desire is nothing new in films, yet Damage seems to think it invented it. There's something ultimately underwhelming about the whole affair and since it's played out with such histrionics, it's hard to empathize with two basically amoral lead characters.

Yet Damage is compulsively watchable. It holds the viewer in an uneasy trance; and as the story builds so does the characters' resonance. The film left me damaged as well. It's a film I initially disliked, mainly because there seemed nothing to grasp onto—the characters' clouded "innocence" and "guilt" seemed trite.

What saved the film for me was how director Malle approached this familiar territory with his common intelligence and boldness. Also credit David Hare's superb screenplay, which attempts to find the well-hidden souls of the characters through their desire.

Irons played another tortured soul last year with his role in Waterland; here, he's seems more assured of his place in the text of the film. There's nothing tentative about his performance. Irons has a way of making complex characters three-dimensional. In Damage, he hides that third dimension for most of the film; revealing it at the precise moments for maximum dramatic effect.

Binoche is a little more elusive. Her character is one so masked that her intentions are never quite clear. Is she trying to heal her past guilt over her brother's suicide? Is she using Irons or is it real passion? Her motives stay unresolved and Binoche creates some uneasy pathos in a role that is not a true villain, but rather an intricate portrait of yet another "damaged" persona.

Miranda Richardson (The Crying Game) invokes the familiar role of the "wife" with charm, class and grace. It isn't until the last half, though, that she really gets a chance to shine. Irons' betrayal and its somewhat preposterous consequences affect Richardson's character the most, and Richardson handles it with delicate and lasting compassion.

Rupert Graves (Where Angels Fear To Tread), one of Britain's most underrated young actors, is also wonderful. His faithful husband, however, is probably the film's least explored character, yet Graves turns in a wisely understated performance.

Damage is a film that some will love, others will hate and a few will treasure. It tackles emotions, and more to the point the lack of them, with moody cinematography, assured direction and some of the most textured acting in contemporary cinema today.

B+

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE

Miller High Life Suitcase only ..... $9.99 (+ dep)
6 pk cans ..... $2.79 (+dep)
Bud, Bud Dry, Bud Light 12 pk bottles ..... $6.49 (+ dep)
Beck's Light 12 pk bottles only ..... $9.99 (+ dep)
Catamount Gold, Amber, Porter and Post Road Ale
6 pk..... $4.69 / Case - mix 'n match .. $17.99 (+dep)
Seagram's Gin 1.75 L $13.99
M.D. 20/20 All Flavors 750 ml $1.99
Smirnoff Vodka 90 proof 750 ml $6.99
Sutter Home Wt Zin 750 ml $3.99
Vino Verde Portugal White wine 1L bottle .. 2 for $6.99
Peppermint Schnapps Leroux 40 proof 750 ml $6.99
Yukon Jack 1.75 L $13.99

LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
Open 9 am - 11 pm
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

"MR. PERFECT"
painting, drawings, & Film by Jade Schwendenwien

February 4-25
opening reception, Feb. 4, 5-7

Slide lecture:
"Art & Popular Culture"
Feb. 18th, 5:00 in the Gallery

STUDENT UNION GALLERY
Open Mon.- Fri.: 11-4

this exhibit is sponsored in part by the UMASS Arts Council

THE COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS DEPARTMENT WOULD LIKE TO KNOW WHY OUR PHONE NUMBER IS NOT IN THE BOOK? EVERYONE ELSE'S IS!

- WANTED -

Associate Business Manager
Assistant Finance Manager

EXPERIENCE is a must to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World...

We are looking for:
Ambitious • Responsible • Organized
SOPHOMORES
with good communication skills

Applications are available at the Collegian
113 Campus Center
and must be submitted no later than Friday, February 12th

■ This is it

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 2

longest to the band, describing their special brand of tunage, is "tribal beach music."

"[Our music] is fun yet deep. Hopefully it will make you sweat," says Goodman. "The name probably fits our drummer Marlin the best. He wears a lot of T-shirts he makes himself concerning social issues, hats and a lot of African type garb. He's our tribal beach man."

This Is It recorded their album, Bite It, live in the studio for a "bigger" sound and added their vocals in later. The compact disc includes a "surprise" track at the end, an unlabeled sixth song by Sean Boyd that is truly a "beautiful psychadelic jam."

Almost as original as their unique sound is their compact disc's packaging, which is in the first (to my knowledge), "CD case fabricated with recycled paper, soy bean inks and no plastic parts."

"Most of our fans are college aged and older. Most of them want to be in environmental studies," says Goodman. "They want to work hard and dance all night long. They keep us playing until 3:30 a.m."

Goodman says she's been subjected to "a whole realm of musical influences" including classical, opera and church music. "Being on the circuit helps. Learning from other musicians," says Goodman.

She says their music's message has changed over the years This Is It has played together. "We've become more hard core—convicted. Our music says, 'This is what we believe in. This is what we want to see happen in the world,'" says Goodman. "Everyone was put on this earth to take care of each other. There needs to be equality, and the injustices need to be taken care of, like the racial problems. We have to learn from the past."

Their music is played regularly on college radio stations and went to number one on Dutchess County Community College's WDCC in Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

This Is It has already begun to branch out into the area. Their most recent local gig was in Springfield with Rippopotamous.

COURTESY TWO HOMEBOY'S CHILLIN'
This Is It's special brand of tune-age in an environmental package.

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS, WHO ELSE WOULD STAY UP 'TILL 3 AM FOR YOU?

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
FIT FOR LIFE
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road
•PVTA bus route to Rolling Green•
• pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics•
• steps • nautilus • racquetball•
• free weights • jacuzzi • sauna •
• massage • bikes • tennis •
• rowers • treadmills •
• stairmasters •
• student discounts•
Call about our 15-week Semester Special-$169
Ends 2 16

UNIVERSITY FOOD SERVICE DIETITIONS HAVE DETERMINED THAT A COLLEGIAN IS A VITAL PART OF ANY D.C. MEAL

"In addition to the Parking Lot Shuttles from lots 21/33 & lots 31/26 1 additional Orchard Hill/Campus Shuttle will be added for Full House events at the Mullins Center. The two operating Campus Shuttle/Orchard Hill bus schedules are as follows:"

X EVE 1	B EVE 2
7:53 - E Lot & Lot 25	7:55 - Butterfield
8:00 - Butterfield	8:00 - Stockbridge Road
8:08 - Sylvan	8:10 - Mullins Center
8:25 - Commonwealth - Mullins	8:25 - Career Center
8:32 - Depart E Lot & Lot 25	8:30 - Butterfield
8:34 - GRC	8:35 - Stockbridge Road
8:47 - Sylvan	8:45 - Mullins Center
9:00 - Commonwealth - Mullins	9:00 - Career Center
9:11 - Depart E Lot & Lot 25	9:05 - Butterfield
	9:10 - Stockbridge Road
9:18 - Butterfield	9:20 - Mullins Center
9:36 - E Lot - Stadium	9:35 - Career Center
9:40 - Commonwealth - Mullins	9:40 - Butterfield
9:50 - Depart E Lot & Lot 25	9:45 - Stockbridge Road
9:57 - Butterfield	9:55 - Mullins Center
10:11 - Haigis Mall	10:10 - Career Center
10:15 - E Lot - Stadium	10:15 - Butterfield
10:20 - Commonwealth - Mullins	10:20 - Stockbridge Road
10:27 - Depart E Lot & Lot 25	10:30 - Mullins Center
10:44 - Sylvan	10:45 - Career Center
10:50 - Haigis Mall	10:50 - Butterfield
10:54 - E Lot - Stadium	10:55 - Stockbridge Road
11:08 - Depart E Lot & Lot 25	11:05 - Mullins Center
11:15 - Butterfield	11:20 - Career Center
11:23 - Sylvan	11:25 - Butterfield
11:29 - Haigis Mall	11:30 - Stockbridge Road
11:40 - Commonwealth - Mullins	11:40 - Mullins Center
11:47 - Depart E Lot & Lot 25	11:55 - Career Center
12:02 - Sylvan	12:00 - Butterfield
12:08 - Haigis Mall	12:05 - Stockbridge Road
12:12 - E Lot - Stadium	12:15 - Mullins Center
12:26 - Depart E Lot & Lot 25	12:30 - Career Center
12:33 - Butterfield	12:35 - Butterfield
12:41 - Sylvan	12:40 - Stockbridge Road (OOS)

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
TONIGHT
UMASS vs West Virginia 9:00 pm
CHARTREUSE SKI PARTY
Special Drink ~ Swampwater
Register to win a $1000.00 Ski Package to be drawn Feb. 25
FRIDAY HAPPY HOUR
4-6
Free Pizza Slices
Bud Dry $1.50 Coors Gold $1.50
Coors Light $1.50 Coors Cutter $1.50
Prices in effect all week
WE'RE THE ONE TO WATCH!
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

A New Hollywood leads the fight against AIDS epidemic

No other industry has had to publicly confront the AIDS epidemic like the entertainment industry. AIDS first shook the world of entertainment when it killed actor Rock Hudson in 1985. Since then, thousands have died of the disease that has raged through Hollywood as well as the rest of the world. Awareness had begun, and Hollywood quickly responded to the crisis.

Red ribbons materialized on lapels throughout the entertainment community supporting and memorializing those the virus afflicted. Celebrity benefits were held in Los Angeles and New York as anyone who's anyone in the business showed up to lend their support. Hollywood had finally come out of the closet.

Longtime Hollywood starlet Elizabeth Taylor became active in AIDS Project Los Angeles (APLA) and she co-founded the American Foundation for AIDS research (AMFAR). The celebrity lineup includes Madonna who has repeatedly shown her support through fashion shows to benefit AMFAR as well as singing on this past summer's LP Red Hot and Dance from which proceeds were donated for AIDS research.

As celebrities and Hollywood moguls jumped on the bandwagon, the news media came flocking to increase publicity of these events. Was the news media there for the big names that would turn out, or were they there to report these benefits? Unfortunately, the media's attention only came on the basis that "stars" were involved. If that's what it takes to get coverage, so be it. At least people were finally responding and listening.

productions. Movies like An Early Frost, Andre's Mother, Parting Glances and Longtime Companion led the way for AIDS themed-films.

Longtime Companion was about New York's Fire Island's gay community and how they dealt with the AIDS epidemic from the beginning. The film spawns from the early '80s and carries the fright and devastation that a community was forced to deal with through 1988.

Since the AIDS earthquake shook Hollywood, many have led the way for change. MCA Inc. President Sid Sheinberg and former Fox Inc. chairman Barry Diller founded Hollywood

TURN TO AIDS PAGE 8

Adam Scott
ROBERTS

Hollywood may have been reacting to the AIDS crisis but wasn't reacting with all of its ability. Hollywood remained silent and did not try, through the power of film, to influence the public's perception of AIDS and the people who had been infected. It seemed as though Hollywood was lending their support, but in reality it was backstabbing the issue by not green-lighting AIDS related projects. A few films is all it would have taken to get the world thinking. But, Hollywood waited. . .

Finally, Hollywood had taken a few steps in the right direction by giving the go-ahead to certain AIDS-themed

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Elizabeth Taylor

THIS SATURDAY!
TICKETS ONLY $10
All Ages All Shows
"Direct from OZ via The Twilight Zone"
EMO PHILIPS
COMING SOON
RHONDA SHEAR Valentine's Day Special! Feb 13
MARC DeCARLO "STUDS" Feb 20
JAMIE FOXX Mar. 6
COMEDY CONNECTION AT THE HU KE LAU CHICOPEE
CALL 413•593•5222

COME CLEAN WITH US!
Open 7 days a week 7am - 10pm
SOUTH TOWNE COMMONS LAUNDROMAT
479 West St., South Amherst

Speedwash
Open 24 Hours
11 Pray St., Amherst

HELP WANTED!!
We need 20 students who want to earn extra spending money at their convenience.
Earn $10-$20 per hr.
Previous sales experience helpful, but not necessary
Call 1-747-9249 for details

ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741
Grand Opening Special
at ALPINE COMMONS
Short Term Leases
4 - Bedroom..... $650
3 - Bedroom..... $600
2 - Bedroom..... $550
Includes All Utilities
Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!
Don't wait another day, call today!
256-0741

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Still Tic, Tac, Toeing Through Your Life?
Let us help you make some winning decisions about your future.
Late register for classes January 27-February 9.
UMass and You – a winning team!
Division of Continuing Education, 607 Goodell Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.
Evening credit courses (over 100 in 37 different departments; most meet just once a week)
UMass Bachelor of General Studies degree — part time!
Noncredit workshops for business or pleasure (nearly 100, all winners)
Available University day courses (hundreds of them, stimulating!)
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Insight into Billy Childs

Portraits of an incredible jazz player

By SARAH LEVESQUE
Collegian Staff

Portrait of a Player
Billy Childs
Windham Hill Records

The name sounded familiar, Billy Childs, and the name of his new compact disc, Portrait of a Player, promised insight. Who was this pianist, composer and arranger who appeared on the soundtrack to The Russia House with saxophonist Branford Marsalis of "The Tonight Show" fame?

Marsalis' new gig on "The Tonight Show" has given him the lime light and a chance to expose American television viewers to the graceful groove of Jazz — first taut, then loose, the wild waltz of moods, but who was this Billy Childs?

Childs, a native of Los Angeles, has been under the piano's spell since he decided to learn how to play by ear when he was 14 years old.

He took classical music lessons in his final high school years and began playing jazz with a group of classmates from Hamilton High. Childs says, "Jazz was always my basic driving force, and people like Herbie Hancock, McCoy Tyner, Chick Corea and Keith Jarrett shaped my musical concept."

His April Touch, his well received 1991 release, offered proof of Childs' original and creative approach to writing while Portrait of a Player is Childs' wanting to establish his self as a player — as interpreter and improvisor. He explores a repertoire including pieces by John Coltrane, Bill Evans and Sammy Cahn, as he jams with bassist Tony Dumas and drummer Billy Kilson.

A graduate from the University of Southern California as a music composition major, Childs got his first professional jazz gig when he was only 20 years old. He traveled to Japan with trombonist J.J. Johnson. "I learned a lot just listening to J.J.," said Childs.

The opening track "It's You or No One" is the snappy Jule Styne melody from a 1948 Doris Day movie which opens with the drumming of Kilson and then takes the listener back to a 1940s night club atmosphere as Childs weaves the notes, telling the listener to sit back, relax, the rum and coke is on him.

"Never Let Me Go," a Livingston-and-Evans ballad, is a piano solo cut, played largely rubato, meaning Childs plays with the expressive stretching of time, altering the musical relationship. He is pleading to the listener to be faithful to him and by the end of the piece, as the notes become higher and higher, he seems to be in tears, and ends on a lingering high note, but with the low, swelling of a deep hum.

Ironically, of all of the 10 cuts on Portrait of a Player my favorite one is "The End of Innocence" which Childs composed. The melody becomes a chant, the telling of the passage of childhood — the simple, universal tragedy of growing up. Why is it that certain notes mingling together make one feel a certain way? Why does Childs' piano playing create such an emotional fingerpainting for the listener?

In James Baldwin's Sonny's Blues, the brother watches his brother Sonny, a jazz pianist, play in a trio. As he sits in the jam-packed nightclub, he knows he never understood until now what Jazz meant to his brother.

"I seemed to hear with what burning we had yet to make it ours, how we could cease lamenting. Freedom lurked around us and I understood, at last, that he could help us to be free if we would listen, that he would never be free until we did."

"Hanagan", Childs' other composition on the compact disc, is a dedication to a long admired pianist. It was this piece that reminded of Baldwin's Sonny's Blues. What is going on in Billy Childs' head? He is telling us a story as he slams down the notes, as Dumas travels up and down the bass, as Kilson tip, tip, taps on the drums.

Childs is burning; he is telling listeners who Flanagan is, why he is important, how this man has influenced him. As the brother in Sonny's Blues realizes, "The man who creates the music is hearing something else, is dealing with the roar rising from the void and imposing order on it as it hits the air. What is evoked in him, then, is of another order, more terrible because it has no words, and triumphant, too, for that same reason. And his triumph, when he triumphs, is ours."

COURTESY WINDHAM HILL JAZZ

Billy Childs' Portrait of a Player

Vico-C brings cool Spanish rap to SUB

Spanish rap pioneer, Vico-C, will perform Saturday in the Student Union Ballroom.

Vico-C, a native of Puerta de Tierra, Puerto Rico, began his musical career at the young age of 12. His first performances were at local parties where he introduced tap music to the island community. Rather than singing in English — as rap music had previously been performed — Vico-C began to sing in his native Spanish. Some critics say that he actually invented Spanish rap.

In 1987, Vico-C recorded two singles, "Sin Pena" and "En Coma," both of which caused quite a stir. After realizing that he could not go solo, he signed with Prime Records and recorded an album, La Recta Final. This piece of work sold over 60,000 copies in Puerto Rico alone.

May 1991's Hispanic Soul, Vico-C's third album, and a more recently released single, "Saborealo" have also achieved success with his unique integration of rap with Caribbean and Hispanic rhythms such as merengue, boogaloo and reggae.

Mass Delirium, consisting of members Divine Purpose and Black Plague, formed in Holyoke in October 1988. Their music promotes sprituality and personal responsibility.

Vico-C and Mass Delirium will be performing on Feb. 6 at 8 p.m. in the UMass SUB. Tickets are $10 for UMass students and $12 general public. Ticket price includes admission to the dance following the performance with DJ Mendo.

—LISA CURTIS

COURTESY PRIME ENTERTAINMENT

Spanish rapper Vico-C

The Collegian.
113 Campus Ctr.
545-3500

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

Alley Oops Presents
Live!
THE ORPHANS
RED HOT ROCK 'N' BLUES
Alley Oops
525 Pleasant St., Northampton • 584-2491

South Hadley's TOWER THEATRES
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY 533-2663
6th Holdover Week!
"THIS IS AN AMAZING PIECE OF ENTERTAINMENT! TWO THUMBS UP!"
★★★★
Aladdin
Fri at 5:25, 7:15 & 9:10 / Mon-Thurs at 6:45 & 8:35
Sat & Sun at 1:45, 3:30, 7:15 & 9:10
"Brides with tension and romance."
"Costner's truest role to date."
"Whitney Houston is dynamite."
"A very romantic, intense and intimate movie."
KEVIN COSTNER WHITNEY HOUSTON
THE BODYGUARD
Starts Fri at 4:00, 6:30 & 9:00 / Mon-Thurs at 6:30 & 9:00
Sat & Sun at 1:30, 4:00, 6:30 & 9:00

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
FRIDAY, FEB. 19
Single Project/Event Grants for music, theater, visual art and design, performance art, literature, film and video, and other arts related events.
PROPOSALS ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
APPLICATIONS GUIDANCE/INFORMATION STOP AT STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE OR UMASS ARTS COUNCIL 203 HASBROUCK OR CALL 545-0202

COURTESY AMHERST COLLEGE ZUMBYES

BATTLE OF THE CHORDS — The Amherst College Zumbyes will defend the Silver Chord crown in the ninth annual Silver Chord Bowl, a singing competition of acapella groups from colleges and high schools throughout New England on Sunday, February 7 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $5.

A model moment at the mall

The Elite Agency searches for 'the next big thing'

As eager hopefuls awaited to be consulted by the Elite on Saturday, there seemed to be a mixture of excitement and anticipation in the air, as well as a hint of irony.

Perhaps you happened to be one of the estimated 500 participants or just a mere observer of the Elite Model Search that took place at the Holyoke Mall on Saturday. Either way, you can probably relate to that burning sensation that everyone in a three mile radius undoubtedly experienced as all of the Aqua Net fumes attacked and irritated the eyes.

COLLEGIAN PHOTO BY JESSICA TAVERN

Registration at the Elite Model Search

Elite Model Management is located in New York and is well renown as the number one modeling agency in the world. They send a scout to the Holyoke mall on an annual basis to recruit.

Now one might be compelled to question why such an "elite" group would choose to send their scouts to the Holyoke mall, as opposed to some place a little more urban. I would assume that the location isn't their main concern as long as they can manage to get a good turnout.

They had nothing to worry about. Endless lines consisting of heavily-made-up-hopefuls from Ludlow, Chicoppee, Springfield, Westfield, Hadley, Amherst and numerous other surrounding towns could be found vying to be 'discovered.'

Each contestant was required to fill out a questionnaire concerning important issues such as bust size and hair color (natural color optional).

There would only be two survivors from this motley crowd, and the tension in the air thickened as that fateful moment grew closer. Bodies began to slouch, feet began to tap and the anticipation proved grueling.

Some came equipped with portfolios and references, and others simply entered on a whim. They all had one thing in common, though, and that was the fantasy of being taken in by the same modeling agency famous for being Cindy Crawford's claim to fame, along with other well known models, such as Iman and Kathy Ireland.

For such an ambitious crowd of people striving for careers in a field which is purely superficial, there was a good percentage of people who could be considered "less-than-photogenic".

Everytime I attempted to snap a picture, a ritual occurred, in which entailed every girl in the vicinity digging their chins into their chests and turning bright red while exclaiming, "No,no! Please don't!".

My advice to all of the "Lee-Press-On-Faces" who weren't chosen by the Elite is "Smile pretty for the camera, girls!"

Jessica Taverna is a Collegian staff member.

AIDS

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7

Supports. This was announced at the APLA's Commitment to Life and was the first time that any industry had formed a support group to try to eliminate what is called AIDSphobia and homophobia within the industry.

The industry that is known to be overtly corrupt has surprisingly learned to care for its own like no other industry before, setting a precedence for other industries.

So in the light of seeing AIDS characters in television and films, such as Jesse on Life Goes On there is sure to be a change in people's attitudes as these very important issues are brought to the public's attention.

Presently, several AIDS related projects are in development and will include Tom Hanks and Denzel Washington in TriStar's Probable Cause; Richard Gere and Whoopi Goldberg in And the Band Played On a medical thriller based on Randy Shilts best-selling novel. And look forward to other AIDS-themed projects such as John Schlesinger's Good Days; and Francis Ford Coppola's The Cure, a film about an AIDS breakthrough.

Hollywood has finally grabbed itself by the boot straps and gotten its "act" together. Through Hollywood's stance on AIDS more and more people within the industry will be able to "come out" and say that they do have AIDS. Arthur Ashe and Magic Johnson are being praised for their courage by admitting to the world that they are afflicted with AIDS.

Hollywood has the opportunity to change and help mold people's opinions through the power of film and television. These mediums have a tremendous amount of impact on our daily lives and by making this issue visible through these mediums we can create an awareness comparable to none. Hollywood's time has come, and is finally ready to make change. Now is the time.

Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian columnist.

THE COLLEGIAN–
WE MAY NOT ALWAYS HAVE WHAT YOU WANT; BUT WE ALWAYS HAVE WHAT YOU NEED.
READ US. 19,000 OTHERS DO EVERY DAY.

It's Honest! Our Prices Will Save You More Than Just Pennies!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEER WINE LIQUORS
ROLLING ROCK $6.49 + DEP. 12 PK. BOTTLES
MILLER HIGH LIFE $9.99 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
PIELS DRAFT & LIGHT $7.99 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
MICHELOB REGULAR & LIGHT $12.49 + DEP. CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES
CORONA EXTRA $4.99 + DEP. 6 PK. BOTTLES
INGLENOOK CHENIN BLANC, RHINE, FRENCH COLOMBARD, ROSE, BLANC DE BLANC, WHITE GRENACHE, BLUSH, WHITE BARBERA $6.49 3.0L
GEORGE DUBOEUF COVEE RED & WHITE $5.99 1.5L
GLEN ELLEN WHITE ZINFANDEL $3.29 750 ML
WINE OF THE MONTH
FORTANT (FRENCH VARIETAL WINES) SAUVIGNON BLANC, CABERNET SAUVIGNON $4.49 750 ML
KORBEL CHAMPAGNE EXTRA DRY & BRUT $7.99 750 ML
JOSE CUERVO GOLD $10.49 750 ML
POPOV VODKA $9.99 1.75 L
CLUNY SCOTCH $13.99 1.75 L
CANADIAN MIST 1.75 L $9.49 AFTER REBATE
SALE 12.49 MAIL IN REBATE 3.00
BACARDI RUM LIGHT OR DARK $12.49 1.75 L
SALE 15.49 MAIL IN REBATE 3.00 AFTER REBATE
not responsible for typographical errors
OPEN: 9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
• TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS •
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS 2/4/93 THRU WEDS. 2/10/93
Full Redemption Center

UMASS Owes Amherst $203,000
DEAD BEAT?
UMass can afford a $203,000 extra & convocation center, but can't spend 1/4% of that to uphold its integrity.
Sincerely, Larry Adler

SPRING BREAK
PANAMA CITY BEACH
FLORIDA
• High quality beachfront accommodations for 7 exciting nights
• Round trip chartered motor coach
• Free pool deck parties, activities, & promotions
• Inter-Campus Programs I.D./Discount card
• On-location staff for complete assistance
• All taxes, tips, & service charges included
$119 $209
Call Jon or Mati 549-3749

Friday February 5, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 71

Cloudy this afternoon, light snow tonight. Cold windy weekend.

Local News:
Amherst officials are tiring of the University's tax-exempt status, and may ask the Campus Center Hotel to start 'paying its share.' Page 3.

Sports:
'Mullins Madness' began last night with a 64-59 Minuteman victory over West Virginia University. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Mullins Center is under investigation

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

The office of state Attorney General L. Scott Harshbarger is conducting an investigation into the construction of the new Mullins Center, which opened last night for its first Minuteman basketball game.

University of Massachusetts President Michael Hooker said he did not know exactly what the investigation was about, but that Harshbarger had assured him the safety of the arena was not in question.

"It's important to assure the public that we are being completely responsible in opening the building," Hooker told the University's Board of Trustees at a meeting Wednesday.

The attorney general's office requested copies of the construction plans for the center in late December, at which time Hooker was informed that authorities were "in the process of conducting an investigation concerning the construction of the Mullins Center," said Laslo Boyd, a spokesman from the University of Massachusetts in Boston.

Suffolk Construction Company, the general contractor for the center, issued a statement blaming the investigation on "unfounded criticisms" from a "disgruntled individual," and defending the quality of the center's construction.

"This person simply is trying to diminish the significant achievement that this project represents for both UMass and the Commonwealth. We stand behind its quality, excellence of construction, durability and service to the UMass community," the statement read.

However, Frank Callahan, executive director of the Pioneer Valley Building Trades Council, said he had talked with a number of workers on the job, who had been concerned about "corners being cut."

Callahan said he also had questions about some bidding practices. He said the council objected when the contract was awarded in 1990 to Suffolk, which uses non-union labor.

Thomas Samoluk, a spokesman for Harshbarger, said the office has a policy of neither confirming nor denying the existence of any investigation, and declined further comment.

Lee Esckilsen, general manager of the center, said he had been told nothing of the investigation except that the "building was safe to operate, plain and simple."

The center officially opened last night with the UMass Minutemen's 64-59 victory over West Virginia, marking the end of the team's long stay in the aging Curry Hicks Cage.

Besides the new basketball court, the $51 million center also houses two Olympic-sized hockey rinks, eight sets of dressing rooms, weight rooms, handball courts and facilities for concert and theater productions.

Annual operating costs for the center come to about $2.6 million, according to Paul Page, vice chancellor for administration and finance. They will be partially offset by an estimated $1.8 million in revenues from concerts and other productions with the remaining $800,000 coming from the university's operating budget, he said.

—Material from the Associated Press was used for this article.

JOHN MCKENNA / COLLEGIAN

NEVER CRY WOLF -- Jody Torgerson of Greenfield walks her Norwegian Elkhound "Norsky" through a barren cornfield.

Campus Center losing money

Task force created to reduce million dollar deficit

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

Editor's Note: This is the first in a two-part series on the fiscal situation in the University's Campus Center and Auxiliary Services.

Recent fiscal reports show the University of Massachusetts Campus Center having a deficit of almost $1.1 million dollars, and a special task force has been established to reduce it, University officials said.

Last year's mandatory pay increase for state employees and declining state appropriations for employee benefits have created severe financial woes at the University's Campus Center and Auxiliary Services, according to students and campus officials.

The Auxiliary Services deficit-reduction task force has been created under the direction of Ashoke Ganguli, the University's director of Auxiliary Services, and consists of middle-managers throughout Auxiliary Services, unionized employees, and students, Ganguli said.

The task force's statement of purpose includes promises to reduce the deficit in two or three years, to avoid layoffs if possible, and not to privatize any campus enterprises, said Board of Governors Chairperson Ben Preston, a member of the task force and a senior political science and history major.

"The task force wants to make changes with minimum service impacts to students, because without the students, we wouldn't be here," said Ganguli.

Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page has given the task force a deadline of Feb. 25 for a finalized deficit reduction report, Ganguli said.

According to Ganguli, at the end of the 1980s Auxiliary Services' budget had a surplus of almost one million dollars, but in 1988, "crushing" budget cuts forced Aux-

Turn to CAMPUS CENTER, page 4

State research lab to open at UMass

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
and JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

Gov. William Weld and U.S. Senator John Kerry will appear at the University of Massachusetts early next week to support the opening of the state's new industry/university shared research lab.

Kerry, who will be speaking in the Student Union Ballroom Monday at 1:15 p.m., and Weld, who will participate in a ribbon-cutting ceremony Tuesday at 1:30 p.m., are appearing as part of the annual National Research Forum for Industry, which will be held in the UMass Campus Center on Feb. 8 and 9.

Weld made a supplemental appropriation in the Commonwealth's budget to include $300,000 to help build a lab for robotic research at the University in the future, according to Paul McOwen, administrative director of the University's Center for Real-time and Intelligent Complex Computing Systems (CRICCS).

CRICCS, a program focusing on pooling the talents of computer science universities and private industry researchers, began operations in October 1991.

The base funding for the program was provided through a $1.2 million grant from the National Science Foundation, McOwen said.

McOwen said Weld and Kerry's visits represent a change in the Commonwealth's approach to a greater emphasis on private sector spending, combined with university resources.

Weld made a $300,000 supplemental appropriation to help the University build a robotics research lab in the near future.

"The state is making a transition from vast military spending to commercial, private-sector technological activities," McOwen said.

Weld will participate in the ribbon-cutting ceremony

Turn to WELD, page 2

U.N. advances disarmament of warlords

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — American and U.N. commanders moved today to shore up a cease-fire and advance disarmament, demanding that Somalia's rival warlords hand over lists of all weapons and men under their control.

The request was made in a letter to 14 faction chiefs from Lt. Gen. Robert B. Johnston, commander of the U.S.-led military coalition in Somalia, and, for the United Nations, Gen. Imtiaz Shaheen of Pakistan.

The request came as U.N. spokesman Farouk Mawlawi said American and Belgian forces were "positioning themselves for a show of strength" against one of the faction warlords, known as Gen. Morgan.

Morgan, whose real name is Mohamed Said Hirsi, has been engaged in sporadic skirmishes for the past two weeks near the southern port of Kismayu with the forces of another warlord, Col. Omar Jess.

The fighting scuttled a round of preliminary peace talks that had been scheduled to start in Mogadishu on Monday. The country's leading warlord, Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, accused Morgan of cease-fire violations.

All 14 factions, including Morgan's, agreed to a cease-fire and disarmament program as mandated by a U.N. Security Council resolution at a meeting in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, last month.

Morgan, a son-in-law of ousted president Mohammed Siad Barre, continued to fight after the

Turn to SOMALIA, page 4

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivero
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Boez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandro Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieiro
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Jonoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristino Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Corvolho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicko

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Mojerowski, Lori Block, Brion Horrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

The Collegian Night Staff would like to wish the UMass Men's and Women's Indoor Track teams the best of luck in their meets at Rhode Island this weekend.

Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual FORUM

The GLB Forum runs each Thursday and consists of event listings of interest to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual community. The GLB Forum is compiled by the GLB Issues Editor who can be contacted c/o the Collegian.

Friday, Feb. 5, 1993

Lecture — Ann Ferguson, a professor of Philosophy at UMass, will address "Homosexuality, Multiculturalism and the Academic Values Panic," as part of the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Brown Bag Series, from 12-1:30 p.m., 9th floor Campus Center.

Sunday, Feb. 7

Performance — Folksinger Cathy Winter and comedians Edar Macintosh and Tone Nunes will perform in the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Cafe Series. 7:30 p.m., Hampden Theater. $3 donation requested.

Monday, Feb. 8

Open House — The Program for GLB concerns will host an open house at its office in Crampton House, SW from 4-6 p.m. All students, faculty and staff of the 5-college area are invited to tour the facility and acquaint themselves with the program's services. Refreshments will be served.

Tuesday, Feb. 9

Trainings — The Speakers Bureau will hold trainings for new members from 7-10 p.m. at the Program for GLB Concerns' Office, Crampton, SW. Call 545-4824 to register.

Wednesday, Feb. 10

Orientation — The Speakers Bureau will hold an orientation for new and returning members from 5-7 p.m. at the Program for GLB Concerns' Office, Crampton House, SW.

Thursday, Feb. 11

Lecture — "Bonding and Bondage," a lecture presented by Donald Wert, M.S. of the Regent Hospital in New York, will be held from 12-1:30 p.m., Campus Center Rm. 804-808.

Group — The GLB Graduate Student Organization and the LGB Counseling host "Hanging Out," an informal discussion group. 6:30-8:30 p.m. Program for GLB Concerns' Office, Crampton House, SW.

Friday, Feb. 12

Group — The LBG Alliance will host a coffee social at 3:00 p.m. in the Campus Center, 9th Floor.

Saturday, Feb. 13

Dance — The LBG Alliance hosts a dance in the Bluewall from 9 p.m - 2 a.m. $4.

Kids picket adult bookstore

Seventh and eighth graders say 'No to porn!'

CHICOPEE(AP) — Carrying signs reading "Say No to Porn" and "Honk Your Horn for No Porn" about 50 seventh and eighth-graders picketed an adult bookstore a block from their parochial school.

"We hope to have an effect on getting the store out of the neighborhood," said Jenifer Valentine, 14, an eighth-grader at Mount Carmel School.

Nancy Donofrio, assistant principal and religion teacher, said parents signed permission slips allowing the students to participate in the Wednesday picket.

She said she brought up the issue of the recently opened store in religion class and said the students were learning about civic responsibility with the picket.

Store owner Robert Kraefft said he upheld the right of anyone to protest. But he said the students can't even enter the store because they are not yet 18 years old.

"I wonder if they understand why they are picketing," Kraefft said.

Kraefft is currently appealing an order by the city building inspector to close for lack of a certificate of occupancy. A hearing is scheduled for Feb. 27.

■ Weld

continued from page 1

Tuesday to celebrate the University's being chosen as the site of the state's new industry/university shared research lab, which will operate as part of CRICCS.

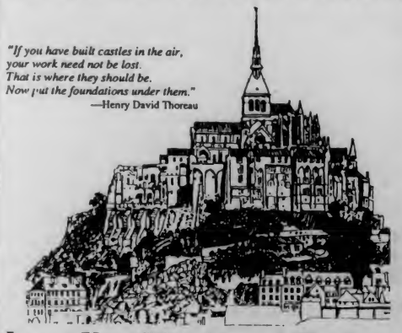
UMass and three other applicants were chosen from a pool of 100 to be the site of a national research center, to link industry and university resources.

Kerry's speech will be open to the public, while Weld's visit will only be open to conference participants.

The initial research focus for the CRICCS program has focused on five different areas, including automated manufacturing, advanced process control and intelligent vehicle/highway systems, which will provide greater automobile safety through allowing cars to "sense" an oncoming collision.

The other two research areas include intelligent information retrieval, which Kerry supports strongly, and integrated computing environments, which will allow greater coordination among large computer systems.

University of Wisconsin-Platteville



"If you have built castles in the air, your work need not be lost. That is where they should be. Now put the foundations under them."
—Henry David Thoreau

Learn Your Way Around The World

- Study abroad in London, England or Seville, Spain, for a summer, for a semester or for a full academic year
- Courses in liberal arts and international business
- Fluency in a foreign language not required
- Home-stays with meals
- Field trips
- Financial aid applies (except for summer session)

Application deadlines:
- April 1 for summer session
- April 30 for fall semester
- October 20 for spring semester

For a program description and an application, call toll free:
1-800-342-1725

Hadley Coin-Op Laundromat
206 Russell St. Rt. 9
Open 7 Days 7am-11pm
Top Loaders: $1.00 • Dbl. Loaders : $1.50
Weekend Special: 75¢ dbl. Loaders

UMASS Owes Amherst $203,000
DEAD BEAT?
UMass can afford a $203,000 stray & convention center, but can't spend 100¢ of that to rebuild its campus
Sincerely,
Larry Kelley

Local News

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
READ THE FINE PRINT – Kenya Washington, a junior art history major at Smith College, checks out the "Black, Brown & Beige" exhibit at the New Africa House.

B.O.G. may examine vending

Motion made to investigate concourse program costs

By DANIEL BOUCHER
Collegian Correspondent

The Board of Governors heard a motion last night to investigate the expenses of Campus Center concourse table vending.

The motion, proposed by Governor Dan Gordon, would ask the vice-chair of the Board to compare the amount of the vending program's expenses borne by Campus Center Building Operations with the amount the B.O.G. spends.

Gordon said in an interview after the meeting "I suspect that the Campus Center [Building Operations'] expenditures for the concourse vending program are minimal."

Gordon estimated, however, that administering the program costs the Board between $12,000 and $18,000, although he admitted that the figure was somewhat dated.

Although vendors pay fees to peddle their wares on the concourse, Gordon said "I want to find out if the vending costs [Building Operations] anything, and we're not getting enough of that money back to pay for it. But it's very new, and I'm not sure what's going to happen to it."

In further business, the B.O.G. heard an idea advanced by Chairman Ben Preston to convert the Top of the Campus Restaurant into a dance club with two open bars and the possibility of 18 and over nights. Vice-chairman Cristina Blanco said she is optimistic about the idea, but said it had to be proceeded with carefully because a dance club in the T.O.C. failed once before.

The Governors said they intend to further discuss both ideas at their next meeting.

Commuter Governor Micah Levy resigned last night with a plea to B.O.G. members to keep the organization going and increase their number. He warned the Board would be gone soon if it is not "strong and autonomous."

"Get a friend," he suggested. "Make it a fun thing."

He recalled when there were 20-30 members on the Board. Officially, there are now 10 and above. Although he recalled in-fighting between left-wing and right-wing groups, he said "As many problems as it caused, there were enough people to get the work done."

Gordon emphasized the need for the Governors to conduct better public relations.

Turn to VENDING, page 4

Amherst wants campus hotel to pay taxes

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

In the face of Amherst's $2 million revenue shortfall this year, some town residents said they would like the presently tax-exempt University of Massachusetts Campus Center Hotel to start paying its share.

Jon Hite, chairperson of the Amherst tax-exempt committee, said he would like the hotel to pay a small percentage, probably between four and six percent, to the town of Amherst.

"It is not a tax on the University. It is a tax on the people who stay in the motel rooms," Hite said. "We are not talking about a very heavy tax burden, [but an anticipated] $20,000 to the town is a fire fighter or school books."

Hite added the hotel unfairly advertises in Fedor Travel Guide as having no lodging tax.

But Benjamin Preston from the Board of Governors said such a tax would hurt students.

"Students are a majority of the hotel's business. The hotel's charges for students have been going steadily up. Certain students are not going to pay higher rates. The town does not stand to make money when they are driving people away," said Preston, a senior who is majoring in history and political science.

Preston said the Campus Center Hotel will be operating at a $38,000 loss for the 1994 financial year.

"It is not a tax on the University. It is a tax on the people who stay in the motel rooms."

-Jon Hite, Amherst tax-exempt committee

For two students to spend a Friday or Saturday night at the Campus Center Hotel costs $48 (non-students pay $70) and at the Amherst Motel $48, including the hotel tax. Both the Howard Johnson in Hadley and the Amherst Motel pay a lodging tax of 9.7 percent.

Hotels across the state are required to charge a lodging tax, but because the hotel is on University property and is a non-profit institution it does not have to pay the tax, according to Hite.

State Representative Ellen Story (D-Amherst), who could not be reached for comment, is presenting a bill requiring hotels on colleges and universities to pay the lodging tax.

Janice Ratner, head of the Amherst finance committee said other campus businesses such as the barbershop and bookstore do not pay taxes either, unlike their counterparts in Amherst.

"It is a business, so maybe it should pay taxes like other businesses in town," Ratner said.

Student tutors needed to help UMass athletes

By JASON NASH
Collegian Staff

While most enjoy the great athletics the University of Massachusetts provides each season, few fans are aware of the hard work that goes into being a student-athlete at UMass, both on and off the field.

With UMass athletes practicing over 20 hours a week, the need for academic help has become greater and greater.

That is why UMass Academic Coordinator Ed Suglia is offering paid positions for students to work as tutors for the athletes on campus.

"We're basically looking for anyone who is strong in any major," Suglia said. "We need help in all areas, especially math, science, business and engineering."

Students hired will be assigned to a certain subject and be responsible for helping anywhere from one to five athletes on school nights.

"We've reserved numerous rooms in Boyden and Bartlett that will be specifically designated for tutoring," Suglia said. "Since the athletes are practicing in the afternoon, they will need to be tutored after dinner."

"Right now we're in the beginning stages, and we're getting there slowly," Suglia said. "Hopefully when the new athletic director settles in, we'll put together a nice program.

With all the negative stereotyping that goes on about athletes being dumb, Suglia made it clear that this program was not designed for athletes to get an easy way out of their school work.

"By no means do we expect the tutors to do the work for them," Suglia said. "Our goal is to use the tutors as help and eventually make these kids independent learners."

For those students that believe they might not be smart enough for the position, Suglia said students did not have to be "rocket scientists" to become a part of the program.

"All we are looking for is competent people," Suglia said. "Often a tutor with a 4.0 GPA has no idea what it's like to struggle through a class. Help from someone who was once in the same position is a better option."

While UMass has recently been successful in almost every sport, Suglia said he has made tutoring a priority in order to continue that success in the classroom.

"We believe all our athletes are great, positive kids and that's one of the reasons the sports have kept on winning," Suglia said. "The tutoring program has always helped us in the past and with a little help and direction the athletes will be OK."

Suglia will be conducting interviews for tutoring positions next week in Boyden gym. For more information call 545-4379.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
CONSTRUCTION IN THE COLD -- The house on Triangle Street in Amherst where a fatal fire burned two years ago is slowly being rebuilt.

■ Campus Center

continued from page 1

iliary Services to pick up the tab for all employee fringe benefits, resulting in a one million dollar budget increase for the 1990 fiscal year.

The fringe benefits include workman's compensation, unemployment costs, group health insurance and retirement funds, all of which had been subsidized by the state. At the same time the state took away funding for the Campus Center utilities, said Ganguli.

A 13 percent mandatory pay raise passed last December by the state Legislature for 50,000 unionized state employees also increased budget expenses. This raise came in two parts, with a six percent increase effective Dec. 21 and another seven percent increase which will go into effect June 28, 1993, Ganguli said.

Auxiliary Services oversees the operation of the Hatch, Bluewall, University Store and other campus retail operations, conducts building maintenance, provides catering services, and manages the campus dining commons.

Auxiliary Services is also budgeted for "full costing." This requires all Auxiliary Services businesses to pay for administrative support, operating costs and overhead. The businesses currently pay out 3.82 percent of all transactions to the University administration.

Preston estimated a partial suspension of this fee would save Auxiliary Services nearly $450,000 dollars.

The task force has issued an interim report containing, among others, several suggestions on saving money in the area of food services. Preston said that because food services have been losing the most money, they have received the most attention from the task force.

■ Somalia

continued from page 1

dictator fled into exile two years ago. Jess is one of Aidid's principal allies.

American and Belgian forces have twice attacked Morgan's militia in the past two weeks, first on Jan. 25 and again on Monday, using helicopter gunships and armored personnel carriers.

The first attack came when Morgan ignored a warning to halt an advance toward Jess's position. The second was launched when a U.S. army Cobra gunship spotted one of Morgan's armed vehicles moving toward a Belgian army patrol.

At least eight vehicles and several artillery pieces were destroyed in the two attacks.

Mawlawi said he had no further details of the reported American-Belgian move, but an Associated Press reporter and a photographer who returned to Mogadishu from Kismayu today said they saw no evidence of troop movements.

However, U.S. army observation planes and helicopter gunships were patrolling the area where the earlier clashes took place, they said.

■ vending

continued from page 3

Christopher Schork, a commuter governor, agreed.

"This is their Campus Center, their Student Union," he said about the students. "They can make it anything they want."

Ben Preston, chairman of the BOG, withdrew a motion to establish a $500 commemorative scholarship in the name of William M. Harris, the director of the Campus Center. The scholarship would have been granted to a board member, not an officer or a senior, and elected from a run-off election between members nominated by the Campus Center Director and the Chair of the Board of Governors.

The Collegian is packed by weight, not volume.

CALLING ALL COLLEGIAN S T A F F !

This is your captain speaking. I would like to announce that there is to be a mandatory, I repeat... MANDATORY staff meeting for Staffers, Correspondents, Columnists, Photographers, Business and Graphics staff. We will have pizza as well as delicious snacks available for your enjoyment, so please do us the honor of attending. Also for your viewing pleasure, video entertainment. Thank you very much.

Sunday 6:30 PM Collegian News Room 113 Campus Center

Be there.

"Women in Derivatives Trading and Financial Risk Management"
Amherst College Converse Hall - The Red Room
Monday, February 8, 1993, 7:30PM

You've worked hard...
Excelled academically...
Achieved results...
Now it's time to trade up...

If you possess exceptional analytical talent...want to use sophisticated technology...and thrive on complex intellectual challenges — you can achieve results with Swiss Bank Corporation – Capital Markets and Treasury.

The integration of The O'Connor Partnerships and Swiss Bank Corporation's Capital Markets and Treasury business has resulted in an innovative, client-focused organization poised for global leadership across the full range of capital markets and treasury products and services. Our expertise is trading and risk management – cash and derivative instruments – in foreign exchange, interest rates and Japanese and European equities.

We provide renowned theoretical training coupled with its practical application on an exchange floor or risk management trading desk. We expect you to express your ideas, collaboratively develop dynamic solutions, and assume responsibility for trading and managing portfolio risk.

Career opportunities exist in major financial centers in North America, Europe and Asia.

We want to meet you! Learn more about our innovative firm at our presentation in Amherst College Converse Hall - The Red Room on February 8th. For more information, contact the Office of Career Planning and Placement. If unable to attend, direct your resume to: Swiss Bank Corporation, Attn: Human Resources - Recruiting, 141 W. Jackson, Chicago, IL 60604. Equal Opportunity Employer M/F/D/V

TRADE UP TO THIS CAREER OPTION.
Capital Markets and Treasury

Swiss Bank Corporation
Schweizerischer Bankverein
Société de Banque Suisse

Walking Distance

FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA

The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive, Amherst • 253-3539

Free Weights Supreme Best Cardiovascular

Want the Boston Globe delivered?

Monday - Friday and Sunday

Call 1-800-858-4275 Then press zero

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Dear Spike,

Thank you for sharing your life story with us, the students of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, on Wednesday, Feb. 3, at the Fine Arts Center. It was generous of you to do so for your normal rate of $16,500 per 120 minutes of insight, instead of the half-price $8,000 you agreed to charge the school in the fall. Your rationale was that our school is in a precarious racial situation, and you volunteered to ride into Amherst like the Lone Ranger to solve things for a mere $8,000.

Michael
MORRISSEY

I am ecstatic that you reconsidered. After all, this university, 82 percent of which is comprised of White students, should not be privy to special treatment. Maybe you correctly deduced that the "ALLY" pins (costing $1,400 in themselves) which were given out to students have ended all racial problems for good, and realized you could charge the full $16,500.

In fact, for the low, low price of $16,500, you also shared your angry disposition, short fuse and accusatory manner in an effort to teach us students how to become irascible famous people.

Spike, you detail how racism pervades every aspect of society, including film. I sincerely believe that you are one of the top filmmakers in the U.S., and that this designation automatically entitles you to speak out about every political matter.

Humbly, you told us that you do not mean to be the voice of 30 million Black Americans, but we know that you already are. Millions of people, Black and White alike, bought Malcolm X hats after you made public your intention to film the life of the slain leader. I'm sure you made quite a pretty penny off the merchandising, but that's another point.

Again, for a man who seems so concerned about the plight of the Black race, the University should be proud to have your services for one night, while a very needy school like Harvard can employ you for a whole semester. We all know how many underprivileged Blacks attend Harvard needy for your advice not only about filmmaking but about race relations.

Teaching at the most exclusive private university in the country is not hypocritical of you at all, for I am sure that Harvard remunerated you well for your services, and money is the bottom line, right?

In your recent film, Malcolm X, a White female student walks up to Malcolm at Harvard and says, "I'm a White person who has tried to reverse my own built-in racism and help the Black race. What can I do to help?" Malcolm, without skipping a beat, replies, "Absolutely nothing," and walks away.

If you ever make a movie about yourself, you can say, "I'm a filthy-rich filmmaker hoping to advance my own political agenda on race relations. What can I do to help UMass?" We'll gladly reply, "Absolutely nothing."

Sincerely,
Michael Morrissey

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist.

We can all celebrate Black history

It began as an improvised walk into the North Amherst night. A bit cold, sure, but certainly a peaceful evening for a journey into the area surrounding quiet Puffer's Pond.

A pair of headlights occasionally pierced the perimeter of the winding, dark road. A dog's bark. The crinkle of leaves below. The pattern of a lonesome runner's footsteps on the sand near the edge of the road. The sounds of late-night animals in the trees.

Gary
DEANE

Along my trail appeared a gathering of cars parked up a driveway and spilling out onto the road. I traveled past a small party of perhaps forty people in a large old country house, painted barn red with black shutters. Within this house was a special room containing antique pictures, dried flowers and a small, dusty, well-worn library.

But what gave this room life was its collection of old jazz instruments, many of which were venerable, genuine pieces of art. An old piano with yellowing keys leaned against one wall, with a flugelhorn, a number of guitars, banjos and trumpets and a small, simple drum set whose heads had browned over the years.

People were drinking wine and beer, eating appetizers and wandering in and out of that room. As conversations drifted, a middle-aged man sat at the vintage piano and softly strung some notes into a song. Inside of ten minutes everyone's attention was focused on the band in the room with the antique pictures.

One musician played the flugelhorn, then the drums, then a violin. In another corner, a musician would contribute a solo, a joke or just a look. Someone playfully held the edge of the ride cymbal while the drummer pretended to hit his hand. Some left the room to get a cold drink, but the music didn't stop. As the room warmed, the music sped up and the jazz really swung.

Maybe someone would be tempted to play an extremely adventurous improvisational solo that night, one that would turn the heads of the small crowd, and maybe later it would be worked into their more public performances. Or maybe the atmosphere would never have that same spontaneous spirit again. Either way, the notes would settle into privileged ears that evening. Perhaps a neighbor or two listened in — or just a person out for a walk that night.

As I continued my stroll toward my house, a faint rhythm traveled through the forest and over the stones, and I stopped my walking to listen.

I wasn't a very far distance from UMass, but I felt far from the rallies, riots and racism. Some people I didn't even know got together and I heard them play.

I opened the door to my house, put down my coat and made a cup of hot chocolate. I had a song in my head for the rest of that night. It was some old jazz song, but I hadn't heard it that night; I just knew it from somewhere.

I remember thinking that in some small but genuine way I was able to join in on a celebration of Black history — the music and its instruments. It was indirect, but just the fact that I thought of it like that made me feel somewhat aware, insightful and diversified.

The next morning, a friend I once knew from work called. He was interested in going to graduate school at UMass and asked me how things were here. I thought he wanted to know about the academics, the weather and the town. I talked about the new arena, the basketball team and some scientists here who made the news because they did something confusing with rice bran.

He interrupted my rambling and said he meant he was concerned about the school's "racial problems." He decided not to apply here because of what he's heard, and I didn't know what to say.

Gary Deane is a UMass student.

Clinton can't be a miracle worker

I sat at my word processor, praying to the Term Paper Gods to descend unto me and deliver my first column this semester. The closest I came to enlightenment was an appeal to the student body to take up a collection and spare Dionne Warwick and Eric Estrada from pushing psychic 900 numbers on cable. Do they really need the money that badly? Please, give generously.

Steven L.
COHEN

After abandoning this idea - I was stuck. So I looked around my room. At the same moment that Billy Joel started to sing Bob Dylan's "The Times, They Are A Changin'" I reflected upon the quote at the bottom of my JFK poster: "It's time for a new generation of leadership. . . for there is a new world to be won."

Ever since Bill Clinton started to win the primaries, he has been compared to JFK. Is it because of his looks, his social and domestic reform programs, his tabloid personal life, or the fact that the babyboomers who elected him grew up during JFK's Camelot?

President Clinton successfully combines many qualities that Americans look for. He has charisma. A master of the art, he wears it like a fine cologne. Also, he cares as much about the American people as he does about how he is preserved in the history books for posterity to judge.

I say this because I have met Bill. During the New Hampshire primary, I was campaigning outside a polling station when up drove Gov. Clinton. When Bill shook my hand and smiled at me I felt something very unexpected. Most politicians shake your hand and plasticly smile through you. When Clinton shook my hand, his smile said, "Hi, you are my best friend, just for a minute. I understand and I care." He was real. He gave me hope and I knew then that I had just met the next president.

Then at the inauguration I noticed that the planet's biggest party was making everyone forget something. There is a flip side to the fact that President Clinton is real — he is only human. This country has put him on a pedestal and expects him to fix the country's problems, keep his campaign promises, immediately stabilize the world's economy and still play the saxophone on a nightly half-hour MTV show. Putting that much faith in a leader you support only condemns him to imminent failure.

For anyone insistent upon going back to the days of JFK's Camelot, watch TV. The media would have us believe that this country is following Peter Pan toward the "second star to the right and straight on till morning." Let me remind you that if we expect Never-Never-Land, we will never get there.

What's my point? The winds of change are surely blowing in the sails of this paper skiff, but it will take us time to reach our Brave New World where free children live their dreams. Until then, "have fun storming the castle, boys," 'cause it's going to take a miracle to fix things on the Hill.

Steven L. Cohen is a UMass student.

Spike Lee: doing the money thing

In this, the "Happy Valley," it seems like you can't walk 10 feet without bumping into someone who's moaning about something. Well kids, now it's my turn. Let me just state for the record that I'm in no way, shape or form racist.

Here's the deal: the filmmaker Spike Lee spoke at the Fine Arts Center Wednesday night. Fine. Mr. Lee is a successful writer/director, as well as a pop culture icon, and I'm sure many people on this campus would appreciate hearing what he has to say. O.K. Fine. Great.

Unfortunately Spike Lee did not come here out of the goodness of his heart, he came here for $16,500. I hope Spike Lee has the nobility to donate all that cash to charity; if not, then he's just another greedy, whiny Hollywood weasel who cares more about money than the people he alleges to represent.

Dan Shea
Dagger Rathbone Central

Raising kids is lots of work

I have never felt it necessary to respond to an article in a newspaper until now. I read Michael Morrissey's article about "fem-bians" [Collegian, Jan. 29] and had to comment on something.

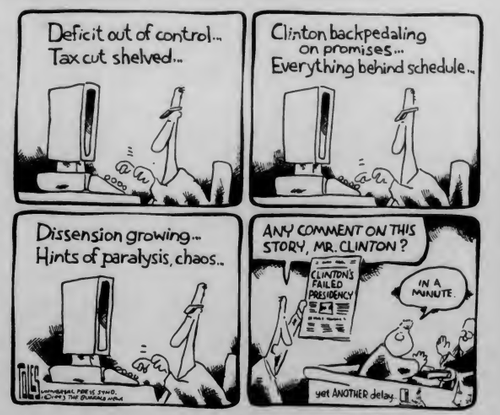
He wrote, "All women do not want to work, and in fact many would raise children," implying that raising children is not working. Hello? As a graduating senior and the single mother of a 10-month-old boy, I can tell you it is plenty of work.

Marian A. Hussey
Amherst

Secret liberal?

Michael Morrissey [Collegian, Jan. 29] must be a liberal in disguise, since no rabid conservative could ever write such an amusing piece on the "insidious dangers of feminism!" Despite the many requests for it which I've seen printed in your paper, please don't remove him from the staff, as the touch of hilarity which his columns bring to my day is always welcome.

Laura Hermer
Northampton



Official may investigate himself

BOSTON (AP) — The former head of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD) said he may have a chance to head the federal agency that may investigate a sexual harassment complaint against him.

Alex Rodriguez told the Boston Globe that President Clinton administration's personnel office asked him last Friday to submit a resume for the top job at the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC).

Rodriguez, now Cambridge licensing commissioner, said he had sent a resume earlier with a letter saying he was interested in various jobs, including the head of the EEOC.

He said the personnel official who talked to him Friday knew that a clerk at the Cambridge licensing office had filed a harassment complaint against him last month.

The clerk, Valerie Lynch Ortiz, said Rodriguez told sexual jokes, stared at women workers and created "a very uncomfortable working environment."

Michael Duffy, who now heads the MCAD, referred to the complaint to the EEOC to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest because Rodriguez had headed the state agency for eight years.

Rodriguez has denied any wrongdoings but said listeners could have been offended by some of his comments. Two of three women involved accepted his apologies.

He said he met in Washington last Wednesday with Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Henry Cisneros and was asked to take a senior position with that agency.

Rodriguez said he asked Cisneros first to try to help him get the chairmanship for the EEOC.

As head of the MCAD, Rodriguez was credited with breakthroughs in investigating and adjudicating allegations of sexual discrimination and harassment.

UM ski team holding own

By DAVID COPELAND
Collegian Correspondant

Although they have been representing the University of Massachusetts for over sixty years, UMass men's and women's ski teams are "like a well kept secret," according to coach Bill MacConnell.

But while their success may be a secret to many students, their opponents in the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference are well aware of the team's strength. Currently, both the men's and women's teams hold firm grips on second place, second only to league powerhouse Boston College.

"Generally, "MacConnell said, "our rivalries are with BC, Plymouth State, and occasionally Dartmouth, if they come ready to ski."

Last weekend the teams had a successful two days of racing at the Dartmouth Ski Way in Lyme, N.H., despite the bitter cold and high winds. On Saturday, in the slalom event, the women's team placed third behind BC and Plymouth State. UMass was led by J.J. Tanguay, who finished with a combined two-run time of 96.74.

The men finished a close second to BC in the slalom, behind the strong skiing of Bill Shafer, who recently transferred from Wyoming State. Shafer, who finished first with a combined time of 87.28, is "one of the twenty best collegiate skiers in the nation," according to MacConnell. UMass also had a strong race from John Soglia, who finished fourth.

In Sunday's Giant Slalom, the women rebounded to edge Plymouth State for second place, but once again lost to Boston College. While none of the women placed in the top three, Tanguay skied to a respectable eighth place, followed closely by teammate Kerry Sparks, who finished ninth.

In the men's giant slalom, UMass finished first for the first time this season. They once again had excellent days from Shafer, first overall, and Soglia, who finished sixth. Joel Bradford rounded out the men's top three finishers, placing seventh.

This weekend, the team travels to Loon Mountain in Lincoln, N.H., hoping to narrow BC's lead in the overall standings. Through six races, BC led the men's division with seven points, followed by UMass with eleven points. The next closest team is Plymouth State with 27 points, and they appear out of the quest for the league title with only four races left.

In the women's division, BC leads with a perfect six points, UMass has thirteen points, and Plymouth State rounds out the top three with 21 points.

With four races left on the schedule, MacConnell realizes that his team has a big task at hand if they want to catch the BC Eagles.

"We'll have a tough time catching BC this late in the season, but if we keep improving as we have been, it can be done," he said.

"WHAT'S LEFT" Sale

Savings from 30-70% off winter shoes, clothing & accessories

ZANNA

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

DESCRIBE, OR BE DESCRIBED.

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 4 MT. FARMS MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY 584-0151
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Nowhere to Run R
A Few Good Men R
Used People PG-13
Groundhog Day PG
Lorenzo's Oil* PG-13
Matinee* PG
HAMPSHIRE 8 HAMPSHIRE MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY 584-7550
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Scent of a Woman R
Sniper* R
Sommersby* PG-13
Alive R
Aladdin PG
Vanishing* R
Homeward Bound G

"Women in Derivatives Trading and Financial Risk Management"
Amherst College Converse Hall - The Red Room
Monday, February 8, 1993, 7:30PM

You've worked hard...
Excelled academically...
Achieved results...
Now it's time to trade up...

If you possess exceptional analytical talent...want to use sophisticated technology...and thrive on complex intellectual challenges — you can achieve results with O'Connor & Associates.

We're a premier technology-based securities trading and financial risk management firm specializing in U.S. and Canadian equity & index options, convertible securities and other derivative instruments. O'Connor & Associates will be integrated into a Swiss Bank Corporation subsidiary if the necessary regulatory approvals are received.

We provide renowned theoretical training coupled with its practical application on an exchange floor or risk management trading desk. We expect you to express your ideas, collaboratively develop dynamic solutions, and assume responsibility for committing capital and managing portfolio risk.

Career opportunities exist in major financial centers in North America and Europe.

We want to meet you! Learn more about our innovative firm at our presentation in the Amherst College Converse Hall - The Red Room on February 8th. For more information, contact the Office of Career Planning and Placement. If unable to attend, direct your resume to: O'Connor & Associates, Attn: Human Resources - Recruiting, 141 W. Jackson, Chicago, IL 60604. Equal Opportunity Employer M/F/D/V

O'CONNOR & ASSOCIATES
TRADE UP TO THIS CAREER OPTION.

UMASS Owes Amherst $203,000
DEAD BEAT?
Unless cuts slated at $500,000 are restored, UMass will be unable to repay its debt to Amherst.
Larry Kelley

The Spa
Hot Tubs & Tans
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

THIS SATURDAY!
TICKETS ONLY $10
All Ages All Shows
"Direct from OZ via The Twilight Zone"
EMO PHILIPS
COMING SOON
RHONDA SHEAR Valentine's Day Special Feb 13
MARC DeCARLO "STUDS" Feb 20
JAMIE FOXX Mar. 6
COMEDY CONNECTION AT THE HU KE LAU CHICOPEE
CALL 413•593•5222

Arts & Living

Rembrandts' new Untitled is silly musical mud

By CALEB COCHRAN
Collegian Staff

Untitled
The Rembrandts
Atco Records

The most accurate thing that can be said about the latest release from the Rembrandts, Untitled, is that it is definitely no masterpiece.

At their best, the Rembrandts sing and play with a sound and enthusiasm much like that of the Beatles. At their worst, they sound like two very average vocalists trying to sing their way past their own bad lyrics. Unfortunately, this album showcases much more of the Rembrandts at their worst.

The album begins on a very positive note with "Johnny Have you Seen Her?," a fabulous combination of crisp, refined vocals and great instrumental performances, especially by cellist Joe Englund. It is on this track that the comparison to the Fab Four is most evident. The vocals of Danny Wilde and Phil Solem are impressive as the tune grabs the listener by the ears, certainly in a preview of the great music to come, right?

Well, no. For the most part, the rest of Untitled is lyrical drivel and musical mud. The Rembrandts overestimate the power of their lyrics at times and come off sounding silly.

"Hang On, Clementine" is an example of a song that tries to rock the house but instead belongs out in the barn. The lyrics are pathetic, and any instrumental value the song would have had is cancelled out. For example: "Our wagon lost a wheel/ Along the rocky wind/ I'll make it up to you/ my darlin' Clementine." Rocky wind? What are they talking about?

"Sweet Virginia" is another song that should be put out to pasture. For a band that places so much emphasis on lyrics and vocals, the Rembrandts have written a very poor album. "I need a love that has no ending/ Virginia on that I'm depending." Huh?

Other than "Johnny Have you Seen Her?," the only worthwhile track on the album is "Hang on to Forever." The song has a similar vocal appeal to "Johnny," although the chorus doesn't have the same power.

The remainder of the album is lousy. "Maybe Tomorrow," "Rollin' Down the Hill" and "One Horse Town" are just a few examples of the weak tunes that can be found throughout this disappointing collection.

If not for the terrific opening track, Untitled would be completely worthless. The fact that the Rembrandts have produced one great song makes the album that much more of a disappointment. The potential for a worthy album is here, but until they work on their songwriting, the Rembrandts will remain another band with great potential and not much to show for it.

ARTS!

Spike Lee underwhelms

Stay in school. Support civil rights. Fight racism.

Maybe I'm being overly harsh, but I did not plan on spending my money to listen to token phrases that I have heard repeated by every other media voice in the past five years. Spike Lee has made some great films, but that certainly does not qualify him to charge some $16,000 a speaking engagement to tell us how he raised money for his films and elusively avoid any pertinent questions raised by the audience.

Nathan
CRICK

I entered the Fine Arts Center expecting to hear an outspoken Black filmmaker talk about the the major problems of race and violence in our society and how they have managed to corrupt this University. I expected a lecture that would make me think, that might offend me or inspire me or do ANYTHING to make me look into myself and force me to confront my perceptions. That's what paid speakers are supposed to do. To make powerful statements that can only be heard through that kind of personal interaction allowed in a crowded lecture hall, away from the media hype. I felt Spike Lee failed to do so Wednesday evening.

After an inspirational rendition of the Black national anthem, Spike Lee walked out to a standing ovation and proceeded to talk about, well, himself. He made references to his celebrity friends, strategic mention of his films in order to be applauded, and talked about the all encompassing dilemma in society of how to get funding for movies. Now, I suppose it would have been interesting if he had claimed the studios were being racist bigots or that people were fighting him at every step, but he didn't. He just said that was basically what a studio would do to any director with a $35 million budget. Ooooh.

So then the question-answer period came about. In all honesty, I thought the people asking questions were three times as interesting as Spike Lee, especially the two women who had affinities for making their own miniature speeches. I would've paid just to see those two talk about their impressions of the University, at least they had strong opinions and some kind of inspiration. You see, I felt a kind of offended by the fact that Spike had absolutely no idea what was going on around this campus. Absolutely none. When one woman asked a question about what advice he could give to Black students on this campus, he simply asked her what the problems were. When she responded that the sociology professors were racist and that she felt they were being set up to fail, Spike said to keep going and get an education no matter what people say. Well Spike, that's great. I don't think most of us realized that's actually why we're here. Gee, things you learn.

Things did not improve either. When asked if he would support other minority groups in his filmmaking he replied "yes" and moved to the next question. When asked what he thought about Clinton he said that he hoped he would do a good job and was encouraged by his stand on gay rights. When asked about the claims of anti-Semitism against him, Spike intimidated the man who asked the question until the guy started to make no sense and just gave up.

The fact is, when you sell yourself as an activist and public speaker, you should act like one. To me, it seemed Spike Lee was here to promote himself and make a buck off of college students who enjoyed his movies. He had no knowledge of the University's problems, and had no agenda to discuss actual solutions even if he did. He said nothing I couldn't have read in a magazine or seen on a commercial for "Staying in School" or "Rock the Vote."

The only real information of worth I got from that lecture was from a member of the Nation of Islam who said that Louis Farrakhan was speaking in Springfield next month. I would much rather see controversial speakers like him or Chuck D or KRS-1 than some feel-good media darling like Spike Lee. He may deserve an Academy Award, but he might as well take his lectures to pre-school. Maybe there they will have enough bite to cause a stir.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist

- MANDATORY -
COLLEGIAN STAFF MEETING
SUNDAY - 6:30 PM
Collegian News Room

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

THE SOCIETY OF HISPANIC PROFESSIONAL ENGINEERS
THE OFFICE OF THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS AHORA
LATIN AMERICAN CULTURAL CENTER
UPC PRODUCTIONS

Vico C
with Holyoke's own MASS DELIRIUM
YO! IF you like RAP
You'll love Vico-C!
The Best Spanish Rapper is here!
FEB 6th 1993
UMASS AMHERST
Student Union Ballroom
8pm tix: $10 Umass $12 Other
DJed dance following performance!
on sale at: Tix Unlimited, Umass
For The Record, Amherst
Executive Limousine from Northampton

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS
UMass
v. Rutgers/Temple
Saturday, Feb. 6 at 2 PM
Boyden Gymnasium
Free Calzones 1st 100 Spectators
Refreshments 50/50 Raffle
D.P. Dough delivers calzones
call 256-1616
Now Open at 11:30 A.M.

Ice and Snow are here and so is QUICK FLIX
VIDEO DELIVERY SERVICE
549-8008
Free Pick-up
Limited delivery area. Expires 3/31/93
Not valid in combination with any other coupon.

This coupon good for one free pickup

OCEAN FRONT
Fun! Fun!
Plenty of Pool Deck Action
Prizes • Contests
D.J. • Pool Bar
CHECKERS CAFE
SPECIAL RATES
1- 4 From
$88
LIMITED AVAILABILITY
1-800-874-1822
1 Block from Boardwalk • MTV • Bandshell
THE DAYTONA INNS
BROADWAY • SEABREEZE
219 S. ATLANTIC AVE • DAYTONA BEACH, FL 32118
DAYTONA BEACH FLORIDA

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics
BEST Machines
BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Bareefoo
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

- WANTED -
Associate Business Manager
Assistant Finance Manager
EXPERIENCE is a must to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World...
We are looking for:
Ambitious • Responsible • Organized
SOPHOMORES
with good communication skills
Applications are available at the Collegian
113 Campus Center
and must be submitted no later than
Friday, February 12th

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Still Tic, Tac, Toeing Through Your Life?
Let us help you make some winning decisions about your future.
Late register for classes January 27-February 9.
UMass and You – a winning team!
Evening credit courses (over 100 in 37 different departments; most meet just once a week)
UMass Bachelor of General Studies degree — part time!
Noncredit workshops for business or pleasure (nearly 100, all winners)
Available University day courses (hundreds of them, stimulating!)
Division of Continuing Education, 607 Goodell Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

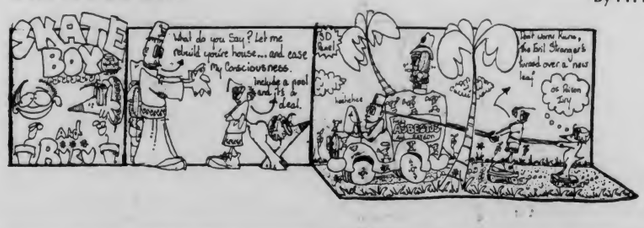
DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT



THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Quote of the Day

"That may be the most important thing to understand about humans: it is the unknown that defines our existence."

–Commander Benjamin Sisko

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

Aries (March 21-April 19): Work should go smoothly now. Investigate an exciting travel possibility. Other people's needs require great patience on your part. Let partners know exactly what they can expect from you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Mental pursuits are favored today. You ponder recently obtained information and arrive at an overdue decision. Do not let materialistic considerations undermine your spiritual values.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Travel is fun and informative now. Your intuition helps you make rapid progress on the job. Certain co-workers may not understand your success! Avoid sounding defensive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Work out complex matters in your own mind, then discuss your conclusions with mature friends. Inside knowledge gets a public airing. You pass a loyalty test with flying colors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Meditating on philosophical or religious questions brings enlightenment. Friends can help solve a mystery. Independent action wins the day! Reward those who have assisted you in meaningful ways.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You discover certain feelings you did not realize you had. Let go of past disappointments. Some responsibilities rest lightly on your shoulders. You may be ready to make a commitment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The impulse to return to a former home is strong. Travel adds to your store of knowledge. You have an employer's support as you ponder a new project.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Sharing your feelings may be painful yet necessary. A romance that started out as a friendship could last forever. A change in lifestyle brings tranquility.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): If romance is not all you would like it to be, shift your attention to work for the time being. Persistence is a plus when it comes to improving the bottom line.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your influence grows when you concentrate on intellectual pursuits. Diplomacy and compromise are your strongest tools when dealing with someone who is easily hurt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Remain loyal to your friends even if there is a dispute about money or values. Reorganizing your home or work space will make you more efficient.

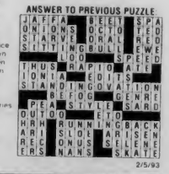
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A loving relationship makes your personal life blissful. Travel enjoys highly favorable influences. Romance is intense. You decide to make certain sacrifices at work, unless, of course, you are unemployed.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

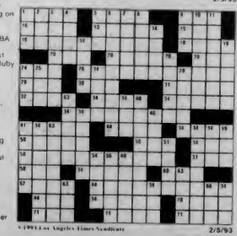
ACROSS
1 Hockey's Gordie
5 "— in Calico"
9 Accelerate, with "up"
12 Med. school subject
13 Type of printer
15 Pitt. mapper
16 WED
18 Columnist Bombeck
20 Skater Babilonia
21 Monster Comb. form
23 L. — Hubbard
24 Haggard novel
26 FAN
29 Duffer Jr. hievement
30 DFE's command
31 Uptight
32 — ran
34 Dot Lotte?
37 Tags on
38 Theme of this puzzle
41 Wall Street star Charlie
44 Handwriting on the wall?
45 End or side
49 Danny of NBA fame
50 Came in first
52 Sandra or Ruby
53 PIT
57 Annoy
58 Alias
59 Caravan stopover
60 First lady
62 Not a soul
64 AET
68 Sarnoff's org.
69 Oater gang
70 Peter or Paul
71 Thus far
72 Musical Fountain
73 Puts down

DOWN
1 Hem's partner
2 Stop dime connectors
3 TV's Barbara
4 Singer James
5 "The Greatest" 6 Snail
7 "Hearts Afire" actor Ed
8 On one's guard
9 Norma or Charlotte
10 Some guys wear one
11 Skedaddle
14 An O'Neal
17 Vegas pair
19 Queen — -lace
22 See 14 Down
24 Health haven
25 Actor Linden
27 — -inparlor
28 Short and sweet
33 Last of a series
35 Sell smage
36 Most ready for bed
39 — a Lonely Number" 1972 film
40 Wild way to run
41 Wicked one
42 "— -dickory dock"
43 Upgrade
46 Unfavorables
47 Understand
48 John Ritter's dad
51 Russian nix
54 Maintain
55 Lower deck
56 Danse in 3/4 time
61 Dog docs
63 Dog wop
65 Formerly called
66 Squeaker
67 Manly mos

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE



2/5/93



© 1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/5/93

Today's Staff
Night Editor ..... Mike Webber
Copy Editor ..... E.C. Thomas
PhotoTechnician ..... Josh Reynolds
Production Supervisor ..... Alan Blagg
Production ..... Todd Elliott
Tony Morse, Capt. David Rivera

Menu
LUNCH
American Chop Suey
Grilled Cheese
DINNER
Chicken Stew/Biscuit
One-fourth lb. burger
BASICS LUNCH
Scalloped Macaroni
Gr. Cheese/Wheatberry
BASICS DINNER
Roman Rice and Beans
The Lemon Pepper Cod

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

THE BODY SHOPS ARE OPEN!!

Coolidge 12th Floor / Washington 19th Floor
Totman Gym
Webster / Gorman / & Lewis Dorms

YOUR COST

$50/Semester

$25 Aerobics Only/Semester

Pay by Check, Money Order or Cash

YOUR FULL MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES

FREE AEROBICS CLASSES at TOTMAN Rm 22
SORRY, NO AEROBICS CLASSES IN SOUTHWEST FOR SPRING
ALL SOUTHWEST CLASSES HAVE MOVED TO THE MULLINS CENTER

PLUS

TREADMILLS · STAIRCLIMBERS
STATIONARY BIKES AND ROWERS · X-COUNTRY SKIERS
12-18 NAUTILUS® and HYDRAULIC WEIGHT MACHINES

@ WEBSTER / GORMAN / & LEWIS
COMPLETE SETS OF FREE WEIGHTS
FREE AEROBICS CLASSES in WEBSTER & DWIGHT

USE ALL FACILITIES WITH JUST ONE MEMBERSHIP!!

ALL ARE SUPERVISED BY QUALIFIED STAFF

FOR THESE WHO HAVE ALREADY JOINED DURING JANUARY by MAIL

COME TO THE TOTMAN BODY SHOP AFTER 4:00

TO GET YOUR MEMBERSHIP RECEIPT

FOR INFORMATION on OPEN TIMES

CALL YOUR CLOSEST LOCATION BELOW

Totman Gym Room 6
Telephone 545-6075

Coolidge Tower 12th Floor
Telephone 545-3914

Washington Tower 19th Floor
Telephone 545-3912

Hilltop Free Weight Center (Webster Residence Hall)
Telephone 545-2805

Crossan Free Weight Center (Gorman Residence Hall)
Telephone 545-2937

Lewis Free Weight Center (Lewis Residence Hall)
Telephone 545-3961

or

THE BODY SHOP INFORMATION LINE
TELEPHONE 545-6075

Two-Week Refund Policy in Effect with Receipt

■ gymnastics

continued from page 12

ing [on a cake]. The high score is the cake. We would like the icing [on Saturday], because nobody likes a plain cake," Mitchell said.

Tomorrow's meet starts at 2 p.m. in Boyden Gym, and the first 100 spectators will receive a free D.P. Dough calzone.

Other Notes from the Mat: Tammy Marshall was named UMass Athlete of the Week for this past week, then was given a tour of the new Mullins Center by head basketball coach John Calipari.

Freshman Tammy Noel, who was injured last Friday in practice, will miss the remainder of the season due to a severely dislocated ankle. Noel has a history of ankle problems.

Limited Time Offer

Lowest Prices of the Season
on college rings

selected Women's Rings $239
regularly priced up to $350

selected Men's Rings
$299 regularly priced up to $435

JOSTENS
UNIVERSITY STORE
February 2, 3, 4 and 5
10 am to 4 pm
Prices are for 10K gold rings. For 14K gold rings, add $100

INDEX

YEARBOOK General Meeting

Monday, February 8, 6:30 p.m.
304 Student Union
ALL WELCOME

ORDER YOUR 1993*INDEX* NOW!
A 300+ page copy with full color sections for only $30!
Send coupon to address below and watch for us on the Concourse!

Make checks payable to: INDEX Yearbook
NAME_____
PERMANENT ADDRESS_____
_____
_____
LOCAL PHONE #_____
INDEX, 304 Student Union
UMass, Amherst, MA 01003
545-0848

Swimmers to face NU

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow the University of Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team will take its national ranking of 36 and its overall record of 10-1, 8-0 in the New England Conference to Boston for a meet against the 4-5, 4-2 Northeastern University Huskies.

The Minutemen should easily swamp the Huskies, after UMass' last meet, the 89-point blowout of the University of New Hampshire last weekend.

"It's actually pretty good to have a couple of weeks to relax," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth. "Especially with school starting and the added stress of walking around."

Yarworth said the team's only required walking over its intercession training period was the walk from Kennedy to Boyden for practice. Walking around from class to class, then swimming great distances, or vice versa, apparently does a number on your knees and muscles if you aren't used to it.

At least one swimmer, sophomore butterflyer Chris Antonetti, was complaining of very sore legs during the week.

Yarworth says Northeastern has "some good swimmers, but no one that will be a real challenge. We'll be swimming some off-events, trying to prepare for the New England Invitational and the New England Championship, and keying on good, well-swum, well-paced races."

Two swimmers Yarworth will be watching for are Kurt Leslie, a sprinter he says has speed similar to one of UMass' best sprinters, Adam Reich, and Mark Lafrance, a distance/butterflyer who swam at UMass last year as a freshman but, unable to get into the School of Business, transferred to N.U.

On to the post-meet events. Win or lose, UMass players and coaches alike, 30 or so strong, are invited to the house of Roy and Mary Wicklund, whose son Jeff is a junior freestyler, for dinner at their house in Harvard.

"I give 'em a hearty thumbs up," said Yarworth. "We'll accept nothing less than surf and turf. If we get pasta and tomato sauce, I'll throw it at them. We'll trash the joint," he quipped.

■ hardwood

continued from page 12

one-of-a-kind tribute to Larry Legend. As you may or may not be aware, the aforementioned Channel 40 can show certain games/events when Fox gives its "permission."

Now, as of press time, our friends in Springfield will not be covering the tribute, because they feel that ABC's Thursday night line-up will get a better rating than Larry. Wake up! The entire New England area is dying to see their Lord one more time on the parquet floor.

Wait, hold on a second, though, because the higher-ups at Channel 40 say the game was never offered to them. In contrast, Fox higher-ups say they did give the chance to the Springfield station, and the offer was still on the table. So, the tribute should have been on. Enough said.

Now on to the journey around the league: There are some young players out there that are really getting no print at all, and I've decided to give them some.

What was one of the biggest trades for the future in the off-season? Try Milwaukee's acquisition of Blue Edwards and Eric Murdock from Utah for dead wood, namely Jay Humphries and Larry Krystkowiak. The Bucks needed some new blood, and the pair they received probably were still in grammar school when the duo they let go of graduated from high school.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist

HELP WANTED!!
We need 20 students who want to earn extra spending money at their convenience.
Earn $10-$20 per hr.
Previous sales experience helpful, but not necessary
Call 1-747-9249 for details

ADVOCATE ★BEST★ THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1992 1st Place

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3PM
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS FRI. & SAT.
OPEN & 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202 FREE PARKING ON RT. 9 HADLEY MASTER CARD VISA 北京園

NORTHAMPTON BOWL

Sunday Night ☆ Special ☆ 99¢ Per Game
From 8:30 til close
525 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA 01060 • (413) 584-2491

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Come join the UMass Raquetball Club. A meeting for all beginning and advanced students will take place on Mon Feb 8 at 5 pm at the Mullins Center Raquetball Courts. For more info call Don at 546-1527 or Collin at 549-4349

Having Problems with your roomate! Contact OCHO, 428 Student Union, or call us at 545-0865. We can help!

Looking for a place to live off campus? Questions about your commuter living situation? Subletting in May? Come to OCHO, 428 Student Union, 545-0865

Poster Sale. Biggest and best selection choose from over 1000 different images. Rock, old Masters (Monet, Dali, Van Gogh, Picasso, Escher, Matisse, Wyeth and hundreds more.) Movie posters, sports, scenic landscapes, music, dance, skiing, personalities, (Einstein, James Dean, Marilyn Monroe and others), Travel, humor, romance, photography (Talbot, Ansel Adams and others). Most images only $5, $6, and $7 each! See us at the Student Union Ball room on Monday February 1st through Friday February 5th. The hours are 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. This sale is sponsored by WMUA.

AUDITIONS

Auditions for UMass Theatre Guild's production of "The Mystery of Edwin Drood" will be on Fri, Feb 5 at 7 pm and Sat, Feb 6 at 11 am at 6pm in rm 163 of the Campus Center. Only one session need be attended. Please be prompt. Any Questions? Cal the UMTG office at 545-0415

AUTO FOR SALE

83 Ford Mercury Zepher
4 door
New Brakes, 100,000 miles
$650 b/o Marcy 253-0770

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-6098
549-6073

ENTERTAINMENT

yeP! is now available for parties and functions. CALL 549-3832

FOR RENT

4 Bed House Northampton - Winter rate $700/mo. plus. Also avail. June and Sept. 584-3428

FOR RENT

Amherst room to rent 300 no first last security daytime 545-5395 nite 967-4065

Fridge Rental 253-9742 delivered free

FOR SALE

Iguana with everything $100.00
Lights etc. 6-7109

MAC SE/30
40 MB HD, 2 MB RAM
Extended keyboard & carrying case
1700/b.o.
Call 256-0260

Shortwave radio, typewriter, VCR, monitor, keyboard. Reasonable prices. @ 546-5698

Snowboard – 160cm Barfoot Freestyle $100 584-2976
Golf Clubs Spalding full set plus leather bag $100 584-2976

FOR SALE - AUDIO/VIDEO

Stereo components: Used /reconditioned, area's largest selection. Buy/sell/trade at Stereo/video Exchange, Sundays 10-4 inside Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Other days call 256-0841

HELP WANTED

Artist seeking male and female models for part time work flexible schedule no experience necessary. $10/hr 586-4687

ATTENTION STUDENTS Excellent opportunity to make great money, own your own business. Distribute self defense products and earn big profits. 1-800-758-3210

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action. $100/wk. + . On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours – good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon. - Fri. + Sunday. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Join the Maespirg staff and be part of a 20 year history of environmental activism:
The Bottle Bill
Mass. Clean Air Act
Mass toxic use reduction act
Full/Part time positions $40 60/day
Call Carmen 256-6434

Sick of DC Meal Plan?
Meal plan in exchange for kitchen work if interested call
Jim Houston at 549-4919
At 498 North Pleasant St

The Undergraduate Admissions office is now accepting applications for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Representatives and New Students Program Summer Counselors. Applications available at the Admissions office.

INSTRUCTION

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

At Totman Gym Saturday Jan 30th Mens Seiko digital watch with green velcro band $50 reward call Mike 665-8282

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

ONE EYED JAKE

Trumpet player needed Blues rock Int. Management. Gigs. Compact Disk. Record Contract pending. Graduating senior preferred. Not Serious? Don't Bother!
Call Steve 549-8120

PERSONALS

Brenda
Happy Birthday!
Hugs and Kisses
the Libby's

Happy 21st
Josh and Erica
Luv Kate and da Boys at 55 Gray St.

HAPPY 22ND BIRTHDAY, NICOLE!
You're an old lady now!
Love, Shelley

Kristen Herte is 21!
Watch out uptown, she's going to rage!
Happy Birthday,
Denise

Luke–
That night we were so close yet so far

Russ–
HAPPY BIRTHDAY SUNDAY!
You're the greatest
Love Always–
Nikki

Tommy Beetworth
I love you and,
I hope we will be together forever.
Love your Beetworth

21 years ago
Jen Warberg was born
8 years ago,
we became friends.
Have a great birthday, Jen!!
Love,
Tricia

RIDE NEEDED

Ride to Rochester/Syracuse area 2/12 (long weekend). Will share ALL expenses. Rebecca 256-3191

ROOMATES WANTED

2 females or couple to share room $160 each or $275 for single, beautiful apartment 665-7604

Room for rent Amherst behind Baybanks 213.00 per month call 549-4388

Roomate Needed!!
M/F to share two bedroom Brandywine Apt.
175.00/mo.
549-5868

Timeout Barsies Delanos
Single room spitting distance away
256-4662

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst Area
for free testing and confidential caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops
549-1906

Resume Preperation assistance with complete resume development. Keith Anderson, Ph.D. 582-4037

Terot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

TRAVEL

Florida SPRING BREAK
7 nights Beachfront $139-159
RESERVE rooms NOW
Call CMI 1-800-423-5264

Spring Break '93***
Cancun $479! Jamaica $499!
Daytona Beach $169! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company!
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL
1-800-328-SAVE

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK
Wheat wave to all places
Guar. lowest prices or Double diff., free club passes
no peak fees
Call Debbie 549-1411

TAKE IT OFF!!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

UMASS SKI CLUB
Sign ups being taken now for ski trips Feb. 19-21 Quebec wknd. $145 Social age 18 March 15-22 Spring break Steamboat 7 day trip $749
March 14-19 Killington Spring Break 5 day trip $279
Contact: UMass Ski Club 545-3437 or Dominic Santarsiere 548-2107 ASAP

WANTED

BAND SEEKS
Singer & Guitarist experienced!
ALL STYLES of music. Joe G. 6-4782

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We went to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

The WHMP-FM Game Summary

West Virginia	29	26-4	59
Massachusetts	21	34-9	64

Massachusetts (64)
H. Williams 5-12 4-7 14, Roe 5-10, 6-10 16, Kellogg 0-2 0-0 0, Barbee 2-11 4-6 9, Dingle 2-5 1-2 5, M. Williams 2-10 2-2 7, C. Robinson 0-0 0-0 0, Malloy 4-10 2-4 13, K. Robinson 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 20-60 19-31 64.

West Virginia (59)
Robinson 5-10 3-4 13, Greene 5-14 2-3 12, Wilson 0-0 1-2 1, Basey 2-11 8-10 13, Boyd 4-5 0-0 8, Shelton 3-11 0-0 8, Bodkin 1-3 0-0 2, Roadcap 1-4 0-0 2. Totals 21-58 14-19 59.

Three-point goals: UMass 5-19 (Barbee 1-6, M. Williams 1-8, Malloy 3-5). West Virginia 14-19 (Basey 1-3, Shelton 2-6). Rebounds: UMass 53 (H. Williams 14), West Virginia 33 (Robinson, Greene 7). Assists: UMass 12 (H. Williams 4). West Virginia 13 (Boyd 6). Fouled out: Robinson, Wilson, Roe. Attendance: 9493.

Player of the Game

Harper Williams, 6-7 Sr. Forward

Williams was simply all over the floor, leading the team in three categories: rebounding (14), assists (4) and blocks (7). The "warrior" hit a big hook shot in overtime and made the difference when Lou Roe fouled out.

Why UMass won

Despite 17 turnovers and 33 percent shooting, the Minutemen never gave up, even when they trailed by 11 in the first half. The Minutemen played gritty defense throughout, wrestling the ball away from West Virginia at the end of regulation and forcing overtime. Harper Williams and Lou Roe helped the Minutemen outrebound the bigger Mountaineer team by 20, and UMass scored 16 points on second chances, many in key stretches.

UMass' next opponent

The Minutemen play their second game in less than 48 hours when they host the Rutgers Scarlet Knights (10-9) Saturday at noon in the Mullins Center. UMass needed a last-second 3-pointer by Mike Williams to defeat the Knights in New Jersey, 82-78.

Catch all the Minutemen Basketball Games – Home and Away – on the New 99.3 WHMP-FM!
The New 99.3 WHMP-FM
Join us live from Rafters each Wednesday from 6-7 p.m. for the John Calipari Radio Show.

Minutemen sneak past in overtime

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

It was a fantastic finish to a grand opening.

The University of Massachusetts (14-4, 6-1) pulled away from West Virginia (10-7, 3-4) in the final three minutes of overtime last night to post a 64-59 victory, in front of 9,493 fans, in the first game ever played in the Mullins Arena.

UMass center Harper William's (14 points, 14 rebounds and seven blocked shots) shot over Matt Roadcap with 33 seconds remaining in overtime gave the Minutemen a 62-59 lead.

West Virginia's Marsalis Bassey's (13 points) three pointer with 13 seconds fell short and UMass' Tony Barbee grabbed the rebound and advanced the ball to Jerome Malloy for an uncontested lay-up, which sealed the Minuteman victory.

"To come out of there with a win is big," UMass Coach John Calipari said. "Big, against a good team."

UMass forced overtime on the strength of sophomore forward Lou Roe's seven points down the stretch, including a foul shot with 33.9 seconds left which tied the game at 55.

After a West Virginia time out with 10.9 seconds on the clock, guard Mike Boyd (8 points) coughed up the ball as he drove the lane.

"I'm upset we didn't win it in regulation," West Virginia Coach Gale Catlett said. "I called a bad play. We didn't get a shot on the goal and you have to do that."

West Virginia forward Tracy Shelton said, "We were still confident we could win going into overtime. We still thought we had a chance even though we had two starters (forward Ricky Robinson and center Phil Wilson) foul out."

Roe (14 points, 11 rebounds, including seven offensive) was immense in the second half, scoring 10 of the Minutemen's final 18 points, before fouling out with 2:04 remaining in overtime. UMass led 60-59 at the time.

"Our main goal was to foul Lou Roe out of the game, but we didn't do it soon enough," Bassey said. "He was killing us on the offensive boards. Offensive rebounds were the key to the game."

UMass grabbed 53 rebounds, 24 offensive, compared to 33, 12 offensive, for the Mountaineers.

"When I fouled out, I told the guys 'Refuse to lose,'" Roe said. "And they told me, 'Don't worry Lou, we got this one.'"

It was Williams who made sure the promise was not broken as he stepped up his play in the final two minutes, grabbing two rebounds and hitting the big shot with 34 seconds left.

"Harper was a warrior in the end," Calipari said. "That kid just steps it up in the end. That's what makes him special."

UMass survived a miserable first half of play, shooting only 26 percent from the floor, to trail 29-21 at the break.

"I don't know what happened in the first half," Calipari said. "Harper said we had the jitters, but we just haven't been practicing well and I think that affected us more. Luckily our defense kept us in it.

"The first half was a carbon copy of Cincinnati," Calipari said. "I figured ESPN would put billiards on instead of showing the second half."

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Lou Roe and the Minutemen squeeze by West Virginia in overtime to win their first game in the Mullins Center.

'Mullins mania' reaches epidemic

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

What a way to open a place.

You knew it was one for the ages when the politicians from Boston showed up, sitting with suits and ties on right next to the students. But after all, there wouldn't be a Mullins Center without their pork-barreling efforts, and there surely wouldn't have been a nail-biting game like last night's 64-59 Minuteman victory.

"This was really a nice way to open the new arena," said head coach John Calipari. "It was a quality win over a good, good team. They're tough."

Opening night was a special night for everyone associated with UMass basketball. ESPN gave the Mullins a chance to show its facilities and its adoring fans, who described the place as "awesome."

"This is a great inauguration," said Dave Quattrucci, the premier Elvis impersonator at last night's game. "The Cage was a great place, but you have to build the basketball program by updating the facilities."

Indeed, as many saw for the first time, the Mullins had everything the Cage didn't have, like seats, air conditioning and a speaker system that worked. This new-fangled joint even had ushers, a far cry from the squatter's rights atmosphere at the Cage.

"Everything's been running smoothly, pretty much," said Heather Cumming, one of the 50 ushers in the Mullins Center. "There's nothing like the Cage, but this is money well spent. This is better. I was amazed when I walked in for the first time."

The Mullins Center is a new sign of respect for the University. Its design was meticulously crafted, its construction methodically completed, and its management seems to be top notch. The first game warranted time on "The All Sports Network," and people even came from as far away as . . . Boston.

"I decided to come here, even with Larry Bird Night," said Ed McGee, a Boston native. "I'd much rather go to a game than watch that on TV. I'm a big UMass fan."

With a new building came new banners. Gems like "When I think of ESPN I touch myself," "Mullins mayhem" and "The house that Cal built" made it seem almost like home. Like the announcer said, fans were certainly entering a new dimension of UMass basketball.

Women host A-10 foes

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

Record-setting performances are hard to top.

The University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team (1-2) will try just that when they enter tomorrow's tri-meet with Atlantic 10 rivals Rutgers University (1-1) and Temple University (6-4).

If UMass head coach Alfie Mitchell's squad hits its routines, it could compete with any team in the A-10. The Minutewomen had to be 80 percent plus to win against another conference rival, the Rhode Island Rams last weekend, according to Mitchell.

UMass has some room for improvement of last week's record setting performance, but if they had made a few more mistakes in the routines they hit, the Minutewomen might have lost. It was that close. Mitchell said he knows that his team must be on the money against these two completely different conference foes.

"Temple has a lot of talent, and they are good. But for one reason or another, they haven't put it all together yet. I hope they don't pick this weekend to do it, because if they do, the meet will be just like the one with URI - down to the wire," Mitchell said.

While Temple is known as a gymnastics powerhouse, the Lady Knights are underrated, and the Minutewomen cannot let up on Saturday for any reason, because they will receive a challenge from both of their opponents, not just one.

"People have called UMass a sleeping giant as far as athletics, because we have so many great teams here, but we could be really at the top of Division I in the country. The same could be said of Rutgers," Mitchell said.

"Most of the gymnastics talent on the East Coast either comes out of Pennsylvania or New Jersey. They are improving the women's program at Rutgers, so in the future, they'll be able to keep these girls in-state," Mitchell said.

According to Mitchell, UMass will be looking to score above a 185 in Saturday's meet in order to win. However, winning the meet is not as important for the Minutewomen as getting a good score.

"Winning in gymnastics is like the ic-

Turn to GYMNASTICS, page 11

Notes from the Hardwood

As MC Serch would say, back to the grill again. . .it's time to peruse the world of hardwood, NBA style. There may be some question on whether or not Larry Bird Night was important enough to be broadcast here in Amherst, on Channel 40 via Springfield. Before you start saying, "Uhh, here he goes again, ripping the local sportscasts," just listen to me vent my anger.

Arthur
STAPLETON

Let me first state that I am not a Boston fan, nor do I want to be classified as one. However, as a sports journalist (hold the hysterics), I can realize that this broadcast would have appeased the average basketball fan as well as the Celtic faithful.

Fox 25 out of Boston has the broadcasting rights for all Celtics games/events, including last night's

Turn to HARDWOOD, page 11

Monday February 8, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 72

Chance of flurries and partly sunny. Mid-30s.

Local News:
Local author and UMass English professor John Edgar Wideman reads selections from his latest novel in honor of Black History Month. Page 3.

Sports:
The UMass Minutemen destroy the Rutgers Scarlet Knights 82-67 in an intense Mullins Arena hoop game. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Artist rediscovers roots

Amherst resident dedicated to artwork

By KRISTINE FARHAT
Associated Press

Local artist Dick Cook is rediscovering his Native American roots through his art.

Consider, for example, one untitled piece he has created.

Inside a small wooden box, Cook has glued a small map of the Midwest inscribed with historical notes, including details about the aftermath of a Sioux uprising in the 1860s in which 38 Indians were hanged. Lying inside the wooden box are ten plastic, red figurines with nooses around their necks. There is also a hanging post inside the box.

Cook, 42, of Amherst, said that learning about the executions, which took place in what is now Mankato, Minn., had an impact on his life. Four years ago, he spent three months touring North and South Dakota and Colorado when he was between occupations. He said the trio helped him learn a lot about Indian history and stimulated him to create Native American Art.

"I became more aware of what the Indians had to go through," said Cook, who is part Penobscot Indian. "I, like many others, had thought Indians to be viscous savages."

To create his three-dimensional collages and montages, he uses fur, birch bark, bones, feathers, beads and other items that represent Indian culture.

"I take various elements of Indian history, whether abstract or real, and introduce them together to create something which is visual and thought-provoking."

Cook says his work is influenced by Marcel Duchamo, a French artist who was a leader in the Da-Da movement, which was a similar to surrealism with humor, and American artist Joseph Cornell, who uses boxes to display art.

Cook began making his Native American artwork about four years ago. For 10 years, he was a successful real estate agent in Amherst who earned enough money to take several vacations a year, enjoy an active social life, finance hobbies such as a record store and build up a substantial savings.

But with the rewards came long hours, stress and lack of satisfaction for Cook, who was a theater arts graduate from the University of New Hampshire.

In 1988, the drawbacks seemed to outweigh the benefits for Cook, so he left the real estate business. He packed up and traveled throughout Colorado and the Dakotas for about three months.

When he returned home, Cook, who now works at Key Mortgage Corporation, in Amherst, decided to start creating art once again. After graduating from college, he did artwork for posters and album covers. This time Cook's art had a Native American flare.

GLB task force created

By MELANIE DESILVA
Collegian Staff

After years of attempting to gain recognition and support from University administrators, members of the gay campus community said they feel they have finally been heard and will be given a forum through which they can voice their concerns and foster change.

The Chancellor's Task Force on Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, comprised of faculty, staff, students, and administrators met for the first time Thursday, adding the University of Massachusetts to the list of American colleges and universities which have already formed similar committees.

"This is an important and significant step for the university. Standing task forces are not uncommon at universities across the country," said Felice Yeskel, director of the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, and task force member.

"For years, GLB students have been meeting with the administration to have their concerns addressed and until now have been unsuccessful," said Darrin Shaffer, a graduate student and task force member.

The task force, formed in direct response to sessions held last semester between Chancellor Richard O'Brien and gay students will be, according to O'Brien, "an ongoing part of the administrative structure of the University."

The task force will advise O'Brien "on the proper course of action to make sure that the campus response to concerns of gays, lesbians and bisexuals is appropriate."

At the first meeting, there was an aura of hope and excitement as O'Brien requested that the list of recommendations presented to him by the gay community last year be awarded significant attention, according to task force member Ali Woolwich.

"There was a sense of excitement. A sense of lots to do, and lots of purpose," said Woolwich, also an active member of the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance. "This will be a doing task force and not a thinking task force. The time for talk is over and now we're getting down to business."

The recommendations presented to the chancellor last semester included the initiation of GLB studies courses, including a mandatory diversity course called Civility 101, a University anti-harrassment and anti-violence policy, and space for a GLB cultural center.

Officials examine Campus Center fate

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
The Hatch is one the many Campus Center businesses under scrutiny.

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

Editor's note: This is the second in a two-part series on the fiscal situation in the University's Campus Center and Auxiliary Services.

Fiscal problems at the University of Massachusetts have made it necessary for campus officials to consider closing some businesses in the University's Campus Center, according to documents acquired by the Collegian.

The Auxiliary Services Deficit Reduction Task Force Interim Report, released on Jan. 20, contains suggestions for ways to reduce the million dollar deficit the campus center faces.

The task force consists of middle managers throughout all levels of Auxiliary Services, unionized employees in the Campus Center and students.

None of the plans are definite, according to Ben Preston, chairperson of the Board of Governors, senior political science and history major and Task Force member.

"There are a range of things contained in the report, but there isn't anything definite yet," Preston said.

Ashoke Ganguli, director of Auxiliary Seriveces, said, "The changes will be made with minimum service impacts to students, because Auxiliary Services is a student service organization."

One of the report's suggestions is to close the Campus Center Coffee Shop, and reallocate the space for meeting rooms. The report said patrons who frequent it may be forced to take their business elsewhere, possibly the Hatch or the Bluewall.

The report said consolidating the three food service operations in the campus center is an idea that is gaining popularity. The rationale behind the idea is that it will save money in staff and supply costs, according to the report.

One of the problems with the plan is that the other operations may not have the capacity to serve the overflow of customers, the report said.

"Closing the Coffee Shop makes fiscal sense, but it doesn't serve student interests," Preston said.

Another idea gaining support among task force members is to close the Munchy Stores and consolidate them all into the area that would be vacated by the Coffee Shop. This would cut down on operating expenses for the stores and downsize the staff, the report said.

"To close the Munchy Stores would be inconvenient for the students," Preston said. "Who wants to run to the campus center at night for milk?"

Closing the Top of the Campus restaurant is another idea that the report said could save money, but it is not a popular one because the restaurant provides a unique service that cannot be found elsewhere on campus, according to the report.

Changing the image of the Campus Center is a high priority, according to

Turn to CAMPUS CENTER, page 2

'70s tennis legend succumbs to AIDS

By DANA KENNEDY
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Arthur Ashe was lucid in his last hours and alert enough to make the OK sign shortly before his death from AIDS-related pneumonia.

Donals Dell, Ashe's agent and friend of 25 years, and Dr. Henry Murray, Ashe's attending physician, held an emotional news conference Sunday at New York Hospital, where Ashe, 49, died Saturday.

"He used to say, 'Don't feel sorry for me,'" said Dell, who frequently choked up. "He clearly felt he was not a victim. Whatever happened, he would rise to that particular occasion. It was just another challenge."

President Clinton called Ashe " a true American

Turn to ASHE, page 4

Prof remembered by community

By ANDREW LUMB
Collegian Correspondent

More than 200 people gathered to honor and remember Assistant Professor Sigrid Brauner at a Memorial Service held Saturday at one o' clock in Memorial Hall.

Brauner, an assistant professor of Germanic languages and literature at the University of Massachusetts, died in an accidental fall on Dec. 26 while vacationing in Jamaica.

A host of speakers, friends, colleagues, relatives, and students praised her fiery temperament and commitment to social justice at the memorial.

A celebration of her life, as well as a mourning of her unexpected death, admirers, Willow Lamont; Henry Geddes, assistant professor of Communication; her brother Winfred Brauner; former student Donna Hebert, and colleague Beverly Harris-Schenz provided musical tributes, with all in the room clapping and singing together.

Many speakers, like Willow Lamont, a Weccan priestess; Arlene Avakian, from Women's Studies; David Lenson, from the Massachusetts Society of Professors, applauded Sigrid Brauner's devotion to politics and the fight for minority rights.

Avakian announced an annual award in Sigrid Brauner's name for combatting racism. Lamont talked about her and Brauner's parallel experiences as feminists in the '70s. Lenson lamented that Brauner could not see the success of her efforts to further women in academe.

Sigrid Brauner was also revered by those present for her courageous vitality, optimistic persistence, and honest loyalty and love for her causes: women's rights and teaching. Last fall, Brauner taught a new course titled "Witches: Myth and Reality" which focused on thesocial and historical relevance of the witch trials.

Elizabeth Petroff of the Comparative Literature department accentuated that Brauner "gave us light, hope and intelligence."

Turn to BRAUNER, page 3

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, Feb. 8

Forum — Senator John Kerry will be speaking on the "National Research Forum in Industry." It will be held in the Student Union Ballroom at 1:15 today. All are invited.

Play — As Is, a play about love in the time of AIDS, will be performed at Amherst College on Feb. 8, 9, and 11 at 8:00 p.m. The performances will be held in the Front Room of the Amherst College Campus Center. A donation of $2.00 will be requested at the door, a portion of which will go towards AIDS organizations in the Pioneer Valley. Seats will be available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Class — History 298, "Career Life Planning," a popular one-credit, pass/fail course still has space available. This course is not closed to students from other majors. If interested, please attend the next class on Tuesday, Feb. 9, at 2:30 p.m. For information, please call David Lazas, 545-3181 or Susan Hart, 545-6255.

Discussion — Men's Center— a place where men can discuss issues of violence against women and men, racism, sexism, and homophobia. Men need to take the initiative to discuss these issues because in order for things to change, men as well as women need to confront these problems. For more information, call Brian at 586-6193.

Honor Society — It is Mortar Board Week on the Campus Center Concourse, Feb. 16-19. Come see what this senior service honor society is all about. Raffle for $100 and other prizes.

Tuesday, Feb. 9

Information Session — The University Without Walls, an adult bachelors degree program at the University of Massachusetts will host six information sessions prior to the April 15 application deadline. They will be held February 9 and 24, March 11, 24 and 31, and April 3. All sessions will be held at the Robsham Visitors Center beginning 5:00 p.m. To reserve a seat, please call 545-1378.

Wednesday, Feb. 10

Bible Study — Graduate Christian Fellowship welcomes all graduate students for a time of singing, prayer and Bible study every Wednesday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center. Room numbers will be posted opposite the information desk in the concourse.

■ Campus Center

continued from page 1

the report.

"There is a captive audience on campus and the businesses need to cater to students," Student Government Association President Jennifer Wood said.

"The University Store does a fantastic job, offering high quality products, but the Hatch food quality needs work," Wood said.

Suggestions include creating a laundromat, drugstore and offering movies in the Campus Center Auditorium as a means of keeping student business on campus. More services would make the campus center a place of activity and would keep students from having to go into town for supplies, the report said.

None of these suggestions are definite and none will be finalized until the official report from the Task Force is released on Feb. 25.

UV dean says institutions fail to cease racism

BOSTON (AP) — A college administrator Sunday lashed out at academia for paying lip service to diversity but making little progress in preventing racism, sexism and homophobia.

"We have failed as educators and we have allowed our institutions to fail," H. Lawrence McCrorey, Dean of the School of Allied Health Sciences at the University of Vermont, said in opening the New England regional meeting of the College Board.

McCrorey, who is black, appealed to his audience of high school and college educators to "de-brain wash" themselves and their students, saying he has become increasingly sensitive to the issue.

"One has to only to look across the country to see the incredible rise of racist acts on college campuses, of sexism and homophobia permeating the college climate," he said.

WRITE FOR GLB ISSUES
113 CAMPUS CENTER
ASK FOR MELANIE DeSILVA

Hatch Entertainment
18 & Over Welcome
Monday Feb. 8, 8:30 PM
Big Band Sounds with
Jeff Holmes
16 Piece Jazz Band
Wed., Feb 10, 9 PM
Rock & Roll with
Blue Muse
Thurs., Feb. 11, 9 PM
Monghani
The Best in Alternative Rock
with Special Guest
Synaesthesia
Full Bar
Beer Pitchers and Pizza Slices or Whole
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

Be An RA
RESIDENT ASSISTANT SELECTION PROCESS
for the 1993-94 Academic Year
Resident Assistants (RAs) are live-in, part-time, student-staff members. Duties include facilitation of community development, programming, referral counseling, administrative functions, enforcing University policies, and assisting with house management.
Applications are available in all Cluster Offices.
Applications are due February 22, 1993. Apply today!
The University of Massachusetts at Amherst prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, creed, sex, sexual orientation, age, marital status, national origin, mental or physical handicap, political belief or affiliation, membership or non-membership in any organization, or veteran status, in any respect of admission or treatment of students in employment.

The Jewish Arts Festival Presents:
Award -Winning Scholar and Author
Dr. ROBERT ALTER
"Adventure in Modern Hebrew Literature"
Dr. Alter has lectured worldwide on the European & American novel, the literary art of the Bible, and modern Hebrew Literature.
Monday, February 8 at 8:00PM
Campus Center 168
General Public $3 Students FREE
Sponsored by: UMASS Hillel, Judaic & Near Eastern Studies with additional support from UMASS Arts Council & Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund.

Local News

New Asian center to reside in Knowlton

By KENNETH MAISONET
Collegian Staff

Members of the Asian RSO Alliance came to an agreement with the University administration regarding the proposed site for the United Asian Learning Resource Center last week.

Representatives from the newly-formed RSO Alliance met with Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Thomas Robinson to bring closure on the problematic issue of finding a location for the UALRC.

RSO members and officials agreed on renovating and expanding the Center's current location in Knowlton.

Robinson said the new location and renovation plans will be set in motion within the next six weeks.

A number of proposals had been presented and discussed between the administration and student representaives, Robinson said.

"For the time being we want the best place at present to meet the needs of the UALRC," Robinson said.

John Findley, a representative of Housing Services, presented a conceptual plan and a schematic floor plan of the proposed expansion of the Knowlton location.

Amy Chee, a representative of the Asian RSO Alliance, criticized the layout for its lack of office space and mentioned that the location has not taken into account the incorporation of the Asian Cultural Center that will be sharing that space alongside the UALRC..

"Knowlton is a prime location and in theory this space is considered to a temporary location," Chee said. "More space is needed to bring the Center up to more competitive standards. . . tutorials space is critical," Chee said.

Kenneth Burnham, interim dean of Academic Support Services, who was also present at the meeting, said he felt optimistic that the proposed location is a step in the right direction.

"We all can agree that Knowlton is an excellent location," Burnham said.

Burnham also tried to ease the concerns of the Asian RSO Alliance regarding inadequate space for the tutorial program, which came under fire by several representatives of the Asian RSO Alliance.

The Knowlton space and lounge area is of valid concern and the question of allocating this for use by UALRC must by discussed with the women occupants of Knowlton House, Burnham said.

Lucy Nguyen, Director of the United Asian Learning Resource Center, said she was present at the meeting to voice and support the students concerns.

"I am comfortable with the location and planned renovation, and I feel my staff can carry out the necessary responsibilities and provide the services," Nguyen said. "However, the expressed concerns for more space seems to be an equally important factor."

Despite the progress in the talks with administration officials, members said they were not comfortable because of the increasing needs of Asian/Asian American students who are a growing ethnic majority at the university.

Paul Gee and Kara Inouye, members of the Asian RSO Alliance, requested that Housing Services look into the open portion of the wing which is not being currently utilized for its intended purposes.

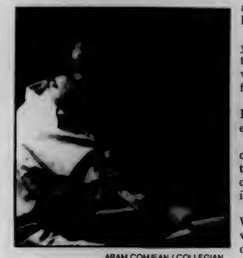
"Our concern is that in knowing that this is a temporary space, we do not wish to find ourselves returning to the administration to request more space. . . we don't wish to promise on this space," Gee said.

Prof reads new novel

Observes role of black fathers and sons

By KELLY SPANG
Collegian Staff

In honor of Black History month, English professor at UMass, John Edgar Wideman, read from his new novel at Amherst College last Thursday night. This unfinished work is one of many in Wideman's collection of short stories and novels which are nationally recognized.



ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
UMass professor John Edgar Wideman

The concentration of Wideman's new piece was the relationship between he and his father, which then led to a more broad dialogue of black men and their fathers.

A central theme was the need for young black men and their father to have a close relationship, but the book portrayed the struggles and failings this relationship has in a dominantly white society.

"The distance between young black men and fathers is a tragedy," Wideman said.

The reading began in Africa and moved to the United States, being told from the viewpoint of men and their fathers. Widemen believed in the need for paternal identification because when a son denies his father, he "denies himself."

Wideman described the problem young black men and their fathers have to society's tendency to press its white values and institutions against people from different skin colors.

"America, positive identification. Race by face. Whites judge people by eyes, hair, shin color," Wideman wrote.

"Differences become deviance becomes demonized." Wideman discussed the white tendency to "lump all members of a group [different than themselves] into a mass of otherness."

This bias against blacks is why Wideman believes young black men want to deny their fathers. "Dark face dooms him to be an outsider."

Wideman attributed his story to a "voice" that speaks to him. "The voices are not mine, the stories they are unfolding just might be."

The problem for blacks is shown through what Wideman called the "cloud of race" which separates young black men and their fathers in an attempt to deny an Afro-American heritage .

"Mama's baby. Daddy's maybe."

Cultural center receives $3000 in extra funding

By ANN MARIE NEAL
Collegian Correspondent

The Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center received an additional $3,000 in funding because of the demands made by students of color last semester, according to Ricardo Townes, Director of Academic Support Services.

Townes said all cultural centers were given more funding this semester.

The Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center was established in 1987 after a visit from members of the Mohak People of Canada who expressed concerns about the lack of support at UMass for Native American students, said Renee Lopes, academic adviser for CCEBMS, and liaison to the Native American center.

The center was named after Dr. Josephine White Eagle, a native of the Wuiunebago tribe and a professor in the Education Department, said Chris Pegram, a Native American student at UMass. "She was a powerful and talented woman who dedicated a year of her life to the University of Massachussets," Pegram concluded.

The center is currently located in the basement of Chadborne Hall. "The center is a home away from home. It is a resource center and a meeting place where the Natives can organize community events," said Kahon:We:s, a Native American student at UMass.

Despite the increase in funding and the

Turn to CULTURAL CENTER, page 6

Student falls four stories

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

A 19-year-old University of Massachusetts student remains in fair condition at Baystate Medical Center in Springfield after falling out of a fourth-floor dorm window early Saturday morning.

Freshman Andrew Laurence fractured his pelvis and lower back in several places after he reportedly lost his balance and fell out a large, hinged window in the top floor of Lewis residence hall at about 3:45 a.m.

"I went to go around someone who was sitting near the window, and I just lost my balance and fell," Laurence said yesterday from his hospital bed.

Laurence said doctors told him he could expect to be in the hospital for about two months, but he had suffered no permanent nerve damage and would eventually be able to walk again.

Despite the severity of his injuries, Laurence said he did not lose consciousness at any point in the episode.

"I realized about halfway down that I had fallen out the window," he said. "I was conscious through the whole thing."

Laurence, a resident of Cashin, said he had been visiting friends in Lewis that evening, and was leaning out the already open, bay-style window in an attempt to move past someone when he lost his balance and fell to the ground.

Joseph Paul, a friend of Laurence who lives in the room from which he fell, said he wasn't sure why the window had been open, but it was probably "for ventilation."

correction

The information in last Friday's Collegian was incorrectly reported. Governor William Weld's speech in conjunction with the National Research Forum for Industry, which is scheduled for Tuesday, February 9 at 1:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom, is open to the public. Seating for the speech is limited, as conference participants will be seated in front.

Furthermore, Paul McOwen, administrative director for the Center for Real-time and Intelligent Complex Computing Systems was misquoted. His quote should have read, "The federal government is making a transition from vast military spending to commercial, private-sector technological activities."

The Collegian regrets the error.

■ Brauner

continued from page 1

The Dean of Humanities and Fine Arts Lee Edwards spoke of the urgency with which Sigrid Brauner negotiated for the Germanic languages department.

An altar where things of "specialness" between anyone and Sigrid Brauner, was set up along the left wall. By the end of the service, rocks, shells, seeds, branches, crystals, candles, Tarot cards, a sculpture by one of her students, and a collage of German writings and her work were resting on the table.

Academe needs to include all

By ADAM RATTINER
Collegian Correspondent

The traditional system of academic values must be broken down in order to accomodate the views of oppressed groups, according to a University of Massachusetts philosophy professor.

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
UMass professor Ann Ferguson

Ann Ferguson, professor of philosophy, spoke on "Homosexuality, Multiculturalism and the Academic Value Panic," at Friday's Brown Bag lunch in the Campus Center. Approximately 30 people attended the lecture.

Ferguson said she believes the need for change in academe involves a need to include all oppressed groups, not simply the interests of one minority.

"It is time to change the curriculum. It's based on European values," Ferguson said. "My argument isn't for people who are queer one way or the other."

As an example of the way in which the University ignores the needs of the gay, lesbian and bisexual communities, Ferguson said the University has only one class dealing with the issues of homosexuality, and it is taught by graduate students, not professors.

She spoke of "creating a new knowledge with a new set of experts."

Changing the curriculum in colleges and universities, according to Ferguson, will involve changing the way both faculty and students perceive learning.

"We would have to reclassify people. Shift away from the old white boy network," Ferguson said.

She challenged the idea that it is only homosexuals who want homosexual studies by explaining that if one does not include a homosexual perspective in the curriculum of history courses and similar courses, one cannot even understand the dominant culture in the

Turn to ACADEME, page 6

WRITE
WORK
LIVE
THE COLLEGIAN

Ashe

continued from page 1

hero and a great example to us all," adding in a statement that "Arthur rose from the segregated courts of Richmond, Va., to the championship at Wimbledon displaying grace, strength and courage every step of the way."

"He was a friend of mine," Clinton said Sunday as he walked to church, "I'm really sad about it."

Murray said Ashe had been hospitalized with pneumonia for two weeks in January and was ill off and on for several months. Ashe gave a speech as recently as last Tuesday, but quickly suffered from a fever and other complications that began late Wednesday, Murray said.

"He was fully alert, asking questions. He was concerned about who the next attorney general would be," Murray said of Ashe's last hours. Murray made the OK sign with his thumb and forefinger, saying "his last gesture to me was this."

Murray said Ashe's swift decline was "unusual but happens." More extraordinary, he said, was Ashe's excellent health in the four and a half years since he was diagnosed. Murray said Ashe kept a very busy schedule.

Dell said he had discussed Ashe's strenuous schedule with Ashe's wife, Jeanne.

"He felt it was therapeutic," said Dell, president of Pro Serve Inc. "He said it was better than sitting home and thinking about dying."

Ashe, the only black man ever to win the Wimbledon championship and the U.S. Open, revealed April 8, 1992 that he had AIDS in a news conference prompted by his fear that a newspaper was about to publish the story.

He said he was infected by a blood transfusion during heart bypass surgery, probably in 1983.

Though adamant that he should have the right to keep his illness private, he became active in the fight against AIDS, forming a fund-raising foundation and joining the boards of the Harvard AIDS Institute and the UCLA AIDS Institute.

In response to questions from reporters, Dell said that Ashe was angry at being forced to reveal his condition.

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
BIG MONDAY
Two For One
12" Pizzas
• one item • eat in only •
7 pm - Midnight
$50.00 CASH PRIZE
Highest Score - Full Court Frenzy Basketball
All Major College Basketball Games on the 12 Foot Screen
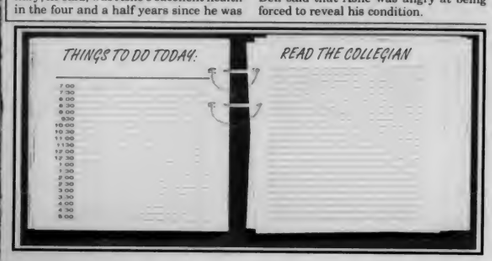
We're the One to Watch!
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040



"Women in Derivatives Trading and Financial Risk Management"
Amherst College Converse Hall - The Red Room
Monday, February 8, 1993, 7:30PM

You've worked hard...
Excelled academically...
Achieved results...
Now it's time to trade up...

If you possess exceptional analytical talent...want to use sophisticated technology...and thrive on complex intellectual challenges — you can achieve results with Swiss Bank Corporation – Capital Markets and Treasury.

The integration of The O'Connor Partnerships and Swiss Bank Corporation's Capital Markets and Treasury business has resulted in an innovative, client-focused organization poised for global leadership across the full range of capital markets and treasury products and services. Our expertise is trading and risk management – cash and derivative instruments – in foreign exchange, interest rates and Japanese and European equities.

We provide renowned theoretical training coupled with its practical application on an exchange floor or risk management trading desk. We expect you to express your ideas, collaboratively develop dynamic solutions, and assume responsibility for trading and managing portfolio risk.

Career opportunities exist in major financial centers in North America, Europe and Asia.

We want to meet you! Learn more about our innovative firm at our presentation in Amherst College Converse Hall - The Red Room on February 8th. For more information, contact the Office of Career Planning and Placement. If unable to attend, direct your resume to: Swiss Bank Corporation, Attn: Human Resources - Recruiting, 141 W. Jackson, Chicago, IL 60604. Equal Opportunity Employer M/F/D/V

TRADE UP TO THIS CAREER OPTION.
Capital Markets and Treasury
Swiss Bank Corporation
Schweizerischer Bankverein
Société de Banque Suisse

The Spa
Hot Tubs & Tans
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

Eating Disorder Programs • Spring 1993
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671 x233 or 234, Clinic IV.

• • •

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671 x233 or 234, Clinic IV.

• • •

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, chronic dieting, or compulsive overeating. Mondays (except holidays) 4:30-6:00 p.m. Campus Center Room Number posted by elevator. No registration necessary. Confidentiality Assured.

For more information on these programs or other eating disorder concerns, call 549-2671 x233 or 234. Confidentiality Assured.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Israel's unjustified deportation demands U.N. sanctions

In his brief time as Prime Minister of Israel, Yitzhak Rabin has left few people believing that peace, particularly in the territories, is one of his priorities. After five Israeli soldiers were killed by the fundamentalist group Hamas in December, Rabin had 415 supporters and members of Hamas — none of whom were suspects — blindfolded, loaded into buses, and summarily deported. The rationale for this action was retribution and protection of civil order in Israel and the Occupied Territories.

There are two basic issues that need to be addressed. First, the deportation was wrong because it violated the provisions of the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949, which prohibits, under all circumstances, deporting residents of occupied territories. Furthermore, Israel deported the men over the Lebanese border against Lebanon's will — a clear violation of international law.

Rabin argues that Hamas is committed to violence and the destruction of Israel, and that as such any action taken against its members is justified; he also points out that many of the deportees already were imprisoned. The first claim has no credibility: states have the right to try residents of occupied lands, not to punish them by fiat. And even if the deportees had been tried and convicted of actual crimes, rather than association, the Fourth Convention's prohibition is explicit. That some of the deportees were taken from jail cells only undermines Israel's case: how can incarcerated people threaten order?

The deportation has become a political nightmare for Rabin. He has faced near mutiny in his cabinet over the issue, and the U.N. Security Council has already passed one resolution demanding the immediate return of all the deportees. Calls for sanctions against Israel are becoming louder and more frequent, raising the spectre of a U.S. veto in the Council, where it is becoming obvious that there is one standard for Israel's actions and one for every other Third World — specifically, Arab — nation. A U.S. veto of punitive action will likely mean the end of peace efforts.

Jonah
GELBACH

Rabin and the U.S. reached a "compromise" that 100 of the deportees may be readmitted (and reincarcerated), while those deportees not already returned would have their terms of expulsion cut from two years to one. So far, the deportees have insisted that only their full repatriation will bring an end to the crisis. Lest anyone believe that Rabin's motive for compromise was salvation of the tattered peace process, this past Wednesday he defended all his actions, insisting, "The principle of our ability to remove for a limited time hundreds of inciters, leaders and organizers remains." Hardly contrite words.

Hamas and like-minded Palestinian factions are committed to destroying both peace prospects and Israel, and it's hard to see how allowing them the moral high ground will advance Israel's long term security. No lasting peace is possible without a two-state solution. The fragile peace process must be strengthened, and that will be possible only when Israel agrees to talk seriously about leaving the territories. The growing support among Palestinians for hard-line factions is not an accident; Israel has promoted division among the Palestinians, breaking their unity and avoiding substantive peace negotiations.

For twenty years, the PLO was told that negotiations would be possible if it recognized Israel's right to exist and renounced terrorism. In 1987, in front of the entire U.N. General Assembly, PLO leader Yassir Arafat did both, and with the exception of a few actions carried out by fringe groups, PLO terrorism ceased. Israel refused to honor its pledge, and during Likud's reign of power, Prime Minister Shamir actually repudiated his own peace plan when the Palestinians unexpectedly endorsed it. Israel has no credibility among the vast majority of Palestinians, and moderate Arabs who favor peace negotiations are fast losing theirs.

If Israel cannot or will not demonstrate sincere efforts to produce peace in the territories, Palestinians will deem talks even less promising than they do now. In the meantime, the U.N. must send a message by imposing sanctions to enforce its demands.

Jonah Gelbach is a UMass student.

Can-crushers or housing?

I saw a warning of the death of capitalism yesterday. It signalled more clearly and more certainly than all the volumes of Das Kapital that the unfettered free-market will eventually be washed away. It comes in matt black or gray, this foreboding, and retails for $119. It is a home can-crusher. A machine with an electric motor that liberates the lucky owner from the laborious task of crushing their soda cans.

Jesse
ARMSTRONG

Now I have my doubts about the necessity of crushing cans at home at all, but I suppose there may be some people for whom the space occupied by a fully (how can one put it) extended can is so desperately needed that compacting is required. However in this peculiar circumstance one might have thought a firm stamp would be sufficient. By this reasoning the only group of people who need the electric can crusher are those chronically overcrowded, perhaps living in a trailer park and too frail to stamp.

Of course this is not the target market for the device. It is an object belonging to a special realm of the Expensively Useless, designed to be purchased by the rich and unimaginative, presented to their rich and unimaginative friends over rich and surprisingly imaginative dinners. These are objects as useful as a Perot bumper sticker that multiply every year, objects for which there is no need, that create their own dubious demand but sneak their way into daily life until existence without a monogrammed toothbrush, electric can opener, or digital eggtimer seems impossibly harsh.

In our age of cheap cynicism it seems rather gauche and almost churlish to suggest any connection between electric can crushers and people with nowhere to live or not enough to eat. Ignoring such unpleasant realities is part of (post) modern non-philosophy, which shrugs its mock-sophisticated shoulders at the particular and is too busy with a wry smile at the endlessly reinvented surface of society to go into the messy reality of its workings.

But there is a connection between the froth that consumer society produces for its very wealthy and the destitution of the very poor. It is supremely unfashionable to say so but eventually there must come a time when we stop making electric can crushers and start building cheap good housing. The link only becomes clearer as the froth becomes more ridiculous.

One of the difficulties of writing about the U.S. is that it is so blatant, so obvious, so hugely real that reportage is really the only way to approach it, but even then one fails to encompass it; what is the U.S. skips away from you, maybe because there is no essential heart to the nation, no mystery, so that after five thousand words you are no closer to a fundamental truth than you were at the start. Maybe all the writer can do is report on the culture of things; this might be the only way to understand the society, to write about the things that make it up. Yet the U.S. is a phenomenal society where the phenomena are so frequently changing that in six months the can-crusher will no longer be remarkable, merely another mod-con, signifying nothing.

Jesse Armstrong, an exchange student from England, is a Collegian columnist.

Don't limit speakers to their race

As the media in our society continues to create distorted images of different types of people, many soon become fooled into believing them as true. The media has a record of creating stereotypes of people of color. There is no controversy surrounding this point. The media also loves to present every issue as racial, usually Black vs. White. What is sad is that even people who recognize the power the media possess have fallen victim to their lies and deceptions.

Students' reactions to Spike Lee's visit illustrate this phenomenon. Many felt Mr. Lee did not speak on the issues of racial division, something of applicability to our microcosm here at the University. Students felt it was his duty as a successful African-American male to elaborate on the issue of race. My criticism is that many people wrongly assume that when a prominent African-American person steps behind the podium they are immediately going to speak on issues of race.

It is wrong to want behavior from those who happen to fit specific stereotypical images the media aids in establishing.

It is wrong because not every issue in our complicated world revolves around race as some would have you believe.

And it is wrong to put limitations on a lecturer's range of topics he or she wishes to cover because of the color of their skin.

Kaisar Khatak
Amherst

Administration fails to deliver substitute for Upward Bound

Do the words bamboozled, duped, flim-flammed, shortchanged, fleeced and mislead mean anything to you in terms of the University's treatment of the ALANA community in the past? The administration may believe in the saying that a sucker is born every 60 seconds, but for every so-called sucker there are another 10 intelligent people, many of whom are familiar with political and bureaucratic games. Let me ask you a question.

If your neighbor knocked down your brand new white fence and there were witnesses to this sabotage are you going to hold a study or review to tell you how to build a new fence or are you going to hold a legitimate investigation to uncover the sordid dealings? If you opted for a review of how to construct a new fence and you are the one who abrogated a 25-year-old fence then that would lead me to believe you are covering up the real dirt and providing a smoke screen to the public.

Those of you who attended meeting in the Campus Center on Oct. 9, 1992, as well as the meeting in the Malcolm X Center heard me present Chancellor Richard O'Brien and his staff with questions regarding the administration's responsibility for the defunding the Upward Bound Program, a college preparatory program for low-income and first generation college students. The Chancellor said there were would be an official investigation in front of more than 200 people. Are you going to hold him to it?

Malkes
GOMES

I have found out that a review will be done on how the grant proposal was denied and how a stronger one can be written. A review, not an investigation. The administration will have you believe the government is at fault for defunding the program. They rejected it, but there must be a reason: the administration did not follow the instructions carefully nor did they give a damn, especially when they could have walked to the Office of Institutional Research and Planning for updated information.

Some people will turn around bewildered and try to fabricate every pretext possible to clear themselves of the blame. The administration knows they have royally screwed up, but they are trying to cover it up and save the sinking ship. Although no one is talking, that ship will continue to sink until it hits the bottom, drowning all those aboard.

Chancellor O'Brien promised last semester to invest $250,000 to institute a substitute program until 1995, when a new grant proposal can be written. I would like to see receipt of this $250,000. This new program utilizes services from CCEBMS, BCP and URLRC, which are in place and are funded. I think a business person would call this "in kind giving": no real money is given but other resources are used. This program is not even 25 percent close to the old Upward Bound Program nor is it worth $250,000. Furthermore, the program has yet appeared to start functioning.

As usual, the University has taken a serious issue and turned it into rhetoric and filibustering. Barnum and Bailey's Circus would love this act. If the University refuses to clean its dirty laundry in house then it is our duty as students to wash our dirty laundry and hang it out in public to dry in the heat so that the system can rebuild its integrity. But the behavior of the system as a whole is another story. I encourage all students to be aware of this issue as well as following up with the demands. There is a lot you can do. We have people who do intelligent things, stupid things, and others who do ignorant things. Remember: "Stupidity is forever, but ignorance can be fixed."

Malkes Gomes is a Collegian columnist.

US companies welcome children into workplace

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press

BOSTON — A dozen colleagues wearing looks of grim determination settle in around a conference table at New England Telephone Co. and take out their crayons.

Occasionally, one or another looks around to make sure his mother is still there.

The conferees, all children 8 to 10, have come to see their parent's workplace in one of many new initiatives by U.S. businesses to reconcile their employees' work and family responsibilities.

"More and more today, it's good for the children to have this kind of information at hand — and for the parents," said Odessa Morell, who works for New England Telephone's parent company, NYNEX, and brought her eight-year-old son Matthew to the program.

In an age when increasing numbers of families are headed by single working parents or by parents who both work, some businesses are letting their employees rearrange their days around the need to stay home with a sick child, wait there for the plumber or run the carpool to the Little League games. Others are beefing up day care and stretching family leaves — a practice now signed into law by President Clinton.

"Everybody's realizing that work and family are intertwined, and from an employee's and employer's standpoint, it's getting very difficult to separate the two," said Elizabeth Hirschorn, director of the newly established New England Work and Family Association.

New England Telephone provides a five-week information program for workers and their children who are at home alone part of the day. The course is run by Boston University's Center on Work and Family.

"What affects them at home will affect them at work," said Ronna Cohen, who conducts the sessions.

The program "really puts my mind at rest," said Rhoda Healy, an employee who attended with her son Tom, 10. "I worry a lot. There's things I never thought of, like what to do if someone comes to the door."

The New England Work and Family Association, established in December at BU, already has 60 corporate members, including the Gillette Co., Polaroid Corp., the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Digital Equipment Corp., the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. and Stride Rite.

"Employers can't afford to lose their highly trained, highly skilled employees over an issue like family obligations," Hirschorn said.

Those obligations put the squeeze on millions of Americans.

More than 70 percent of all women with children between the ages of 6 and 17 now work, and more than half of all women with children less than 1 year old are in the work force.

"It's difficult for employees to leave those stresses and worries at home," said Judith David, director of the Bay Area Work and Family Coalition in San Francisco.

Meanwhile, the oldest baby boomers have reached their 40s, requiring them to care not only for their children, but also for their aging parents.choose, they'd choose their family."

■ cultural center

continued from page 3

implementation of the Native American floor, the center has had a difficult time in recruiting Native American students.

"Part of the problem is that the administration is not committed to creating educational programs for younger students of color in order to prepare them for higher education," said a UMass student who wished to remain anonymous.

"For every two Native American students who enters UMass, one leaves for various reasons. One of which is a lack of continuity of family and community for some 100 percent oppressed Natives who have never lived outside a Native American community or reservation," Lopes said.

Townes said he is concerned about the absence of a recruiter for Native American students. Out of approximately 20,000 students enrolled at UMass, there are less than 50 Native American undergraduates.

"We have the smallest number of representation of faculty and staff as well as students. It is important for the administration to recognize this," Lopes said. "The Natives do not mind promoting cultural sensitivity, but feels the University should take an active role if that's their goal."

The center still manages to create programs without an official program director. They are planning the Pow Wow dance, and sponsoring speakers for March, Native American Awareness month, Kahon:Wes said.

"There has been a lot of debate over the exact nature of the cultural center, but as long as the center works for the Natives, then it works for me," Townes said.

"It is often said that it is better to be seen than heard, but in this case, the Native Americans are neither seen nor heard," said the anonymous student.

■ academe

continued from page 3

United States.

Ferguson expanded her view of homosexuality and included all minorities, specifically Afro-Americans, in her lecture. She said she believes a "world culture is coming about."

"There is a set of social requirements and values that are coming about today," Ferguson said.

As a result of the increase in mediums of mass communication, Ferguson said, people are gaining a greater consciousness of the needs of different communities.

WRITE FOR WOMEN'S ISSUES
113 CAMPUS CENTER
ASK FOR STACY MALONE

"Women in Derivatives Trading and Financial Risk Management"
Amherst College Converse Hall - The Red Room
Monday, February 8, 1993, 7:30PM

You've worked hard...
Excelled academically...
Achieved results...
Now it's time to trade up...

If you possess exceptional analytical talent...want to use sophisticated technology...and thrive on complex intellectual challenges — you can achieve results with O'Connor & Associates.

We're a premier technology-based securities trading and financial risk management firm specializing in U.S. and Canadian equity & index options, convertible securities and other derivative instruments. O'Connor & Associates will be integrated into a Swiss Bank Corporation subsidiary if the necessary regulatory approvals are received.

We provide renowned theoretical training coupled with its practical application on an exchange floor or risk management trading desk. We expect you to express your ideas, collaboratively develop dynamic solutions, and assume responsibility for committing capital and managing portfolio risk.

Career opportunities exist in major financial centers in North America and Europe.

We want to meet you! Learn more about our innovative firm at our presentation in the Amherst College Converse Hall - The Red Room on February 8th. For more information, contact the Office of Career Planning and Placement. If unable to attend, direct your resume to: O'Connor & Associates, Attn: Human Resources - Recruiting, 141 W. Jackson, Chicago, IL 60604. Equal Opportunity Employer M/F/D/V

O'CONNOR & ASSOCIATES
TRADE UP TO THIS CAREER OPTION.

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Boxercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

Want the Boston Globe delivered?

Monday - Friday and Sunday

Call 1-800-858-4275
Then press zero

Arts & Living

Foster and Gere shine in Sommersby

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Sommersby is an example of what Hollywood does best. It's scope is a sweeping romantic melodrama — the kind Hollywood used to make like clockwork. It's a breath of fresh, loving air in light of what nowadays passes as romance (the insipid Bodyguard, for instance). Jodie Foster and Richard Gere create complex characters in a not-so-simple tale of love, honor and the age-old question of 'what's in a name?'

Sommersby is a solid remake of a 70s French flick, The Return of Martin Guerre starring Gerard Depardieu. In Hollywood tradition, the writers have pretty much drained the story of its more political overtones and wisely kept the story more focused on the relationship between Foster and Gere.

It's post-Civil War South and Jack Sommersby (Gere) returns home after an absence of six years to his wife (Foster) and a son. Foster believed Jack dead, since he never sent word while in the war.

At first, it's the little things; the new Jack doesn't drink anymore, he's more loving to Foster, his feet are two sizes smaller. But Foster doesn't seem to mind because this Jack is such a glowing improvement over the wife-beating drunk schemer who left her so long ago. Jack also re-immerses himself in the town, and proposes a plan to revitalize the town by investing in a new crop: tobacco.

A few incidents prompt suspicion, mostly from the town preacher (Bill Pullman), whom Foster promised to marry if Jack didn't come back after seven years. The film winds down to a well-written courtroom conclusion and justifiably melodramatic ending.

Sommersby is the kind of film where the people do things for love, honor, pride and name that people in the real world just don't do. This makes some of the more hard-to-swallow moments just glide by. Sommersby works because nothing seems calculated and its ending is honorable and lasting — very un-Hollywood.

I've always been a big fan of Jodie Foster, but still — two Academy Awards? From Taxi Driver to Silence of the Lambs, she brings her unique hybrid of tough as nails credibility with an unfliching vulnerability. When she says, "I never loved him the way I loved you" at a key moment in the trial with her patented lockjaw voice, it's pure Foster heaven.

Richard Gere on the other hand is an incredibly erratic actor. For every Officer and a Gentleman and Internal Affairs there's a Pretty Woman and a Final Analysis. In Sommersby, he's never been a more sturdy hero and the way he woos Foster is wonderfully romantic.

Foster and Gere compliment each other well, here. In fact, director Jon Amiel thoughtfully makes everything in Sommersby compliment everything else. From Philippe Rousselot's (Dangerous Liaisons) sumptuous photography to the Reconstruction themes and their parallel to contemporary thoughts on renewal, Sommersby clicks because it plays to the audience without insulting the viewer with pre-school plotting and silly theatrics (once again, see The Bodyguard).

Sommersby is gracious, patient entertainment that doesn't retread the same material; it works around it to create a film that earns our trust. Foster and Gere are a perfect coupling in a movie that just makes me dread the coming of Valentine's Day even more. Sommersby is for the romantic (or at least the potential romantic) in all of us. B+

American Buffalo is superb, glorious theater

By SHAWN McDONNELL
Collegian Staff

American Buffalo
Hampden Theatre
Feb. 5 - 6

Director Nathan Phillip Schechter traces his production of American Buffalo back to his childhood, when he would test his nerves against the imagined horrors of the basement. "Come down the stairs," he explains, "and you'll find isolated boys, terrified by what they might encounter in the darkness, looking for a light."

Like the basement of early nightmares, Don's Resale Shop is a cluttered and unfriendly place. Accessible only by rickety staircases (one stretches nearly to the ceiling, another cuts through the audience) and lit only by a swinging fluorescent bulb, the shop becomes both a fortress and a prison for the boys who inhabit it.

The "boys" in this case are a trio of David Mamet outcasts: Donny, the surly shop owner; Bob, his simpleton gopher; and "Teach," their desperate and obsessive "associate."

Demonstrating why he is among the greatest playwrights of his generation, Mamet (Oleanna, Speed-The-Plow) creates a scathingly funny — and sometimes upsetting — vision of three people on the brink of oblivion. Fueled by dreams of stealing a priceless coin collection, the men plot, counter-plot, and betray each other to the point of classical tragedy.

Their treasure is spurious — if a collection even exists, it is never within their reach — and watching the parade of indignities which follows their absurd scheme is like watching children under torture. This is precisely the effect which Mamet seems to be aiming for, and one which is brilliantly achieved.

The ease with which Schechter and his cast animate Mamet's crazy/funny gutter-speak is matched only by the deftness with which they puncture every character's illusions.

Set in the tiny Hampden Theatre, this Buffalo has an intimacy and naturalness which its touring mid-eighties revival could not. The brilliant set design (for which no credit is given) utilizes Hampden's black walls and low ceiling to create a claustrophobic, subterranean feel, assisted by the ominous staircase which stretches far overhead. It is a great setting, and one which is used to full effect by an impeccable three-man cast.

Both Matthew Giambrone and Owen Conneely (as the shop keeper and his gopher) turn in wonderfully restrained performances in challenging roles. Giambrone's slow, considered actions and weary voice make him utterly convincing in the role of a character 30 or 40 years older than himself. The relationship between Giambrone and the mentally-handicapped Conneely is handled with sensitivity and understanding, but without allowing sentiment to penetrate Mamet's cynical world.

As the opportunistic and ultimately tragic "Teach," Paul Anthony Spatarella is sensational. With hanging strands of dirty hair, a sharp hooking nose, and red, raw eyes, Spatarella seems every inch the pariah. His quiet, unnerving speech patterns represent a daring departure from Al Pacino's raging giant, and it actually serves to make Teach's eventual destruction all the more dramatic.

Kudos must also go to Costume Designer Nicole Higgins, if only for the wonderful job she has done in selecting Spatarella's soiled, hanging raincoat. The large jacket on Teach's wiry frame gives him an ominous appearance, which seems to change, as the character unfolds, to an image of a child dressed in grown-up clothes. Like everything else in this production, Higgins' work is outstanding.

Nathan Phillip Schechter has raised the stakes for UMass student theatre with this production. It is hard to imagine that many offerings this semester will be able to match American Buffalo's simple, glorious power.

ANDREA MIGLIASSI / COLLEGIAN
The cast of American Buffalo.

Athen's band Widespread Panic to play tonight

This powerhouse quintet is a must-see

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

The Athens based band, Widespread Panic, is the definition of the musical sound of the dynamic New South. This powerhouse quintet plays over 200 dates a year and you will get the opportunity to see them tonight in Northampton at Pearl Street.

The band has built a loyal following of "Spread-Heads," who have grown to love and expect Panic's tight, energetic live performances.

Widespread Panic's singer/guitarist John Bell and guitar wizard Michael Houser are set against the rhythms of bassist David Schools, drummer Todd Nance, and percussionist Domingo S. Ortiz.

"We're not trying to write songs as much as we are trying to be a band and make music in front of people," Bell told Pollstar. "The songs write themselves and sometimes that happens on stage so everyone watching the show becomes part of that process. We like to take on the flavor of what is happening that night. When you pay for a ticket, you want honesty."

Panic played with a touring five-band package, Horizons of Rock Developing Everywhere (HORDE) this summer. The lineup included Atlanta's Col. Bruce Hampton & the Aquarium Rescue Unit, jazz/blue-grass ensemble Bela Fleck and the Flecktones, New York rockers the Spin Doctors and Blues Traveler.

Like the other bands that toured under HORDE, Widespread Panic's music contains more jazz, funk and fusion than psychadelia.

"But we're not one of those boogie bands. We don't play shuffles, with three guitars blazing," Nance told Rolling Stone.

Widespread Panic's inception occurred in 1981, when both Houser and Bell played coffeehouses near the University of Georgia. But it wasn't until 1985 that Panic came together as a band. Their first record, Space Wrangler, was released on an indie label and their latest eponymously named album was released on Capricorn Records.

A rockin' show is promised for Spread-Heads and future Spread- Heads in NoHo tonight.

COURTESY CAPRICORN RECORDS
Spread-Heads beware! The members of Widespread Panic will perform for an 18 and over crowd tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton. The show starts at 8 p.m.

Men's gymnastics defeats Cortland St.

By ANDREW BRYCE
Collegian correspondent

This past weekend featured two rebuilding men's gymnastics teams, the University of Massachusetts and Cortland State, with the Minutemen defeating the New York school 240.15-223.95. UMass proved to be the more talented team as they won every event.

"Cortland State usually has an outstanding team," said head coach Roy Johnson. "They were pretty weak; they're a rebuilding team. They are a well coached team (Eric Malmberg), yet we just caught them in the right year."

Junior Jason Braud and senior captain Steve Christensen were the Minutemen's leading competitors. Braud had two first place finishes, in the floor exercise (9.15) and the vault (9.05), and two second place finishes, in the parallel bars (8.75) and the rings (8.5).

Christensen also won two events, the pommel horse (9.6) and the parallel bars (8.95), and garnered a third place finish in the floor exercise (8.7).

Rounding out the scoring efforts for the Minutemen were sophomore Stu Bacher, who finished first in the rings (8.8), junior Jay Santos, who tied for second in the vault (8.75) and finished third in the pommel horse (8.45), and sophomore Tim Smith, who placed third in the horizontal bars (7.45).

Johnson was most impressed with how UMass performed in the pommel horse. While Christensen took first place, and Santos took third, Johnson was also happy with freshman Jason Grant (7.1).

"This is the event we improved the most since last week's meet against Navy," said Johnson. "We went up four points, and we should continue to improve another three points."

Johnson was also pleased with the performance of freshman Steve Goldman, who received a score of 8.45 on the parallel bars.

The Minutemen now have to focus all of their attention on their next meet, which is at home against Springfield. The meet will take place on Wednesday, February 10th, at 7 p.m., and will be held in Boyden Gym. Johnson is excited about the Minutemen's first home meet.

"Four out of the last five weekends have been spent on the road," said Johnson. "We're finally at home on Wednesday."

■ women's gymnastics

continued from page 11

Notes from the Mat: During her floor routine, Marshall flashed a smile to a young female admirer, showing she is personable both on and off the mat. When asked about it, Marshall said she was a close friend from home.

Marshall and her teammates take to the road on Wednesday, as the Minutewomen travel to Southern Connecticut, before returning home for a meet against Northern Illinois next Monday, February 15, to be held in the Curry Hicks Cage. All are invited to attend.

■ women's hoop

continued from page 12

Mountaineers responded with a 9-0 run to take a 17-9 lead. They would not trail the rest of the way.

Massachusetts was led by senior forward Kim Kristofik and freshman center Melissa Gurile, who each had 16 points. Freshman forward Octavia Thomas snagged a game-high 14 rebounds.

UMass's (8-10, 4-4 league) next game is 7 p.m. Wednesday against Rutgers at the Cage.

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖

The Best Chinese Buffet

MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE

WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15

NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton Holyoke
584-4112 • 535 1888
SAME DAY DELIVERY

BANANADAMA Fabulously frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

WHERE'S MOE?
MOE'S AT ΔY!
Delta Upsilon - Open Rush

Tues. Feb. 9 — Thurs. Feb 11
Radz Pizza — ☆ Hypnotist ☆
Nite — John Sacco
8 - 9 PM — 8 - 9 PM
Mon. Feb 15 — Wed. Feb 17
Come Play — D. P. Dough
Nagleschlaügen — Nite
8 - 9 PM — 8 - 9 PM

For More Info: 549-3831
☆ Call for a Ride ☆
RUSH DELTA UPSILON

HEALTH AND BEAUTY CARE
- SPECIALS -
MINI STORE M-F 7:30AM - 10PM S-S 8:30AM-10PM
WORCESTER MUNCHY M-F 8AM-9PM S-S 12-8PM
MENTADENT TOOTHPASTE W/BAKING SODA ONLY $1.99 REG. 2.39
ROBITUSSIN for Coughs & Colds...2.99
5 PACK GOOD NEWS RAZERS $1.79
VALUE STAR RUBBING ALCOHOL - 1/2 PRICE NOW 49¢
ASSORTED VO5 SHAMPOO & CONDITIONERS 99¢ REG. 1.79
AUSSIE SPRUNCH - 12OZ. SIZE NOW $2.99 WAS 4.59
-ALSO-
SELECTED MAYBELLINE COSMETICS 50% OFF at the U-Store Only!
HAMPDEN MUNCHY & FRANKLIN MUNCHY M-F 7:30AM-9PM S-S 12-8PM
NOW SERVING COFFEE, TEA, PASTRIES, BRUEGGERS BAGELS
UNIVERSITY STORE
M-F 9AM-5PM SAT. 11AM-3PM

CALVIN AND HOBBES — By BILL WATTERSON

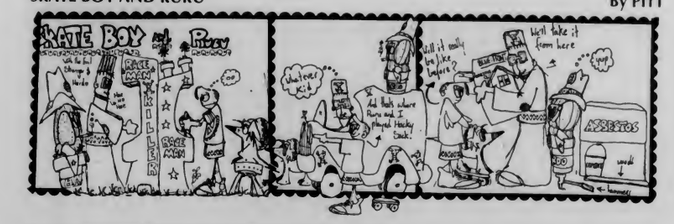
JIM'S JOURNAL — By JIM

DOONESBURY — By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE — By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED — By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU — By PITT



THE FAR SIDE — By GARY LARSON

"Don't touch it, honey ... it's just a face in the crowd."

Quote of the Day

"...you'll see, it's my imagination / hand me your eyes / I will put them in front of mine..."

– 4 NonBlondes

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An outstanding day for your personal relationships. Put more emphasis on being sensitive, affectionate and understanding. At work, avoid biting off more than you can chew.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Disquieting news or hasty moves could put you off course. Steady effort and extra attention to detail will ensure arrival at your destination. Go along with new details.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Creative touches lend beauty to your home. The key elements of a new project are achievable. Your command attention with your stylish appearance and warm smiles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be certain to confirm all information to make sure nothing important escapes your attention. Idle time is down time — getting started on a new task will rev up your engine.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Other people respond favorably when you affix your stamp of approval to an agreement. Your pledge of friendship and teamwork is widely applauded. Avoid a stubborn insistence on having your own way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Not a good day for negotiating new business deals. Seek a change of scenery. A loved one may make an unusual request. Try to fulfill it if at all possible. Start a long book today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The promise of a happy day greets you this morning. Your instinctive good manners will pay off in romance. Mate or partner is loyal and supportive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Curb an urge to grab the limelight. Be willing to listen to others' views when discussing your finances. Seek the company of someone who shares your interest this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Honesty is essential in your relationships. Refuse to be pushed into making unrealistic promises. Remain cool even if mate's comments add to your agitation over a money matter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your self-confidence returns. Luck is on your side. Look before you leap where employment or romance is concerned. Keep your emotions under tighter control. But own up to your faults.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A wonderful day for reflection and planning. Share secrets with loved ones. Romance may be moving in a new direction.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your zest for your work brings cooperation from your co-workers and even applause from higher-ups. Avoid arguing over value choices. Increased communication results in greater understanding.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

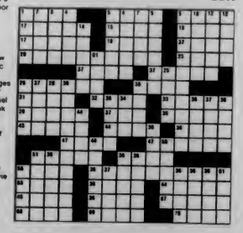
ACROSS
1 "Genesis" name
5 "— boy!"
9 Andy's pal
13 Mountain range of South America
15 Knitter's stitch
16 Painful
17 Type of engine
18 Brother of Icarus
19 Assistant
20 How flat?
22 Kind of school
23 Dregs
24 Geeker
26 Mexican dish
30 Farmer's home?
31 Actor Vigoda and namesakes
32 Challenge
35 Cut
39 Author of "The Three Musketeers"
41 Gov't. agency
42 Verdi's forte
43 "Uncle Tom's Cabin" author
44 Burrower
46 Egyptian goddess
47 Mist
49 Drawing
51 Long, narrow S.A. republic
53 Treaty gp.
55 Pub beverages
58 How proud?
62 Beer essential
63 Tiberian monk
64 Often found with lime
65 City south of Moscow
66 Hebrew measure
67 Texas shrine
68 Famous movie "Citizen"
69 Examination
70 Pony's pace

DOWN
1 House, in Burgos
2 Picnic "guests"
3 Brainstorm
4 Certain tide
5 Swiftly
6 Brass instruments
7 Journey
8 Assert without proof
9 How American?
10 Fabric with a wavy, watered weave
11 Command
12 Ooze
14 Minute
21 Require
25 Besides
26 Small boys
27 Adjoin
28 Office note
29 How clear?
30 Distribute cards
33 Peak
34 The Grande, for one
36 Part of a 3-piece suit
37 Norse explorer
38 Foolhardy
40 Embossed emblem
45 Italian noble family
48 Fanatic
50 Austrian "bear"
51 Barton of the Red Cross
52 She launched 1000 ships
53 Monikers
54 Separated
55 With "run", lose self-control
57 Alike
58 Gael
59 "The Tentmaker"
60 Singer Perry
61 Clove hitch, for example

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

	A	C	T	S		D	E	E	S		P	A
S	U	R	R	A		R	A	V	E		A	L
T	R	A	I	L		E	V	E	R	G	R	E	E	N
S	A	D	I	A	C		A	R	D	E	N	T
	A	D	J	U	S	T		S	P	O	K	E
R	E	P	E	N	T		T	H	A	N	E
E	A	P		E	A	G	L	E		S	T	I	C	K	S
O	R	L	E		A	G	E	R		A	H	E	M
S	P	E	N	T		T	E	N	O	R		R	E	E	S
		T	A	R	E			A	L	O	E
S	T	A	I	N	S		A	L	T	O	S
S	P	O	I	L		I	N	D	U	S	T	R	Y
B	A	I	L		A	N	T		N	A	M	E	D
A	I	L	E		H	I	T	E		A	D	A	P	T
T	I	E	D		E	R	O	S		S	E	S	S	I	S

2/8/93



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Sarah Lévesque
Copy Editor ..... Stacy Malone
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Seth Kaye
Production ..... Jim Bruneau, Catherine Chaput

Menu

LUNCH
Ravioli Alfredo
Chicken Cultet
BASICS LUNCH
Ravioli Alfredo
Falafel Sandwich

DINNER
Beef & Snow Peas
Stuffed Shells & Sauce
BASICS DINNER
Polynesian Veggies
Stuffed Shells & Sauce

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

Still Tic, Tac, Toeing Through Your Life?

Let us help you make some winning decisions about your future.

Late register for classes January 27-February 9.

UMass and You — a winning team!

Evening credit courses (over 100 in 37 different departments; most meet just once a week)

UMass Bachelor of General Studies degree — part time!

Noncredit workshops for business or pleasure (nearly 100, all winners)

Available University day courses (hundreds of them, stimulating!)

Division of Continuing Education, 607 Goodell Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

MULLINS CENTER

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Thank You For Supporting The Mullins Center

The University of Massachusetts wishes to extend a heartfelt "Thank You" to those individuals, organizations and companies who played an integral part in making "Welcome to the Mullins Center" such a huge success. Over 20,000 people attended this inaugural event on January 31st in the newest addition to the University of Massachusetts campus. This event would never have been possible without all of you. Thank You!

Amherst Police Department
Amherst Skating Club
Amherst Youth Hockey Association Miti-Mytes
Daily Hampshire Gazette
Coca-Cola
Hadley Police Department
Mullins Center Staff
Ogden Entertainment Services
Olde Tyme
Posey the Clown
Print Shack
Settie
Suffolk Construction
The Games Man – Trevor Woofenden
UMass Intramural Hockey
UMass Minuteman Marching Band
UMass Women's Basketball Team
Union News/Springfield Republican
University Auxillary Services
University Department of Music and Dance:
Marimbas
Jazz Ensemble I
Orchestra
Symphony Band
Chapel Jazz
A Cafellas
Trombone Choir
Sax Quartet
Brass Quartet
University Environmental Health and Safety
University Fine Arts Center
University Physical Plant
University Public Safety
University Publications
University Relations and Development
University Solid Waste Management
University Transit Services
WRNX – FM

...And a Special Thank You to the thousands of students, staff, faculty and the public who attended our inaugural event. We look forward to welcoming you back

INDEX

YEARBOOK General Meeting

Monday, February 8, 6:30 p.m.
304 Student Union
ALL WELCOME

ORDER YOUR 1993*INDEX* NOW!
A 300+ page copy with full color sections for only $30!
Send coupon to address below and watch for us on the Concourse!

Make checks payable to: INDEX Yearbook
NAME_____
PERMANENT ADDRESS _____
_____
_____
LOCAL PHONE # _____
INDEX, 304 Student Union
UMass, Amherst, MA 01003
545-0848

ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!

ALPINE COMMONS

133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741

Grand Opening Special at ALPINE COMMONS

Short Term Leases

4 - Bedroom..... $650
3 - Bedroom..... $600
2 - Bedroom..... $550

Includes All Utilities

Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!

Don't wait another day, call today!

256-0741

Women's gymnastics sweeps Temple, Rutgers

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

The whole is greater than the sum of its parts. In sports, the team is greater than the sum of its individual performers.

Last Saturday, in Boyden Gymnastics Center, the University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team pulled everything together as an entire squad, defeating both Temple University and the Lady Knights of Rutgers University.

Junior Margeret Furtado and senior Tammy Marshall led the way for the Minutewomen, as they tied for first place in the All-Around competition, posting an overall score of 38.40 for each.

Despite receiving a less than Marshall-esque performance overall from his best gymnast, UMass head coach Alfie Mitchell said his team rallied around Furtado and others in overcoming a day filled with obstacles.

"This was a better meet than we had last week, as far as staying together as a team, and people fighting really hard," said Mitchell. "Margaret had a great meet. She hit every event, and the score is well-deserving."

Furtado, who was nervous before the meet began, was extremely happy with her day as well as her team's two wins, and agreed with Mitchell on how the team achieved success.

"I think we really stayed focused on what we were doing, and tried to do it the best we could. We stayed in it and pulled together," Furtado said.

Marshall went through a grueling day as she and the other 1991-92 Most Valuable Players for the athletic teams here at the University were introduced to the capacity crowd attending the UMass-Rutgers men's basketball game at the William D. Mullins Center at halftime, approximately one hour before the meet.

"I think that [attending the presentation] kind of distracted me a little bit, just because I had to totally stop gymnastics for 45 minutes, run over to the game and miss half of warm-ups. It threw me off a little, but I tried to stay focused," said Marshall.

Even after all of this, Marshall turned in an incredible performance on floor, bringing her closer to the elusive perfect "10". However, the judges saw fit to give her a 9.90, once again tying the school record.

Turn to WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS, page 8

BOSTON UNIVERSITY

A Graduate Degree . . . A Year Abroad
A Global Perspective!

Would you benefit from the experience of studying abroad?
Is your graduate major international business or international relations?
If so, then consider Boston University's Overseas Graduate Centers!

The Master of Science in Management (MSM) is offered in Belgium, England, France, Israel, Italy, and Spain

The Master of Arts (MA) in International Relations is offered in Belgium, England, and France

Courses have an international emphasis and are taught in English.
Classes meet evenings/weekends. Admission in January, April or September.

For brochure and application, please call or write:
BOSTON UNIVERSITY OVERSEAS PROGRAMS
143 Bay State Road, Boston, MA, USA 02215-1783
Tel: 617-353-2982 Fax: 617-353-7120

Boston University is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges. An equal opportunity, affirmative action institution.

Say it to someone special...

COLLEGIAN VALENTINE PERSONALS 50% OFF

To be published Friday February 12th in a special Valentine section.

Deadline is Wednesday, Feb. 10 at 3:30 p.m.

LOOK FOR OUR PERSONALS TABLE ON THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Leadership, Friendship, Service
Rush Alpha Phi Omega
Information Meetings:
TONIGHT--7pm--McNamara Lounge
TOMORROW--7pm--Thoreau TV Lounge

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Space Allocation Process
Attn: RSO's and GSO's who would like to apply for office space in the CC/Student Union complex may obtain applications to do so at the Board of Governors office 817 CC or SAO 416 Student Union.
Deadline to submit applications:
March 5, 1993

Come join the UMass Racquetball Club. A meeting for all beginning and advanced students will take place on Mon Feb 8 at 5 pm at the Mullins Center Racquetball Courts. For more info call Don at 548-1527 or Collin at 549-4349

AUTO FOR SALE

83 Ford Mercury Zepher
4 door
New Brakes, 100,000 miles
$650 b/o Marcy 253-0770

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-6098
549-6073

FOR RENT

Amherst room to rent 300 no first last security daytime 545-6395 nite 967-4065

Fridge Rental 253-9742 delivered free

Room Available $275/mo S. Amherst call Stacey 253-5326 large apt great roommate

FOR SALE

Iguana with everything $100.00
Lights etc. 6-7109

MAC SE/30
40 MB HD, 2 MB RAM
Extended keyboard & carrying case
1700/b.o.
Call 256-0260

Mint Fender Stret
$300
549-5871

FOR SALE - AUDIO/VIDEO

Stereo components: Used /reconditioned, area's largest selection. Buy/sell/trade at Stereo/video Exchange, Sundays 10-4 inside Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

FOUND

HP Calculator on Campus Ctr couch Call 6-4986 to identify

HELP WANTED

ATTENTION STUDENTS Excellent opportunity to make great money, own your own business. Distribute self-defense products and earn big profits. 1-800-758-3210

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action. $100/wk. +. On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon. Fri. + Sunday. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT - Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000- $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Sick of DC Meal Plan?
Meal plan in exchange for kitchen work if interested call
Jim Houston at 549-4919
At 496 North Pleasant St

The Undergraduate Admissions office is now accepting applications for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Representatives, and New Students Program summer counselors. Please visit their table on the Concourse through the 11th.

INSTRUCTION

Horseback riding lessons available at Hadley Farm. Spaces open in Beg I TuTh 10:10 am and Beg II TuTh 12:20 (1 credit) Lab Fee: $250.00. Weekly lessons available on Fridays. Call 549-2863 for more information.

Learn to Scuba dive earn two credits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday at Curry Hicks 7-10 pm 1-800-282-0977

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

KIM FROM PUFTON
I sold my books to you on Wed. morning in the SOM Library. Host your phone # and I need to ask you a question (and I think you're very pretty.) Please give me a call -- DREW (From Salem)

LOST

At Totman Gym Saturday Jan 30th Mens Seiko digital watch with green velcro band $50 reward call Mike 665-8282

REWARD!!
Lost Woman's Seiko watch
Call 585-8896

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

MUSICIANS

Keyboardist Wanted: Phish, Allmans, Creative Improv 256-8115

ONE EYED JAKE

Trumpet player needed. Blues rock Inf. Management. Gigs. Compact Disk. Record Contract pending. Graduating senior preferred. Not Serious? Don't Bother!
Call Steve 549-8120

PERSONALS

EMBA!
Where are you?
People are asking
I haven't an answer
Get in touch I'm always around
-BABA

Feb 10 marks the day of that first magical kiss one year ago Bubz, here's a lifetime of magic- I LOVE YOU, LEE!
Love Darren

HAPPY 22ND BIRTHDAY ERIC!!
I Love You!
Gina

Jessica J.
You are the most beautiful girl I have ever met! Let's go out -- soon
-- your secret admirer

Luke,
Let's get this straight. I said NO and I meant it!!

Munroe
We didn't forget your birthday! Hope it was great!
Love,
The 3 Sluts

RIDE NEEDED

Ride to Rochester/Syracuse area 2/12 (long weekend) Will share ALL expenses. Rebecca 256-3191

ROOMATES WANTED

2 females or couple to share room $180 each or $275 for single, beautiful apartment 665-7604

Room for rent Amherst behind Baybanks 213.00 per month call 549-4388

Roomate Needed!!!
M/F to share two bedroom Brandywine Apt
175.00/mo
549-5868

Single or Double available
Right uptown 5 min. walk to campus
Available 2/8 -Heat included $260
Above Cafe DiCarlo 256-4662

Timeout Barsies Delenos
Single room spitting distance away
256-4662

SERVICES

Pregnent? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst Area
for free testing and confidential caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops
549-1906

Resume Preparation assistance with complete resume development. Keith Anderson, Ph.D. 582-4037

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

TRAVEL

Florida SPRING BREAK
7 nights Beachfront $139.159
RESERVE rooms NOW
Call CMI 1-800-423-5264

Roundtrip ticket to Mardi Gras
For Information call 548-5471

Scuba Dive Key Largo
Spring Break, Call Project Deep
1-800-282-0977

Spring Break:
CANCUN, NASSAU
from $299
Organize a small group for FREE trip
Call 1(800)Get Sun-1

Spring Break '93***
Cancun $479! Jamaica $499!
Daytona Beach $189! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company!
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL
1-800-328-SAVE

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

WANTED

RAQUETBALL PARTNER
Male or Female
Denise 549-8170

UMass Update is looking for reporters and writers for the news show call Sempy at 545-1338 or at 546-3021

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease/4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

The WHMP-FM
Game Summary

RUTGERS	34 - 33 - 67
MASSACHUSETTS	49 - 33 - 82

MASSACHUSETTS (82)
Barbee 3-8 10-10 18, H. Williams 3-16 5-6 11, Roe 8-9 9-12 25, Kellog 0-2 4-4 4, Malloy 6-12 0-0 13, Dingle 2-5 0-0 4, M. Williams 2-5 2-2 7, C. Robinson 0-0 0-0 0, Cottrell 0-1 0-0 0, K. Robinson 0-0 0-0 0. Totals: 24-58 30-34 82.

RUTGERS (67)
Jones 0-3 1-2 1, Phillips 0-8 4-9 4, Weiler 4-8 0-1 8, Santiago 5-14 0-1 11, Worthy 11-15 5-5 27, Redden 2-2 2-2 6, Lumpkin 2-3 0-0 2, Rich 1-4 0-0 2, Kolbasovsky 2-5 2-5 4, Stewart 0-0 0-0 0.
Three-point goals: Rutgers 1-7 (Santiago 1-2, Worthy 0-3, Lumpkin 0-1, Rich 0-1), Massachusetts 4-17 (Barbee 2-6, Kellogg 0-2, Malloy 1-4, Dingle 0-1, M. Williams 1-4). Rebounds: Rutgers 39 (Weiler 8), Massachusetts 37 (Roe 11). Assists: Rutgers 11 (Santiago 3), Massachusetts 17 (Barbee, M. Williams 4). Fouled out: None. Attendence: 9,493.

Player of the Game

Lou Roe, 6-7 Sophomore Forward

Sophomore forward Lou Roe absolutely dominated underneath, scoring a career-high 25 points on near-perfect shooting. Roe made it a personal mission to neutralize Jamal Phillips. Roe had 11 rebounds and was named Co-A-10 Player of the Week.

Why UMass Won

The Minutemen marched to the foul line all day, hitting 30 of 34 free throws. UMass dominated play underneath, thanks to Lou Roe, and the Minutemen jumped out to a huge lead in the first half.

Atlantic 10 Standings

1. Massachusetts	7-1	.875	15-4	.789
2. St. Joseph's	4-2	.667	13-5	.722
3. George Washington	4-3	.571	14-4	.778
4. Temple	4-3	.571	9-8	.563
5. Rhode Island	3-4	.429	12-7	.632
6. West Virginia	3-4	.429	10-7	.588
7. Rutgers	3-5	.375	10-10	.500
8. St. Bonaventure	0-6	.000	10-8	.556

Catch all the Minutemen Basketball Games – Home and Away – on the New 99.3 WHMP-FM!
the New 99.3 WHMP-FM
Join us live from Rafters each Wednesday from 6-7 p.m. for the John Calipari Radio Show.

Minutemen defeat Rutgers

Massachusetts coasts to 82-67 win over Scarlet Knights

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
Mike Williams and the rest of the men's basketball team destroyed Rutgers 82-67 Saturday at the Mullins Center.

In college basketball, conference games frequently separate the haves from the have-nots.

This was never more evident than Saturday afternoon at the William D. Mullins Memorial Center, where the University of Massachusetts basketball team crushed the Rutgers Scarlet Knights, 82-67.

The Minutemen (15-4) jumped to a two-game lead in the Atlantic 10, improving their conference record to 7-1 while handing Rutgers its third loss in a row. UMass never trailed in the game, and took advantage of the Scarlet Knights' chippy play by hitting 30 of 34 free throws.

"This was a good win for us," said head coach John Calipari. "To compete for the league title, we have to win our home games. I think we played well, and we hit all the free throws that counted."

Rutgers (10-10), which fell to seventh place in the A-10 with a 3-5 record, had only one weapon to the Minutemen's five. Steve Worthy was Rutgers' star, facing off against Lou Roe (25 points), Harper Williams (11), Tony Barbee (18), Jerome Malloy (13) and Mike Williams (7). It was a mismatch, to say the least.

UMass dusted off its infamous press, using pressure defense from the start to force turnovers in building an 8-1 lead. Roe, who was named co-Atlantic 10 Player of the Week, played well from start to finish, winning the opening tap and scoring the game's first points.

The closest Rutgers ever got was 12-7, but UMass' 17-6 run, capped by Tony Barbee and Jerome Malloy's 3-pointers put them up 29-13.

Roe, who scored a career-high 25 points, made no disguise of his contempt for Rutgers forward Jamal Phillips, last year's A-10 Freshman of the Year. Roe held Phillips to four points, and after the game said he felt the award should have been his.

"I always get motivated playing Rutgers because of Jamal Phillips, the Freshman of the Year," Roe said. "I felt I really deserved the award. He knows and I know that when I step on the same court as him, he's got to be ready for a war."

The contest resembled hand-to-hand combat, with Rutgers getting into foul trouble almost immediately. Rutgers had seven fouls with 13 minutes left in the half, and was over the limit with nine minutes.

The hour-long first half took its toll on the Knights as Donnell Lumpkin accumulated four fouls, and Mike Jones and Andrew Kolbasovsky each had three.

Rutgers, for their efforts, were able to take Roe out for a few minutes after a razor-sharp elbow connected with his head, and Kennard Robinson was seen sporting an ice pack on his ankle.

Roe punctuated his successful day with a spectacular alley-oop dunk from Mike Williams.

Worthy, historically a Minuteman assassin, was the only person who could keep Rutgers within reach. The 6-foot-5 guard scored a game-high 27 points, but even his efforts could not bring Rutgers closer than 10 points.

When Rutgers closed the gap to 61-51 with 10:43 left in the game, head coach Bob Wenzel was slapped with a technical foul, and UMass had momentum firmly in hand.

"This wasn't a spurty game," said Wenzel. "They established the lead early and kept it throughout. We played against an awfully good team."

First Rutgers game bolstered team

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

Nine games and nine wins ago, University of Massachusetts guard Mike Williams buried a buzzer-beating three-pointer to propel the Minutemen to an 82-78 victory over Rutgers.

With that single shot the mood of the Minutemen went from confused to confident.

UMass was struggling. It was minus its star Harper Williams. It had just lost in embarrassing fashion to Cincinnati on national television and had opened league play with an ugly loss at Temple. UMass looked more NIT than NCAA.

After the game, an ecstatic Calipari walked out of his team's locker room and said, "That was f—ing huge." He went on to declare it the most important UMass victory of the past five years. Bigger than Syracuse, bigger than Temple.

Following Saturday's 82-67 victory over the same team, Calipari held to his original statement and the longer the current winning streak grows, the truer it rings.

"It's the biggest win since I've been a coach here," Calipari said on Saturday. "If we lost that one we're in the tank."

Calipari's players agree.

"It turned our season around," forward Tony Barbee said. "It was a big game. We were on the balance beam and if we lost we were going to fall to earth but instead we dug down and found a little more and Mike hit the big shot."

Mike Williams said, "We really needed that win. It gave us a real boost of confidence when the team was a little down. We began to understand what we had to do to win games."

The wins have certainly come. Nine straight victories, including seven in the Atlantic 10. At 15-4, 7-1 in conference, the Minutemen should jump back into the Top 25 this week.

Despite being two up in the loss column on second place St. Joesph's, no Minuteman thinks the conference race is over. UMass still has to play road dates at West Virginia, St. Joe's, Rhode Island and George Washington.

"We've got a long way to go," center Harper Williams said. "The road trip is going to be tough but we just need to keep playing our style. We're playing with a lot more confidence then we were before (the first Rutgers win)."

In the locker room at Rutgers, Calipari spawned a new team motto, "Refuse to lose."

"That doesn't mean we win every game," Calipari said. "It just means we make another team earn a victory."

So far, his team has won every game.

Minutewomen drop 2 league games

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

After pushing their record up to 8-8 (4-2 league) last week, the University of Massachusetts women's basketball squad was certainly a confident bunch heading into St. Bonaventure last Thursday night.

But the Lady Bonnies ignored all of this, as they avenged a 20 point drubbing on January 23 by disposing of the Minutewomen 90-63 thanks to five Bonaventure players scoring in double figures.

Massachusetts was right in the game in the first half after forward Octavia Thomas hit a jumper to pull UMass within two points, 27-25, with 5:54 remaining in the first half. But the Lady Bonnies went on a 13-6 run, led by game high scorer Suzie Dailer's (20 points) two three-pointers, and boasted a 40-31 halftime lead.

St. Bonaventure poured it on in the second half, however, with forward Jodi Urich scoring 10 of her 14 points and forward Melissa Jurecki scoring 11 of her 13 points.

Despite the loss, the UMass front line was impressive, as freshman Thomas scored 17 points and had 11 rebounds, and teammates Kim Kristofik and Melissa Gurile chipped in with 16 and 15 points respectively.

Saturday, another strong performance from Thomas, Kristofik and Gurile went for naught as West Virginia pulled away in the end for a 67-51 victory.

In the second half, the Mountaineers stretched their 10-point halftime lead (32-22) to 16 points at 46-28. During that run, West Virginia was led by guard Lori Quertinmont's (game-high 22 pts) eight points and Anna Tillman's (17 pts) four points. UMass (which shot 40.7% from the field to 35.5% for W.V.) pulled to within eight, but could get no closer than that.

UMass last lead was at 9-8, but the

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 8

Tuesday February 9, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 72

Sunny and cold, highs in the mid 30s.

Local News:
Did you ever wonder where all the tasty items you eat in the Dining Commons are tested? Find out how it all happens. Page 3.

Sports:
Are you excited about the Minutemen now? Believe it or not, they may be even better next year with recruit Marcus Camby. Page 16.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Research lab expected to spur economy

By KENDRA WILLETT
Collegian Staff

A partnership of resources between the University, the state and federal government and private industry can be used to increase the nation's competitiveness in high technology fields, according to U.S. Senator John Kerry (D-Mass).

Kerry's address formed part of this year's annual National Research Forum for Industry, held yesterday and today in the Student Union Ballroom.

The Research Forum is a two-day event to highlight some of the most recent advances in computer science.

Gov. William Weld will address the Forum tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Kerry spoke about the federal government's role in the Center for Real-time and Intelligent Complex Computing Systems (CRICCS), which has opened a center here at the University. CRICCS began operating at the University last October.

This center will bring money not only to the University, but will also stimulate the local, state and national economies as well, according to University officials.

"This conference is one of the more important ones that we can engage in," Kerry said. "And this center for CRICCS is the key for unlocking the future."

Commenting on how the nation's recession and resulting problems in distributing resources has set the United States back, Kerry said he believed the federal government must concentrate on restoring the nation's competitiveness in high-technology fields.

"The challenge of the country right now is forming a competitive task force on how we will maximize our products and keep them there," Kerry said.

Kerry was recently appointed as chairperson of the Senate's Commerce Committee on International Trade.

The initial $15 million in funding for CRICCS came from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the National Science Foundation, the Department of Defense and 15 partners from private industry.

According to Kerry, who had just returned from an economic conference in Switzerland, other countries are looking toward the United States to pull them out of crisis.

"We need to recognize our role and make a significant shift of our nation's resources," Kerry said.

Kerry said the Clinton Administration plans on shifting 10 percent of the nation's defense budget to civilian uses. He said the Clinton Administration's goal is to eventually shift $7.8 billion from the defense to civilian sectors of the economy.

"There are endless possibilities in which CRICCS is going to pay off as we move towards the next century," Kerry said. "And in many ways it will benefit the Pioneer Valley and the University."

Kerry said the ultimate goal of the CRICCS system is to raise the national standard of living, something he feels the Clinton administration is willing to do.

"It is high time we have a president who will recognize these issues," Kerry said.

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN
U.S. Sen. John Kerry spoke yesterday as part of the University's National Forum for Industry.

Town seeks tax dollars to close fiscal shortfall

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

With Amherst's $2 million budget deficit, some residents say the University of Massachusetts is costing the town millions. Money, they say, the town has yet to see.

"It is hard to have a lot of tax-exempt property when everyone else is paying for services. It would be nice, if the University would work with the town," said Janice Ratner, the chairperson of the Amherst Finance Committee, an independent body appointed by the town moderator.

Because the University is tax-exempt, the state is supposed to pay Amherst for the facilities the University uses. The University utilizes Amherst's fire department, ambulance service, and school system.

There are 81 children attending the Amherst School System whose guardians pay no property taxes to the town, according to Town Manager Barry Del Castilho. Because they live in University Apartments, their guardians do not have to pay property taxes, Ratner said.

Ratner said many of these students need extra tutoring in their native language and this creates a high cost for the town. According to a document from the Amherst Finance Committee, if the town does not get enough money from the state, they may ask for "impact payments for [Amherst] school students in tax-exempt housing."

But the last time the state gave Amherst money in lieu of taxes was fiscal year 1988, when the state gave the town $204,583, according to state Sen. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst). This fiscal year the state has agreed to give the town $85,815, Rosenberg said .

By changing the tax formula, which is now only on land, to include services, Rosenberg said it would help bring the money in lieu of taxes back to 1988 levels. Back in the mid-1980s, students living on campus were taken out of the formula, which cost the town about $5 million in lieu of taxes, according to Del Castilho.

If Amherst does not get enough money from the state, Del Castilho said the town may be asking the University to start paying for Amherst's services. These could include compensation for the motor vehicle excise tax that students pay on their cars to their hometowns, according to documents from the Finance Committee.

Turn to TOWN, page 8

SHELLY FORTIN / COLLEGIAN
LIGHTS, PENCIL, ACTION – Senior painting major Kara Karajewski sets the lighting for a still–life drawing of her ceramic pots.

AG scrutiny decried

NOW blasts alleged 'double-standard'

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The National Organization for Women started a phone and fax campaign today to protest "a double-standard" the group says kept federal Judge Kimba Wood from being nominated for attorney general. The White House denied the charge and insisted Wood was not "fully forthcoming" during her interviews.

"All the conventional wisdom says she didn't jump, she was pushed," said NOW President Patricia Ireland. "I think she absolutely got a raw deal."

The White House said Judge Wood's employment of an illegal alien would have made confirmation difficult.

On the allegation of a double standard, White House Communications Director George Stephanopoulos said, "There is no evidence to support that contention. All people who are nominees are now being asked the question. When we became aware of this situation, we made sure everybody complied."

He said the White House now routinely asks potential nominees if the have problems similar to Zoe Baird, the corporate lawyer who withdrew her nomination for attorney general after it was revealed that she had illegally employed aliens in her household as a nanny and driver.

"In the case of Judge Wood, we asked several times, as we have all nominees — men and women alike."

He said President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore did not break immigration or tax laws in the hiring of household help.

Administration officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, have said

Turn to SCRUTINY, page 4

Jet, airliner collide over Iran, resulting in at least 132 dead

By NEIL MacFARQUHAR
Associated Press

TEHRAN, Iran — An Iranian airliner with 132 people on board collided with an air force jet after takeoff Monday from Tehran's main airport and exploded in a fireball as it plummeted into a military compound. There were no survivors.

The leased, Russian-piloted Tupolev airliner was bound for the northeastern Shiite Muslim holy city of Mashhad, and most of its 119 Iranian passengers were pilgrims. The crew of 13 included a Russian pilot and four other Russians. No other foreigners were on board, aviation authorities said.

The Russian-designed Sukhoi fighter was taking part in an exercise to mark Air Force Day, when 14 years ago its command pledged allegiance to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic Revolution — the first armed force to do so.

Authorities gave no information about the crew of the fighter, but Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported the pilot and co-pilot also were believed killed.

IRNA reporter Sattar Oudi, who saw the accident as he drove to work a Mehrabad Airport, said the jetliner wa about 1,300 feet high when the collision occurred at 10:15 a.m.

"The airplane was just taking off and the fighter came from the opposite side and the two collided," he told the Associated Press.

"The airplane fell out of the sky. It hit the earth and exploded. There was a very, very terrible noise, fire and smoke," he said.

The plane fell in an empty lot inside a compound of Iran's Revolutionary Guards Corps, 25 miles from the center of the capital.

There were no casualties on the ground, sentries at the base said.

The guards refused to allow non-military personnel into the fenced compound, turning back even forensic experts. The guards said the wreckage of Flight 962 and the bodies were strewn over 600-square-yard open area inside their compound.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Webber
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

ARRESTS

• A University of Massachusetts student was arrested early Friday morning on Orchard Hill Drive, according to police. Chris J. Petropolous, 21, was arrested on two counts of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, one count of possession of a firearm on a college campus, and one count of possession of a firearm during a breach of peace.

• Jesse Despo, 18, was arrested Saturday night for being a minor in possession of alcohol, and for possession of a class D controlled substance.

DISTURBANCES

• A woman reported she was awoken by two people outside of her dorm room who were yelling anti-Semitic statements early Sunday afternoon. After the subjects fled she discovered more remarks written on her door's message board.

• Environmental Health and Safety personnel discovered an M-80 firecracker had been set off in the mailroom of Dickinson residence hall and notified the police early Sunday morning. Some of the mail was reportedly damaged.

• An individual came to the University Police station Friday evening seeking advice on how to resolve a dispute among family members.

• Police were called by staff in Chadbourne who reported finding several windows broken on the fourth floor and a large hole in the plaster on the wall.

THEFT

• An individual whose vehicle was towed from the Campus Parking Garage Friday afternoon reported the vehicle had been broken into. A men's suit and cassette tapes valued at $300 were reported stolen.

Book examines Catholicism

Cloud of Unknowing explores the nature of mantra

By DAVINA CHOJNOWSKI
Collegian Correspondent

A 14th-century book by an unknown author may help readers to understand the mystical side of Catholicism, according to a professor of English who spoke recently at UMass.

"These words will help focus and are used to reach a state of recollection. Many people aren't aware of the mystical side of Catholicism."
– Dr. Maika Will, Ph.D.
concerning "Cloud of Unknowing"

A crowd of about 50 gathered in the Newman Center Sunday night to listen to Dr. Maika Will speak about the 14th century book The Cloud of Unknowing."

Will, who received her Ph.D. in English and American Literature from the University of Massachusetts and is now a professor of English at Christendom College in Front Royal, Va., discussed the Cloud author's ideas on mantra.

Mantra, Will explained, is a single syllable word repeated over and over in constant repetition. The Cloud author suggests using one of three words during mantra — those words being love, God and sin.

"These words help focus and are used to reach a state of recollection," Will said. "Many people aren't aware of the mystical side of Catholicism."

The Cloud of the Unknowing is one of the masterpieces of Catholic mysticism, according to Will. It was written in England by an unknown author in the late 14th century.

Will's lecture is one of a series of Cardinal Newman Lectures over the semester.

According to a deacon at Newman, the Cardinal Newman Lectures are focused on bringing Catholic thinking and reflection to the UMass campus.

The Lesbian, Bisexual & Gay Counseling Collective Open House.
All members of the community are welcome!
Informational Meeting on February 10th 8 to 10 p.m. at the Campus Center. Check Room Listing for Location. For more information, call 545-2645 or stop by 406G Student Union U. Mass.

THE COLLEGIAN 545-3500

SPRING BREAK
PANAMA CITY BEACH
FLORIDA
• High quality beachfront accommodations for 7 exciting nights
• Round trip chartered motor coach
• Free pool deck parties, activities, & promotions
• Inter Campus Programs I.D./Discount card
• On location staff for complete assistance
• All taxes, tips, & service charges included
$119 $209
Call Jon or Matt 549-3749

WOMEN and the COLLEGIAN
Women must represent themselves and speak out!
The Women's Issues Dept. at the Collegian gives you the opportunity.
Drop off ideas, issues and articles in the Women's Issues Editor's mailbox.
Or just call 545-3500 to get together.

The Third World Affairs Desk is looking for writers. If you are interested in working on news which pertains to the Third World, please contact Inês c/o the TWA Desk at the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center, or call 545-3500.
Third World Affairs

My Valentine Boxers
Glow-in-the-dark
J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St. Amherst • 253-2013
22 Masonic St. Northampton • 586-6336
Open 7 days • Thursday nights in Northampton

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
SHARK NIGHT
RETURNS
Single Elimination Pool Tournament
• Free Pizza for Players
• $2.00 Entrance Fee
Sign-Up: 7:30–8:00
WINNER TAKE ALL!!!
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

SKI
SPRINGBREAK 3RD ANNUAL INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS
MT. SUTTON, CANADA
(Just across the Vermont border)
ONLY $209
Party in the Snow!
Includes:
5 Day Lift Ticket
5 Nights Lodging (Mountainside Condo)
5 Days Intercollegiate Activities
Sponsors Include: Labatt's, Irish, and Molson.
Legal Age for Alcohol is 18
Group Leader Discounts
SPRINGBREAK '93
CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
1-800-999-SKI-9

Local News

Prof. discusses role of Hebrew literary history

By MIMI FELLNER
Collegian Staff

Despite undergoing major changes and adaptations throughout history, Hebrew literature has maintained a long and rich tradition, according to an acclaimed expert Hebrew and comparative literature.

Dr. Robert Alter, professor of Hebrew and Comparitive literature at the University of California at Berkley, lectured on "Adventure in Modern Hebrew Literature," at Hillel House last night. Approximately 40 people attended the lecture.

Alter is a leading international scholar and his books include a critical study of Fielding, a biography of Stendhal, and two prize-winning volumes on biblical poetry and narrative.

Some of his more recent works include The invention of Hebrew Prose and The World Of Biblical Literature. Alter has recieved numerous awards and fellowships as well.

Alter's lecture discussed two centuries of Israeli literary history and its assimilation or translation for the modern world.

"There seems to be a misconception," Alter said. "People assume that Hebrew literature arrived with the Zionists when Israel was created, but in truth has a history that extends way into the past."

He also stated that "Hebrew was never a dead language. It was used by Jews well before the modern age and has an intense but flickering half-life because of the many peoples the Jewish people encountered in the diaspora."

Alter discussed the many modern Hebrew literary activities going on in Israel today. He also described the nature and anomalies of the Hebrew language.

Alter said Hebrew contains three important factors. First, it has a polyglot context, meaning it is a contested language. Secondly, is its sheer longevity. Hebrew has the longest literary use and is still perfectly usable in the modern world. Finally, Hebrew expresses many hidden ideological balances, Alter said.

He discussed Hebrew as being a diglosia, or "the condition of speaking two languages simultaneously."

Alter mentioned the Haskalah or Jewish enlightenment in Europe from 1783, the year of the first Hebrew Journal, until 1881 and the pogroms in Russia. He went on to discuss in great depth various literary authors of past Hebrew literature in Israel and around the world. Some of these include Chaim Nachman Bialik, whose writing uses dialogues through allusion in both poetry and prose.

"All his poetry teems with allusions to the various books of the bible as well as hidden meter that is strictly biblical," Alter said. Mendele, another Hebrew author, made grammar and syntax of Rabbinic Hebrew the norm.

In 1948 the "age of revolution" ended and Hebrew was established as a national language. This revival, said Alter, was a "reaction of playing with spiritual dynamics."

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
WOULD YOU LIKE FRIES WITH THAT? – Junior BFA major Jennie Nylander relaxes between customers at the Campus Center Coffee Shop.

Behind the scenes at the DCs

Testing kitchen serves as starting point for all items

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

Ever wonder how that beef strudel came to be on your dining commons plate? The origin of cajun-style scrod? Or chicken pucks?

It all starts out in a room full of stainless steel equipment, the epitome of cleanliness, kept at a cool temperature when not in use. That is, the food testing kitchen.

Located on the top floor of Worcester Dining Commons, the food testing kitchen is the launching ground for all new menu items in the DCs. Foods are prepared there, with precise measurements of ingredients recorded, and set before a food testing panel. The panel then decides the fate of the items — rejection or a new addition to dining commons cuisine.

Dianne Sutherland, staff dietitian for all the dining commons, oversees the preparation and testing of the food.

"Vendors usually contact us with offers to try new food products. We ask for samples from some of them," Sutherland said. Recipes from magazines, like "Restaurant and Institution" and "Food Service Management" are also tested, Sutherland said.

"These are all prepared in the test kitchen. Anything on the menu gets tested there first," Sutherland said.

After the food is prepared, a test panel of 10-18 people evaluates the product in such categories as appearance, texture, taste and aroma. If the product gets a passing score, it may become a new menu item. Sometimes, further testing is necessary, Sutherland said.

The test panel, which includes food service managers, purchasing managers, and three to eight students from a HRTA class, meets once or twice a week.

"Approximately 200 products are tested during a school year," Sutherland said. "Over 50 percent are rejected."

Suzanne Brodney, who graduated from UMass last December with a bachelor's degree in nutrition, works with Sutherland as a test kitchen assistant.

"It's different. It's a fun job. You get to cook," said Brodney, who is currently taking graduate courses in nutrition.

"I help prepare recipes in the test kitchen and set up for the test panel. Also, I type up student comments on the DC, after the dietitian and managers have read them," Brodney said.

The cards are then kept on file for future reference, she said.

Turn to FOOD, page 8

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
WHAT A VIEW – This is the view one gets walking down the stairs of Tobin Hall between classes.

German writers must forget past, prof. says

By SAMUEL KENNEDY
Collegian Correspondent

The Nazi past and a growing neo-Nazi movement heavily influence writers in post-Cold War Germany, Siegfried Mew said yesterday during a lecture at Smith College.

Mew, who is 59 and moved from West Germany in 1961, spoke to audience of about 40 under dim lights casting long shadows over his face. However, the ominous setting was a contrast to the lively nature of Mew, a professor of Germanic Languages at the University of North Carolina.

"German Humor is no laughing matter," Mew joked in reference to the moral tone which is the mark of modern German literature.

Mew described how East Germany's secret police, known as the Stasi, corrupted and controlled publishing during the Cold War. The Stasi would coerce writers to inform on colleagues critical of the government and fear of punishment limited expression on all levels, Mew said.

Now that records of East Germany's government are available, many writers have been discredited by proof that they participated in Stasi oppression.

Mew added that the writers and the "intellectual elite" from East Germany had been skeptical about re-unification, which they had often referred to as an "unstoppable train" in fear that their involvement with the Stasi would be revealed.

Writers from West Germany now control all media since re-unification, leaving most writers from East Germany with only memories of their past influence and a reputation for corruption, Mew said.

East German writers played the role of antagonist in the re-unification of Germany, according to Mew, but many are overcoming their nostalgia for divided Germany. Mew said Gunter Grass exemplifies this trend with his recent publication of "The Call of the Toad," which offers a lenient view of re-unification.

Mew said the democracy and decency of modern Germany should dispel fear that atrocities of the past will be repeated.

World perception of Germany became more sympathetic on Nov. 9, 1989 when Germans celebrated the end of the Berlin Wall, according to Mew, because "people were amazed that Germans were capable of having a good time."

Although there is a demand for more literature emphasizing aesthetics, writers, particularly playwrights, are combatting a surge of ethnic tension, Mew said. Many Germans mistakenly blame an influx of immigrants for recent economic hardships, but the true cause is the re-unification itself, Mew said.

Mew said after the lecture that his memories of World War Two are vague and people should remember the war but guard against dwelling in the past.

Prof. urges bisexuals to 'smash' stereotypes

By MELANIE DESILVA
Collegian Staff

When examining television talk shows and news features, it becomes painfully clear to Robyn Ochs that the media has generated and perpetuated a distorted image of bisexuality.

Ochs, the co-founder of the Boston Bisexual Women's Network and a professor at MIT and Tufts University, spoke last Thursday afternoon to approximately 25 students and faculty members about what it means to be bisexual in a culture that defines the term in a limited, misinformed manner. Ochs' writings have been published in Bi Any Other Name; Homophobia: How We All Pay the Price and Closer to Home: Bisexuality and Feminism.

"We live in a culture where the word is loaded with stereotypes and misinformation," Ochs said.

According to Ochs, talk shows like "Geraldo" reinforce the myths that bisexuals are promiscuous, unfaithful, HIV-infected monsters who "lead double lives" by having simultaneous relationships with both men and women.

"When talk shows are looking to do a show on bisexuality, they are only looking for someone who can produce a male and female lover at the same time," Ochs explained.

Contrary to mainstream belief, Ochs explained that a bisexual is anyone who has the potential to be attracted to someone of the same sex.

After showing disturbing media clips which she felt reinforced societal confusion, Ochs stressed the need for bisexuals to smash all the stereotypes, especially those making them "invisible."

"All bisexuals are invisible," Ochs said, asserting that society has created a dichotomous model of sexuality instead of a continuum of sexuality. Trapped in this cultural model, people can either be recognized as heterosexual or homosexual, but very rarely as bisexual.

"It's sad when a person's sexuality is defined by the gender of the person they are dating," Ochs said.

Sadly, a woman seen with a man is assumed to be heterosexual and a woman seen with a woman is assumed to be lesbian when both could be bisexual, according to Ochs.

Ochs encouraged gays and lesbians to embrace the bisexual community and recognize it as an equally important part of the fight for gay civil rights.

According to Ochs, "It's time for us to open our minds and celebrate the diversity among people."

■ scrutiny

continued from page 1

the president could nominate an attorney general "in a day or two" following Wood's withdrawal under pressure on Friday.

Ms. Ireland said NOW's 600 chapters nationwide would be asked to call the White House, Congress and radio talk shows.

"We want to make the point that there is this double standard and there is this double burden on women," Ireland said. "If women are going to be held accountable on how they juggle work and family, then men should be held accountable, too."

Reminded that Commerce Secretary Ron Brown belatedly paid taxes for a three-hour-a-week employee, Ms. Ireland said, "I don't think we can achieve equality for women by bringing men down. We are after changes in public policy and public perception that the child care issue won't be used to keep women out of positions of power."

Stephanopoulos said he was not aware of any other senior administration officials or Cabinet members who failed to pay taxes.

He also defended the decision to seek someone other than Wood, who once hired an illegal alien as a baby sitter.

AIDS numbers on rise

Spanish-speaking educators needed

BOSTON (AP) — A study showing Latin Americans have a disproportionately high rate of AIDS cases in Massachusetts demonstrates the need for better Spanish-language AIDS education programs, the report's co-author said.

A report by the Latino AIDS Consortium of Massachusetts found that Spanish-speaking Latin Americans, who make up 5 percent of the state's population, account for 12 percent of AIDS cases.

Its co-author, Nicolas Parkhurst Carballeira, told The Boston Globe that poverty, a lack of prevention programs that take into account language and cultural differences, and too little state money for AIDS programs targeted to the Latino community are among chief reasons for the disparity.

"If we don't do something, it's going to get worse," said Carballeira, first secretary of the Latino Health Institute.

Consortium representatives met last week with state health officials to discuss improving AIDS education programs targeting the Latin American community, Carballeira said.

He said they "agreed in principle" to seek more money for Spanish-language programs and to try to make AIDS education programs more effective.

The report was based on state public health information. It said the Department of Public Health indicated that 9 percent of its AIDS service contracts for this year are to agencies that are primarily Latino.

But the report said some of those agencies do not have providers who speak Spanish.

The report said that of 666 Latino men and women in Massachusetts diagnosed with AIDS as of last month, 55 percent were infected as a result of intravenous drug use.

Of all cases involving Latina women, 28 percent resulted from heterosexual sex with an intravenous drug user rather than from their own use of drugs.

The number of Latinos infected as a direct or indirect result of intravenous drug use accounted for 28 percent of all such AIDS cases in the state, the report said.

But these figures are imprecise because Latino men may be reluctant to admit to having had homosexual relations or may have a different understanding of what constitutes a homosexual act.

The AIDS transmission figures in the report are similar to those in studies of AIDS transmission in Puerto Rico, Carballeira said. Puerto Ricans make up the largest group of Latinos in the state.

The report refers only to Latinos from Spanish Latin America because they are the dominant Spanish-speaking population in the state.

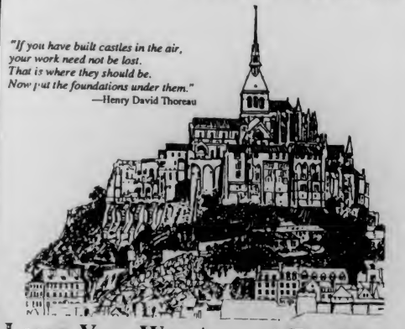
They appear to be in a worse predicament than Latinos and Hispanics nationwide, who comprise 9 percent of the population and account for 17 percent of reported AIDS cases.

"I think it has a lot to do with the fact that the Latino community in Massachusetts is the poorest in the nations," Carballeira said.

WRITE FOR WOMEN'S ISSUES
113 CAMPUS CENTER
ASK FOR STACY MALONE

ONE WAY SCREEN DESIGN
T-Shirts • Sweats • Boxers
Posters • Bumper Stickers
WE DO IT ALL!
Full Art Department, Free Delivery
584-0091
47 East Street, Hadley
5% OFF all orders with this coupon

The Spa
Hot Tubs & Tans
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

University of Wisconsin-Platteville
"If you have built castles in the air, your work need not be lost. That is where they should be. Now put the foundations under them."
—Henry David Thoreau


Learn Your Way Around The World
● Study abroad in London, England or Seville, Spain, for a summer, for a semester or for a full academic year
● Courses in liberal arts and international business
● Fluency in a foreign language not required
● Home-stays with meals
● Field trips
● Financial aid applies (except for summer session)
Application deadlines:
● April 1 for summer session
● April 30 for fall semester
● October 20 for spring semester
For a program description and an application, call toll free:
1-800-342-1725

Get Involved!
with campus health issues
SHAB*
● Sponsor health projects
● Represent student health care concerns
● Review UHS budget
● Serve on UHS Search Committees
● Meet other students interested in health care
COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT
Meeting: WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10
Where: UHS Room 302
Time: 5:30 P.M.
*Student Health Advisory Board (est. 1971) University Health Services

"WHAT'S LEFT" Sale
Savings from 30-70% off winter shoes, clothing & accessories
ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 197 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Censorship: where do we draw the line on free speech?

Dissertations on constitutional law will normally set your average reader either to sleep or the nearest "Calvin & Hobbes" book. However, perhaps no other freedom has been so alternately praised and vilified than our first freedom: the right to free speech. Nat Hentoff, writer for the Village Voice and The Washington Post, frames both sides of the argument over our First Amendment rights in his new book, Free Speech for Me But Not for Thee: How the American Left and Right Relentlessly Censor Each Other.

Hentoff, with a mixture of legal and visceral rhetoric, comes down firmly on the side of free speech — absolute free speech. While the book sometimes becomes muddled in the repetition of this thesis, it is fascinating to read about attempts all across the nation to deny people their rights to both voice their opinions and hear the opinions of others. Ultimately, says Hentoff, any effort to subvert free speech is an act of censorship that only serves to undermine that right for the rest of us, even if the actions of the censor are done with good intentions.

Free speech includes the right for Nazis to march through Skokie, a Jewish suburb of Chicago where 5,000 Holocaust survivors reside; the right for the KKK to march in the South; the right for Louis Farrakhan to call Judaism a "gutter religion;" the right for pornography; the right to burn a flag; the right to sing a song or give an inaugural address. Now, while some may find these examples of "free speech" objectionable, Hentoff alleges that attempts to censor these opinions leads to (at least) two questions: "Where do we draw the line on free speech?" and, "Is a minority viewpoint being censored unfairly by the majority?"

Eric
LINDHOLM

Take speech codes. Universities across the country are setting them up as a method of fostering racial harmony and mutual understanding among students. However, once you establish a system to punish those who are "insensitive," where do you draw the line? For example, is a prolonged stare at a female student sexual harassment or flirting? If a Black calls another "nigger" during a heated basketball game, is he guilty in the eyes of the speech code? Would the use of explicit language to avoid offending anyone would be to get lists from each student detailing the words or actions that would offend them. Even then, who would decide what is in violation of the code and what is acceptable? Presumably, they (whoever "they" are) would just know.

Some years ago, Abbie Hoffman, Amy Carter, et al., came to UMass and blocked a CIA recruiter from appearing on campus. Twelve students had signed up to meet with the recruiter, but had to return home. The liberal community was elated with their "victory." However, what about the right of the CIA man to present his side of the story? How about the rights of the 12 students who wanted to hear what this representative had to say? Apparently, this was not important (certainly not to Abbie Hoffman) because, after all, the CIA is not the Boy Scouts and they deserve to be censored. It is unfortunate that the 12 students were not allowed to make this decision for themselves — instead, their decision was made for them by those acting in their "best interests".

Now imagine a civil rights demonstration in 1950s Alabama broken up by right-thinking Southerners who believe that the movement is a part of a communist plot and that it is in their "best interests" to censor the activists. If free speech was squelched every time it went against majority opinion, we might still believe the earth is the center of the universe (Kudos to Copernicus and Kepler).

John Stuart Mill said, "If all mankind, minus one, were of one opinion, and only one person were of the contrary opinion, mankind would be no more justified in silencing that one person, than he, if he had the power, would be justified in silencing mankind." Viewpoints do not disappear because we refuse to hear them. Censorship and speech codes do not eradicate the disease of bigotry and racism; they only hide the symptoms. The only way to deal with offensive speech or alternate opinions is with better speech and better opinions.

Eric Lindholm is a Belchertown resident.

Spike is an artist, not a politician

This has been an interesting beginning to Black History Month. Spike Lee has come and gone with a barrage of criticism. Well, here's a news flash: Spike Lee is an African-American filmmaker.

As a Black filmmaker, Mr. Lee may have had experiences which differ from those of White filmmakers. Spike Lee might be inclined to speak about his efforts to make films. If students went to Spike Lee to obtain their yearly dose of Black political thought or simply to hear another African-American political intellectual, they went to the wrong event. If people were not pleased with his discussion of film, that is a different story.

The media portrays Spike Lee, partially due to his own efforts, as a political spokesperson. Yet students must learn that not all African-Americans are passionate, politically-aware leaders, nor can they all play basketball.

Yes, Spike Lee does try, not always successfully, to deal with political issues, but it must be remembered that he is an artist and entertainer. If students want to hear the thoughts of politically active African-Americans, I encourage you to go hear Angela Davis. I guarantee she will say something provocative. Take an African-American studies class. There are brilliant professors in the department who enjoy students of all backgrounds.

As for the money — what did you expect? Spike Lee is an entertainer. Those kind of guests cost money, big time. As with most entertainers, Mr. Lee's honorarium was decided by a booking agency, regardless of the amount to which Spike initially agreed.

Spike Lee is not the greatest speaker, and he is not Malcolm X. However, he is a star. Afrik-Am, the group that brought him, deserves a lot of credit. They worked very hard, raised money and pulled off a large-scale event with little difficulty.

As for the critics, welcome to reality. The media often manipulates our expectations and perceptions. Spike Lee's image is no exception. Black History Month should indicate the diversity and wealth of the African-American community. It is not wrong to demand more from public figures, but it is foolish to expect one individual to engage the entire political spectrum.

Steve Sparling
Amherst

Laser display inappropriate

I concur with the expression of concern that a portion of the laser light show at the Mullins Center open house was inappropriate [Collegian, Feb. 3] and apologize for its inclusion in the events of the day. The material displayed Sunday was not included in a preview reviewed the previous day. If it had, we would not have given approval to include it in the Sunday show. We have expressed our displeasure and concern to the contractor of the show who acknowledged an error in judgement and expressed regret for the incident.

It is unfortunate that this insensitivity marred what was otherwise a successful day in celebration of the opening of the Mullins Center.

Paul P. Page
Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance

Women need self respect

Welcome to the year of the woman, the decade of the woman, the era of women! For those of you up on your Time-Life books, you're probably aware that 1992 was the official Year of the Woman, and that at last check, it is now 1993. But as a woman, I don't feel like being treated like a Chinese New Year's animal. To me every year is and should be the year of the woman, because we deserve more than one measly year.

Stephanie
EISENBERG

There was a reason for declaring the year of the woman, and as much as I hate to admit it, it did serve a purpose: it helped women become aware of themselves as females in today's society, as well as helping to reaffirm the ideals that women deserve more than they get and what they accept. It's unfortunate that we needed a year to declare that, but apparently we do.

All too often I am witness to strong, bright women succumbing to treatment far less than they deserve. And I'm not sure whether it's because they feel they don't deserve better, or they just act like they don't and then accept the treatment they receive. This happens in all facets of life — in the home, in relationships and especially in the workplace.

There is a big difference in how women perceive themselves and how they portray themselves, and often it is this difference that helps perpetuate the problems that plague women. It has been drilled into women's heads that they deserve better treatment in today's society. I'm willing to bet that there is no woman on this campus who doesn't believe that in some facet of society she deserves better, because she belongs to the exclusive club of women.

Yet some women portray themselves in a way that leads others to believe that not only do they not deserve better, but that they don't have enough self-esteem to demand better. Examples of this range from the secretary who still takes out her boss' dry-cleaning to the college student who allows herself to become just a little too promiscuous, and then questions why she is never respected by men.

Women are very good at standing up and shouting any time they feel their rights have been violated. We quote laws and statutes, threaten to sue and quickly insert the term discrimination. Yet we fail to see where the basis of the women's movement needs to begin, and until we accept and realize that, we will continue to take small strides instead of great leaps.

The women's movement begins inside ourselves, and we must not permit ourselves to be treated in any way that can possibly undermine this. We know we deserve better. We know we need better. We know we want better. So why don't we just act it? Running back and forth to court crying discrimination does absolutely no good if we don't have the guts to respect ourselves in everyday situations.

Self respect is a crucial aspect of the struggle for equal rights, and something I should have addressed before. But I must say that males are still largely to blame for the way women are treated in this society, and just because I feel women need more self respect in order to successfully continue the fight for equal rights doesn't let them off the hook — they're still guilty.

Women are beginning to make some terrific changes in society (it doesn't hurt that there's a Democrat in the White House), and it would be silly to see them hinder themselves because of such a small thing. At such a crucial time, I know there is no woman who wants to halt the progress that we have been making slowly but surely. Be sure of yourself; after all this is the "time of the woman." You're a woman — let them hear you roar!

Stephanie Eisenberg is a Collegian columnist.

Students need to help themselves

UMass cannot solve its problems by trying to find somebody who will do it for us. A lot of people had the idea that Spike Lee would jump on stage, get asked, "How can we cure our racial problems, Spike?" and he would answer with the "cure your University's racial problems in three easy steps" plan.

Everybody will agree that $16,000 is a big wad of cash. Lots will agree that the University of Massachusetts did not get their "money's worth" out of Spike Lee's performance. So in other words, UMass is $16,000 in the hole and still stuck with racial problems — racially uneducated, perhaps. The money could have been better spent but it's too late.

But wait. Let me quote Nathan Crick [Collegian, Feb. 5]: "I thought the people asking questions were three times as interesting as Spike Lee, especially the two women who had affinities for making their own miniature speeches." This is an interesting comment, because these two women were not paid $16,000. These two women, for free, did more to help the problems UMass has than Mr. Lee did. They cared about UMass more than Spike. That's not saying that Spike is not a caring person or that he doesn't care about UMass. UMass is not his responsibility.

UMass is our responsibility and we have to solve our own problems. It is obvious that we can do it. Some of the men and women who asked Spike Lee questions show that we have the kind of people who can work together to solve our problems. We ourselves must find the answers and not pay someone else to.

Eric S. Kamila
Northeast

Mather Career Center Presents

The Annual University-wide

CAREER FAIR

Wednesday, February 10, 1993

10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Prospective Employers in Many Fields

All Majors welcome!

Bring your resumé

Collect business cards and meet valuable contacts

Sign up for campus interview, job referral and alumni network programs

Five College Students Welcome

What's the Daily Collegian got for you. . . ?

Complete coverage of all campus sports by one of the nation's best college sports staffs . . .

Coverage of important events on campus . . .

Music, theater and art coverage and reviews . . .

State, national, and international news from the wires of the Associated Press . . .

. . . as well as a daily crossword puzzle . . . and CALVIN AND HOBBES.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Celebrating 25 Years as a Daily Paper • 1967 – 1992

Town

continued from page 1

"I think in general we feel we should be getting money in lieu of taxes or the University should pay some charges for services," Del Castilho said. "Frankly I prefer in lieu of taxes because it comes from the state rather than the University."

But there is other property in town that is also tax-exempt. Churches, federal and local government buildings such as the Jones Library, the VFW Hall, the U.S. Post Office, and conservation land, are tax-exempt, according to Town Assessor David Burgess.

Amherst College, except for its faculty housing, and Hampshire College are also tax-exempt, Del Castilho said.

Ratner said the town is pushing for Amherst College and Hampshire to contribute money for the town's services that the colleges use.

Businesses in town must pay a property tax, but those on campus do not have to pay the tax, according to Ratner. This is unfair to the businesses in town, Ratner said, because the businesses on University property such as the barbershop are not for educational purposes.

But a manager in the University Store, who asked not to be identified, said as an Amherst resident, he could understand the town's position because the University does use many of the towns facilities. He added that he believes the Store pays its fair share of taxes.

"We do pay everything just like the outside. We pay electricity taxes and contribute to fire and police," he said. "Everything we make goes back to the building. The building is owned by the students."

"This has been a question for years," he said "I see it as generally as a fair and equal retention."

Ron Perrault, co-manager of the Hatch, said the state makes students exempt from meal tax, which has been a part of the controversy. With less state and federal money being given to the towns, Perrault said "everyone is looking for revenue."

Larry Kelley, an Amherst resident and Town Meeting member, claimed that because the University does not pay enough taxes, his property taxes have increased. This spring when the town examines its budget, Kelley said he expects proposition 2 1/2 to be overridden.

"What I am worried about is the poor blue collar types, who are retired, living on a fixed income and their property taxes are going up," Kelley said.

Ratner said homes valued over $200,000 had a general property tax increase of 10 percent, while the homes valued below $150,000 had a property tax decrease of 7 percent. She mentioned that although property taxes in general had increased by 2.5 percent over the past year, assessor's evaluations of homes have gone down.

food

continued from page 3

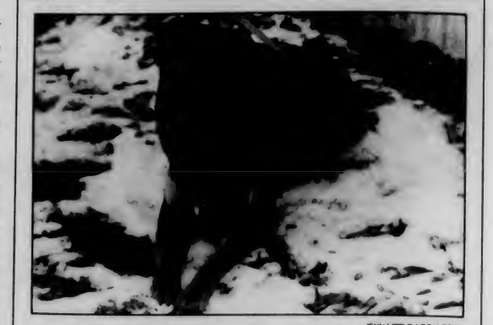
Brodney said students' opinions about the DC do matter.

"A lot of effort goes into menu planning. You can't make everyone happy. If a lot of people are unhappy, there's an effort made to change," Brodney said.

Many of the products tested are for ethnic nights at the DC, said Sutherland. Started three years ago, the ethnic nights offer entertainment, provided through the Residential Arts Program, and international cuisine. Past ethnic nights have included Mexican Night, Slavic Night and Soul Food Night.

A lot of time is taken in planning for these menus, Sutherland said. An effort is made to get members of the featured communities to contribute recipes and test them for their authenticity.

A Greek Night, featuring such dishes as spanikopita and pastitsio, is scheduled for later this semester. A Southeast Asian Night is planned for the fall.



JENN LITTLE / COLLEGIAN

MAN'S BEST FRIEND – An unidentified canine patiently waits for his master outside Durfee Conservatory.

Hockey player ruled innocent in case of alleged beer-spitting

OSHAWA, Ontario (AP) — Eric Lindros was found innocent today of charges he spit beer on a woman

Lindros, the 19-year-old who plays for the Philadelphia Flyers, shook hands with his lawyer after Justice Rhys Morgan issued the acquittal. The judge said defense evidence raised reasonable doubt.

"Being accused of something you didn't commit and gaining that much media attention, I don't think it does anybody much good," Lindros said. "I know I never did it and I had people to back me up. It felt good."

Morgan suggested Lindros drop countercharges against Lynn Nunney, a 24-year-old factory worker, who alleged he spat and poured beer on her last Nov. 29.

"The dispute could have been resolved that night without criminal charges," Morgan said. "Unfortunately, the positions of both parties hardened."

Nunney said the incident occurred after she refused to make room for the NHL player on a packed nightclub dance floor at Koo Koo Bananas in Whitby, about 36 miles east of Toronto.

Lindros said he wasn't going to try to avoid similar situations.

Flyers spokesman Mark Piazza said in Philadelphia the the team was relieved.

"We're happy that it's over and done with and he can get back and concentrate on playing hockey," Piazza said.

In trial testimony ending Thursday, witnesses offered sharply conflicting versions of events. Nunney said Lindros repeatedly pushed her toward the edge of the dance floor and emptied a bottle of beer on her head and spat beer in her face when she tried to stop him. Her testimony was corroborated by her sister and a friend.

STUDENT AFFAIRS SPECIAL SERVICES
236 WHITMORE

Is there something you would like to say before graduating?

You are invited to submit proposals for consideration as the

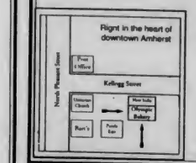
STUDENT COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Eligibility:	Graduating UMass-Amherst senior.
Format:	Submit not more than three word-processed or typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time.
Subject Matter:	Text should concern higher education, and be relevant to the University and your experience(s) here.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Director, Disability Services, (non-voting Committee Chair), 231 Whitmore, 545-0892.
Selection Process:	A committee of students (majority), faculty, and staff, will review proposals. Authors' names will have been deleted to ensure objectivity. Ratings will be assigned. Selected authors will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March). A final selection will then be made by the committee.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 19, 1992, 4:30pm.
For additional information:	Paul Appleby, Selection Committee Chair, 5-0892 or the office of Student Affairs Special Services, 5-3480.

Special

Valentine's Day Cakes

$4.99 and up...



Olympic Chinese Bakery
17 Kellogg Ave. Amherst, MA
7 am - 11 pm Sun - Thurs
7 am - Midnight Fri + Sat
256-8705
Ask about our free Birthday Cake Give-Away!

RESIDENT ASSISTANT SELECTION PROCESS
for the 1993-94 Academic Year

Be An RA

Resident Assistants (RAs) are live-in, part-time, student-staff members. Duties include facilitation of community development, programming, referral counseling, administrative functions, enforcing University policies, and assisting with house management.

Applications are available in all Cluster Offices.

Applications are due February 22, 1993. Apply today!

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, creed, sex, sexual orientation, age, marital status, national origin, mental or physical handicap, political belief or affiliation, membership or non-membership in any organization, or veteran status, in any respect of admission or treatment of students in employment.

Arts & Living

J.C. Superstar opens tonight in Mullins Ctr

By SHAWN McDONNELL
Collegian Staff

Jesus Christ Superstar is a musical phenomenon.

Started as a collection of rock songs in the late 1960's, Superstar has been incarnated as a hit "rock concept" album (2.5 million sold), a string of

S.R.O. concerts, a Broadway musical (with a then-record $2.5 million advance), a cult film, and no less than three original cast recordings.

Superstar catapulted Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber into superstardom, and made the careers of Ben Vereen, Murray Head, and Yvonne Elliman.

In the 25 years that have followed its creation, no other musical has been so successful in so many different types of media.

Now, Jesus Christ Superstar is back, in what looks to be a far more promising production than Robert Young's recent hit-and-run tour. Opening tonight at the Mullins Center, this latest entry into the Superstar log reads like a glorious compromise of the musical's previous forms: A fully realized stage production (in the tradition of the Broadway version) with rock orchestrations (in the tradition of the concept album) and concert sound (in the tradition of the concerts, for those of you scoring at home).

Among the supporting players in director/choreographer Tony Christopher's production are former Styx musician/vocalist Dennis DeYoung (once Kilroy, now Pontius Pilate) and Grammy and Oscar winner Irene Cara (Mary Magdalene).

But the biggest news of this production (and a definite treat for fans of the movie) is the reunion of Ted Neeley and Carl Anderson, the dynamic duo who played Jesus and Judas in the film version of 20 years ago.

Arguably the finest actors to have ever filled these roles, Neeley and Anderson were both unexpected choices for the film, beating out some very notable competition.

Neeley, whose sad eyes and enormous vocal range made him ideal for the part, beat out Deep Purple's Ian Gillan and Broadway's Jesus, Jeff Fenholt.

Likewise, Anderson's energy and high-wire emoting led him to be selected over two acclaimed Judases — Actor/Rock Singer Murray Head ("One Night in Bangkok") and Ben Vereen (whom Anderson replaced, in the Broadway production).

The action of Superstar covers the last seven days in the life of Christ, as seen through the eyes of Judas Iscariot.

The combination of Tim Rice's lyrics and Andrew Lloyd Webber's music make for a rich and varied score — and one which made history by producing two hit singles before the show ever saw the inside of a theatre.

Some numbers, such as the infectious "What's the Buzz" or King Herod's blasphemous cabaret number ("Prove to me that you're no fool/ Walk across my swimming pool") are fun catchpenny tunes — but there is more depth to this musical than the title might suggest.

Lyricist Rice (Evita, Chess) is in top form here, putting unlikely spins on one of Webber's (Cats, Phantom of the Opera) best scores. It was Rice, in fact, who turned an old Lloyd Webber country and western tune ("I Dream of Kansas Morning") into the unforgettable "I Don't Know How to Love Him," in which Mary Magdalene agonizes over her inability to understand Christ. The song was both an enormous hit (in a recording by singer Yvonne Elliman) and a minor controversy — due to its sexual subtext.

Some of Rice's other creations for Superstar include "My Mind is Clearer Now," in which Judas realizes he must betray Christ, and "Gethsemane" in which Christ himself becomes racked with self doubt ("Why should I die? Would I be more noticed than I ever was before?").

Rice and Webber have gone on to some larger commercial successes, but none of them can top this most wonderful musical. Throw in Neeley and Anderson, and what you have is a dream production of a dream musical. Don't miss it.

Jesus Christ Superstar will be performed Feb. 9 and 10 at 8 p.m. in the Mullins Center.

Saxophonist jazzes up NoHo

Kenny Garrett will play tonight at the Iron Horse

By JESSICA TAVERNA
Collegian Staff

Feb. 9 is the day. Seven o'clock is the time. Kenny Garrett is the guest. Be there!

"Who is Kenny Garrett?" you ask? Of course you don't! Everyone knows that Kenny Garrett is an up-and-coming saxophonist/genius.

As a young performer, he has been considered by many critics to be somewhat of a musical prodigy. One can expect great things from a musician this young with as much experience as Garrett's had — his performances are living proof of that.

Starting out with a variety of musical interests, Garrett maintained a firm hold on jazz. This was a smart choice.

After brushing off plans to attend Berkeley School of Music so that he could play on the road as part of the Duke Ellington Orchestra, Garrett's future looked bright.

Following the three years he spent touring with the Ellington Orchestra, Garrett proceeded to move to New York. While in New York, he got to play with the Mel Lewis Orchestra, the Danny Richmond Quartet and the Freddy Hubbard and Woody Shaw line-ups.

In 1985, Garrett joined Art Blakely and the Jazz Messengers, which was yet another milestone in his vast array of career opportunities. He once again got the opportunity to tour and this time was able to record a few albums. From there, Garrett joined up with Miles Davis and his recording line-up and got the touring experience of a lifetime.

The New York Times remarked that "with Mr. Garrett, Mr. Davis has a perfect foil. A blasting raucous saxophonist who isn't too shy to play complex be-bob lines. Few musicians can even come close to the emotional territory Mr. Davis regularly travels. Mr. Garret came close."

With such an impressive musical background at an usually young age, one can easily expect great things from Garrett in the future and excellent performances in the now.

WSRI 95.3 FM presents Kenny Garrett and his quartet, who will play for two sets beginning at 7 p.m. at the Iron Horse, in Northampton. Tickets are $9.50 Adv.

COURTESY WARNER BROTHERS

Kenny Garrett, an up-and-coming saxophone genius, will play the Iron Horse tonight at 7 p.m.

Write for the Collegian's Arts Desk and get FREE* tickets.
VIP Admission to music, theater and arts events around the Pioneer Valley.
* Arts editors may require you to write a brief review or take a photo. For details, contact the Collegian.

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL

GRANT DEADLINE

FRIDAY, FEB. 19

Single Project/Event Grants for music, theater, visual art and design, performance art, literature, film and video, and other arts related events.

PROPOSALS ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS

APPLICATIONS GUIDANCE/INFORMATION STOP AT STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE OR UMASS ARTS COUNCIL 203 HASBROUCK OR CALL 545-0202

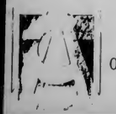
UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
FOUNDED 1966, THE ARTS COUNCIL FOSTERS EXCELLENCE & SCOPE IN THE ARTS ON CAMPUS

did you know that...

- IN THE LAST 3 YEARS THE ARTS COUNCIL SUPPORTED 100'S OF GALLERY EXHIBITIONS.
100'S OF ARTFUL PERFORMANCES IN THEATER, DANCE & MUSIC.
100'S OF PUBLICATIONS, POETRY READINGS, SLIDE LECTURES & WORKSHOPS

YOU...

- COULD ENRICH THE UNIVERSITY WITH YOUR CULTURALLY DIVERSE EVENT.
- SHOULD COUNT YOUR ART RELATED PROJECT INTO OUR NEXT 100!
- THE UMASS ARTS COUNCIL GIVES FINANCIAL SUPPORT TO THE ARTS.
- CALL & ASK ABOUT AVAILABLE FUNDS FOR FALL & SPRING CYCLE. DEADLINES 2/19, 3/26/ & 4/23.
- WE CAN HELP, CALL 545-0202, 203 HASBROUCK



STOP AT OUR TABLE ON THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE ON 2/9

Welcome Back!

from Sprint.

and UMASS Housing Telecommunications

The University of Massachusetts' Interstate and International Operator Services Provider for Residence Halls

IT'S AN EASY CALL!

NO NEED TO DIAL 10 + XXX + 0

- To make an operator assisted call from your phone, please dial 9 + 0 + Area Code + Number
- Listen for tone and enter your calling card number or hold for a courteous Sprint operator.

For your convenience, Sprint accepts the following cards:

Local Telephone Company Cards (Pac Bell, Nynex, etc.)
American Express
MasterCard
Visa
AT&T Cards with your home phone number
Bell Canada
Discover
Diners Club
Carte Blanche
JCB Cards

Sprint guarantees that your rates on every operator assisted call will be equal to AT&T rates.

Welcome Back!

from Sprint.

UMass comedians join folk singer in Hampden

Entertainers create aura of camraderie

By MELANIE DESILVA
Collegian Staff

GLB Cafe
Hampden Theater
Feb. 7, 1993

This was my first GLB cafe. I had never heard of the folk singer, Cathy Winter, or the two student comedians whose humor I was about to experience. As I walked into the dark, unfamiliar room, it seemed too small to be called the Hampden Theater.

Yet, as 50 warm faces began trickling into the informal space and the performance began, the room turned out to be just the right size for a night of comfortable conversation, powerful folk music and two very funny comedians.

The night's entertainment began with Edgar Macintosh and Tone Nunes, two gay University of Massachusetts students who kept the audience tearing with laughter as they hilariously recounted their "first experiences."

They called their style, "method acting." As each told his story, the other acted out the scenes, adding uniqueness and charm to the performance.

Edgar equated his "first gay experience" with a "bad after school special," while Tone recalled singing "Let's Get Physical" by Olivia Newton-John while on a family vacation trip with his first crush.

The comedians' easy style set the tone for the rest of the evening, generating an aura of comfort, relaxation and pensiveness as the poetry and music of Cathy Winter encompassed the dark theater.

Cathy Winter, who just released her third solo album entitled Next Sweet Time on the Flying Fish label, has been contributing to women's folk music for over two decades.

Even before her solo performance at the Second National Womens' Music Festival in 1976, she has captured audiences with her portrayals of the struggles and rewards of being a bisexual woman in what she feels is a misogynistic, homophobic society.

When asked why she performs, Winters said, "I like to feel that when people come to my concerts they come away feeling validated in what excites them about their lives, and what gives them a hard time."

Through a compelling presentation of poetry and music she achieved her goal, touching souls. Her poems meshed together in sequence, reinforcing the fact that they were the product of one unique life and experience. With a gentle confidence she connected syllables in ways never before heard, generating powerful images and emotions.

Her poems, unlike her music were predominantly about love and relationships. Many addressed the conflicts between dating a man and being a feminist, and dating a man and remaining an accepted part of the gay community. Some dealt with the struggles faced by working women and relationships, while others were simply beautiful, passionate poems about love.

Yet while her poetry focused primarily on bisexual womens' love, her music centered around womens' continual struggle against social and economic oppression and the struggle for autonomy. One song was about Lucy, a single mother and cab driver in New York who, despite her poverty, thrived on her strength and determination.

Another song addressed violence against women, recalling a well-known media event in which women were systematically slain at a Canadian university by a man wielding an automatic weapon.

Yet the most wonderful song of the evening, called "Waltz Her Around the Floor Marie", celebrated the victory of two women high school seniors, who were allowed by the courts to go to the senior prom together.

Winter's comfortable, informal style added to the power of the performance as she asked the audience to use their keys and feet as background percussion, and encouraged people to sing along with her.

Cathy Winter is a wonderful and important folk artist who is worth supporting. Her next performance will be next Friday night at the Green River Cafe in Greenfield.

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
University of Massachusetts students Edgar Macintosh & Tone Nunes shared their humorous stories with the audience at the GLB Cafe.

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Cathy Winter performed at the GLB Cafe in Hampden Theater on Sunday night.

Our Black Men will inspire perseverance

By KRISTIN ST. JOHN
Collegian Staff

Tonight the Black Mass Communications Project will be sponsoring Our Young Black Men Are Dying And Nobody Seems To Care at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Our Black Men. . . is a dramatization of the experiences of the men playwright James Chapman has known on the streets, in jails and in shelters.

"The play is a vehicle to address social problems that Black men go through."

Peter Ribeiro
BMCP General Manager

Directed by Chapman, the performance is in the tradition of African storytelling, creating an oral history that brings to light the forces threatening the survival of the African men in America.

"The play is a vehicle to address social problems that Black men go through," said BMCP General Manager, Peter Ribeiro.

The one man skits will range from a story about a gay Black man deciding to come out, to a story of Black men in prison on death row to black men with AIDS.

Chapman, being the "voice of reason" throughout the play, will help present the spectrum of problems faced by today's Black men from all different angles. The audience will be given a how, what and why look to these problems in the American society.

According to Ribeiro, the cast does research on each of the areas they perform in, and they are very knowledgeable about the issues pertaining to Black men. The cast also refers to recent stories on the news to keep the content of the play up to date.

Ribeiro says, "The fact is [Our Black Men] is so creative that it really leaves you [the audience] thinking about solutions to the problems. It was the most moving play I've ever seen."

Started by Chapman in 1983 as a suicide note, the play quickly became a passionate plea to young black men to overcome stereotypes. It became a plea for survival instead.

"I was watching my friends die," says Chapman. This call for love and change has been experienced by thousands of people across the country, and it has been laden with excellent reviews from around the country.

The BMCP's objectives in bringing this production to the UMass community is to "to provide an entertaining event with a lot of creativity that would be able to remedy these situations and celebrate Black History Month."

Tickets are $5 for the public and $3 for Five-College students and children. The tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center Box office. Please call 545-2511 for more information.

CONTACT LENS CARE

AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES

We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

•••

Offering a broad array of contact lenses with a large in house inventory.

•••

The new daily wear disposable and frequent replacement contact lenses are now available.

•••

All fittings are done by our eye doctors with experience in contact lens care and solving contact lens problems.

•••

Emphasis is placed on your ocular health and professional service.

uhs

EYE CARE PROGRAM

Convenient hours and convenient on campus location.

For questions or appointments, call 549-2671

Legal experts debate public servants' ethics

By NITA LELYVELD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Smoking marijuana spelled doom for a Supreme Court nominee but it couldn't derail the nation's first Baby Boom president. Hiring an illegal alien scuttled the attorney general hopefuls — even one who never broke the law.

Just how and when ethical standards will be applied to public servants is a fuzzy matter. Should Americans expect perfection from their highest officials?

"We seem to lurch back and forth between what we consider sort of appropriately in the public purview and what we consider private," said Jean Elshtain, a professor of political science and philosophy at Vanderbilt University. "Sometimes we're forgiving, and sometimes we're not."

President Clinton's first attorney general nominee, Zoe Baird, knowingly broke the law when she employed illegal aliens to take care of her children.

Most legal experts believe that rightfully disqualified her from the post of attorney general.

"I think most Americans expect fairly high standards in their elected officials," said Robert Royal, vice president of the Ethics and Public Policy Center in Washington. "But in the Justice Department, we have an expectation that they should be above average, if not impeccable. After all, an attorney general is sort of like a police officer or captain."

But many say the case is much less clear against Kimba Wood, who withdrew Friday after being talked up as Clinton's likely choice. She had hired an illegal alien but had broken no laws.

"I think she basically got caught in the crossfire after a legitimate question was raised about Zoe Baird," said Ronald N. Green, director of the Ethics Institute at Dartmouth College. "It was her misfortune."

Ethical considerations are murkier still for other political jobs.

The easy confirmation of Commerce Secretary Ronald H. Brown, a former well-connected lobbyist, is an example of how strangely Americans apply their ethical codes, Elshtain said.

"Let's call it 'the Ron Brown problem,'" she said. "Here is a person with a million-dollar handshake and a nice red carpet connecting his corporate life to his government life. But people don't seem bothered."

"My hunch is probably we're almost cynical about the Ron Browns and other Washington insiders. We're used to it," she said. "But when it comes to women coming into these top slots and issues being raised about how they raised their children, that strikes home. People can compare their own experiences and their own lives."

Costs of death on rise

Expensive burials haunt bereaved

By ALAN COOPERMAN
Associated Press

MOSCOW — The high cost of dying has created a new kind of Russian "refusenik." In the macabre slang of morgue workers, the word now refers to bodies that are identified but not claimed by relatives.

The reason is simple: a growing number of Russians cannot afford to give loved ones a decent burial. They write "lack of money" on a form and allow the state to cremate the bodies and dump the ashes in unmarked graves.

Even for those who can pay, burial has become the final indignity in Russia. After a lifetime of callous bureaucracy comes yet another callous bureaucratic process. The dead may not know the difference, but the bereaved are often humiliated, hit up for bribes and forced into debt.

In the 1970s and '80s, "refuseniks" were Jews who had been denied permission to emigrate. Since the borders have been opened, such cases are rare.

The word has gained its new meaning only in the past year.

Like the cost of living, the cost of dying has soared. A simple funeral that costs 500 rubles in 1991 now costs about 35,000 rubles. That is less than $60 at the average current exchange rate, but it is about three months' salary for an average worker and a fortune to pensioners.

(The average funeral in the United States costs about $4,000, according to the Funeral Home Public Service Group International of Charlotte, N.C.)

"When we go to a funeral today, we all chip in. You give about 500 rubles, 1,000 rubles, whatever you can," said Lyudmila Guseva, an Aeroflot stewardess attending a friend's funeral at Moscow's Vostryakovskoe Cemetery.

Not everyone, however, has friends who can contribute. Often these days, mourning is compounded by financial panic.

Few things are harder for a Russian than to see a relative denied a proper burial. Even during the Soviet period, when religion was discouraged, Russians were scrupulous about the rituals of death.

Wakes are held not once, but several times: on the day of the funeral, nine days later, 40 days later and one year later. Cakes, eggs and often vodka are left on the grave at Easter.

Virtually every Russian "babushka," or grandmother, saves for her funeral. But after 2,000-percent inflation last year, those savings are meaningless.

THE COLLEGIAN –
IT'S JUST LIKE HOMEMADE *
19,000 COPIES FRESH OFF THE GRIDDLE EVERY MORNING
* BUT NO LUMPS

THIS SPACE FOR RENT.
REACH 19,000 STUDENTS ACROSS THE FIVE COLLEGE AREA EACH DAY.
ADVERTISE IN THE COLLEGIAN • 545-3500

Pi Kappa Alpha
The Brotherhood of Excellence

ΠΚΑ
First National Fraternity to ABOLISH HAZING
• 1990 Winner of UMASS Silver Chapter Excellence Award
• 1991 Greek Area / UMASS over-all athletic champs
• Unparalled social life • Lifelong friendships
• Olympic weight room • Outstanding meal plan
ACADEMICS - ATHLETICS - LEADERSHIP
SPRING RUSH
8 - 10 PM FEBRUARY
9, 10, 15, 16, 17, 22, 23
549-0725
ALL UNIVERSITY MEN WELCOME

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
Still Tic, Tac, Toeing Through Your Life?
Let us help you make some winning decisions about your future.
Late register for classes January 27-February 9.
UMass and You – a winning team!
Evening credit courses (over 100 in 37 different departments; most meet just once a week)
UMass Bachelor of General Studies degree — part time!
Noncredit workshops for business or pleasure (nearly 100, all winners)
Available University day courses (hundreds of them, stimulating!)
Division of Continuing Education, 607 Goodell Building, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003.
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

CALVIN AND HOBBES — By BILL WATTERSON

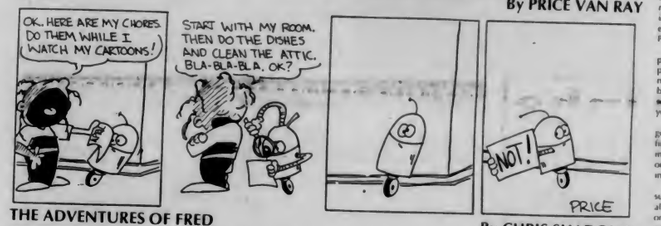
THE FAR SIDE — By GARY LARSON

Be a virus, see the world.

JIM'S JOURNAL — By JIM

DOONESBURY — By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE — By PRICE VAN RAY



THE ADVENTURES OF FRED — By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU — By PITT

Quote of the Day

"Democracy is the worst kind of government, except for every other kind."
– Winston Churchill

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Travel is subject to confusion or delay. Review your options. Further study could reveal something previously overlooked. You will succeed at work despite unexpected opposition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Friendly contacts are uplifting, with much being shared. Although certain ideas cause slight disagreement, the ensuing debate proves stimulating. Perseverance propels you forward.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A partnership is under pressure now, perhaps because of you career. You need to meet with people who have bright, original ideas. Work with someone whose talents complement your own.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day for mental endeavors and financial negotiations. Use any inside information wisely. Family ties beckon. Let loved ones express themselves in their own unique way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are surrounded by love but may not realize it. Be more tolerant of loved one's foibles. You will succeed quite amazingly in your line of work. Show appreciation for favors.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Getting together with people in your field helps you keep up with new professional developments. A partnership is intense, intimate and loving. Count your blessings!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stop worrying about things you cannot control. Your can meet new challenges one step at a time. A friend who has suffered a setback need your encouragement. Offer a sympathetic ear, not advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Travel may not prove as rewarding as you hope. Stick close to home and concentrate on a special project. A new friendship gets off to a promising start. You feel at ease.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An interesting conversation leads to new understanding. Friends may have something special to give you. Your home is your sanctuary. Protect your privacy from inquisitive neighbors.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Remaining centered within yourself helps you resolve a conflict. Spending some quiet time at home also proves beneficial. There are gains to be made, even if they seem small.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Organizing a united effort could be difficult today. Focusing on your obligation to the community will help you overlook someone's petty behavior. Remain loyal to your family.

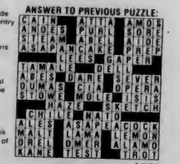
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Although your thoughts turn to home and family today, your job provides an interesting challenge. Do your best to reconcile co-workers who have had a disagreement.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

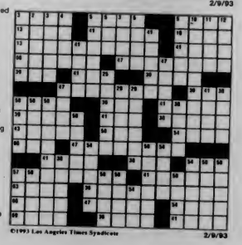
ACROSS
1 Orange cover
5 Frog genus
9 "Pygmalion" playwright
13 Region
14 Stadium
16 Circle of light
17 Shakespeare
19 Rare bird
20 Arrival
21 Affianced
23 Golf gadget
24 Society newcomer, for short
26 City on the Okra
27 Lantern fuel
30 Dine
33 North Sea trader
36 Truck
37 Type of TV
39 By — and bounds
41 Country stops-er
42 Choo-choo
43 Canary's cousin
44 Formerly called
45 Persia, today
46 Curve
47 Managed
51 Nobleman
53 Family man
54 Sullivan and Asner
57 Pillows
61 Lea
63 Seth's son
64 Sailing vessel
66 Teen bane
67 Adlai's running mate
68 Zeno of —
69 Shipshape
70 Breathe hard
71 — do-well

DOWN
1 Capital of Monaco
2 Muslim decree
3 Grit
4 Miami's county
5 Huck Finn, for one
6 Altar constellation
7 Birthmarks
8 Shortly
9 Glistened
10 Type of mustache
11 Toward the sheltered side
12 Dictionary entry
15 Author Chekhov
18 Wave, in Paris
22 Vertical
25 Cowlike
27 Military cap
28 More rational
29 Group of nine
31 Inter —
32 Vol. State
33 Lohengrin's bride
34 Villainous look
35 Olympic city of 1992
38 Dry
40 Stable sound
48 Annapolis freshman
49 Most domesticated
50 Paradise
52 Plus
54 Roman magistrate
55 Recipient of a gift
56 Guss
57 Legume
58 Ago
59 Coarse file
60 Madrid Miss: Abbr
62 Solar disk
65 Barbie's beau

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



2/9/93



©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

2/9/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jason George
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Curtis
PhotoTechnician ..... Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor ..... Mike Carvalho
Production ..... Sandy Bogage, Michele Bakis

Menu

LUNCH
Pizza
Fish Munchies
BASICS LUNCH
Pizza
Black-eyed Peas

DINNER
Southern Fried Steak
Chicken Fajitas
BASICS DINNER
Tri-Bean Casserole
Chicken Fajitas

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ Camby

continued from page 16

10 rebounds, blocked 10 shots and dished out 10 assists.

"It's tough right now because we win by so many points, I don't get to play very much," Camby said. "I'm looking forward to playing against better competition in college."

And nearly every college coach in the country wanted the well-spoken, easy-going Camby to play for them. Camby was somewhat of an unknown commodity until last spring, when Bayno helped him gain an invitation to the prestigious ABCD Camp in Los Angeles. It was there he made a name for himself against the top competition in the nation.

"I watched Camby play for a week at the ABCD Camp and I know this guy has everything it takes to dominate college basketball," said Chris Wallace, the editor of Blue Ribbon Basketball and a highly-regarded expert on college basketball. "He has all the tools and the proper attitude to be a force. This guy is a major presence in the middle."

Wallace was not the only one impressed with Camby's performance in California.

"Before the ABCD no one really knew about me," Camby said. "But after the camp almost every college started recruiting me."

Camby remained loyal to Bayno, who had been sending him mail since his sophomore year. He finally decided on UMass in late October, shunning Boston College, Providence, James Madison, Syracuse and Connecticut.

Throughout high school the pressure was on Camby to remain in Connecticut and play for Huskies coach Jim Calhoun. Teachers, neighbors, classmates and what seemed liked the whole state offered the same advice, "Go to UConn." Camby didn't listen.

"There was a lot of pressure to go to UConn," Camby said. "I didn't want to go too far away because I wanted my family to be able to watch me play, but I wanted to leave Connecticut. UMass was perfect for me."

Besides Bayno, Camby cites his friendships with sophomore guard Mike Williams, also a Hartford resident, and freshman Donta Bright, who he met at the Boston Shootout last summer, as reasons he chose UMass.

"When I visited in the fall, Donta and I got to talking and we became real close," Camby said. "He played a big part in my coming to UMass. I wanted to play with him next season."

A frontcourt of Camby, Bright and Lou Roe for the next two seasons is enough to make most Minuteman fans drool.

"When you team up Marcus Camby, Lou Roe and Donta Bright, you've got a big-time front court and one of the best teams in the country," ABC color commentator Dick Vitale said.

Despite growing over 10 inches since he was a freshman, Camby is extremely athletic and coordinated.

"He has all the skills of a 6-1 point guard," Stan Perkowski, Camby's high school coach, said. "He's big, fast and agile."

Wallace said, "He can score inside and out. He moves well on the break and is a good passer. He plays a very well rounded game but I think he'll keep getting better each season. He's one of the most promising big men in the country, a definite top 15 player right now."

Bayno said, "I like that he is so quick and versatile. We like to get our big guys up the floor and he does that well. He can play the three (small forward), four (power forward) or five (center) positions for us."

"He's doesn't care if he scores or not, he just wants to win," Bayno said. "He's always hustling, diving for loose balls, making the extra pass."

While Bayno said Camby must bulk up to reach his true potential, many think he will someday play in the NBA.

"I think he'll be a drafted player and he'll earn NBA paychecks someday," Wallace said.

"By the time he's a senior, he'll be a NBA lottery pick," Perkowski said. "He's that good."

Camby is unaffected by such predictions and openly laughs when asked about his NBA chances.

"I have no idea if I'll play in the NBA," Camby said. "I'm picturing myself here for the next four years, playing in the Mullins Center, not in the NBA. If the NBA comes then I'll deal with it."

Humble, big, agile, skillful and articulate, no wonder everyone wants to meet him.

CIGNA CORPORATION
Actuarial Career Opportunities

Plan to attend a meeting at which Life Actuaries will discuss career opportunities at CIGNA. Members of all classes are welcome.

Date: Wednesday, February 10, 1993
Time: 7:00pm-9:00pm
Place: Campus Center Romm 803

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
One Free Tanning Visit with a Haircut
(just mention this ad)
expires 2/27/93

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Buoreise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

La Boutique Rosalina
26 Main Street • Amherst
256-8522
All are invited to come in and enter our Raffle! Three Grand Prize Winners will be chosen on Feb. 11.
Free Hebert Heart Shaped Chocolate ...with a $35 Purchase of any non-sale item
Prizes Include: $50, $35, & $20 Gift Certificates for La Boutique Rosalina
Offer is Good While Supplies Last.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA FRATERNITY
ΛΧΑ
RUSH DATES
Feb. 10, 11
16, 18
8:00 pm - 10:00 pm
Hot Tub - Feb. 16 - 23
RUSH
PER CALLEM OMNIBUS
VIR VIRTUTIS
The Fraternity of Honest Friendship
374 N. Pleasant St.
253-9032

■ College Basketball Notebook

continued from page 16

Another important factor is that Williams has kept his game under control for the most part. He has showed that he is equally adept at squaring up for the J and slicing inside for a layup (his up-fakes have been really effective in the paint).

Dana Dingle: Just a freshman, Dingle has served notice that he is a player to watch. As the season as gone along, Dingle appears more and more comfortable as a Minuteman. His defense is typically UMass tough, his rebounding is strong and his offensive game is coming around. Dingle looked shaky at the free throw line early on, but that has also improved over the last few outings.

Kennard Robinson: It would have been unfair to expect Robinson to have filled Harper Williams' shoes when Williams was hurt. Robinson is a different player than Williams. Some post defense and an occasional jumper was what Robinson was expected to provide, and that is what he did.

And Finally, in the "It Was Unbelievably Gruesome" Department: Sunday's Wake Forest-Temple battle turned out to be the McGonigle Massacre as the Demon Deacons battered the Owls 106-69. It was not even that close. Rodney Rogers left scouts drooling as the junior pumped in 34 points against the match-up zone. Randolph Childress continued to show he's back from injury as he drained many a three pointer over the Temple defense.

The Owls had no offense except for Derrick Battie occasionally scoring inside and a few long (and I do mean long) range bombs from Derrick McKie and Eddie Jones. Wake Forest got away with playing a soft zone with an occasional trap thrown in. It was ugly.

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian columnist

GRAND OPENING
Wednesday, February 10th.
Now Playing
SETTIE
Every Wednesday 9:30 PM til 1 AM
Celebrating 25 years 1968 ~ 1993
THE CELEBRATES 25 YEARS 1968 • 1993 PUB IN·AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

Say it to someone special...
COLLEGIAN VALENTINE PERSONALS 50% OFF
To be published Friday February 12th in a special Valentine section.
Deadline is Wednesday, Feb. 10 at 3:30 p.m.
LOOK FOR OUR PERSONALS TABLE ON THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

March 5, 1993

ACTIVITIES

Attention Pre-Med, Nursing, Public Health, and all other majors: the Student Health Advisory Board will have its first meeting Wed. February 10 at 5:30 pm in Room 302 University Health Services. Come see what we're all about!

Chess Club
Tuesday nights 7 pm - 11 pm
In the Bluewall
All are welcome!

Leadership, Friendship, Service
Rush Alpha Phi Omega
Information Meetings:
TONIGHT– 7pm – Thoreau TV Lounge
TOMMORROW 7pm Webster TV Lounge

UPC General Committee Meeting: Tonight 2/9 at 6 pm in Campus Center rooms 162-175. All are welcome.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Amnesty International Meeting
Room 917 Campus Center
Wednesday, February 10

Visit our information table
Campus Center Concourse
February 10 9-4 pm
Come sign an urgent action letter
For a
Prisoner of Conscience

Europe this Summer? Only $169!! Jet there anytime for $169! Reproted In Let's Go! & NY Times. Caribbean - $189 r/t air to somewhere sunny. California $129 one way either way. AIRHITCH at 212-864-2000

Join the UMass Raquetball Club. All levels welcome. For more info. call Don at 546-1527

Space Allocation Process
Attn: RSO's and GSO's who would like to apply for office space in the CC/Student Union complex may obtain applications to do so at the Board of Governors office 817 CC or SAO 316 Student Union.
Deadline to submit applications:

AUTO FOR SALE

83 Ford Mercury Zepher
4 door
New Brakes, 100,000 miles
$650 b/o Marcy 263-0770

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-6098
549-6073

FOR RENT

Amherst room to rent 300 no first last security daytime 545-6395 nite/967-4065

Fridge Rental 253-9742 delivered free

Room Available $275/mo S. Amherst call Stacey 253-5326 large apt great roomate

FOR SALE

Iguana with everything $100.00
Lights etc. 6-7109

MAC SE/30
40 MB HD, 2 MB RAM
Extended keyboard & carrying case
1700/b.o.
Call 256-0260

Mint Fender Strat
$300
549-5871

Rossignol 4S Sz 190 and Atomic 733 sz195 Real Cheap! Call Kim 549-2816

FOR SALE - AUDIO/VIDEO

Stereo components: Used /reconditioned, area's largest selection. Buy/sell/trade at Stereo/video Exchange, Sundays 10-4 inside Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

FOUND

HP Calculeter on Campus Ctr couch Call 6-4986 to identify

HELP WANTED

ATTENTION STUDENTS Excellent opportunity to make great money, own your own business. Distribute self-defense products and earn big profits. 1-800-758-3210

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action. $100/wk. + On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon. Fri. + Sunday. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT – Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000 - $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

On-Campus Reps Needed
Free "Call Home 800" service.
No monthly fee. No set-up charge.
No extra line required.
Low per/min rates. Much less expensive than calling cards. Call Telecom Communications 1-800-735-6542

Postal Jobs Available! Many positions. Great Benefits. Call 1-800-436-4365 ext. p-3306

Student Groups raise $1000 in 1 week! No cost or risk! Call 546-4230 Marcel

The Undergraduate Admissions office is now accepting applications for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Representatives, and New Students Program summer counselors. Please visit their table on the Concourse through the 11th.

INSTRUCTION

Horseback riding lessons available at Hadley Farm. Spaces open in Beg I (TuTh 10:10 am and Beg II TuTh 12:20 (1 credit) Lab Fee: $250.00. Weekly lessons available on Fridays. Call 549-2963 for more information.

Learn to Scuba dive earn two credits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday at Curry Hicks 7-10 pm 1-800-282-0977

Physics and Meth Tutor
M.A. In Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

KIM FROM PUFTON

I sold my books to you on Wed. morning in the SOM Library. I lost your phone # and I need to ask you a question (and I think you're very pretty.) Please give me a call – DREW (From Salem)

LOST

At Totmen Gym Saturday Jan 30th Mens Seiko digital watch with green velcro band $50 reward call Mike 665-8282

REWARD!!
Lost Women's Seiko watch
Call 585-8896

Silver + Gold Seiko watch on Montague Rd. In Amherst. If found please call 549-0338

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconting + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

MUSICIANS

Keyboardist Wanted: Phish, Allmans, Creative Improv 256-8115

ONE EYED JAKE

Trumpet pleyer needed. Blues rock inf. Management. Gigs. Compact Dist. Record Contract pending. Graduating senior preferred. Not Serious? Don't Bother!
Call Steve 549-8120

PERSONALS

Luke–
On any given night, huh?

Michelle
No more worries about expiration dates and pictures that don't look like you! Happy 21st Birthday Love your Roomate

ROOMATES WANTED

2 femeles or couple to share room $180 each or $275 for single, beautiful apartment 665-7604

Room for rent Amherst behind Baybanks 213.00 per month call 549-4388

Roomate Needed!!!
M/F to share two bedroom Brandywine Apt.
175.00/mo.
549-5868

Timeout Besies Delenos
Single room spitting distance away
256-4662

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Legal Services Center offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center; 545-1995

Need Help With Your Taxes? Student tax return preparation. Starting at $20.00 Rich 549-8109

Resume Preparation assistance with complete resume development. Keith Anderson, Ph.D. 582-4037

Terot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

TRAVEL

Floride SPRING BREAK
7 nights Beachfront $139-159
RESERVE rooms NOW
Call CMI 1-800-423-5264

Roundtrip ticket to Mardi Gras
For Information call 546-5471

Scuba Dive Key Largo
Spring Break, Call Project Deep
1-800-282-0977

SKI – Springbreak Intercollegiate Ski Weeks, only $209! Includes: 5 DAY LIFT TICKET/5 NIGHTS LODGING (MOUNTAINSIDE CONDO) /5 DAYS INTERCOLLEGIATE ACTIVITIES (Drinking age – 18). Sponsored by Labatt's, Evian, Molsen, and Mt. SUTTON, CANADA (Just across the Vermont border) Group leader discounts. Springbreak '93. Call Ski Travel Unlimited. 1-800-999-SKI-9

Spring Break:
CANCUN, NASSAU
from $299
Organize a small group for FREE trip
Call 1(800)Get Sun 1

Spring Break '93***
Cancun $479! Jamaica $499!
Daytona Beach $189! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company!
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL
1-800-328-SAVE

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

Went to Travel!!
Great rates for
Cancun Jamaica
and others
Great rates
Call Jason 549-3525

WANTED

RAQUETBALL PARTNER
Male or Female
Denise 549-6170

UMass Update is looking for reporters and writers for the news show call Sempy at 545-1336 or at 546-3021

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

UMass sinks Huskies

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team swam a lackadaisical meet Saturday at Northeastern University, but still waxed the Huskies to the tune of a 210-90 score.

It was the highest point output for the Minutemen this season, and they saw their national ranking jump from last week's 36 to this week's 34. They are tied with, if you can believe it, four other schools: Yale, Notre Dame, Clemson, and the University of Connecticut, who UMass beat a few weeks ago.

"We swam a moderately strong lineup," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth, "but we didn't swim that well. We were kind of flat, emotionally and physically, but we did what we had to do."

At the halfway point in the 16-event meet the Minutemen had a commanding lead, as they placed at least two swimmers in the top three in all but one of the events.

Senior Jay Peluso won opened the meet by teaming with Sean Clark, Tim Nubar and Adam Reich to win the 200 Medley Relay by more than three seconds. Later he won the 100 Breaststroke by over two seconds and the 200 Breaststroke by almost five seconds.

Clark added the 100 Backstroke, won by less than a second, and the 200 Backstroke, won by four seconds, to his part in the 200 Medley, and his part in the 200 Freestyle Relay.

Nubar added the 100 and 200 Butterflies to his accomplishments for the day, and Reich won the 50 Freestyle in addition to anchoring both Relay teams.

MEET NOTES — Today some of the Minutemen will travel to UConn for the New England Invitational. The meet is for the swimmers who either aren't swimming in the all-important New England Championships held February 18-20, or are close to gaining a spot on that squad. Yarworth says his lineup is almost finalized, but says he may make a change or two depending on how today's races look. The times recorded in the meet can be used towards qualifying for the Eastern Championship.

The center of attention

Hoop recruit Marcus Camby stands out

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

Marcus Camby stood quietly with his family outside the University of Massachusetts locker room, waiting to get inside and congratulate his future teammates on their 82-67 victory over Rutgers.

However, Camby was getting his own share of congratulations as he waited. A couple of young boys asked him for an autograph, a police officer shook his hand and a few young women looked at him, giggled and whispered to each other.

At 6-foot-11, Camby stands out from a crowd and word of his basketball prowess has made everyone want to get to know him. The 18 year-old takes it all in stride and appears remarkably unfazed.

Camby, for those who haven't heard, is a dominating big man from Hartford (Conn.) Public High School, who has signed a National Letter of Intent to attend UMass next year. Many hoop gurus rank him among the top 20 high school players in the country. All the praise does not seem to bother Camby.

"I don't worry about what others say about me," Camby said. "I just have to be myself on and off the court."

UMass associate head coach Bill Bayno said, "The best thing about him is that he's humble."

Bayno, who was responsible for recruiting Camby, may like Camby's humbleness, but UMass fans are looking forward to his on-the-court abilities.

Camby can run the floor like a point guard, possesses devastating shot blocking ability and is versatile on the offensive end — he can post up, hit the jumper and finish a fast break.

Camby, who has already exceeded the NCAA-mandated minimum on his SATs to play, is eating up the competition in Connecticut this season. In 12 contests, he is averaging 22.8 points, 15 rebounds and 10 blocks per game. Hartford Public is currently 12-0 and ranked No. 1 in the state. A triple-double a game is impressive enough, but consider that, because his team usually blows out its opponents, Camby rarely plays more than 20 minutes a game.

Last Friday night, Camby and company played Enrico Fermi High School and won 101-34. Camby played only eight minutes but still scored 18 points, grabbed

Turn to CAMBY, page 14

A look at the Minutemen and their season so far

After last week's midseason awards, it is time to look closer to home, it is time for the Minuteman Report.

The One Constant: When the Minutemen take the court, there is always one thing that comes with them, and that is defense. Good defense is not always fun to watch, but it is what wins ballgames, and should be greatly appreciated. Stat: UMass is 14-2 when it's opponents shoot under 50 percent.

College Basketball Notebook
By Jeff Crotts

The One Key: Against West Virginia last Thursday, it looked to me like every missed UMass shot or free throw was kept alive on the boards. The Minutemen pounded their own glass for 24 offensive rebounds, which led to many of their points.

If Lou Roe (who had seven offensive caroms against West Virginia), Harper Williams and crew are able to hit the boards, UMass will be in every game they play. Frosh Dana Dingle also has the knack for being in the right place at the right time when it comes to 'bounding. Stat: UMass is 13-1 when they outrebound their opponents.

The Balanced Equation: UMass again is one of the few teams in the nation to possess five players who are averaging double figures in points. This balance is important because the Minutemen do not have to rely too heavily on anyone in particular. Come crunch time, though, the two seniors, Harper Williams (see West Virginia) and Tony Barbee (see Temple) want the ball and that is the way it should be. Stat: UMass is 10-1 when four players score in double figures.

Individual Assessments: Here is a look at how the key players have performed this year.

Harper Williams: Dubbed the "Warrior," Williams is exactly that. He was playing okay basketball before got injured, but when he returned, Harper started to play great basketball (before the Rutgers game in which he was double or tripled team until the cows came home).

Williams' never-ending search for the perfect post position on offense is entertaining to watch and his enthusiasm is unmatched. The fact that he never stops hustling or never stops trying is a big factor in both his success and the team's success.

Tony Barbee: Despite his heroics versus Temple, Barbee probably is the most underappreciated Minuteman. A jack-of-all-trades-master-of-none is a good way to describe Barbee. It has been that same way all four years with Barbee — you always know what you are going to get.

When Harper Williams was injured right before the Abdow's Hall of Fame Classic, UMass needed a big performance from Barbee. Well, he delivered in the form of a 24-point outing in the first round and a 31-point performance in the final. UMass fans might not know it now, but when Barbee is gone, they are going to miss him more than they think.

Lou Roe: For the most part, Roe has had a tremendously strong sophomore campaign. It looks as though might be peaking right about now. If Roe goes straight up and strong with the ball, not many can stop in the college ranks, it is that simple.

When Harper Williams returned, the burden of being the main post up player left Roe's chest and he has sparkled since. While being allowed to roam the baseline in addition to posting up, Roe has really prospered.

Derek Kellogg: Perhaps the biggest vacancy left by last year's graduates was the point guard slot that the always dependable Anton Brown left behind. So what if he doesn't shoot that much — Derek Kellogg has done all that has been asked of him, and that is all that matters. Distributing the ball is Kellogg's main job, and it is a job he basically does well.

Against Depaul, Kellogg had the quietest 10-assist performance in quite some time. Even more impressive than that was that the assists came with only one turnover, a ratio I'm sure John Calipari is pleased with. Also, if you want scrappy, in-your-face-D, Kellogg would be the man you would want to watch.

Jerome Malloy: Did someone say streak shooter? That is Jerome Malloy. Malloy was unconscious at Rutgers, torching the Scarlet Knights for 24 points on seven for seven shooting. If Malloy scores early, it is usually a good sign for UMass.

Like, Roe, Malloy has come on strong as of late, scoring in double figures in the last five games. If Malloy continues to develop his off-dribble game, than that double figure streak should continue.

Mike Williams: Williams has done a good job at creating offense of off the bench. He hit a huge game winning three pointer against Rutgers and is probably UMass' best at creating his own offense.

Turn to COLLEGE BASKETBALL NOTEBOOK, page 15

Track passes URI Rams

By JASON NASH
Collegian Staff

In a sport that tends to be individual most of the time, the University of Massachusetts women's track team epitomized the word "team" on Saturday, winning a four school meet at the University of Rhode Island with the University of New Hampshire and Holy Cross.

UMass eked out the victory 59 to 58 over URI with first place finishes in the final two events in areas where "teamwork" counts the most — the relays.

"It came down to the four by four and four by eight relays," said head coach Julie LaFreniere. "URI loaded up their four by four and had no one left for their four by eight."

Indeed, UMass showed their depth with Kim Liljeblad, Mo Forsyth, Kelly Liljeblad and Becky Johnson winning the four by eight. Remarkably, Kim Liljeblad had already won the mile and 3000 meter earlier in the day and had little rest entering the last event.

"It was tough, but I managed to close the gap a little," said Kelly Liljeblad. "I usually run the 5000 meter, but it wasn't offered, so coach wanted me to run all three as a workout."

The heroics continued as Becky Johnson gave the performance of her life, as she anchored the four by eight, catching URI and beating them by a whopping ten seconds.

"Becky kicked and pushed so hard," LaFreniere said. "It was her fastest time all year and she was truly amazing."

Down by five points entering the second to last event and the four by four relay, UMass teamates Kerry Acre, Janey Meeks, Lenice Johnson and Jen Melville pulled together, setting a field house record, finishing first and making the incredible finish possible. Despite setting a record, all four were coming off injuries.

"It looked pretty iffy going in, because all of us had been sick," said senior co-captain Johnson. "Coach told us we needed to finish first for any hope at winning the meet and it really boosted our morale."

Even with only half the meets over, the win closed UMass' regular season record at 7-6 and gave LaFreniere a positive feeling about the final month.

"It was a nice way to finish our dual meet season," said LaFreniere. "We're still only at 95 percent health wise, but I think the team is really starting to come together. Everyone really made a difference."

UMass travels back to URI for the Atlantic 10 championships this Saturday in hopes of rekindling the magic they found this weekend.

Ski teams experience mixed results in Winter Carnival

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

As the University of Massachusetts men's and women's ski teams arrived at the Brown University Winter Carnival at Loon Mountain in New Hampshire, each team knew that they would have their work cut out for them.

That would be the case, as both UMass squads fared decently against their Eastern Collegiate Conference competition.

The Minutewomen placed third in the slalom, finishing behind Boston College and Plymouth State. UMass was about six seconds off the winning pace.

Beth Martin placed seventh for the Minutewomen, while Debbie Adams finished seventh. UMass' J.J. Tanguay took home 11th and Dana Breslau captured 13th.

In the giant slalom, the Minutewomen finished in second behind perennial powerhouse Boston College. Tanguay had a strong individual performance with a third place performance. Tanguay skied the run in 1:15.29.

Kyri Sparks was the next Minutewomen in, placing seventh. Sparks checked in with a time of 1:16.21.

The Minutemen, meanwhile, came out victorious in their slalom event, narrowly slipping by BC. The margin of victory? .18 of a second.

Bill Schafer turned in another spectacular performance as he won the slalom in a time of 76.09 seconds. The next UMass skiier, John Johnson, finished in at 76:61 seconds.

Other UMass skiiers who placed strongly were John Soglia (6th) and freshman David Harrington (11th).

In the giant slalom, the Minutemen placed second to Boston College by 13 seconds.

Schafer took home this event as well, finishing with a time of 1:00.63 seconds. Schafer is one of the top skiers in the country, with a potential spot in the nationals.

Coming up for the Minutemen is their last meet as they race at their "home," Berkshire East, this upcoming weekend. After the regular season, there will probably be two post season tournaments for both UMass squads, including the NCAA's.

Wednesday February 10, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 74

Today will be partly sunny and mild with highs in the 40s.

Local news:
Former director of Planned Parenthood Faye Wattleton airs her views on women's rights, Bill and Hillary, gays in the military and much, much more. Page 3.

Black Affairs:
Special two-page section with columns, articles and a calendar to kick off Black History Month. Pages 8 and 9.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Weld praises new lab on campus visit

By KENDRA WILLETT
Collegian Staff

Gov. William Weld pledged to continue his support for the University of Masschusetts' collaborative research efforts with industry yesterday at a national computer conference held in the Campus Center.

Minutes after cutting the red ribbon for the state's new industry/University shared research lab, Weld addressed this year's eighth annual National Research Forum for Industry.

The Research Forum was a two-day event intended to highlight some of the most recent advances in the field of computer science.

Weld reiterated his support of the new Center for Real-Time Intelligent Complex Computing System. He has made a $300,000 supplemental appropriation to help the University build a robotics research lab in the near future.

"I am personally committed to clearing away any red tape, and working together with [UMass President] Michael Hooker to get things cleared up," Weld said.

Referring to Hooker, Weld said, "He recognizes in his bones the role UMass can play in economic development."

"Not only will CRICCS create thousands of jobs here in Massachusetts, but it will also market UMass as a place of world class education," Weld said.

Noting that the world is changing and promising to make a difference in the state's economy, Hooker explained that CRICCS was at the forefront of this revolution.

"Switching from an energy-based economy to an information-based economy is part of the goal of CRICCS," Hooker said.

Hooker explained that by improving the productivity of CRICCS on campus, UMass will be able to fill in the gaps of lost information as it goes from University to industry.

CRICCS began its operations in October 1991. Initial research areas for the project have focused on automated manufacturing, information retrieval, vehicle and highway systems and integrated computing environments, which will work to coordinate the efforts of thousands of related computer systems.

Financing for CRICCS came from the state, the National Science Foundation, the Department of Defense and approximately 15 industrial partners.

Prior to addressing the forum, Weld was introduced to the robotic structures located on the second floor of the Lederle Graduate Tower. He was told by Robotics Professor Rod Grupen that these structures could improve efficiency on any manufacturer's floor.

Grupen explained to Weld that the robots would not necessarily take the place of humans.

"The robots will be useful when people can not be immediately present," Grupen said.

As Gordon Oakes, chair of the University's Board of Trustees, addressed the forum his attitude was both positive and hopeful.

"The future is very bright for this institution," Oakes said. "And this University is the greatest thing happening in the Pioneer Valley."

SETH KAYE / COLLEGIAN
Gov. Weld plays a symbolic role in the opening of a new research lab.

Protesters gather to plead for funding

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

Governor William Weld's visit to the University of Massachusetts yesterday was met with protest from Amherst residents and advocates of a threatened hospital in Westfield.

Larry Kelley, a candidate for the Amherst Select Board, awaited the governor holding a sign insisting the University pay Amherst more than $200,000 in traffic fines the town claims it is owed, while another group protested Weld's proposal to close the Western Mass Hospital in Westfield.

The disputed sum comes from moving violation fines issued on campus. Northampton District Court had routed a portion of the revenues to the University, but town officials say the money should have gone to Amherst. The University maintains it received the money legitimately.

Kelley said he feels certain the town will be successful its demands, and that the governor has the power to make the University pay.

"The governor holds the purse strings and he can open or close them at any time by calling [Chancellor] Dick O'Brien or [UMass President] Michael Hooker and

Turn to PROTEST, page 3

GM settles suit with NBC over staging truck crash

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
Associated Press

NEW YORK — NBC News announced Tuesday that it had settled a defamation lawsuit brought by General Motors Corp. over the network's "demonstration" of a fiery pickup truck crash on its "Dateline NBC" program.

"We acknowledge and take responsibility for the problems GM has identified in the demonstration crash," said Stone Phillips, the program's co-anchor.

"We deeply regret we included an inappropriate demonstration in our Dateline NBC report...We apologize to our viewers and to General Motors."

An auto safety advocate defended NBC, saying it's standard practice to attach incendiary devices to vehicles in test crashes.

He didn't believe NBC was obligated to disclose that such devices were used because something else sparked the fire that was shown in the report.

NBC's report on GM's "sidesaddle" fuel tank design aired Nov. 17. Last week an Atlanta jury awarded $105.2 million to the parents of a teen-age boy killed when his GM pickup exploded in flames. GM denies its design is unsafe.

General Motors filed a defamation lawsuit Monday against NBC News and the Indianapolis-based Institute for Safety Analysis, which staged the crash.

"Dateline NBC" correspondent Michelle Gillen's 15-minute report surveyed the safety record of the trucks and cited internal GM reports that suggested the automaker might be aware of a problem with the sidesaddle tanks.

NBC showed a 40 mph side-impact car crash in which there was no tank leakage and no explosion.

Then, in a 30 mph crash, the truck tank was crushed and fuel gushing from it ignited in an orange fireball.

NBC reported that the fuel was ignited by the headlight filament of the crash car. It didn't disclose that the testing institute also had triggered remote-controlled, toy-rocket motors on the truck's underside.

GM, in a presentation Monday to reporters and stock analysts, showed plumes of smoke, presumably from the igniting rockets under the truck, split seconds before impact.

"They had one purpose there - to create a visual for television," GM spokesman Ed Lechtzin said.

NBC contends the rockets turned out to be irrelevant because experts concluded that the headlight filament sparked the fire.

In a letter Monday to GM, NBC News President Michael Gartner said the network would have disclosed if the rockets or anything else had sparked the blast.

NBC disclosed its use of the incendiaries on Monday's "NBC Nightly News" and planned a follow-up report on Tuesday's "Dateline NBC," but Gartner insisted the Nov. 17 report "was and remains completely factual and accurate."

Clarence Ditlow, executive director of the Center for Auto Safety in Washington, said Tuesday that igniters are commonly used in test crashes to determine whether there's a sufficient leak of fuel to start a fire.

"It's an accepted practice," Ditlow said. "What you're testing for is whether there's an explosive mixture of air and fuel, not whether there's an ignition source."

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
NOTHING TO SEE HERE, FOLKS! — Officer Michael J. Haynes controls access to Lot 26 before a sporting event at the Mullins Center.

Nuclear waste kills three

BEIJING (AP)-Three people died and more than 90 became ill in Communist China's worst accident involving nuclear waste, an official report said today.

The China Disaster Reduction News reported that cobalt 60 killed Zhang Youchang, his father and brother in Xinzhou, in northwest China's Shanxi province, late last year.

Cobalt 60 is a radioactive isotope used in radiotherapy, metallurgy and materials testing. In 1972, scientists in Shanxi province imported cobalt 60 from the Soviet Union and France. Ten years later, the cobalt ceased to be useful for research and was stored in a well, the newspaper said.

Last November, Zhang, 29, was cleaning the well along with 10 other workers when he found a piece of cobalt 60. He was attracted by what the newspaper described as a shiny gold ball, and put it in his pocket.

In the following days, Zhang vomited five or six times daily, coughed and had trouble breathing. Purple spots appeared on his body, his hair began to fall out and the white-cell count in his blood plummeted.

Within two weeks, he was dead. His brother, who stayed with him during his hospitalization and even slept in the same bed, and his father, who also spent a lot of time with him, died in the next eight days. The family's pet dog also died.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual FORUM

The GLB Forum runs each Thursday and consists of event listings of interest to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual community. The GLB Forum is compiled by the GLB Issues Editor who can be contacted c/o the Collegian.

Tuesday, Feb. 9:

The Speakers Bureau will hold trainings for new members from 7-10 p.m. at the Program for GLB Concerns' Office, Crampton, SW. Please call 545-4824 to register.

Wednesday, Feb. 10:

The Speakers Bureau will hold an orientation for new and returning members from 5-7 p.m. at the Program for GLB Concerns' Office, Crampton House, SW.

Thursday, Feb. 11:

"Bonding and Bondage," a lecture presented by Donald Wert, M.S. of the Regent Hospital in New York, focusing on family relationships and coming out, will be held from noon to 1:30 p.m., Campus Center room 804-808. Sponsored by the Program for GLB Concerns, GLB Graduate Student Organization, HADAPP, and Pride Institute of Minneapolis.

The Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Graduate Student Organization and the LBG Counseling Collective host "HANGING OUT," an informal discussion group for older GLB graduate and undergraduate students returning to school. 6:30-8:30 p.m., Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns' Office, Crampton House, SW.

Friday, Feb. 12:

The Lesbian Bisexual and Gay Alliance will host a coffee social at 3 p.m. in the Campus Center, 9th Floor.

Saturday, Feb. 13:

The Lesbian Bisexual and Gay Alliance hosts a dance in the Bluewall from 9 p.m.-2 a.m. $4.

Administration plans to sacrifice

Clinton cuts White House staff to save $10 million

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unveiling a plan to cut White House payrolls and privileges, President Clinton is shrinking his staff by 350 workers, restricting the use of chauffeur-driven limousines and turning an exclusive dining room into a cafeteria for all his employees.

The moves, to be announced today, are intended to show that the administration will share in the sacrifices all Americans will be asked to make as part of deficit reduction and the economic stimulus plan Clinton will unveil next week.

Officials claimed the staff reductions - down to 1,044 employees - will save at least $10 million in personnel costs.

However, they cautioned that spending will have to be increased in other areas, such as for computers and telephones, to bring the White House up to date. The officials discussed details of Clinton's plan on condition of anonymity.

While cutting his staff, Clinton went through some contortions to achieve his promised 25 percent cut in personnel.

For example, he exempted 800 budget workers and trade negotiators from the 25 percent parameter. Instead, they'll be included in a less stringent plan to trim the entire government by 100,000 people. Departments and agencies will begin announcing on Wednesday how they'll meet that objective.

Further, the 350 spots being eliminated included 117 people who were on temporary assignment to the White House from other agencies. They'll merely go back to their old jobs.

And Clinton gave himself until Oct. 1 to meet his goal. The reductions are to be achieved by not hiring employees for existing openings, early retirements and sending borrowed employees back to their home agencies.

The hardest hit staff will the Office of National Drug Control Policy. It will be cut from 146 people in the Bush administration to 25 under Clinton. Clinton's advisers said the office had been packed with political appointees rather than experts in the fight against drugs.

To signal that he is not retreating from the drug war, Clinton will announce that his yet-to-be-named drug czar will have Cabinet rank.

Former Vice President Dan Quayle's Space Council will be wrapped into a new office of science, technology and space policy.

In a largely symbolic gesture, Clinton directed that the use of chauffeur-driven limousines from home to work be limited to just three senior officials; the chief of staff, the national security adviser and the deputy national security adviser.

Under President Bush, the limousine privileges were given to those officials as well as to the chief of protocol, the director of the Office of Management and Budget and the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

In another symbolic move, Clinton ordered that the White House mess be opened to all employees; now only senior officials are allowed to dine there, although junior aides have take-out privileges. A White House official said the mess would be turned into a cafeteria for all employees.

The White House also will cut back sharply on its subscriptions to magazines and newspapers, officials said. And in another belt tightening move, senior officials have absorbed salary reductions of six percent to nine percent below what their predecessors were paid.

IN OUR MANAGEMENT TRAINING PROGRAM YOUR HANDS WILL BE FULL...NOT HELD.

Lechmere has taken retail management training to a new level—one that allows you to engineer the timetable for achieving your management goals. We've designed a program that will empower you to move far and fast within our organization, provided you are a self-starter and have the drive and motivation to direct your own career. In just one year's time, you could be managing a 1–4 million dollar business!

As the premier hard goods retailer in the Northeast, Lechmere offers quality brand name merchandise at competitive prices. Our management philosophy emphasizes partnership, teamwork, open communications, and controlled growth. We offer hands-on experience with a well-defined career path and nowhere to go but up!

This semester we will be conducting an on-campus Information Session to let you speak directly with select Lechmere Associates about our Management Trainee Program. So if you're interested in challenge and wide-open career opportunities, come talk with us about just how exciting a career in retail can be!

See Your Placement Office to Reserve Your Spot.

LECHMERE

with stores in MA, CT, NH, NY, RI

PLACE: 805-09 Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center
DATE: Thursday, February 18
TIME: 7:00–9:00 p.m.
Refreshments will be served.

Nos vertus ne sont le plus souvent que des vices déguisés.

Our virtues most often are only vices in disguise.
Le Rochefoucauld (1747-1827)

SEMESTER OR YEAR ABROAD

The American University of Paris is a four-year liberal arts college in Paris welcoming visiting students.

Majors in: Art History, Comparative Literature, Computer Science, European Studies, French Studies, International Affairs, International Business Administration, International Economics, and Fine Arts at Parsons School of Design.

Two programs especially designed for visiting students:

The Institute for French Studies in Paris (IFSP) offers students with strong French language proficiency the chance to combine their studies at AUP with courses at the Institut d'Etudes Sociales, Institut National des Langues et Civilisations Orientales, Université de Paris IV–Sorbonne, and Institut d'Etudes Politiques ('Sciences-Po').

The Program in European Affairs (PEA) allows students to select Europe-focused courses from three of our majors and to integrate them through an on-going seminar. Year-long students may qualify for international affairs internships in their second semester.

- 1000 students from 70 different countries.
- 40% U.S. citizens, 14% French.
- In 1991-92, 12% visiting students.
- Housing is guaranteed.

Full college credit summer courses:
- Three-week French immersion.
- Six-week regular summer session.

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF PARIS

Etablissement d'enseignement supérieur privé

31, avenue Bosquet 75007 Paris, France

Accredited by the Middle States Association of Schools and Colleges

Please send me more information on study abroad opportunities at The American University of Paris

Name Mr./Ms. _____ please print in ink

Mailing address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____ Telephone ( ) _____

Name of college/university you currently attend _____

I may be interested in applying for entry in Fall 19__ Spring 19__ Summer 19__

I am a: ☐Freshman ☐Sophomore ☐Junior ☐Senior

My primary academic interest/program: _____

Please send to: United States Office, The American University of Paris
80 East 11th Street, Suite 434 New York, NY 10003-6000
Tel. (212) 677-4870 Fax. (212) 475-5205

Local News

Speaker: women must now fight for equality

By TOM KNIGHT
Collegian Staff

Although encouraged by the ascension of Bill and Hillary Clinton to the White House, noted reproduction rights advocate Faye Wattleton warned against complacency in the fight for equal rights Monday night at Smith College.

Wattleton headed Planned Parenthood for 13 years before stepping down last year. She was invited by Smith College to be the keynote speaker during the College's celebration of International Women's Week.

"The battle is far from over," Wattleton said. "We lost ground during the Reagan and Bush administrations. I don't just mean women. I mean the poor and minorities, too."

"Women seeking the highest offices in the land are still not being regarded with equal consideration," Wattleton said. "When was the last time a man was asked whether he had ever hired an illegal alien as a child care giver? The fact that such questions are never asked of men is a graphic illustration of just how far we've yet to go."

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Faye Wattleton speaking at Smith College.

Wattleton repeatedly reminded the large student audience of their "position of privilege" and the "special obligations inherited with that privilege."

"Engage in the political process and do not be apologetic about pushing our agenda to the top. We have seen what complacency has given us," Wattleton said.

Wattleton said she believed the public's outrage over the Senate Judiciary Committee's handling of the Clarence Thomas/Anita Hill confrontation triggered the demise of the Bush presidency.

"Anita Hill struck a chord in the conscience of this country. She became a surrogate for too many women who have confronted sexual harassment in the workplace and who decided that it's time for a change. It's time for us to make that change," Wattleton said.

Upon leaving Planned Parenthood, Wattleton said she had originally planned to host a television talk show, but has instead "hit the lecture circuit" and is writing a book about her role as a leader in the reproductive rights movement.

Still a passionate champion of that cause, Wattleton said she worries that "the itinerate terrorists who go under the banner of Operation Rescue" still carry considerable political clout despite the fact "that the majority of Americans are pro-choice."

Wattleton said as an African-American she was particularly embarrassed by Colin Powell's "deciding to be a soldier before being a human being," referring to what she considered Powell's hypocrisy as an African-American in refusing to allow gays to serve their country in the military.

Wattleton ended her talk by again exhorting the students "to participate in the political process and not just during a political campaign. We the people can control government and must control it."

UM to review Housing

Committee to determine student needs

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

After last semester's racial tensions escalated by incidents in the residence halls, University of Massachusetts Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Thomas Robinson decided to gather a group of 16 students and staff to determine whether Housing Services meets the needs of students.

The Housing Services Review Committee will cover a broad range of housing issues such as community building, policy enforcement and the campus alcohol policy during the spring semester. The members will present their recommendations to Robinson by May.

"The work of the committee will be critical in helping to identify the most appropriate direction for Housing Services over the next five or 10 years," Robinson said. "Results of the program review will be only the beginning of a long-range plan that will be implemented by Housing Services."

Although the Committee's first meeting is tomorrow, many members said they are looking forward to helping with the investigation.

"I think program review is good management. I think Housing Services is critical to students," said Mary Ellen Sailer, the committee chair and special assistant to the vice chancellor for student affairs. "It is really easy to see what the problems are, though [they] are bigger than room-choosing and spring break."

"I think it is important for the members to have an open mind to everything about housing," Sailer said.

Committee member Daniel Gittelsohn, a junior communications major, said he feels the campus alcohol policy is a big problem for housing.

Because students are not allowed to drink in the residence halls, Gittelsohn, who has lived on campus for three years, said students tend to go drinking off campus, increasing the risk of drunk driving.

Resident Assistants are expected to act like police, which is beyond their role as students and their pay, according to Gittelsohn.

Turn to HOUSING, page 6

Three stolen cars in a day

Compiled by JASON GEORGE

Motor vehicle theft

Police received three reports of car thefts from their owners on Monday. An individual reported her 1983 Toyota stolen from Lot 44 on Sylvan Drive and another person reported his 1981 Toyota stolen at 5:30 p.m. Monday.

A Public Safety officer found the two Toyotas in Lot 13, with one of the vehicle's engines running. Both vehicles locks and ignitions were popped-out.

Also, around 5:30 p.m. Monday, a woman reported her 1987 Suziki stolen from Lot 13. Police estimate the value at $3,000.

Burglary

• An individual reported to police late Monday that his vehicle was broken into while he was parked in Lot 11. The driver window was smashed and the pullout stereo was stolen. Police estimate the damage at $615.

• An individual reported to police Monday afternoon that his door lock and ignition was "punched out."

Univ. to host conference

College democrats to descend in Mass

By STEVEN L. COHEN
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts has been chosen as this year's sight for the College Democrats of Massachusetts' annual conference.

The conference will begin with a panel discussion on education. Panelists will include U.S. Congressman John Olver (D-Amherst), State Representative Ellen Story (D-Amherst), and State Senator Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst).

Joan Manard (D-Somerset), the House majority whip and newly elected Massachusetts Democratic Party Chairperson, is scheduled to speak, and other major democrats are still pending.

The topics of discussion should include enfranchisement, voter registration, especially in poor or minority areas where representation is low, the new Democratic Party's future, and the gubernatorial race in 1994, which will have a great effect on UMass students.

Elections for the four officers of the College Democrats of Massachusetts will also be held. Three UMass students running for the offices are Neil Carpenter for president, Emily Rose for treasurer, and Matt Malone for secretary.

Colleges expected to attend the conference include Harvard, Northeastern, Boston University, Boston College, Wellesley, Holy Cross, all five UMass campuses, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Amherst and Hampshire.

When asked why a sophomore would want to run for a position with so much responsibility, Neil said "The current president is Cristopher White from Harvard. Harvard is a very active campus, but it is time for UMass to take a leading role. The president's campus becomes like the flagship of the College Democrats. The simple fact is that UMass is affected by the government more than most other

Turn to CONFERENCE, page 6

■ protest

continued from page 1

telling them to pay us," Kelley said.

Kelley was the only Amherst citizen to turn up for the governor's speech, but he said that many more will begin protesting if the Amherst budget override exceeds $275,000 dollars.

"Senior citizens will be down here protesting outside of Whitmore if the town isn't satisfied," Kelley said.

Advocates for Western Mass Hospital, which Governor Weld has proposed closing to save money, gathered on the Student Union steps with signs that read "save Western Mass Hospital".

Patient care advocate Angus Rushlow said "The people have very little voice in the government, and now that voice is being taken away from those who are helpless, the weak and the infirm."

Governor Weld has proposed closing Western Mass Hospital in part of a broader plan to privatize health care in the state. The hospital, which focuses on specialized forms of care, maintains an AIDS hospice, a cancer hospice, the only Multiple Sclerosis unit in the entire country and a comatose unit in addition to other facilities.

Weld met with protesters in another room to discuss the issues. He said "We will be held to our rhetoric."

Rushlow said he found the meeting "encouraging."

The University Democrats also turned up waving signs reading "Kennedy." Matt Pavesi, a junior political science and history major said "We're just here to bother Weld."

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN
WINTER WONDERLAND — Fluffy powder gives this fire hydrant the look of a dancing snow fairy.

Clinton's AG problems create revenue influx

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press

As a candidate, Bill Clinton said the government needed to do a more efficient job of collecting taxes. As president, he may have found a way to do that - at the expense of his Cabinet's reputation.

The failure of Clinton appointees to pay Social Security taxes for domestic workers could have the unintended benefit of encouraging other Americans to comply.

"Let's hope that the positive spin on this is...that as a result there will be a greater sensitivity about the whole issue," said Evelyn Morton, a lobbyist for the American Association of Retired Persons.

Some government officials already have seen an increase in queries about the tax on domestic workers, one of the most commonly flouted laws in the country.

"We have seen a moderate increase," said Dominic LaPonzina, spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service's Baltimore regional center. "I wouldn't characterize it as a deluge, but it isn't a trickle, either."

In the Philadelphia regional center, "the phone-bank people are saying on break, 'I got a Ron Brown-type question' or 'I got a Zoe Baird-type question again,'" said spokesman Jim Wondolowski.

Baird, Clinton's first choice for attorney general, withdrew after admitting that she and her husband hired two illegal immigrants and failed to pay their Social Security taxes. Another candidate for attorney general, Charles F.C. Ruff, was removed from consideration after conceding that he, too, had failed to pay Social Security taxes for a domestic worker.

On Sunday, Brown, already confirmed as secretary of commerce, acknowledged that he had failed to pay Social Security taxes for a housekeeper who worked for him about three hours a week.

Because she worked so few hours, he said, he didn't think he needed to bother filing taxes.

Many Americans may believe the same thing. But whenever they've only hired a baby sitter for a few nights, a teen-ager to cut the grass a half-dozen times, or a housekeeper for a few hours a week, they must pay Social Security taxes if the pay has exceeded $50 in one quarter of the year.

The IRS concedes that far more people probably break the law then obey it. Advocates for domestic workers, including AARP, say domestic workers will be deprived of Social Security benefits unless their employers begin paying the tax.

In testimony before Congress in 1991, then-IRS Commissioner Fred Goldberg estimated that 500,000 people file Social Security taxes for domestic workers. He estimated that 2 million people ought to be doing so. And that could be a very conservative estimate.

As anyone who has hired a baby sitter recently can attest, it isn't hard to exceed the $50 threshold. The $50 figure has been in effect since 1950, when that much money bought the equivalent of $285 today.

Ex-senator investigated

Attorney General probes conflict of interest

BOSTON (AP) — Attorney General Scott Harshbarger says he is pursuing a probe of former state Sen. William Q. MacLean, who pleaded guilty last week to a conflict of interest involving public pension funds.

"There are allegations about other issues that we will pursue and others I assume we are also pursuing," Harshbarger, who was criticized for agreeing to the plea bargain with the Fairhaven Democrat, said Monday.

"We have complete freedom to pursue whatever else may be uncovered or newly discovered or previously addressed."

MacLean's lawyer, Thomas Dwyer, said he was not concerned about any ongoing investigation by Harshbarger.

MacLean pleaded guilty to charges that he violated the state conflict-of-interest law forbidding state officials from benefiting in state contracts. He was fined $512,000 and given one year's probation.

The charges dealt with links to the sale of public employee retirement savings plans. Indictments handed up in the case mentioned MacLean's business dealings that involved former Attorney General Edward J. McCormack Jr.

Harshbarger was criticized for accepting the plea bargain. But, Harshbarger said, MacLean would not have been sent to prison since it was a first offense misdemeanor.

But Harshbarger said Monday that other state, local and federal prosecutors had backed off bringing similar cases against MacLean and other officials because they would have been difficult to prove.

Among the former federal prosecutors Harshbarger said had let MacLean's case slide by were Gov. William Weld when he was U.S. attorney in Massachusetts, former U.S. Attorney Wayne Budd and current U.S. Attorney John Pappalardo.

Harshbarger added that the criticism might also hurt future attempts to prove other corruption cases.

"This sends a very tricky message to prosecutors," Harshbarger told the Boston Herald.

Murder follows rapes

Relatives kill 'shamed' Muslim women

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The number of rapes has diminished in Bosnia but more Muslim rape victims are now being killed by relatives who feel disgraced, an American relief official said Tuesday.

"A sister who is raped brings shame to the family," said Karel Zelenka, in charge of the U.S. Catholic Relief Services office in Zagreb, Croatia.

"Even brothers will kill a sister if she's been raped," he said. "And nobody really knows how to handle it because these women do not want to be contacted because of the shame."

Zelenka said the number of rapes by Serbs has declined because of the world outcry, but the killings of the raped women has increased as more pregnancies become evident. The relief official said at a news conference that large-scale rape had been an unprecedented attempt by Serbs to dilute an ethnic group, the Bosnian Muslims.

"It may not be a written policy but there must have been some acceptance because it spread very rapidly," he said. "The lowest estimate is 20,000."

Zelenka, an American of Czech origin, said there also may have been isolated rapes by Croats.

He gave a pessimistic picture of the situation in the former Yugoslavia, saying that the continuing negotiations make the fighting worse as each side tries to improve its military position.

He said that for the past four weeks only airlifted supplies have been getting into Sarajevo because fighting has halted the overland convoys that brought most of the food to the besieged city. Croatia has reached the limit of the help it can give to the 700,000 refugees and displaced people within its borders, he said.

PLEASE RECYCLE THIS
COLLEGIAN

Get Involved!
with campus health issues
SHAB*
- Sponsor health projects
- Represent student health care concerns
- Review UHS budget
- Serve on UHS Search Committees
- Meet other students interested in health care

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT
Meeting: WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10
Where: UHS Room 302
Time: 5:30 P.M.
*Student Health Advisory Board (est. 1971)
University Health Services

Come See Our Valentine's Day Goodies
Boxers ♥ Briefs ♥ G-Strings
cotton and silk
Starting at $5
J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2013
Open 7 days • Thursday nights in Northampton
22 Masonic St. Northampton 586-8336

University of Wisconsin-Platteville
"If you have built castles in the air, your work need not be lost. That is where they should be. Now put the foundations under them."
—Henry David Thoreau
Learn Your Way Around The World
- Study abroad in London, England or Seville, Spain, for a summer, for a semester or for a full academic year
- Courses in liberal arts and international business
- Fluency in a foreign language not required
- Home-stays with meals
- Field trips
- Financial aid applies (except for summer session)

Application deadlines:
- April 1 for summer session
- April 30 for fall semester
- October 20 for spring semester

For a program description and an application, call toll free:
1-800-342-1725

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

My mind is not an apple in the garden of education

Noon: Monday, Wednesday, Friday. My mind scrambles for reasons to drag my body to French class. My stomach turns as my mind flips over my fears. Intimidation. Humiliation. Patronization. Discrimination — Education? . . .what? Education?

At several universities across the country, students are avidly fighting to make teacher evaluations available for student consideration.

"We're the ones paying for this 'education' haven't we the right to know what we're getting ourselves into, before it's too late?" they argue.

I reluctantly shlep through Haigus Mall on the way to Herter. My mind is still trying to convince myself that it is indeed ok not to go to class. But in the end it loses and the gateway to my 50 minutes of terror awaits me.

Teachers at these schools retort, "Publishing student responses to my classroom techniques is not in my contract." The teachers see this suggested publication as the guide to an easy "A". Some worry about the effect on their employment status; some worry about their reputations.

I walk into the classroom, fall into my seat — the door opens. My professor (I use the term loosely) strides in with that "I have better things to do with my time" look. He collects our homework with a sigh of disappointment and then picks up his gradebook, as if it were the Bible. I, along with the students around me, grip my desk in nervous anticipation.

Whenever I read about one of these student crusades, I always wondered why there was such a heated argument about it. Why would professors be so strongly against such an idea — unless they were worried about the way they teach? I find the argument that publishing students' evaluations would deter students from taking courses with strict teachers rather lame. Students who are serious about a subject don't pick a course based on whether the prof is hard — but whether they are good.

E.C. THOMAS

His finger runs down the roster, reminding us as he goes along of who has A's, and who invariably doesn't, to randomly select the person who will recite the French of the day. And who will be the lucky winner today?! The grand prize: to be ridiculed and belittled in front of your peers! (please don't call me, please don't call me) Anxiously my eyes twitch. . .ceiling, floor, window, clock. .

I laughed at these debates, wondering why UMass hasn't had one like it. Where do those evaluations go anyway? Who reads them — and if they are indeed read, what effect(s) do they have? Are changes ever implemented? Are teachers who have been rated poorly reprimanded, or fired or anything? For all we know, those evaluations find themselves in the the recycling bin at the end of each semester.

"Remember Add / Drop ends Tuesday. There are plenty of other French classes offered, especially lower levels. Some of you, I believe, can't understand English — I don't know how you expect to understand French. Don't listen to those people at the University who tell you to challenge yourselves, that's ridiculous. Find the easiest courses you can and get A's — your transcript will look good, better than it does now." I want to scream and class isn't even half over.

What ever happened to the right to have an education? It seems such a basic, simple right. Yet nowadays it's a privilege, and an effort to find. I never thought that I'd sit in a classroom at UMass and feel as if I were a weed and my professor was a gardener. Yet every MWF I subject myself to 50 minutes of pure and unfounded judgment. It isn't any professor's responsibility to choose courses for students he has never met, nor is it his responsibility to decide what is good and what is bad for those students. His responsibility is to teach. T-E-A-C-H. Encourage, not discourage. Provoke thought, not intimidate into exile. The classroom is a place for learning, not a forum for degradation.

It is appalling that such a "teacher" would be allowed to continue teaching at any university, let alone this one. I now understand why students fight for publication of teacher evaluations. They would save us time, aggravation, money and quite possibly keep some profs on their toes and others outside the door to the classroom. A mind is a dangerous thing to waste — but it is also a dangerous thing to tamper with.

1:10 p.m. I practically run. I'd feel immense joy that I survived another French class, but I'm left knowing that my sloppy "penmanship is a sign of failure in the world after college."

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

Same old slice of America

"She trained as a Playboy Bunny but never worked as one. That's like saying 'I smoked but I didn't inhale.'" — Ross Perot.

"So, much of it is, in my view, investigated by partisan interests." — Bob Dole, on Bob Packwood's Democratic accusers.

To reiterate, I did not mislead anyone at any point and I have obeyed all laws." — Kimba Wood in letter to the Times.

Nathan CRICK

"A person fills in these natural gaps with what they believe took place, and they believe it." — forensic psychologist Melvin Gravitz on Anita Hill.

"Judge Wood did not provide details of her household employment situation to the White House when asked." — George Stephanopoulos.

"I will not dignify those theories except to assure everyone that I am not imagining the conduct to which I testified." — Anita Hill.

"I hope most of them lose, because they're liberal Democrats." — George Bush on the women candidates for Congress.

"Hill defended herself Monday against depictions of her as a spurned woman, a fantasizer and someone with a martyr complex." — Associated Press article.

Kimba Wood brought all the documents, paid all her taxes, followed all the laws. She never specifically told the White House she had hired an illegal alien because they had never specifically asked and it was irrelevant anyway. When the administration found out, suddenly she lost "that comfort level" that Al Gore treasures so much in Attorney General nominees. So, Mrs. Wood was forced to withdraw with the request that she not speak of the event.

She decided to send a letter to the New York Times anyway, describing what she felt was an unjustified reason for her dismissal. Completely coincidentally the next day it was leaked that she had trained for five days as a Playboy Bunny. Luckily, we had top White House officials ready to ease our concerns.

"I think there's too much hysterical instant analysis going on. We're going to get an Attorney General confirmed and everything will be fine." — top White House official in NY Times.

Bill Clinton is running up against that brick wall we call the bureaucracy, and everything he promised is being whittled down into token gestures and empty speeches. Let's wait on the gay issue. Sorry about the miscalculation in the deficit, no tax cuts today. And Kimba, I'm sorry but we have an ethics code to uphold. You can't be associating with poor immigrants from Trinidad. Be thankful he wasn't Haitian.

The latest example of that immovable machine of government is the high-tech lynching of an uppity woman. Kimba Wood has suffered the fate of having anything to do with Zoe Baird, and they are tragic sufferers of that major character flaw of being non-male. They have been tried and convicted by the old-boy network who remain to whisper in the president's ear that the public just isn't ready to accept such wild things like women who hire immigrants to take care of their children, talk back to judiciary committees, are harassed in the Navy, or refuse to be a senator's handmaiden.

So Bill is going to spend a few years in office, talk a lot, get frustrated, and eventually leave. And soon, we can start the whole process over and nominate the latest candidate for change. We'll shout for something new and make up catchy phrases like, say, Year of the Woman; but the government will only shrug and keep right on going. It has no reason to do otherwise.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

The correct political statement

I found an extremely distressing letter in the editorial columns. Someone used the the song "Sex Type Thing" by the Stone Temple Pilots as an example of the present-day oppression of women [Collegian, Feb. 4].

I would like to evoke the memories of the readers: In 1981, Ozzy Osbourne released an album including the song "Suicide Solution." Censorship groups and parents alike jumped on it as a so-called bad influence on the children of America. Did anyone ask Ozzy what the song was about? No. It was condemned for the name alone. When finally asked, Ozzy answered that it was written in the memory of Bon Scot, of AC/DC, and his slow death due to alcoholism and how this addiction turned into a "suicide solution."

Now the song "Sex Type Thing" can be seen through ignorant eyes as a blow to the female gender. But unfortunately, the lead singer is an avid fighter for women's rights. His song is not a political statement or a personal view of the group, but only a hard look at real life, to show America an example of the serious problem of oppression.

More people should find out the real meaning of the song instead of someone else who makes unsubstantiated claims.

Jeff Schmidt
Sylvan

O'Brien responds to charges

Mr. Gomes [Collegian, Feb. 8] expresses two concerns about Upward Bound, the program from which the federal government withdrew its support last year.

First, he says that he has "found out that a review will be done on how the grant proposal was denied." It did not take much "finding out." The Collegian on Jan. 27 reported accurately that I had appointed Elaine H. Anderson "to conduct an inquiry and prepare a report concerning the University of Massachusetts Upward Bound Program. Anderson is researching why the program was denied federal funding and addressing ways to get funding back."

I think this fully meets the commitment I made to the campus community. I promised "an independent review of the circumstances regarding the loss of federal funds for the Upward Bound Program. The review is to be headed by an independent individual who has the confidence of both the community and the campus administration."

Next Mr. Gomes claims that the $250,000 which I agreed, in the same message, to commit was somehow made up of "services from CCEBMS, BCP and URLRC." He is wrong. I promised to add $250,000, and in a Dec. 3 budget meeting at which funds for the current year were reviewed, I set aside $750,000 to cover three years of support for the program. These were real dollars and none of them utilized "services from CCEBMS" or any other place.

The one point of Mr. Gomes' column with which I concur is that "stupidity is forever, but ignorance can be fixed."

Richard D. O'Brien
Chancellor

What is the purpose of SIRPs?

UMass has created numerous Special Interest Residence Programs (SIRPs) grouping similar people with similar ideas and integrating a sense of unity and acceptance among them. One of the programs is the Two-in-Twenty SIRP, consisting of lesbian, bisexual and gay students, and their allies.

Unfortunately, the purpose of this SIRP has been misinterpreted by many people. It has several functions, including a safe space to live, a sense of community, accessibility to not well-known resources, acknowledgment of the history of LBG people, and creation of friendships and support systems including heterosexual allies.

Many gay, lesbian and bisexual students encounter both blatant and subtle forms of prejudice. Having supportive floormates makes for a less stressful living arrangement. Instead of constantly being on guard, one may concentrate on one's studies. All types of prejudice are rooted in ignorance and fear — the key to harmony is education. SIRPS such as this help to meet that end. Sometime in the near future, there will be an open house on the Two-in-Twenty SIRP — keep an eye on the FYI section of the Collegian.

Valerie Brown
Elizabeth Waller
Northeast

Nineteen members of the Two-in-Twenty SIRP signed this letter.

Women's problems aren't solved

I was angry to see Michael Morrissey's column [Collegian, Jan. 29] about feminists wanting to "screw the world, give them power." But I was saddened when I read Amy Scott's editorial [Collegian, Feb. 4], "I am not a feminist!"

When the National Organization for Women composes its agenda, I'm sure it isn't fighting for the rights of topless women, nor plotting a "fem-bian" takeover. NOW and women's rights groups everywhere work to break down sexual stereotypes, stop gender discrimination in the classroom and find solutions to problems like domestic violence and unequal pay.

I hope Ms. Scott's class will read "Backlash," by Susan Faludi. If not, I urge her to read it on her own. Faludi's book will enlighten women who think "feminism" is a dirty word. Faludi asserts that 12 years of right wing political leadership, the religious right, the media, the fashion industry and the advertising industry have tried to turn women against feminism by twisting its meaning, casting feminists as evil and telling women they have no reason to fight anymore.

The fight for women's rights began only recently. Every new generation of women must, if they want to evolve and be treated fairly, continue to fight. We can't just coast on the efforts of those a generation before us. Rights women today take for granted were won by women not afraid of the word "feminism."

See through the lies and twisted interpretations of "feminism" by those who seek to stifle change. A feminist is anyone — man, woman, conservative, liberal — who values fair treatment and respect for all human beings. It is also any woman who refuses to be treated like a door mat.

Phyllis Gordon
Amherst

■ conference

continued from page 3

universities because we are a public institution, not a private college. It is to our benefit to be involved and to support the party. We do make a difference."

The conference will meet on Saturday, Feb. 27 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in room 162 of the Campus Center. Tickets are $3. Refreshments will be served. People interested should contact Neil Carpenter at the University Democrats for tickets and information.

■ Housing

continued from page 3

Colleen Coleman, an RA in Pierpont and a committee member, said the University must examine the judicial system at UMass.

"If students have a keg, they should be thrown out of housing, instead they get moved to another dorm," said Coleman, who is a junior BDIC major with a concentration in human resources.

Coleman and Gittelsohn said they would like to see the University more pro-active when dealing with racial incidents. Gittelsohn said he felt housing acted slowly with the racial incident last semester in Washington Tower.

Eating Disorder Programs • Spring 1993

Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671 x233 or 234, Clinic IV.

• • •

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671 x233 or 234, Clinic IV.

• • •

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, chronic dieting, or compulsive overeating. Mondays (except holidays) 4:30-6:00 p.m. Campus Center Room Number posted by elevator. No registration necessary. Confidentiality Assured.

For more information on these programs or other eating disorder concerns, call 549-2671 x233 or 234. Confidentiality Assured.

There's A New Way to Get to Mt. Tom.

Here's a hint:

Now it's even easier to ski closer to home! And purchasing a combination bus/lift ticket saves you money, too! Take the Peter Pan bus, any day of the week, from any one of these locations and enjoy great skiing day and night at nearby Mt. Tom:

AMHERST/UMASS, NORTHAMPTON, SPRINGFIELD, BRIDGEPORT, HARTFORD, MIDDLETOWN, MERIDEN, NEW HAVEN

Mt. TOM SKI AREA — Peter Pan Trailways

Route 5, Holyoke, MA • Call Peter Pan for Info: 781-2900

"GRAND" OPENING!! FEB. 13th

Open Now!

SAFE EXCHANGE

Valentine's Day Ideas
❤ Variety T-Shirts ❤
❤ Clever Novelty Gifts ❤
Over 25 Brands of Condoms with Close to 100 Varieties Like:
❤ Beyond Seven ❤ Maxx ❤ Contempo ❤
❤ Sheik ❤ Kamino ❤ Ramses ❤
❤ Lifestyles ❤ Rubber Ducky ❤

256-0771

Plenty of Free Parking • 178 Norht Pleasant Street
Behind Tibetan Treasures • Take Alley to Parking Lot

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE AND WORLD SECURITY STUDIES

PAWSS

and

THE SCHOOL OF PUBLIC HEALTH AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

present:

The Global Dimensions of the AIDS Epidemic

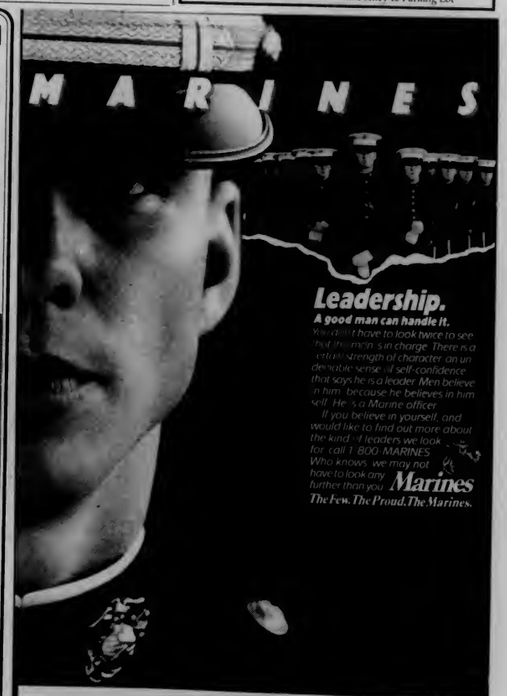
A lecture by:

DR. JONATHAN MANN

Director, International AIDS Center of the Harvard AIDS Institute
Former Director, World Health Organization's Global Program on AIDS

Wednesday, February 10th
7:30 PM
Memorial Hall, the University of Massachusetts

This event is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For more information, please call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.



OPPORTUNITIES AVAILABLE THIS SUMMER FOR FRESHMAN ON UP TO SENIORS. INTERESTED - SEE CAPTAIN BLAZIS AT THE UMASS CAREER FAIR IN THE CAMPUS CENTER ON FEBRUARY 10TH OR STOP BY THE NEWMAN CENTER CAFETERIA BETWEEN 10AM AND 2PM ON FEBRUARY 11TH & 12TH. FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 1-800-255-8762.

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

FUN WITH FLAMES — Sophomores Heather Lind and Mark Moore amuse themselves by igniting sticks of paraffin.

Democrats accuse GOP of nepotism

BOSTON (AP) — The new head of the state Democratic Party says she wants the Ethics Commission and the attorney general to investigate a pledge by Republican Gov. William Weld to find state jobs for GOP activists.

"I'm very offended by it, and I think it's a pathetic way to begin a campaign for re-election," said Joan Menard, chairwoman of the Democratic State Committee.

Weld's controversial comments came at a weekend gathering of GOP city, town and ward committee chairmen. The Boston Herald reported Tuesday.

Weld said he planned to increase efforts to get jobs or state board appointments for everyone serving on the 80-member Republican State Committee.

He also invited job inquiries from the 130 activists attending the session, the Herald reported.

Weld told the group "We had a party with the members of the state committee several weeks ago and I asked my personnel people to find out how many of them either were working in the administration or were on a [state] board, and it was 41 out of 80. And I told them there's no reason why it shouldn't be 80 out of 80 for people who are interested by the end of '94."

Menard, a state representative from Somerset, said officials should investigate whether Weld's comments conflict with state laws that say candidates can't trade government positions for political support.

"This is incredibly blatant politicization of the governor's office," she said.

Menard, the House majority whip, was elected to head the Democrats on the day Weld addressed the Sturbridge conference.

Weld's spokesman, Ray Howell, responded that the Democrats had "cornered the market on patronage."

"For the head of the Democratic Party in Massachusetts, especially one who is a legislator, to complain about political patronage is a joke," he said.

It was "natural," Howell said, for Weld to want to bring "people who share his views" into the government.

Brad Minnick, Weld's deputy chief secretary, who also attended, said, "We're very conscious of staying within the letter of the law... because it is gray."

Menard's complaint would be reviewed, said Tom Samoluk, spokesman for Democratic Attorney General Scott Harshbarger.

Hatch Entertainment

18 & Over Welcome
Monday Feb. 8, 8:30 PM
Big Band Sounds with
Jeff Holmes 16 Piece Jazz Band

Wed., Feb 10, 9 PM
Rock & Roll with
Blue Muse

Thurs., Feb. 11, 9 PM
Monghani
The Best in Alternative Rock
with Special Guest
Synaesthesia

Full Bar
Beer Pitchers and Pizza Slices or Whole

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

A+
... for the teacher

OUTSTANDING TEACHER AWARD

THE COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES invites students and faculty to submit nominations for the 1992-93 award

NOMINATION FORMS ARE DUE MARCH 1
(Available in room 113 Stockbridge Hall or in departmental offices)

Faculty in the following departments are eligible for nomination:

Consumer Studies • Entomology • Food Science
Forestry and Wildlife Management
Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning
Nutrition • Plant and Soil Sciences • Plant Pathology
Resource Economics • Veterinary and Animal Sciences

Spike: not the Messiah

Spike - the man came, he spoke, he went. And for the low, low price of $16,500, we were told what we already knew.

Natasha
SPRINGER

The movie "Malcolm X", had many road blocks, and was hard to create, but, by golly, it got done. Now we can all go home and be happy that we prevailed over racism. No darling, that is not the case, we have a lot more work to do.

I went into the concert hall expecting some history making speech on life, liberty, and the pursuit of an African-American. Instead I heard what I should have expected, a man, a filmmaker, and his way of letting us know that this is only the tip of the iceberg of what we will experience.

Give me a minute to explain. We saw and heard Spike, but what did Spike see and hear, I think he saw a group (a small group) of African-American students, complaining about the way things are and will continue to be. He saw the future just beginning to look at the problems we will face in the space of time we call our lives. Spike came and, in his own way, showed us what we need to know about dealing with problems of today, and the possibilities of what we will achieve.

I think we went in there expecting to hear Malcolm X speak, instead we heard Spike Lee, a man, and a filmmaker. Whether he knew it or not he gave us something we can use. We need to look at several things when discussing the brother, and remember he is a brother. He is one of the most prominent filmmakers of our time. He single-handedly produced, directed, and co-starred in the best film of 1992, and possibly 1993, and the man is Black.

With all Spike's short (not at all trying to be funny) comings, he deserves our respect. Like I told him, I will be working with him, and if, by then, he has not come back to reality, then I'll bring him back myself. Peace!

Natasha Springer is a Collegian correspondent.

The life of Miss Ida B. Wells

Upon the arrival of Black History Month, I pondered to myself the meaning of freedom. I concluded that I didn't know what it was. Freedom to me means inclusion, recognition and respect. As an African-American female on this campus, I realized that I have to constantly fight for those three attributes.

Michele D.
MONTEIRO

Ironically enough, New World Theater's production of Dr. Endesha Ida Mae Holland's "Miss Ida B. Wells" opens with voices answering the same question. Their replies varied, but all inferences were similar: inclusion, recognition and respect. The play opens this way to relate Ida B. Wells' experiences to current day events.

"Miss Ida B. Wells", directed by Roberta Uno is a presentation of Wells' life from 1870 to 1920 which highlights her significant struggles "for the race." Ingrid Askew, stage director and actress, portrays a mature Wells, while actress and director, Nefertiti Burton portrays Ida B. Wells' daughter and Miss Wells in her youth. Both enact an educational monologue which endows the audience with a sense of Wells' revolutionary accomplishments.

Ida B. Wells was an entrepreneur who used her newspapers to abolish slavery. She is revered as a revolutionary because she was the first Black woman to put forth "the race question" in her own newspaper.

In a question and answer session following "Wells", Professor John Bracey of the African-American studies department said that Wells' life was of great significance because she was part of the first free generation of African Americans to fight for full inclusion, recognition and respect. Miss Wells' struggles will not be minimalized or forgotten.

It's 1993, 12 generations since the creation of slavery and we're still fighting.

Michele D. Monteiro is a Collegian correspondent.

COURTESY NEW WORLD THEATER

The POMO AFRO HOMOS (Post-modern African-American Homosexuals).

Black Affairs
Black History Month Special

Thursday 11
Concert: Jazz Duo with Deidre Murray, cellist and Jeanne Lee, vocalist. Augusta Savage Art Gallery, 7 p.m.

Social Event: "Chocolate Mix: The Dating Game" - a Love Connection for African-American students. A dating game and social in the spirit of Black History Month and Valentine's Day. Valentine cards will be provided. Campus Center room 101, 7 p.m.
Sponsored by: BMCP. For info. and contestant sign-up call 545-2426.

17 Concert:

Thursday 18
Dramatic Reading: Given by Frances Sharp in the Augusta Savage Art Gallery, 7 p.m.

19 Lecture
Theater

Saturday 20
Theater: Dark Fruit: Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.
Tickets $3/students and $5/general public
Sponsored by: New World Theater, the Program for Gay and Lesbian Concerns and the LBGA.

21 Hair and Fashion Show

Monday 22
Concert: Tribute To Bob Marley & Peter Tosh. Student Union Ballroom, 6 p.m. Roger Steffens and Loose Caboose with special guests.

Tuesday 23
Lecture: "Think and Grow Rich" - A lecture on Entrepreneurship by Dennis Kimbro. Campus Center Auditorium, 8 p.m.
Sponsored by: BMCP, Amherst College, Hampshire College and UMASS School of Management.

25 Concert
Reading

Friday 26
Theatre: "Joe Turner's Come And Gone" Rand Theatre, 8 p.m.
$3/students and $5/general public.
Sponsored by: New World Theatre.

27 Lecture

Sunday 28
Celebration: "In Celebration of Black Women" presents the 2nd Annual Celebration Market Place. Amherst Regional High School, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. A Showcase of African-American Women's Creative Talents.

Throughout The Month...

Art Exhibition:

Exhibit:
10 a.m. Monday - Friday

True history frees your mind

History can be defined as the collective past of a given aspect of our world, often focusing on the collective past of various peoples. In the case of African Americans, this history is very broad, lengthy, and rich, but unfortunately, much of it has also been distorted and destroyed throughout the course of time.

Martin F.
JONES

On February 12, 1926, Carter G. Woodson, a Black historian, founded Negro History Week, later to become Black History Month. Black History Month, and Black history in general, is of great importance to Black liberation. Without knowledge of their history, a people will forever be enslaved mentally. It is clear, then, that our struggle rests upon our ability to reclaim and redefine our cultural heritage. A tree without roots cannot stand, nevermind grow. Eventually, it will fall over and die.

In this new age of technological advances in communications, the latest battle is that for the control of information. Why? Because information is what properly fuels our ability to act to change our environment. Before one is qualified to repair an automobile, one must know everything there is to know about the mechanics of that automobile. Before a doctor can develop a cure or vaccine for a disease, that doctor must research and acquire all the accumulated knowledge about that disease. The doctor must also know of every other attempt to produce that cure or that vaccine and why it failed. When this information is acquired the doctor is still at the very beginning. All he has done was prepare himself for the first step.

This principle also applies fully to Black Liberation. Until we realize that any revolution must begin with the liberation of the mind and intellect, we are doomed to failure. Presently, there are not enough of us who have the patience or desire to undertake this task. Watching a movie about Malcolm X is not enough to gain a true understanding of his political philosophies. Read his speeches (Malcolm X Speaks, By Any Means Necessary, etc.) and then you'll get the whole story.

Turn off the television for a while and read. Martin Lawrence may make you laugh, but there's nothing funny about being ignorant to your heritage. Reading is the key towards self-empowerment.

Form study groups. People around here have no problem sitting around and gossiping about personal business. As soon as we are willing change the topics and engage in some real discussion on our condition, then we can make some progress.

Go to the University library. On the twenty-fifth floor are the actual archives of W.E.B. DuBois, one of the greatest intellectuals, White or Black, that the world has seen in this century. This collection of his writings was sought by scores of universities all over the world, and we are so fortunate to have access to such a great treasure. W.E.B. DuBois died fighting for our liberation and left his work behind as a tool for us to continue the struggle. It should be used to its greatest capacity.

We as human beings define our entire existence by our culture. It is our culture and our history that makes us truly unique. It's much more than just skin color. It's about self- determination. And as our public school system continues to maintain the philosophy of white supremacy, we must continue to educate ourselves and undo what Carter G. Woodson termed, "the miseducation of the Negro."

Let us not continue to fool ourselves into thinking that Bill Clinton is going to free us. He couldn't even if he wanted to. We must also stop viewing the acquisition of material gain as the true measure of success and freedom. It is clear, ultimately, that Black liberation in America must begin with a cultural and intellectual revolution. As long as the masses are ignorant, the powers that be will remain firmly in place, not because they are omnipotent, but because they remain unchallenged.

In order to mount this challenge, we have to raise our collective consciousness as a people. Only then will we be prepared to wage a real struggle for our liberation. As Malcolm X once said, "Wake up to your history and your heritage, and then you'll get results!"

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian staff member

'Pomo Afro Homos'

By KRISTIN ST. JOHN
Collegian Staff Writer

New World Theater will be presenting two shows performed by Pomo Afro Homos (Post-modern African-American Homosexuals). These shows will be focusing on issues such as homophobia within the black community, racism within the gay community, and the insensitivity of various AIDS activist groups regarding gay Black men..

Through dance, music and monologue Fierce Love presents a photo album of determination, difference and "dish" that captures the unique perspectives of black gay life and explores the disputed alliances black gay men often confront.

Dark Fruit reclaims pages of memory of a black gay childhood in sketches that are as much about sexual hunger as they are about sexism, racism and the lack of a black gay community.

The Pomo Afro Homos are Brian Freeman, Djola Bernard Branner, and Eric Gupton, all of whom met in San Francisco after performing solo and in other theater ensembles.

They will perform Fierce Love on February 19 and Dark Fruit on February 20. Both performances will be at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Tickets are $5, $3 for students and are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office.

The Friday night performance of Fierce Love will be a benefit performance for ARISE for Social Justice, a low income rights, membership-based organization whose purpose is to educate, organize and empower low income people.

Pomo Afro Homos is co-sponsored by New WORLD Theater, the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance (LBGA), Academic Support Services, Black Student Union, Iota Phi Theta, Phi Beta Sigma and the W.E.B. DuBois Department of African-American Studies.

Our Young Black Men educates

By KRISTIN ST. JOHN
Collegian Staff

"A strange place does not have peace", the actual suicide note written by Playwright James Chapman opened up the eyes of the audience for Our Young Black Men Are Dying - And Nobody Seems To Care at Bowker Auditorium last night.

Presented in small one man skits, the cast, including Joseph Damme, Jay Lewis, Stephen Powell and Dennis Ivy, gave an emotionally charged and powerful performance as our young Black men dead and dying.

Portraying a variety of characters such as a homeless man, a crack addict, a convicted rapist to even a young boy wanting to know "why" the ensemble from Our Young Black Men... kept the audience's undivided attention throughout the hour and half play.

The skits offered the problem and perhaps even a solution to the death of America's Black man. All the while giving the audience an opportunity to think about what they can do as a collective to "stop the madness".

"Nat Turner" opened up questions as to why the Black history taught in our public schools wasn't the whole truth. One cast member asked the "teacher" why they never mentioned that Nat Turner died for the struggle of the African-American slaves, and he had a smile when "the White man hung him".

The most disturbing skit was "Danny-O". This followed the adventures of a young man on Christmas Eve. After stealing a collection bucket from a street corner Santa, Danny buys some pot, food, a gun and rents a room for the night. And, because nobody cares, kills himself on Christmas Day.

To end this powerful production, three cast members stood on the stage reading the actual names of young Black men who have died either from suicide, drive by shootings or even drug addictions.

Our Young Black Men . . . is a disturbing, yet enlightening, play that should be viewed by people of all colors, ages and backgrounds. It leaves you questioning, but also educated, of the uphill battle our young Black men in today's society have to fight.

Statistics: faceless numbers that perpetuate Racism

Yesterday while looking in the library, I had come across a book called "The sins or evils of integration", by Rev. Louis E. Dailey. In it Dailey talks about why its wrong to integrate the schools. In his book Dailey uses the high drop out rate of Afro-Americans, the rate of illegitimate births, and cited how the Afro-Americans of his area did not attempt to raise money for their schools in the area, hence the level of education of the Negro children. Not once did Dailey in his book try to explain why he thought these circumstances existed, beyond the poor moral character of Afro-Americans, but he did take the time to cite that two of his grandparents were in on the Boston Tea Party.

After reading this book I was struck by the resemblance to some of the sociology courses I had taken. Courses in which similar statistics were thrown at me and not explained, but I was expected to learn them. Statistics like the high drop out rate, illegitimate birth rate, crime, etc.

Penny
CAMERON

Struck to close to home by the resemblance I had to ask myself, "Have we come as far as we think we have from the days when Afro-Americans were just generally seen as being of a morally low character". I find myself being forced to answer no, we have not. Everyday we are taught about the "problems" of our race and the positive is left for extra-curricular classes that is not a requirement to take, in effect we are being set up to fail, learning that most Afro-Americans never make it to college and if they do then its either because of Affirmative Action or sports.

This type of behavior only inspires social ignorance in people of other races and in Afro-Americans themselves. In order to truly erase racism through education the statistics of "social problems" should not be taught without trying to delve into reasons why these problems exists. Dailey never considered once in his book that the reason why the Afro-Americans in his area never contributed to their children education was that they didn't have the funds to, that the children of the "negroes" in his area had to drop out of school to help support their families, or that poverty always inspires high illegitimacy rates. It seems that it is just easier to spew out empty statistics than to solve the problem, in essence, putting a band-aid solution on a gun shot problem.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Spike Lee's visit to the Fine Arts Center kicked off Black History Month at the University of Massachusetts.

Especially For You
Haircare & Beauty Boutique
Now at
233 N. Pleasant St., Downtown Amherst Carriage Shops
OPTIMUM • MORNING MAGIC • LUSTER'S
BRAIDS & WEAVES HUMAN & SYNTHETIC & BEADS & MUCH MUCH MORE
Come Down & Browse Around or Call 549-8316 To Place Your Order
FREE Delivery Within The Five-College Area
Especially For You
Hair Care & Beauty Supply Specializing in African American Hair Care Products

NOMMO
– The Power of the Spoken and Written Word –
NOMMO NEWS is currently accepting articles concerning the community. Editorial pieces, Black History Month event reviews, poetry and photos are due February 18 for the March 1 issue. Copies of original work may be submitted to 103 New Africa House. For further information call 546-1036 or 545-5741.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
BLACK STUDENT UNION
The UMASS Black Student Union will be holding a general assembly meeting Thursday, February 11, in room 917 Campus Center. This very brief meeting will be the first for the 1993 spring semester. For more information, call 6-1230 or 6-1688.

BELOW IS A PROGRESS REPORT OF MULTICULTURAL ACTIVITIES which was published in December in the Campus Chronicle, after students had already left for break, and in January. It is being published again so that students who may not have seen the list may do so now. Reports, issued from the Chancellor's office, will be written each month. The intent of the reports, and the essays, by different faculty or staff members, is not only to follow agreements reached between the administration and ALANA students, but also to list the efforts of the community at large in working towards a truly multicultural campus.

MULTICULTURAL MUSINGS

For some time, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst has been committed to the idea of a multicultural campus. Our most recent mission statement states that "our goal is to achieve a multicultural campus where men and women of diverse racial, social and economic groups play major roles and, in a spirit of mutual respect, come to understand and appreciate the variety of perspectives that diversity makes possible." Even a cursory glance at the nightly news reveals the proclivity of groups to differentiate themselves from other groups and then to act with great hostility and violence towards those who are not members of their groups. Why do we believe that we have a chance of combined pluralism and community in the face of so many negative examples, even in our own society?

For one thing, universities share a foundation of values, civic as well as academic, which can be supportive of the ideal of a multicultural community. In the University we know that we do not have to be alike or agree on everything provided we share certain fundamental scholarly values and principles. The acquisition of truth is thought to be an open process involving the collision of ideas, beliefs and theories. We expect individuals to have different views on the truth and we expect to acquire a clearer sense of the truth as a consequence of debate in the marketplace of ideas. A commitment to the application of reason to human affairs and to judge people and ideas on the basis of merit binds us together as it permits and encourages a multiplicity of ideas and peoples. The outside world may be segregated both as to groups and ideas but the very conception of the university would seem to require pluralism.

Can we reasonably expect the university to be "better" than the society around it. We recognize that a state university, to some extent, is a microcosm of the state. We are frequently admonished to come out of our ivory tower and to grapple with the problems of the real world. But the fact that we are expected to reach out to the real world does not require that we accept the prejudices of that world as a given. We recognize that much of our student body comes to us from segregated communities who have little experience with multiculturalism. This is a shortcoming to be overcome by our educational processes just as surly as we expect our students to learn enough English, History and Math to become functioning members of our society.

Much has been made recently of the University's role as an engine of economic development. I would urge that we also have an obligation to produce students who will make a contribution to civic development. The real world that our students will enter is one whose racial and ethnic profile is changing dramatically. The United States is becoming one of the most pluralistic countries in the world. In addition, we are also developing a greater dependency on other nations of the world for our economic well being. The notion of the "global village" is a rich metaphor for a future that will require our students to compete in very diverse world, one in which our dominant race is clearly a minority, and a world which requires us to build bridges to cultures that are different from our own. This is the world of the 21st Century that we must prepare our students to understand and relate to.

How best can we create an educational program that will prepare our students for these new challenges?

First, we have to capitalize on our racial, ethnic and cultural diversity as providing an excellent opportunity for all of us to enter the world of diversity. To accomplish this, we need to increase the participation of those groups who are not adequately represented on our faculty and staff and among our student body. Let it be understood that we do this in part because this is the equitable and just thing to do. We do it in part because in a knowledge based economy we can ill afford to waste the talents of the fastest growing groups in our society because of stereotypical thinking about their potential and capabilities. And we do it in part because it is in our self interest to do so as a state and as a country. If we are to compete in this diverse global economy, we have to understand, appreciate and learn from the multiplicity of perspectives that are embodied in the very concept of a multicultural world. We can and should begin this process at home by increasing the numbers of and interaction with the cultures that make up the mosaic of American society. This understanding would seem to be a prerequisite to the broader understanding of the world's diversity that all American groups, minority and majority, will have to learn to appreciate.

THE MULTICULTURAL CAMPUS

There are not many examples in the world "where men and women of diverse racial, social and economic groups play major roles and, in a spirit of mutual respect, come to understand and appreciate the variety of perspectives that diversity makes possible." Even a cursory glance at the nightly news reveals the proclivity of groups to differentiate themselves from other groups and then to act with great hostility and violence towards those who are not members of their groups. Why do we believe that we have a chance of combined pluralism and community in the face of so many negative examples, even in our own society?

PLURALISM THE STATISTICAL COMMUNITY

The multicultural campus is one which provides access to a variety of groups at all levels. There is a tendency to judge the quality of a multicultural community by the numbers of these groups. It is common to expect that the size of the groups should be related to their numbers in the community at large. The relevant community is not the same for each category. For students, we measure the appropriate number of particular groups by their percentage in the population at large. Presumably, in a state university, the nature of the population of the state sets some limits on the possibilities. In Massachusetts, we have 13% minorities in the high school graduation pool. The number of women is about 50%. With regard to students, this university has reached a gender parity and is close to achieving parity for our minority population. We hope to exceed the minority totals and have pledged to get to 20% of the freshman class over the next several years. To sustain these numbers we need to focus on retention. If we cannot retain the minority students we recruit with great difficulty, we will never be able to achieve our goals. Student retention requires that faculty devote more quality time to activities which may not be high on the priority list - advising, counseling, visiting the dorms, teaching in living and learning environments, making the large university more intimate and hospitable.

The recruiting of faculty is based not upon the population of the state, but upon availability pools by discipline. We now have some 21% women among the tenure track faculty and 11% minorities. We have a long way to go with regard to women and we are probably forbidden to set a target for minorities which is higher than the availability pools. Nevertheless, during the past five years, we have averaged some 23% of minority hires, half coming through the Special Opportunity fund. The problem here, too is retention, and again, the faculty has a crucial role to play. First, it is the faculty who establish the climate in the departments which can help or hurt the development of faculty. Is mentoring a high priority for the senior faculty? What can the faculty do to assist all of the untenured faculty to reach their full potential? Among other things, the senior faculty may have to assume a greater role in the service activities of the department and the campus in order to enable the untenured faculty to devote themselves to research and teaching. This is a particularly important factor for minorities since they are likely to be called upon serve on numerous committees to achieve balance and they are expected to help the university solve its racial problems.

The creation of statistical community is a necessary, though not a sufficient condition for the establishment of a multicultural campus. The numbers matter in a variety of ways. There is a body of research that suggest that the quality of life improves for minorities as their proportion increases. Higher percentages influence the degree to which minorities can achieve equal treatment and also contribute to the process by which the majority can overcome stereotypical thinking. People of color clearly feel more secure on campus where they are more than tokens. Their sense of physical security is enhanced when there is a critical mass that they can look to for support. Sufficient numbers also enable the group to organize to come together to celebrate their heritage, and may contribute to self identity and self esteem.

As important as the appropriate numbers are for some purposes, the creation of a multicultural community in all of its aspects requires much more than mere percentages, although student groups have tended to focus upon increases numbers and secure space.

We recognize that some of our students and some of our faculty and staff come form segregated communities and have limited contact with diversity until they come to the University. Nor have they internalized the shared values and norms of the university which emphasize the tolerance of diverse views and the commitment to civil discourse. Particularly with students in the freshman year, the very diversity that we have tried to promote can lead to a clash of cultures accompanied by misunderstanding, harassment, bigotry and even violence. As a consequence, minority groups feel unsafe and feel the need for sanctuaries that they control. The campus has responded by creating cultural centers and other spaces which enable ethnically diverse groups to celebrate their culture without challenge. While this is understandable, it may make the achievement of a real multicultural community more difficult to attain . If minority groups self segregate, that may contribute to the misunderstandings that fostered racism in the first place. The major problem, then, is how to create community in the face of what may be called "Balkanization." We hope that the programs that we create to promote ethnic pride do not deteriorate into forms of ethinic chauvinsm which undermine our attempts at community building. The challenge, then, is not simply the successful recruiting and retention of diverse groups, but the building of a community "in which people learn to respect and value one another for their differences, yet, at the same time, are drawn together by certain fundamental values that they share in common as scholars and as citizens." Only in this kind of community can we hope to enjoy the full fruits of multiculturalism and only in this kind of community can we expect the majority as well as the minorities to participate with enthusiasm.

Written by Provost GLEN GORDON

PROGRESS REPORT REGARDING THE MULTICULTURAL CAMPUS

11/9/92	Massachusetts Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Right released its report on Campus Tensions in Massachusetts: Searching for Solutions in the Nineties. This was a full-day meeting which was open to the public.
11/13/92	Provost requests Deans Edwards and Berger to assemble faculty group to make recommendations about possible changes in curriculum to reflect multiculturalism.
11/16/92	Equipment requests from El Centro Latino funded.
11/19/92	The AHORA organization (the Registered Student Organization of Latino & Latina Students) sponsored a booth in the Campus Center in an effort to inform students about Puerto Rican culture.
11/20/92	Chancellor, Provost, department chairs conducted a retreat on multiculturalism at Mt. Holyoke College. Topics included: "The role of Deans and Chairs in Establishing a Multicultural Campus," and "Undergraduate Education and Multiculturalism."
11/20/92	The Office of Minority Graduate Studies and Research and the Faculty Advisory Committee is considering the request to include minority students on its Fellowship Review Committee.
11/20/92	A specific plan was requested by the Chancellor regarding Staff Training and Development; on 12/8/92 a draft plan was provided and is under review.
11/23/92	Puerto Rican Night in the Dining Commons
11/30/92	Training on techniques for non-violent confrontation provided to 90% of all RAs. All RAs will be trained by the end of December.
12/1/92	The Institute for the Healing of Racism held its final meeting of the semester.
12/2/92	A motion was passed at the Undergraduate Student Senate to support mandatory changes in General Education requirements, such as a mandatory course for all first year students to help fight discrimination and foster multiculturalism.
12/2/92 12/10/92	Graduate Student Organization sponsored two sessions to discuss GEO and racism (various topics)
12/3/92	Following the Board of Trustees meeting in Boston there was agreement to have a meeting of trustees with students in Amherst in order to provide a more convenient meeting place for ALANA students to review the litigation rights of the Legal Services Center.
12/3/92	Rainbow Patrol began its effort to curtail hate crimes on campus by conducting foot patrols.
12/4/92	Chancellor and others met with the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance and agreed to form a Chancellor's Task Force that "shall act as a watchgroup for GLB-related issues, incidents and curriculum and shall be a permanent advisory committee to the Chancellor."
12/9/92	Project Pulse administered a survey on students' perception of the cultural diversity requirement. Results will be published in future press releases.
12/11/92	An information packet addressing "Diversity and Complexity in the Classroom and "Teaching in a Diverse Environment" was distributed to the Continuing Education faculty.
12/11/92	Chancellor writes to CCEMBS, BCP, and Asian Cultural Center to set up meetings concerning equipment and operating budgets.
12/13/92	The Malcolm X Center hosted its annual Kwanza Celebration
12/14/92	The second Escort Service van, committed to by the Chancellor, began operating.
12/19/92	Provost asks Deans Berger and Jackson and Associate Chancellor Pearson to be a committee recommending changes and annual reports by faculty to reflect contributions to multiculturalism.
12/23/92	Funding provided to restore the Advocates of Women of Color Program in the Everywoman's Center.
1/5/93	Chancellor appointed Dr. Elaine Anderson to conduct an inquiry into the loss of the University's Upward Program funding.
1/11/93	Assessment of training needs for police officers will be conducted during the next two weeks.
1/20/93	Chancellor asked vice chancellor of university relations, Dan Melley, to have a wall calendar designed for the coming year that includes days of religious observance.
1/28/93	The Attorney General's office sponsored its first training conference designed for campus police officers and administrators entitled, "Current Issues in Campus Law Enforcement."

THIS IS A PAID ADVERTISEMENT

Arts & Living

Essential Buckwheat Zydeco on CD

Eleven greatest hits from the masters of southwest soul and 'killer accordion riffs'

By GARY DEANE
Collegian Correspondent

Menagerie: The Essential Zydeco Collection
Buckwheat Zydeco
Mango/Island Records

For many people, their first exposure to zydeco music was probably in the film, The Big Easy. The soundtrack featured the latest sounds from the music-rich state of Louisiana, a state that is a virtual breeding ground for American music, having already spawned jazz and blues in the beginning of the century.

In the 1950s, a young accordionist named Clifton Chenier single-handedly re-invented zydeco music, distinguishing it from Cajun music by incorporating blues and R & B elements with the music indigenous to southwestern Louisiana's French-speaking blacks.

At this time, Stanley "Buckwheat" Dural, Jr. was bumping around the South, playing organ in a number of soul and R & B nightclubs as a sideman. By the 1970s, he dabbled with his own funk band and rode his increasing popularity into Chenier's own "Red Hot Louisiana Band."

Buckwheat brought a solid, soulful sound to the band while absorbing Chenier's creative juices. It was with Chenier that Buckwheat became fully devoted to zydeco music, and after a few years they both agreed Buckwheat would be better off heading his own band, as zydeco music was slowly permeating the mainstream.

In 1979, Buckwheat Zydeco was formed and they soon released their debut album, Take It Easy Baby. The album was a decent start for the band, but they had difficulty convincing themselves they were a legitimate zydeco band, preferring to stick with the blues-based sound of Buckwheat's roots. The band would have plenty of time to work on their own style, switching to a larger label (Rounder) and releasing a total of four albums in the early '80s.

By 1987, it was clear the band was working hard to make it big and signed with Island Records, becoming the first zydeco band on a major label. Their debut album, On A Night Like This, quickly earned critical acclaim and a Grammy nomination. The band toured with U2, Eric Clapton (who also played on the group's second Island record, Taking It Home), and Robert Cray, exposing their hard-hitting, horn and guitar-powered sound to rock and blues fans the world over.

Many bands suffer a quick burnout after such heavy exposure, but Buckwheat Zydeco's third album on Island proved that the band was hot to record when they got back into the studio. Where There's Smoke, There's Fire, released in 1990, continued the killer accordion riffs and solos from Buckwheat as the rhythm section burned up once again, highlighted by a fun and inspired take of Hank William's "Hey Good Lookin'" featuring Dwight Yoakam.

Simply stated, Menagerie gathers the eleven tunes from the band's three Island records, which finds them at their peak. It's a great album to begin your zydeco collection, and just in time for Mardi Gras. And that's even if you haven't seen The Big Easy.

Buckwheat Zydeco

COURTESY MANGO RECORDS

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL

GRANT DEADLINE

FRIDAY, FEB. 19

Single Project/Event Grants for music, theater, visual art and design, performance art, literature, film and video, and other arts related events.

PROPOSALS ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS

APPLICATIONS GUIDANCE/INFORMATION STOP AT STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE OR UMASS ARTS COUNCIL 203 HASBROUCK OR CALL 545-0202

WANTED: An Arts & Living Associate. (a paid position.)
Please call 545-1361 for more info.

COLLEGIAN CONCERT SWEEPSTAKES

TWO WINNERS WILL BE CHOSEN BY RANDOM DRAWING!

WIN A PAIR OF FREE TICKETS TO

THELONIOUS MONSTER

PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB • MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15

TWO WINNERS WILL BE CHOSEN BY RANDOM DRAWING!

THELONIOUS MONSTER/OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM

Name:_____

Phone #:_____

RULES: Must be at least 18 years old to enter. Tickets are non-refundable. Drawing to be held on Thursday, Feb. 11, 1993. No entries will be recieved after 3:30pm on 2/11/93. Collegian Staff are not eligible to enter. Winners will be contacted by telephone. Drop off entries at Collegian business window, 113 Campus Center (basement), UMass , Amherst. Winners are responsible for picking up tickets at the Collegian office before 3:30pm on Friday, Feb. 12. Only ona entry per person will be accepted. Only official entry form from newspaper will be accepted.

Looking for New Career Opportunities?

Register Now to Attend our February Sessions

Workshop:

▷ Saturday, Feb. 13, 1:30-5:00 p.m.:
Organize and Implement Non-Profit Job Campaigns
w/ Dennis T. Baylor, ACCESS,
(publisher of Community Jobs)
Director Career Development Services,

Seminars:

▷ Saturday, Feb. 20, 10:30-1:00 and 2:30-5:00
Careers in Writing and International Media

▷ Saturday, Feb. 27, 1:30-4:00
Careers in Teaching

Avanti is a general Career Services firm, specialized in non-profit and international careers. We provide resume advisement, career counseling, a computerized Employment Databank, an extensive library, and a variety of other services. Contact Avanti for information on any of our services.

Avanti: (413) 584-8409
17 New South Street
Sullivan Square
Northampton, MA 01060

AVANTI Career Management

PLEASE RECYCLE THIS COLLEGIAN. THANK YOU

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK CITY
Roundtrip One Way
London $305 $155
Paris $398 $219
Costa Rica $490 $245
Guatemala City $470 $235
Mexico City $360 $180
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Athens/Istanbul $630 $315
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs-Immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC
Call for Spring Break Now!

ALL BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
QUARTER POUNDERS
BURGERS • HOT DOGS
FRIES • ONION RINGS
PHILLY CHEESE STKS
SHAKES • FLOATS
PETE'S BURGERS
ROUTE 9 HADLEY 585-0241
ONE MILE WEST OF THE HAMPSHIRE MALL

■ Scott's Shots

continued from page 16

find what is, to some THE REAL CAGE.

Outdating Curry Hicks' version of The Cage by some 80 years, this court has actual steel grating to protect the windows which lay underneath each hoop. The base line is not a line at all, instead it is a wall - at both ends. Crash the boards and you risk the prospect of resembling a flame-broiled burger.

A routine visit on any Tuesday night or Saturday morning (haven't made one of those yet) and the brand of ball being played is just what Naismith had in mind. It's full-court size actually equals a half-court and fast-breaks consist of three, maybe four steps, but in its truest form, it is basketball.

Players come in all shapes and sizes and the bottom line is first to seven, wins. No three-point line, no shot clock and no "win by two." It's THE CAGE and I'm just happy to be a part of it.

• Of course after a good two hours of running, one retires to the inn for some liquid replenishment. The pool game is coming along slowly these days, a direct correlation to the quickness of the flowing beverages. Mosconi's safe for another week. The Inn Crowd has adopted Cal's motto of "Refuse to Lose" and other pool teams should take notice.

• At least for now, until he officially retires, Mullins will be known as "The House that Milt Built," in honor of our friend and confidant, Milton Cole.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 16

Julie Magid, a mid-fielder from Dallas, said she is leaning towards choosing UMass over Hartford, George Mason and Maryland.

Magid cited her ability to distribute the ball as a strength of her game.

"When I visited, I really liked the team," Magid said. "I also liked the little town of Amherst. I came just when the leaves were starting to change - it's a lot different from Dallas.

"I hope to decide soon but I'm leaning toward UMass."

April Parker, a forward from Brookfield, Conn., is definitely coming to the Bay State next season, she just is not sure whether it will be at Boston College or UMass.

"There is no comparison soccer-wise," Parker, a two-time All-State selection, said. "UMass is just awesome. I saw the players working out and they were incredible.

"Also Coach Rudy is the nicest coach I've ever meet."

Parker, who scored 23 goals last season, said her one-on-one ability was the strength of her game.

Another player who may head to Amherst is Elizabeth Rutherford, a forward out of Merrimack. Rutherford, another sharpshooter, said she liked the size of UMass.

"I'm not sure what I want to do, but there are a lot of majors up there, so everything is available," Rutherford said.

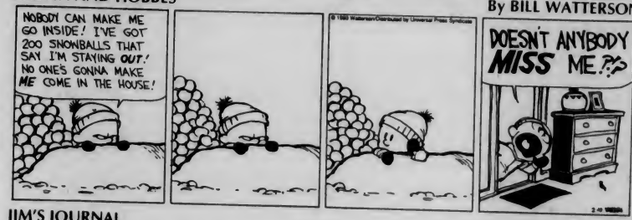
SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888
SAME DAY DELIVERY

BANANADAMA fabulous frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk Amherst 253-2774
186 Main Street Northampton 586-9659

"Don't Look Like A Ghost, Look Your Most!"
TANNING
at Carol's Headquarters
Intro Special: 8 Sessions for $29.95
115 Russell St. • Rt.9 Hadley • 584-9948

Mather Career Center Presents
The Annual University-wide
CAREER FAIR
Wednesday, February 10, 1993
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Prospective Employers in Many Fields
All Majors welcome!
Bring your resumé
Collect business cards and meet valuable contacts
Sign up for campus interview, job referral and alumni network programs
Five College Students Welcome

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON



JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Just as Dale entered the clearing and discovered, standing together, the Loch Ness Monster, Bigfoot and Jackie Onassis, his camera jammed.

Quote of the Day

"Jeff, team get Dave."
– A full sentence completed by communication senior Reid Russell.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Domestic harmony can be restored, if marital partners show more awareness of each other's needs. A shared hobby provides a common meeting ground.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Teamwork helps you promote a special cause this week. Romance moves into high gear. A new business opportunity may lead to record financial gains. Your natural ebullience comes to the fore.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Stick to your regular work routine today and carefully think through new business moves. A loved one may surprise and delight you. Following an impulse could make a dream come true.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Exercise more restraint where spending is concerned. Boredom may tempt you to lay out more cash than you can really afford. Higher ups may be more demanding than usual.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sensing the right thing to do, you instinctively do it. Others admire your dedication to justice and fair play. Stick to business during office hours.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are active in your job and get plentiful assistance from those behind the scenes. Avoid questionable expenses. If you enjoy entertaining at home, do it more often!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Use your powers of observation to find out what is really going on at work. Loyal friends share ideas and wisdom. Be willing to take a leap into the unknown.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finishing old business or clearing away clutter is a smart way to prepare for the new year. Someone you meet this week is destined to play a key role in your future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Domestic matters command your attention. You are eager to reorganize and get things in order. Do not despair if your partner has different priorities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It is hard not to feel imprisoned by certain job or family constraints. Yet there are benefits, and attention, and more money than expected. Do not let someone's stubbornness confuse you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Gear yourself up to complete a tough project. Someone in a position of authority will look out for your interests. Tonight, a mystical as well as personal love is highlighted.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Unusual ideas about money or spending deserve further study. Your family is a source of satisfaction. An older relative offers both reassurance and affection. Do not let this person down.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

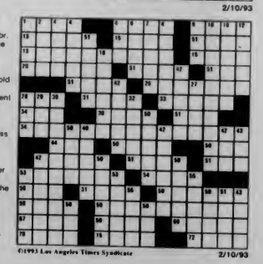
ACROSS
1 Become furious
5 Cab
9 Church nook
13 South American range
15 Fairy-tale character
16 Coffee and tea services
17 Naval command, with 65 Across
19 Bicker
20 Herb of the mint family
21 Ego
23 Teen lead-in
24 Gardner of mystery
26 BBs and buckshot
28 Part of HRH
31 Salts
33 Brings up
34 Bullring shout
35 Snarl
37 Port. coins
38 Rebuff
44 Before
45 Cinders
46 — vs Wade
47 Hair color
49 Catchall abbr.
51 Society page word
52 Used an explosive
54 Enough, of old
56 Scoundrel
57 Indian garment
59 Keaton and others
63 Crocus
65 See 17 Across
67 Night sign
68 Corrupt
69 Fracas
70 Author Ferber
71 Costner role
72 Ponselle of the opera

DOWN
1 One of the musical "B"s
2 Simply
3 March date
4 Rent
5 Questioner's word
6 Ripens
7 Inch along
8 Astronomer Johannes
9 Silly one
10 Insignificant amount
11 Turns on the ignition
12 — Park, Colorado
14 Scornful sound
18 Liquid sound
22 Runs off
25 Sea eagles
27 Criticize severely
28 Swine
29 Whitney, the inventor
30 Discovery
32 Fabulous fur
36 Rasp
39 Cupid
40 Camp covers
41 Kenya's neighbor
42 Enemy
43 Dues
47 Sounded like a trumpet
48 Stun the ears
50 Meat cuts
52 Pickle juice
53 Took the wheel
55 Ibs or agret, for example
58 Spring flower
60 1949 pact
61 Newts
62 Portico
64 Heraldry determinant: Abbr.
66 Overhead trains

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

R	I	N	G	■	B	A	N	A	■	S	N	A	W
A	R	E	A	■	A	R	E	N	A	■	H	A	L	O
B	A	R	D	O	F	A	V	O	N	■	O	N	E	R
A	D	V	E	N	T	■	I	N	T	E	N	S	E	D
T	E	D	■	■	E	■	■	O	R	E	■	■	■	■
■	■	■	K	E	R	O	S	E	N	E	■	E	A	T
E	L	D	E	R	■	V	A	N	■	C	A	B	L	E
L	E	A	P	S	■	I	N	N	E	R	■	I	N	N
S	E	A	M	■	■	N	E	E	■	T	R	A	N
A	R	C	■	O	P	E	R	A	T	E	D	■	■	■
■	■	■	C	A	R	L	■	O	A	D	■	E	D	S
B	O	L	S	T	E	R	S	■	E	A	D	O	W
E	N	D	S	■	B	A	R	K	■	T	I	N	E
A	C	H	E	■	E	S	T	E	S	■	E	L	E	A
N	E	A	L	■	P	A	N	T	■	H	E	E	R

2/10/93



©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/10/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Michael Webber
Copy Editor ..... Christina Rothwell
PhotoTechnician ..... Andrea Migliassi
Production Supervisor ..... Nicole Dumas
Production ..... Teresa Giammattei, Dana Dorman

Menu

LUNCH
BBQ Beef on a Bun
Tuna Melts
BASICS LUNCH
Hearty Latin Stew
Tuna Melts

DINNER
Rotini & Meat Sauce
Cheese Spinach Strudel
BASICS DINNER
Rotini & Garden Veggies
Cheese Spinach Strudel

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

UMass men's gymnastics team hosts Springfield

By ANDREW BRYCE
Collegian Correspondent

Head coach Roy Johnson and his University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team are excited. Finally in the confines of Boyden Gymnasium, the Minutemen host Springfield College tonight at 7 p.m. in what Johnson promises will be an exciting meet.

"This will be a great meet," said Johnson. "This is what you look for in an athletic competition. There is great parity between the new teams, and there always has been."

Despite the parity between UMass and Springfield, UMass has won the last six dual meets in which they have faced each other in the last six years. This year, Springfield comes into this meet with a conference record of 1-1 and 4-2 overall, while UMass is 2-0 in conference action and 5-2 overall.

UMass senior captain Steve Christensen is ranked fifth nationally in the pommel horse, the highest individual ranking the Minutemen have ever had. Christensen, despite making UMass men's gymnastics history, remains modest.

I guess it's nice," said Christensen. "It really doesn't mean anything. I still have room for improvement."

As a team, Johnson feels that the parallel bars are the Minutemen's strongest event. Led by Christensen and junior Jason Braud, this event also features junior Jay Santos and freshman Steve Goldman.

The pommel horse should also be a strong event. Nationally ranked Christensen leads the way, along with Santos, Jason Grant, Stu Bacher, Chris Erickson, and Jason Fox. These are the top events for the Minutemen, yet the coaching staff and competitors agree that the meet will come down to the last event.

"This is going to be one of the better meets of the season," said Braud. "The whole meet will come down to the last event [the high bar]."

Assistant coach Stan Gatland agrees. "It will come down to the high bar. Hopefully, we will be ahead of them after the parallel bars. They are a little bit stronger than us in the high bars."

■ women's hoop

continued from page 16

to two previously vanquished A-10 foes, West Virginia and St. Bonaventure, O'Brien said there were a variety of factors for the defeats.

"The two other teams played really physical games," O'Brien said. "We really did not have anyone step up their games to help Melissa (Gurile), Kim (Kristofik), and Octavia (Thomas).

According to O'Brien, Thomas will be a key in particular tonight as she matches up against DeRoose.

"Octavia has really got to step up and play tough against DeRoose," O'Brien said. "Plus Octavia has got to make DeRoose play on the other end of the floor."

O'Brien said her back court should be able to play with Rutgers'.

"I think our back court matches up well," O'Brien said. "Rutgers shooting guard Vicki Green is really athletic, so Green might even sometimes pressure (point guard) Tricia (Hopson)."

SKI
SPRINGBREAK 3RD ANNUAL INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS
MT. SUTTON, CANADA
(Just across the Vermont border)
ONLY $209
Party in the Snow!
Includes:
5 Day Lift Ticket
5 Nights Lodging (Mountainside Condo)
5 Days Intercollegiate Activities
Sponsors Include: Labatt's, Evian, and Molson.
Legal Age for Alcohol is 18 Group Leader Discounts
SPRINGBREAK '93
CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
1-800-999-SKI-9

The Lesbian, Bisexual & Gay Counseling Collective Open House
All members of the community are welcome!
Informational Meeting on February 10th 8 to 10 p.m. at the Campus Center. Check Room Listing for Location. For more information, call 545-2645 or stop by 406G Student Union U. Mass.

The Spa
Hot Tubs & Tans
175 University Dr.
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-7727

CEDAR TREE
BUSINESS SERVICES
11 Garage Rd • Sunderland, MA 01375
Word Processing
Resumes - Personal Taxes
Laser Jet Printing
Copies - 10 Free per visit
ON BUS ROUTE
M-F 8am-5pm•Sat. 8am-5pm
CALL 665-8499

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 Days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

GRAND OPENING
• TONIGHT •
Every Wednesday
9:30 pm til 1:00 am
Now Playing
SETTIE
First 100 People - No Cover
MENU NACHOS - $2
9:30 - 10:30
Every Night
THE 25 YEARS PUB
CELEBRATES 1968 • 1993 IN·AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

■ A-10 Notebook

continued from page 16

other factors besides injuries which affect team chemistry. Rhode Island's Jason Alexander, a 3-point specialist, was suspended indefinitely for breaking an unspecified team rule. This follows Temple's Frazier Johnson failing out, and fellow Owl William Cunningham's arrest on carjacking charges.

Last week, Andre Lemoureux announced he was leaving Rutgers,which caps a long and unhappy journey for the man.

Lemoureaux, a senior center, originally signed with UCLA out of high school, but withdrew his letter of intent when Walt Hazzard was fired. Lemoureax missed all of last season because of academic difficulties, and it appears grades may have affected his decision.

The former All-California high school player is a symbol of the recent futility of the Rutgers program, which has had more downs than ups since reaching the NCAA Tournament two years ago. Monday night, Rutgers was pasted by Patriot League team Holy Cross, and the Scarlet Knights are lucky St. Bonnies has a long-term lease for the last-place spot.

Speaking of the Bonnies, forward Harry Moore is leading the league with 19 points per game, out-scoring players like Harper Williams, Temple's Aaron McKie and Rutgers' Steve Worthy. How did the Olean, New York, college get such a fine basketball player, you ask? The answer is in the 1992-93 "NCAA Preview."

Moore went to Philadelphia's Simon Gratz High School (this year's No. 1 team in the country) but took a stray bullet in the leg during a drive-by shooting his senior year. Moore was a Prop 48 casuality, and after dodging bullets in the big city, he decided to go north.

Mike's Westview Cafe
Mike's Westview
Drink Special GIN & TONIC $1.50
Wednesday Night is Guest Bartender Night
This Weeks Bartender is Mary Lou Palmer
This Friday afternoon Happy Hour brings back Mike's famous all-you-can-eat smorgasbord. Food served promptly at 5:30pm.
MENU:
Roast Turkey, Seafood Fetuccine, Oriental Rice, Beef Stroganoff, Veal Parmesan, Pasta & Meatballs, Assorted Salads, etc.
Drink Special Michelob Bottles $1.50
Always Something For Everyone!
Drink Special Michelob Light Bottles $1.50

Say it to someone special...
COLLEGIAN VALENTINE PERSONALS
50% OFF
To be published Friday February 12th in a special Valentine section.
Deadline is Wednesday, Feb. 10 at 3:30 p.m.
LOOK FOR OUR PERSONALS TABLE ON THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students – Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30 Fri. 8:30-2:30 113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Attention Pre-Med, Nursing, Public Health, and all other majors: the Student Health Advisory Board will have its first meeting Wed. February 10 at 5:30 pm in Room 302 University Health Services. Come see what we're all about!

Leadership, Friendship, Service
Rush Alpha Phi Omega
Information Meetings
TONIGHT - 7pm - Webster TV Lounge
TOMMOROW 7pm Crabtree Lounge

Need Money? Hire Yourself! Six money making enterprises for college students. Details: Rabe Associates PO Box 329 Gilsum, NH 03448

SPECTRUM GENERAL MEETING
New members welcome!
Old members please attend!
EARTHFOODS 8pm Thurs 2/26

Spectrum Magazine seeks submissions: Art, photography, poetry, prose. Due date: 2/16/93.
406 E Student Union
Questions? Visit office or 545-2240

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Amnesty International Meeting
Room 917 Campus Center
Wednesday, February 10

Visit our information table
Campus Center Concourse
February 10 9-4 pm
Come sign an urgent action letter
For a
Prisoner of Conscience

Having problems with your roomate? Contact OCHO, 428 Student Union or call us at 545-0865. We can help!

Join the UMass Raquetball Club. All levels welcome. For more info. call Don at 546-1527

Looking for a place to live off-campus? Questions about your commuter living situation? Subletting in May? Come to OCHO, 428 Student Union, 545-0865.

Space Allocation Process
Attn: RSO's and GSO's who would like to apply for office space in the CC/Student Union complex may obtain applications to do so at the Board of Governors office 817 CC or SAO 416 Student Union.
Deadline to submit applications:
March 8, 1993

The Movie Club at Hillel House presents "When Harry Met Sally" Thursday Feb. 11 7:30 pm at Hillel. Call 549-1710 for more information.

Valentine Roses Campus Center Concourse (Wed-Fri) or call Chris 259-1589 (6-10pm) Visa/MC Deliveries Available

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-8098
549-8073

FOR RENT

Amherst room to rent 300 mo. first last security daytime 545-6395 nite 967-4065

Fridge Rental 253-9742 delivered free

Ideal Main Street location
Perfect for two $500/mo
Avail Imm. 496-2631 Erik 6-10 pm

Room Available $275/mo S. Amherst call Stacey 253-9326 large apt great roomate

FOR SALE

Atomic ARS Sport 195 cm
Marker M46 bindings
Good condition – $100 or B.O.
Call Reid 256-0301

Iguana with everything $100.00
Lights etc. 6-7109

MAC 512K Computer
Panasonic 92 Watt Boombox CD & Double Cassette Mini $175 Nicole 256-8311

Mint Fender Strat
$300
549-5871

Rossignol 4S Sz 190 and Atomic 733 sz195 Real Cheap! Call Kim 549-2816

FOR SALE - AUDIO/VIDEO

Stereo components: Used /reconditioned, area's largest selection. Buy/sell/trade at Stereo/video Exchange, Sundays 10-4 inside Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

GREEKS AND CLUBS

$1000 an Hour!
Each member of your frat, sorority, team, club, etc, pitches in just one hour and your group can raise $1000 in just a few days! Plus a chance to earn $1000 for yourself! No cost, no obligation. 1-800-932-0528 ext. 65

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

COUNSELORS: CAMP EMERSON coed, Massachusetts. Swimming, tennis, land/water sports, arts/crafts, archery, theatre, woodworking, rocketry, computers, yearbook, photography, administrative, more! Super kids, great food, friendly fun! No general counselors. 800/955-CAMP

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action. $100/wk. + . On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours – good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon-Fri. + Sunday. Early hours good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT
Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000 - $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Student Groups raise $1000 in 1 week! No cost or risk! Call 546-4330 Marcel

Summer jobs and internships University Directories, the nations largest publisher of campus telephone directories (including UMass at Amherst), is interviewing goal oriented students for a challenging, full-time summer position. Gain valuable experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings $3900. Expense paid training program in Chapel Hill, NC. College credit may be available. Interviews on UMass at Amherst campus February 24th. Information and interview sign up available today at the Visitors Center or call 1-800-743-5556

The Undergraduate Admissions office is now accepting applications for Tour Guides, Student Admissions Representatives, and New Students Program summer counselors. Please visit their tebie on the Concourse through the 11th.

INSTRUCTION

Learn to Scuba dive earn two credits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday at Curry Hicks 7-10 pm 1-800-262-0977

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

KIM FROM PUFTON

I sold my books to you on Wed. morning in the SOM Library. I lost your phone # and I need to ask you a question (and I think you're very pretty.) Please give me a call - DREW (From Salem)

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS!

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center 545-1995

LOST

Prescription sunglasses lost 2/3/93 please call Ed at 586-9565 w/info.

REWARD!!
Lost Woman's Seiko watch
Call 585-8898

Silver + Gold Seiko watch on Montague Rd. in Amherst. If found please call 549-0338

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

MUSICIANS

Keyboardist Wanted: Phish, Allmans, Creative improv 256-8115

PERSONALS

BABEECAKES,
HAPPY ANNIVERSARY!
Your bed or mine?
Love always,
Honeybunny

"Give me one more chance and you'll be satisfied."
But Luke was denied.

Jennifer Juneau!
Happy Birthday #22
Meet me at the T.O.C.
9:30!

Jack
There once was a woman
Who turned 22
She drank lots of tea
Went to bed around 3
And loved a bear named Pooh
Happy Birthday, Jack!
Love, L, T, & L

Johnny
The past 3 years with you
have been unforgettable!
Happy Anniversary
I love you
Kim

KRISTEN HARTE
Happy 21st! Sorry its late. Things to forget – unchained melody performances and your true love MP! We always have fun though!
Love ya
Marci

Looking for a big Johnson? Lonely? Riddled w/injury? I'm the guy for you call Bill. Prefered Plump. Billions served.

Tracey
Thank you for making me so happy over the past year.
Happy Anniversary!
Love,
Tim

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Colby College this weekend. Of course I'll split gas and tolls. Please call Michelle at 6-1338

ROOMATES WANTED

2 females or couple to share room $160 each or $275 for single, beautiful apartment 665-7604

Roomate Needed!!!
M/F to share two bedroom Brandywine Apt.
175.00/mo.
549-5868

SERVICES

Need Help With Your Taxes? Student tax return preparation. Starting at $20.00 Rich 549-8109

Resume Preparation assistance with complete resume development. Keith Anderson, Ph.D. 582-4037

Scholarships Guaranteed
1-800-666-2137

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

TRAVEL

Florida SPRING BREAK
7 nights Beachfront $129-169
RESERVE rooms NOW
Call CMI 1-800-423-5264

Language/Cultural Programs
University of Granada, Spain $2300 all inclusive one month: Airfare, tuition, diploma, room/Board with family, excursions June July August September. Contact:
Seven Continents
26 Clauss Ave
Paramus, NJ 07652
201-670-7047

Scuba Dive Key Largo
Spring Break, Call Project Deep
1-800-282-0977

SKI – Springbreak Intercollegiate Ski Weeks, only $209. Includes: 5 DAY LIFT TICKET/5 NIGHTS LODGING (MOUNTAINSIDE CONDO) /5 DAYS INTERCOLLEGIATE ACTIVITIES (Drinking age – 18). Sponsored by Labatt's, Evian, Molsen, and Mt. SUTTON, CANADA (Just across the Vermont border) Group leader discounts. Springbreak '93. Call Ski Travel Unlimited. 1-800-999-SKI-9

Spring Break: CANCUN, NASSAU from $299
Organize a small group for FREE trip
Call 1(800)Get Sun-1

Spring Break '93***
Cancun $479! Jamaica $499!
Daytona Beach $189! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company!
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL
1-800-328-SAVE

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

Want to Travel!!
Great rates for
Cancun Jamaica
and others
Great rates
Call Jason 549-3525

WANTED

RAQUETBALL PARTNER
Male or Female
Denise 549-6170

UMass Update is looking for reporters and writers for the news show call Semsey at 545-1336 or at 546-3021

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We went to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton

Sports

Arthur Ashe: real-life hero

He was more than just an athlete.

For years, Arthur Ashe was the first everything. He was the first Black American to play on the U.S. Davis Cup Tennis Team, to win the U.S. Amateur title, to win the inaugural U.S. Open, and to win Wimbledon. Arthur Ashe would prove himself to be a winner throughout his life. He would be admired for his fighting spirit both on and off the tennis court. But last Saturday he lost his hard-fought battle against AIDS.

David
RIVERA

He was more than just an athlete.

For millions of admirers around the world, he was an idol. Arthur Ashe would defy the status quo time and time again. He was not only a hero because of his achievements at the U.S. Open and Wimbledon, but he became a hero for hope and achievement.

He was more than just an athlete.

Last April he announced to the world that he had AIDS. For those who knew of Arthur Ashe, it was a sad day - a day remembered. It brought AIDS closer to home for some of us, because now an old friend had caught it.

He was more than just an athlete.

I became a tennis fanatic when I got my first racket at age eight. I devoured everything I could get my hands on that pertained to it - magazines, books, television. Anything and everything. I started to read of the history and follow the matches of great players. I couldn't get enough.

He was more than just an athlete.

Growing up I would idolize few players of the sport; Arthur Ashe was one of them. He brought something to the sport so many of his contemporaries have little of: dignity and class.

He was more than just an athlete.

And then, as a twelve-year-old, I met Arthur Ashe. He was larger than life. I'm sure I made a fool of myself, stumbling up to him and babbling as any kid would do when he came across his idol. But this man was no prima donna, he would welcome you with a hearty hello and spend time to get to know something about you, especially the young.

He was more than just an athlete.

With the lack of role models in our society, and people turning to Hollywood for enlightenment and leadership, Arthur Ashe should be remembered as one of the very few true role models that should be emulated.

He was more than just an athlete.

Asked one time what he would want to be remembered for, Mr. Ashe said he didn't want to be remembered as a great tennis player.

"That would be a selfish request," he would say.

He thought nothing from his tennis career could better the world. He was never so wrong. Millions of young athletes around the world were inspired by him to look towards a better future, including myself.

History will remember Arthur Ashe, for he was so much more more than just an athlete.

David Rivera is a Collegian columnist.

Atlantic 10 conference notebook

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

Hands down, the biggest surprise in the Atlantic 10 this season is St. Joseph's, which is currently positioned right behind UMass. The Hawks 5-2 conference record is as surprising as its overall 14-5 record.

For years, St. Joseph's has been the little brother of almost every other Philadelphia-based school, but the Hawks have already defeated Big East member Villanova as well as A-10 foe Temple.

Credit the guard play of Rap Curry and Bernard Blunt. Curry seems to have fully recovered from the anterior cruciate ligament injury which sidelined him last year, while Blunt is an All-Atlantic 10 first teamer. Freshman Mark Bass will garner some Freshman of the Year votes for his solid guard play.

In recent years, the Hawks have been a team with unfulfilled potential, mainly due to injuries. It has been years since the Hawks were even in the hunt for an NCAA berth, but this could be the first time since the 1985-86 season that St. Joseph's goes to the Big Dance.

That season, the Hawks defeated Richmond 60-59 before falling to Cleveland State (remember them?) 75-69 in the second round. With eight regular season games left, the Hawks will be in the Tournament barring a serious slide.

The recent number of Atlantic 10 players suspended, withdrawn, or failed out has demonstrated that there are

Turn to A-10 NOTEBOOK, page 15

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Dana Dingle is one of the top freshman of the A-10, along with St. Joe's Mark Bass and GW's Yinka Dare.

Women face Atlantic 10 rival Rutgers tonight

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

After finding out how tough life on the Atlantic 10 road is with two straight losses, the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team (8-10, 4-4 A-10) returns to the cozy Curry Hicks Cage tonight, where the Minutewomen will face current A-10 leader, the Rutgers Scarlet Knights (12-6, 7-0 A-10).

UMass head coach Joannie O'Brien said she knows the importance of tonight's contest.

"I think it is a big game because Rutgers is in first place," O'Brien said. "I think it is important for our kids to know that they can compete with Rutgers."

Any conversation about the Scarlet Knights has got to start with junior forward Caroline DeRoose. Deroose (16.4 ppg) is the only player on the deep and balanced Rutgers squad that is averaging in double figures.

C'ta Mitchelson (7.6 rpg) is the leading rebounder for the tough Scarlet Knights. Mitchelson is also the second leading scorer for Rutgers, averaging 8.4 points per game.

O'Brien said that she knows what the keys to tonight's game will be.

"I think that we have got to play to our strength," she said. "We have got to use our quickness against them.

"Their strength is their strength," O'Brien said. "They have got four or five players who can bang inside."

Over the past weekend in which they fell on the road

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 14

Scott's shots

Before we go any further, I feel it necessary to admit that I too hired an illegal alien as my baby sitter. In light of this I hereby withdraw my name from consideration for the attorney general's position.

I would, however, like to remain a candidate for UMass hockey coach.

David
SCOTT

• The creative soul with the "LoUMass" poster at the Rutgers game should immediately market the T-shirt.

Here's another marketing tip for area pizza guys: Offer a penny off each calzone for every point scored by UMass at a game in Mullins. The ticket stub is the coupon and an 80-point effort results in 80 cents off any calzone.

• Mullins looks pretty good but in keeping with the media's "watchdog function," it's necessary to point out two glaring faults. First, there is an immediate need for more sidewalks on Commonwealth Avenue. The edge of the hill to lower Boyden Fields is precariously narrow. Don't wait for an injury, fix it now.

Second, the scoreboards, while informative with players' points and other aids, are too small. There's already talk of upgrading the units.

• Troy Aikman had to leave last Sunday's Pro Bowl early because of prior engagements. I too have other business pending and the rest of the snaps will be taken by my evil twin, Scott David. Troy returns next season, I'll be back next week.

• Half a box of tissues later, the Larry Bird Tribute was truly something to behold. There are those who will say it was too ostentatious and those are the same people who have no appreciation for what Number 33 (along with Magic) did for basketball as a whole. It's along the same line of what that old lady did for The Clapper.

• One last thing on Bird in light of Dr. J's induction to the Shrine Up the Road. Before Magic and Bird could meet in the finals, there was always a great tussle or two with Mr. Erving. It was a sort of torch passing for the NBA.

• Michigan I say, Michigan.

• A scribe from New Jersey was trying to stir some controversy in the Rutgers postgame when he asked Steve Worthy if he realized the ball being used wasn't leather. Worthy admitted he thought the ball was a bit more slippery. Teammate Mark Redden was quick to point out, "It couldn't have been that slippery, he had 27 points."

But the question remains? What's up with the ball? Is it leather? Is it actually round? If not now, when?

Sources close to the matter, who wished not to be identified, have assured me an investigation is on-going, but there is no comment yet.

• So you think The Cage had its last rage? Depends on what you consider to be the real Cage. According to Montague town historian Lionel Girard, the Montague Town Hall was built in the 1850's. Inside Montague Town Hall, on the second floor, we

Turn to SCOTT'S SHOTS, page 12

Recruits strong for women's soccer

Myers verbally commits, others soon to follow

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy will be losing four starters, including a two-time All-American and his leading goal scorer, from last season's team to graduation.

However, if a few of the blue-chip high school players Massachusetts is recruiting decide to come to Amherst next fall, his team may be just as strong.

UMass has already received a verbal commitment from Rebecca Myers, a stand-out mid-fielder from Lassitter (Ga.) High School.

"Rebecca is the top player to come out of Georgia in the past few years," Lassitter coach Lawerence Fine said. "She is very strong in the air and is a dominant center mid-fielder. She'll do a great job up there right away."

Myers, who was also recruited by the University of Dayton and the University of Connecticut, said, "My heading and my vision of the field are my strengths."

The UMass coach Jim Rudy can not comment on any recruit due to NCAA regulations.

UMass will be forced to play for the first time in four years without two-time All-American defender Holly Hellmuth next season. But if Erin Lynch, an All-American mid-fielder out of Lyndon B. Johnson Science Academy in Austin, Texas, commits to UMass, Hellmuth's loss may not be as difficult to handle.

Lynch's play is comparable to Hellmuth's, according to Joe Pereira, who has coached both players.

"Erin is the same type of player Holly is," Pereira said. "She has an incredible work rate, is very strong, very tough and battles well.

"At the same age Holly was a little better in the air, but Erin is better offensively."

Lynch, who is also considering Texas A&M, said she saw snow for only the second time during her recruiting visit last month.

"UMass is a good school and obviously the success of the soccer program is a big factor," Lynch said.

Another recruit who could help out on defense is Sheri Skurnick, who captained Homestead (Wisc.) High School to a state championship last fall.

Skurnick, who visited Michigan State this past weekend, also lists Wisconsin-Madison and Dartmouth as finalists.

"I like the coach at UMass and the girls I stayed with were really nice," Skurnick said. "I liked the campus also - it sort of reminded me of Wisconsin."

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 12

Thursday February 11, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 76

Clouds, highs in the 30s. Some afternoon snow on Friday.

This Weekend:
New York's single most entertaining live act, Murphy's Law, promises nothing will go wrong if you come see them play at Pearl Street this weekend.

Local News:
The Black Student Union starts the spring semester with a call by BSU leadership for a 'new direction' for UMass. Page 3.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England • Founded in 1890

U.S. troops may be sent to Balkans

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is ready to unveil a four-part plan for ending ethnic warfare in Bosnia-Herzegovina that could send U.S. military forces to the fractured Balkans in a peacekeeping role, senior administration officials say.

Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher is expected to announce the peace initiative — with diplomatic, military, economic and humanitarian components — today or Thursday, the officials said.

"It is an initiative by President Clinton to engage the United States directly and aggressively in trying to bring about peace," said one official who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

The senior U.S. officials stressed that Clinton had no intention of injecting U.S. troops into the conflict. The officials said they might be used in a peacekeeping role — but only as part of a U.N. or NATO force.

Also, the officials said there was no decision on whether U.S. ground troops would be part of such a peacekeeping operation, and under no circumstances would be assigned to "put American elbow grease into the process" of peacemaking, one senior U.S. official told the Associated Press on Tuesday night.

The envoy will work with former Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Lord Owen, who formulated a plan that called for establishing 10 autonomous zones in Bosnia.

Clinton last week called the Vance-Owen plan unfair to the Muslims, who account for more than 40 percent of the former Yugoslav republic's population. The American envoy evidently would have the authority to make alterations that might be more acceptable to the beleaguered Muslims.

More than 18,000 people have died in 11 months of fighting and tens of thousands have been left homeless and hungry. The United States assigns much of the blame to a Serbian "ethnic cleansing" campaign. Bosnian Serbs backed by Serbian regular forces control more than 70 percent of the country.

The U.S. initiative is the product of a three-week review by the president and his senior foreign policy advisers. The Muslims had hoped Clinton would provide them with weapons, but the officials said there would be no lifting of the embargo the United Nations imposed on all sides.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
DIVE! DIVE! — Junior business student Romin Thompson does the tennis thing hoping he can jump over the net in victory after he crushes his hapless opponent.

Admissions director to resign

Reflects on how UMass has grown and changed

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

The director of Undergraduate Admissions at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Timm Rinehart, plans to leave his position next month to become Temple University's associate vice president for enrollment management.

Rinehart yesterday recounted what it was like to watch UMass-Amherst grow and change over the years.

"When I came here in 1978, it was 'zoo Mass,'" Rinehart said. "It was in the '80s, when we were able to convince parents that UMass was not only a safe place, but a good place with quality students."

Rinehart said the best part of his job was watching students he had persuaded to come to UMass excel at the University and succeed after graduation.

The low points of his 14-year career in Admissions came during the last three to four years as he witnessed state budget cuts erode the University's reputation and image that "we had built steadily in the '80s," he said.

"Dr. Rinehart has done an outstanding job for this campus, particularly in the face of declining numbers of students graduating from high school and shrinking resources," said Thomas Robinson, vice chancellor for Student Affairs.

Attracted to the excitement of the five-college area, Rinehart became assistant director of Undergraduate Admissions in September of 1978, taking the director's position in December of 1985.

"It has been a great privilege to spend the last 14 years of my professional life at the University," Rinehart said. "I am deeply grateful to all those who have supported and encouraged me. This is, indeed, a great University with a bright future."

Turn to DIRECTOR, page 7

Female students follow women to gov't careers

By KRISTEN LANS
Collegian Correspondent

The differences are clear. One works for Republican ideals, the other for Democratic. One has walked the campaign trail in western Massachusetts, the other up Capital Hill in Washington D.C. One has ended her work because of a victory, the other has just begun. But both have one thing in common. They have followed the women politicians that they most admire into government by earning internships with them.

University of Massachusetts students Jennifer Robertson and Marjorie Decker did not know what would happen when each wrote to volunteer their help to women in government.

Robertsons' letter led to three years of work for Republican state Sen. Jane Swift culminating in an internship as a campaign organizer.

"I had always identified with Republican ideas but I pictured the typical Republican politician to be an older, conservative man," Robertson said. "Then I saw a young, progressive woman running. I could identify with her and it seemed O.K. to be a Republican."

Decker's letter brought her to Washington to intern with Democratic U.S. Rep. Pat Schroeder.

"I wanted to see how government prioritized the needs of the country and how accessible government is to people," Decker said. "Pat has bulldozed a path in government, making it possible for more women to get in government."

Decker is now working full-time in Rep. Schroeder's office. She said she reads and answers some of the 300-500 letters that are delivered each week as well as going to briefings and organizing press conferences.

"I believe that everyone is responsible for making society a better place and we each need to learn where we are most effective," Decker said. "I see myself working in government."

Robertson said she remembers working the 12-18 hour days on Swift's campaign from the time Swift decided to run again in April until her re-election on Nov. 3.

"I was 20 years old working for a 27-year-old and dealing with people twice my age," Robertson said. "I asked myself, who is going to take me seriously?

Turn to WOMEN, page 6

Some wary of economy as seniors look for jobs

By MARK PRESTON
Collegian Staff

February is the coldest month of the year, but it may prove to be much warmer than the prospect of getting a job when seniors graduate this June.

This month, seniors at UMass are beginning a process which will shape the rest of their lives. This is an awakening for many students as they realize the "real world" is just over the horizon.

Carolyn Roche, a personnel supervisor for Enterprise Car Rental said, "I do not see the University of Massachusetts at Amherst as having the reputation as a party school anymore."

Roche was providing information about Enterprise to prospective employees at yesterday's Career Fair held in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Roche added, "I think the students are more interested in their future, rather than worrying about the parties on the weekend."

"I think UMass students have many competitive skills to offer an employer and we should have a little more self confidence in ourselves," said Katheleen P. Flathery, 21, a senior political science major.

Louis Pagliarini, a personnel representative for Nestles Brand Food Service Inc. said, "It is a credit to UMass that we recruit here because we only go to certain colleges in an area and UMass is the only one we actively recruit in New England."

Many options are available for graduating seniors, such as joining the armed services, the Peace Corps, continuing their education or entering the workforce. The fair is just one way the Mather Career Center is helping them find their niche in life.

"My perspective on getting a job is looking somewhat questionable," said Elizabeth J. Pekich, 21, a senior communications major.

"I do not see myself having a career-oriented job lined up before I leave UMass," said David M. Walker, 23, a senior finance major.

Students are placing the blame on the stagnant economy and not the education they received at UMass as the reason for the lack of success in finding employment.

"I believe the marketplace is hurting students chances for jobs and this is the reason some students are leaving UMass with a bachelor's degree and no job," said Anthony Alessi, 22, a senior management major.

Alessi added, "I believe UMass has prepared me with a good education and the University provides adequate resources to obtain a job."

Turn to JOBS, page 2

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Correction:

The date for the Angela Davis lecture published in the yesterday's Collegian was incorrect. Angela Davis will speak in the Bowker Auditorium on Feb 26, at 8 p.m. and at the women's conference in the Campus Center Auditorium at 10:30 a.m. on Feb. 27. The Collegian regrets the error.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Thursday, February 11

Seminar — Graduate women students and women faculty and staff in engineering, science, and technical fields are invited to a seminar, "The Imposter Syndrome: Issues of Confidence and Conference for Women," presented by Valerie Young, Ed.D. at 5:30 p.m. in 1033 Lederle Graduate Research Tower.

Meeting — The UMass Black Student Union will hold a general assembly meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center rm. 917.

Saturday, February 13

Dance — Valentine Swing Dance. Benefit for the Amherst Survival Center, at the Amherst Unitarian Meetinghouse. Swing dance lesson at 7:30 p.m. with will McNaughton and Kate Kinney; Live music at 8:30 p.m. with John Root and Jazz Society Sextet. $5-10 Donation.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Brian Gormley

Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

Hazardous Material Spill

A fire in Fernald Hall Tuesday morning melted plastic computer dustcovers and slightly damaged a cabinet. The fire occurred in a gallon tin containing oily rags. Environmental Health and Safety personnel said the fire was caused by "accidental spontaneous combustion."

Property Damage

A collision between two vehicles on Massachusetts Avenue Tuesday morning caused damage of over $1000 to both vehicles, police said.

Li Wu of 740 Central St., Leominster collided with Paul Koplow of W. Pelham Rd., Shutesbury when he entered Mass. Ave. westbound. Li Wu was cited for failing to use care in starting.

Assault & Battery

• Police were called to the Textbook Annex Tuesday afternoon to investigate a past assault and battery which allegedly took place between two employees.

• An individual in Upper Central received a threatening call on voice mail Tuesday night.

Love expressed in fresh ways

By ALYSSA GABBAY
Associated Press

PITTSBURG — For Valentine's Day, Alice Johnson of New York will get clean floors and a scrubbed bathroom.

It may not sound romantic, but her boyfriend, Michael willson, thinks hiring a maid for the holiday will win her heart faster than flowers or candy.

"She's going to think I'm sensitive because I thought of this," said Willson, a car restorer.

Whether it's hiring a cleaning service or sending a teddy bear that whispers sweet nothings, lovers are finding fresher ways to express their affections on Valentine's Day.

"Flowers wilt and bears won't," said Jerry Crowley of Telebear. The manufacturer, based in Bally, Pa., has sold thousands of bears equipped with a microchip that records a message in the buyer's voice and plays when the bear is squeezed.

Lynne Grant of Plano, Texas. (sorry to spoil the surprise) will get a bear that says, "I love you and think you're pretty" in her boyfriend voice when she hugs it.

Boyfriend Dennis Essary, 39, said he picked the bear because it was different and affordable. "I love chocolate and I eat it all the time, but it's too ordinary and traditional for a Valentine's Day gift," he said.

At $39,95 plus $3 shipping, the 12-inch bear could cost less than a dozen of roses , Crowley said.

Other Romeos and Juliets are splashing their sentiments across billboards and TV screens. Jean Guzik, 22, paid $210 to spell out her love for her boyfriend, Chris Mullen, on a 12-by-25-foot sign in Pittsburgh for a week.

"Chris, I got you babe, Love, Jeanniey," the sign proclaims.

"I wasn't going to put our names on it, but I figured that if I was going to do something this big, I might as well let everyone know who I am and who he is too," said Guzik, a customer service representative.

A spokeswoman for TCI Cable in Pittsburgh said the company receives about 50 requests a year for Valentine ads.

■ jobs

continued from page 1

"I have received a tremendous education at UMass and it is unfortunate the way the economy is," said Paul Sagarino Jr., 21, a senior accounting major.

"Many companies who I have spoken with are expecting to grow in the near future, this may be a sign the economy is taking a turn for the better," added Sagarino.

Pagliarini said, "Prospective employers are looking for well- rounded, self-motivated leaders with a good work ethic."

He added, "You have to do everything you can to sell yourself."

Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selection of Imported, Independent & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586-5726
SON OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586-1707
213 MAIN STREET 21 STATE STREET
NORTHAMPTON

HURRY DOWN! Final Days of the Sale
Rich's Army/Navy and casual clothes store
BLOW OUT OUT OUT SALE
Flannel Shirts $10
Pea Coats $45
Reversible Winter Coats $30
Sweaters $10
Sweats $5
All Merchandise 1/2 Price (All sales final) (No other coupons or discounts apply)
Sale January 28 through February 14
24 Center St. Northampton • 586-0275
- Next to the Iron Horse Cafe -

42 OUTTA 43.5 PEOPLE PREFER TO RECYCLE THE COLLEGIAN!

BANANADAMA
Yogurt
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

Now Open In Amherst
Just in time for Valentine's Day!
40 Main Street
Amherst, MA • 256-1451
Thornes Market
Northampton, MA • 584-0404
"Just a little hint"
Flowers á la Carte
$5.00 off
1 Dozen Roses (boxed or wrapped, long stem)
Offer good through February 14th 1993
Flowers á la carte
Visit our new store's Grand Opening in Amherst & receive a complimentary Flower

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

Local News

Assassination attempt

Student elections at the University of Alabama have been suspended after a candidate for student president alleged she was assaulted by a rival political party.

For decades elections at the Tuscaloosa campus have been dominated by a political organization dubbed "The Machine," whose membership comes from 27 of the school's 48 White fraternities and sororities.

The Machine has been highly successful at getting its people elected, so successful that even George Wallace, a four-time governor of Alabama and a U.S. presidential candidate, lost as a non-Machine candidate in the 1930s.

However, the Machine may have seen its final days, following the beating of Student Government Association presidential candidate Minda Riley.

Riley told police a man entered her room on the night of Sun., Jan. 31 and busted her lip, bruised her cheek and cut her face with a knife. Two months earlier, Riley, who is White, had a cross burned in front of her off-campus apartment and received literature which read, "Machine rules."

Harry Knopke, vice president for student affairs, said "When the contests are marked by violence, that's just a clear indication that something has to happen." Knopke supports full reform of the election process.

Knopke said there is no proof of the Machine's involvement, but "there is an undercurrent involving the so-called Machine, and it will be discussed."

The Machine candidate for president, Neil Duthie denies that the Machine was responsible and says he had no knowledge of the attack.

Riley's brother, coincidently, was the Machine-backed SGA president in 1987. He said he has no doubt that the Machine or a candidate backed by it was responsible for the beating.

Now this is politics.

Low down crook

Last week's Amherst Student, the student newspaper at Amherst College, reported a most despicable crime — the theft of $3 worth of McDonald's coupons.

Anyone who has received the 50 cent coupons the fast food restaurant produces, knows its true worth is far greater than face value.

Diploma debate

At Michigan State University, the administration has revamped the school's graduation ceremony in an effort to create a more personalized commencement, according to The State News, the student newspaper on campus.

Michigan State, which boasts of an undergraduate enrollment of over 40,000, will no longer hold an all-University ceremony. Students will be divided into specific disciplines for graduation ceremonies.

"[It allows] family involvement and the special attention gives each college a chance to develop a real classy graduation," MSU interim President Gordon Guyer said.

Many students disagree with the break from tradition. The State News ran an editorial opposing the move and Janice Newberry, co-president of the Senior Class Council, said she will meet with Guyer later this week in an effort to switch back to an all-University commencement.

"It's kind of impressive and neat to have everyone there, and it doesn't do any good to have a small graduation at the end," Newberry said. "We all knew we were going to a school with 40,000 people."

Newberry charge the move was made for fiscal reasons, something Guyer denies.

Animal House deceased

At the University of Texas, which contains one of the nations most developed fraternity and sorority systems, Greeks will be faced with stiff alcohol restrictions at fraternity functions, according to The Daily Texan, the student newspaper on campus.

The restrictions, passed by the Intrafraternity Council, no longer allow fraternities to purchase kegs or other bulk quantities of alcohol, ban drinking games, disallow alcohol to be present at "open parties" and rush functions.

BSU to convene spring sessions

Black Student Union leaders to push 'new direction'

By MARTIN JONES
Collegian Staff

Tonight, the Black Student Union will hold its first general assembly of the spring semester and intends to "bring about a new direction for the University," according to Al Lizana, the BSU vice-president.

Lizana hopes tonight's meeti ng, to be held at 7 p.m. in room 917 of the Campus Center, will mark the beginning of a new relationship between students and administrators at the University.

"Our organization is entering into the semester with a new set of challenges," said Lizana. "We've accomplished a lot so far, but there are many more goals to be achieved."

Last semester, the BSU negotiated a settlement with administrators in an effort to diffuse the racial turmoil on campus that followed the beating of a Black resident assistant.

The crisis erupted shortly after the fledgling organization, established last April, had just elected its first leaders. President Fabiola Narcisse and Vice-President Lizana were called in by UMass President Michael K. Hooker to participate in negotiations mediated by the U.S. Department of Justice.

Lizana said the purpose of the negotiations was to implement changes in University policy that were "all encompassing to the student body and in the best interests of the University."

According to Lizana, most of the students' recommendations were accepted by the administration officials. Since then, the administration has published a series of progress reports on implementation of the new policies, the latest of which was published in yesterday's edition of the Collegian.

"We came out of the process with a concrete list of commitments to be carried out on a fair timetable," said Lizana. He also went on to commend the other student negotiators for their "courage and willingness to reach a suitable accord in good faith."

This semester, the BSU intends to try to find solutions to problems students face on campus, according to Lizana. One issue that the organization has set its sights on is increasing the available financial aid for eligible students at the University.

"The BSU aims to continue providing its leadership towards improving the University in a way that benefits the entire campus," said Lizana.

Jennifer Wood, president of the Student Government Association, praised the leadership of the BSU and expressed her encouragement for other groups to get involved as well.

"The only real way to recreate student empowerment is to get lots of different groups and students from different backgrounds involved." she said. "The more people that we get committed to making UMass a better place, the more we can accomplished."

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

HOPE THIS IS DONE IN TIME FOR DINNER — Sophomore university without walls student Ayris Chandler works on a plate.

Dominance of U.S. culture cited

By TOM HALLER
Collegian Staff

A Berkley professor and renowned student of popular culture kicked off the American Popular Culture Abroad series last night with a lecture on the dominance of the U.S. entertainment industry in the world.

Professor Todd Gitlin began his lecture with the story of a young Japanese child who at the sight of a Mickey Mouse shirt on an American tourist asked, "You mean there's a Disneyland in America, too?"

Gitlin's lecture, called "The Unification of Mickey Mouse and Arnold Schwarzenegger", was a critical analysis of America's universal presence in the world today. Gitlin said he believes that this culture amounts to the only serious attempt at composing a unified sense of the world.

While possessing the spiritual element of one-world ideology, Gitlin said the economic presence of supply and demand plays a significant role in spreading these impressions.

He said the United States supplies products and images appealing to members of all social and economic communities alike. The demand for these, in return, establishes an industry which produces America's second largest export, catering inexpensively to the entire world, he said.

Gitlin said the American culture could conceivably be driven by one sole purpose: to entertain. Since the 1800s, the United States has been providing the world with entertainment and recreation. He said this is entirely feasible because the culture is pretested within itself, while emerging from and circulating throughout the various American subcultures.

Gitlin said there are two outcomes to this concept.

He said the "Mickey Mouse Form" is a smooth and subtle image, reducing the language barriers to one level of images and phrases. He said these are the semblance of innocence, ranging from icons such as Mickey Mouse to products like Coca Cola.

Gitlin said the "Arnold Schwarzenegger Form" is one of sheer virulence. He said it is the "self-amputation" of the individual, creating the desire to be like the figure and "style" it represents. According to Gitlin, these are the movies, television and music, and the conforming stars and styles which accompany them.

Gitlin said the violence and conformity to a norm is the evidence of the world's beginning of a "systematic training in numbness of individuality and emotion." He cited examples of this in violent movies such as "Terminator II", the actors in them, such as Arnold Schwarzenegger, and the widely imitated styles of music seen throughout the world. He said the violence is ironically the price people have learned to pay for their attempt at innocence.

These ideas of "fun" though, give the world a glimmer of hope, Gitlin said. He said they do not arrive as the commonly unattainable symbols of peace and utopia, but instead help to fill the void which these hopes have created.

Gitlin is a professor of sociology and director of mass communications at the University of California at Berkley. He is one of the nation's most well known authorities on popular culture. Besides contributions to journals, books, periodicals and the media, Gitlin has written several

Turn to CULTURE, page 7

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

The price isn't quite right

Going way back to when they first came to this esteemed University, second semester seniors will remember, perhaps with awe, their first semester bill.

It's a fond memory. A hefty portion of the state budget went to purchasing red ink for the accounting offices and departments were hoarding all the paper clips and staples they could get their hands on in anticipation of the office supply shortages that always seem to come on the heels of major financial disasters.

Marc
ELLIOTT

Nine hundred fifty seven class sections were cancelled before students even got their cute, and now quaint, Add/Drop bubble forms.

Lines rivalling those outside last year's A-10 championship game against West Virginia wrapped around the halls of Bartlett and wound their way past the doors of Goodell. Of course, lines at the Bursar's office and at the Textbook Annex are still fodder for dorm room anecdotes.

Administrators, led by Joseph Duffey (not just the Amherst campus' chancellor, but also soon to be its president as well), busily typed resumes and called old college chums who held positions at flourishing consulting firms or universities located in states with more stable legislatures.

It was the fall of 1989 and in-state students paid a total of $1,350.75 in tuition and fees, barring financial aid and not including room and board — $2,898.75 with room and board. The boom hadn't been lowered quite yet.

But it was coming. Chancellor Duffey tried to cushion the University from the full effect of the state financial crisis with his disastrous "margin of excellence." According to a student government figure long since gone, the theory was that the University could maintain a "margin of excellence" and avoid making too many cuts if the Board of Trustees could make up for lost state funding by raising tuition and fees. But once the state saw the University getting additional funds from its students' hides, the legislature decided UMass could afford even more budget reductions, making the sacrifice imposed on the student body virtually worthless.

This semester, tuition and fees are 47 percent over what they were four years ago. That's $4,377.50 with room and board, $2,531.00 without. Forty-seven percent is a lot. Seniors paid almost twice as much for their last semester as their first. And no one is even hinting that anything will change anytime soon.

It's amazing. Four years ago as freshmen, students marched and picketed and trampled the flowers on the statehouse lawn. They screamed and cried, went on strike and refused to go to class for days on end demanding that the state not abandon the University to rich kids with lower SAT scores. People who were once strike leaders now seem resigned to what has become an all-too-familiar pattern: the sometimes annual, sometimes bi-annual rise in tuition and fees.

Meanwhile, the Graduate Employee Organization has gone on strike and been awarded a union as well as numerous benefits; the state employees, including professors, have gotten a 13 percent raise and the undergraduates have gotten a bigger bill.

What does the future hold? For the seniors it brings graduation and what could be a lifetime of repaying loans while being hounded for contributions by the alumni office. For the undergraduates who come after them, it brings larger semester bills and a class comprised of students with parents more accustomed to driving Saabs and Lincolns than Chevettes and riding the subway.

The University administration and Trustees have forgotten the mission of a public school: to provide an education for working class kids who would otherwise end up at community colleges or working dead end jobs in the service industry. Hopefully, the students haven't forgotten the mission or the dream. Of course, maybe with this spring's commencement, the students who really need this school will disappear from the campus completely.

Marc Elliott is a Collegian columnist.

Will ROTC be an option?

Lately, in a mad panic to try to keep myself in school for another year, I have been exploring my financial aid options.

Hmm... So what are my options? Well, I could rob a jewelry store, steal a credit card or go on Jeopardy. But maybe I should choose the more dangerous, yet socially acceptable route — Whitmore.

Melanie
DESILVA

I could get a Stafford loan; or maybe a Perkins. Or, maybe I could possibly qualify for a tuition waiver, or a Pell grant. Or maybe I should look into ROTC.

As a bisexual woman I can technically enter ROTC now. Yet, at the same time, I could be kicked out for sexual misconduct.

What is sexual misconduct? I am not sure. But knowing the historically homophobic stance of ROTC, it probably means that I could be kicked out if I had a girlfriend. This would mean that staying in ROTC still entails going back into the closet. Until I see some evidence, gay students can't be guaranteed that anything has changed.

Many oblivious citizens believe that lifting the ban on gays in the military is simply a token, superficial policy issue, and fail to recognize the economic impact that the ban had on working class gay students.

The fact is that prohibiting gays, lesbians and bisexuals from entering the ROTC program on campus, eliminated an important and lucrative financial aid option or career option for out members of the gay community. Clearly, this is not only a gay issue, but also a class issue.

Many citizens believe President Clinton should be focusing on more important national issues, like the economy. Yet, at the same time, they believe that education is one of the keys to restoring the nation's economic competitiveness.

Clearly, eliminating a financial aid option for 10 to 20 percent of the students on this campus increases the the possibility that gay students will have to seek other, less practical means of financial aid, and brings them closer to the point of having to drop out.

If one of the ways to help the economy is to improve education for all Americans, then people should be applauding Clinton's efforts. If ROTC is forced to abide by it, lifting the ban could end the economic discrimination facing out gay, lesbian and bisexual students, and will potentially help many stay in school.

Melanie Desilva is a Collegian columnist.

Fraternity thanks Coach Calipari

The brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon wish to thank UMass basketball coach John Calipari for taking time out of his busy schedule to speak with us at our first rush/"leadership series" event.

His discussion on teamwork, leadership and the UMass spirit was interesting, motivating and well understood.

While stressing academics, athletics and the "social" to form a "balanced man", Coach Cal also spoke of his team and its "scratching and clawing" to be respected.

Well coach, you were awesome before but now, after seeing you up close and personal, you're REALLY awesome!

Thanks again, Sigma Phi Epsilon.

John Maxwell, secretary
Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity
Amherst

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Bear with me, I have a hard time caring about sports on this campus too, but when the University sinks millions into a sports arena while 50-gallon drums collect rainwater in the basement of the Fine Arts Center and librarians hold publicity-stunt bake sales, you hope they know what they're doing.

"This was a really nice way to open the new arena," said coach John Calipari last Friday, referring to the opening victory for the Minutemen, apparently unconcerned by the building's investigation by state Attorney General L. Scott Harshbarger's office. I wish I shared his optimism.

The AG's office will not discuss such cases and at this point it is uncertain whether the investigation concerns the structural safety of the building and its facilities or the bidding and contracting practices of the University or Suffolk, the building contractor, but those close to the project are suspiciously persistent in their assurances that the building is safe to operate. State judicial investigations have become a disturbing trend in this University's growing sports program.

It would be easy to dismiss the accusations by local union and trade council officials that the non-union contractors who built and operate the arena are dangerously cutting corners if there were not so many nagging indications that those directing the facility were willing to scrimp a little on quality and training in the interest of saving a buck. In their haste to open the facility, crews installed stage lighting while the basketball team held their first practice in the building 100 feet below. What a boost for the University P.R. it would have been if one of them had been killed by a falling screwdriver.

Let's hope that Ogden Entertainment Services, the company hired to run the arena, will exercise better judgment in future operations than they did in choosing the "racy" laser show at the "family-oriented" open house.

Josh
REYNOLDS

On the positive side, the Mullins Center makes over 100 part-time positions available to students as ushers, box office clerks and operations crews. Franz Svoboda, a graduating senior who works on the Mullins operation crew, discounted criticism of the facility and described his experience as positive. "Students do everything from pushing brooms to resurfacing the ice. Things are hectic, but at this stage that's to be expected," he said. "There are going to be problems with any like facility. I'm sure they will find problems with the Silvio O. Conte Polymer Research Center when that opens too." Others expressed more concern.

One Mullins employee I spoke with worried that private management seems overly concerned with trimming costs. Combined with the bureaucracy inherent within the state University organization could lead to compromised maintenance and safety. To illustrate his point he asked the familiar question, "How many employees does it take to change a light bulb?"

"The union will say, 'That's a minimum of four on a four-hour call.' Ogden will tell them to screw and argue with the University over who's responsibility the light bulb is.

"Ogden will tell the University, 'It's your building, you pay for it.' And the University will say, 'You guys have the contract. You fix it.' After a couple of months Ogden will send out one student without a ladder..."

While this is admitted hyperbole, the fact that the first two basketball games were played beneath theater rigging that was yet to be tested or approved by the University does not inspire confidence. In fact, the rigging was not officially approved until Monday — one day before "Jesus Christ Superstar."

Aside from 20 years of fees to help pay for it, what do students get out of the facility? If nothing embarrassing comes out in the AG probe, Mullins will be a big boost for the University's image. Free skating is a plus and there are around twice as many reserved student seats at basketball games. Students inclined to wait in line to fork over the cash can see the Ice Capades or their favorite washed-out MTV metal band, although they don't get a break on the steep prices.

To the University's credit, they're getting better at symbolic flagship buildings. It is well-lit, and the roof doesn't leak. The University has learned from the experiences of the Tower Library and the sinking football stadium. No bricks have popped out of place it was built on ground solid enough to support it.

Josh Reynolds is a Collegian columnist.

Random encounter shows town, UMass need not conflict

A weekend ago, I was walking back from uptown on McClellan Street on a Saturday morning when I happened upon a man and his noble-looking Golden Retriever.

I doubted he would want to talk to me. After all, I'm one of those godless UMass students his neighbors complain about so loudly in town meetings at the Bangs Community Center.

It turns out I was wrong. "How's school going?" he asked. I told him it was fine and started chatting with him about the usual things — weather, school, UMass basketball, his dog.

How do you like that. A UMass student and a town native, able to have a friendly conversation without even knowing each other.

So when people like Select Board candidate Larry Kelley show up on campus with signs asking the University to fork over $270,000 worth of traffic fines — a questionable request at best since they were collected on state property by state police — one wonders. What do Amherst residents really think of us? Are they like the man I met on McClellan Street, or do they think like Select Board members who act like they wish UMass were in Sunderland or Granby instead?

It's hard to tell. But I'm willing to bet the Select Board types don't reflect the majority viewpoint.

Select Board members are politicians, unlike most everyday Amherst residents you meet on the street. As politicians, they must serve the interests of their constituents, and if some of their constituents complain about "those damned kids" all the time, then they have to respond to those complaints in order to get re-elected. It's the nature of the business.

Greg
SUKIENNIK

That's why the Fearing Street bus stop gets passed by on weekend nights. That's why Amherst has draconian keg laws. That's why you can't park your car on Hobart Lane without having it towed on a Friday night. That's why the Select Board goes after Twisters Tavern every time owner Mark Forsyth sneezes.

Average Amherst residents, unless they live on Fearing Street or next to Twisters, don't hate us. There's probably some resent, and justifiably so, when we act like we own their town and go tearing through neighborhoods on drunken sprees. But they'll also be the first to tell you how dead this place is in the summer. Business owners certainly don't mind our being here.

So what about the Select Board and candidate Larry Kelley? The town of Amherst is running a big budget deficit and Kelley is pushing the school to pay up or else. Or else what? "Senior citizens will be down here protesting outside Whitmore if the town isn't satisfied," Kelley was quoted as saying yesterday.

Hmm. Convincing a vulnerable group who can't afford a property tax override that they're being exploited and then using that group's collective anger for political gain is a tried 'n' true politician's tactic. Unfortunately, it polarizes the town and the University instead of drawing them closer together?

That's the salt in the eye of town/gown relationships. Most Amherst residents realize UMass, like the other two colleges in town, is a cash cow ready for the milking. But to local politicians, it's a sitting duck, a target for people who need something to whine about at board meetings.

That's not how the man I met on McClellan Street felt about it. He probably has reason to complain, but he didn't. He took the first step and said hello instead.

If the town of Amherst really needs the money and feels we owe them, stunts like leading picketing senior citizens to Whitmore (then again, why not, everyone else storms Whitmore?) won't accomplish much more than escalating bad blood between the University and the town. But if the two sides can sit down and work things out, it could be a step toward normalizing relations between two sides with more in common than they know.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist.

How to find your own niche

Did you ever feel that you weren't meeting as many people as you think you should? Have you ever felt that you wanted to get involved with something but wasn't sure how? And did you ever want to find a niche for yourself at this somewhat large university? Well, don't just sit there — "Just do it." Pick yourself up by the bootstraps and push yourself like the Little Engine That Could and say, "I think I can. I think I can. I think can."

Adam Scott
ROBERTS

Now that we've gotten started, where are the train tracks going to take you? Well, if you're Jewish and you want to get more in touch with the Jewish community here in Amherst I know just the place. The train's route runs along North Pleasant Street, home to the UMass Hillel House.

What is Hillel? Hillel can be the first stop on your four (and sometimes five) year excursion to getting in touch with Jewish life here on campus.

Hillel, for some, is a place to attend services on shabbat. For others, Hillel is a place to become involved in such groups as United Jewish Appeal, American Israel Public Affairs Committee, and Students Alliance for Israel.

Other groups that may fit your interests are the Black-Jewish Relations Committee, the Social Action Committee, and the Social Committee. Did you know this spring we are having a semi-formal? And if all goes well, a benefit will be held to raise money for the Pediatric AIDS Foundation.

Those are just a few things that we Hillelites have planned for you. Hillel even brings speakers to campus. Past speakers who inspired us include Elie Wiesel, Alan Dershowitz, Harold Kushner, Joseph Telushkin and Robert Alter.

For some, Hillel is a place they can call home — there's room for 26 students. I have spoken to people from the Jewish Living Community (JLC) who have said living in the JLC has contributed to making their time spent at UMass a positive experience.

The only way you'll actually feel like you fit in is through getting involved. So start your engines and begin to move. Hillel can offer you a chance to grow as an individual. Through your involvement you will meet many new friends.

Just imagine... You're strolling past the campus pond and you're walking by yourself. All of a sudden someone calls out your name. Who is it? It is someone that has also gotten involved with Hillel and like you has just made a new friend. And who knows — maybe while you're getting to know the people you've met at Hillel, romance may pop up on the horizon.

I encourage anyone who has joined Hillel but hasn't had the time to get involved to do so. And to all those prospective Hillelites, it's not too late to be a part of it; after all the semester has just begun. Climb aboard now — you don't want to miss your train.

Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian columnist.

Daily Collegian: socialist? heed these words and resist

Assuming a free and non-fascist statement can actually penetrate the red tape and appear in print, readers, please be aware the purpose of this article is to urge you not to read this, nor any other, "editorial/opinion" article. I recognize that you, already manipulated into turning the pages and reading this article, are simply not strong enough to resist reading what follows. With this in mind, follow along.

In my high school chemistry class, before I realized that my studying science would only be useful when not applied to science, I was taught the purpose of significant figures. If I solve the equation "2 + 3 = ?" my answer will be "5" only. The answer cannot be "5.0" or "5.00," or any number that reveals more about the accuracy of the answer. Why? Because the figures that make up the original equation reveal nothing of greater accuracy than "2" and "3." Maybe the numbers are, in fact, "2.00" and "3.00," but this information is hidden and we must not assume an accuracy beyond that which is provided to us. Got it?

Since I have realized science is useful only in fields other than science, I may draw an analogy. Nowhere in this paper will you find the definition of the Cawleejun as a newspaper, and therefore what is found betwixt the pages of the Collejhun cannot be taken as news. The publication is, as described on its front page, a "College Daily." Therefore, this paper is the daily representation of the views of the University. It is not news. Whatever is be hidden behind the print, whatever you may see in a photograph, the figures that make up the original equation reveal nothing of greater accuracy than "College Daily." You must not assume anything beyond this fact.

I want you to know that socialist views are the views of an institution as given and received by its subjects. My analogy fits into the definition of such views. The Cauliggun is a socialist paper that attempts to engineer an overthrow of your own opinions and views. RESIST!

I attack you with my words. What will you choose to accept and receive? I tell you that you are a subject under my command. Will you choose to believe me, or will you defend yourself?

I plead that you do not heed my words, that you find only what is significant and regard it as true, that you distinguish between fact and Communist editorial, and that you formulate and retain your own opinions. Remember also the only "College Daily" that does not manipulate you is "Jim's Journal."

You read this paper every day. You take it all in. I force this article upon you. What else are you forced to take in?

Please learn my lesson: do not be manipulated as easily as I have just manipulated you. You are my subject if you are silent.

Robert J. Malionek
Amherst

The real struggle women face

I feel the need to respond to Stephanie Eisenberg's column [Collegian, Feb.8] because I feel quite misrepresented by it. I think her views should not be taken as a real picture of the struggle that women face in regard to sexism. Eisenberg suggests that the way we can achieve betterment in society is if we "just act it". She cites lack of self-esteem as a reason for the oppression women experience in work or at home and advises us to respect ourselves rather than "running back and forth to the court crying discrimination."

First of all, women are not, "very good at standing up and shouting any time they feel their rights have been violated." The huge majority of legal violations against women go unreported. Secondly, and more importantly, is the nature of what the more abundant and much less easily pinpointed violations against women are. Sexism is not only about exploitation at work or physical attack; things that can be brought to some authority. Sexism is comprised of subtleties; subtleties that are manifested in our language, our HIStory, our media; sexism happens every time we point to an animal and say, "Look at him."

The years of denial and separation from all that is around us cannot be erased by a simple decision to respect ourselves. We must find every detail outside of us that keeps us from having that self respect inside of us — and then challenge it. I don't think the woMAN who responds to her boss' request for coffee or behaves "a little too promiscuously" needs to change something in herself; self respect doesn't put a paycheck in your hand and self respect doesn't erase the constant teaching that we need male companionship to be empowered, and that promiscuity ensures companionship.

Kelly Norris
Central

Learning from Baird and Wood

News item, Feb. 7: Judge Kimba Wood was forced Friday to withdraw herself from consideration as Attorney General. Why? There were, as with Zoe Baird before her, questions ever her hiring of an illegal immigrant. However, Judge Wood did so in 1986, when it was legal to hire illegal immigrants, as long as one reported it to the Immigrant Naturalization Service (INS) and paid Social Security tax. Judge Wood did this. Therefore, as both she and the White House asserted, she broke no law.

Why, then, was she made to withdraw? Because she acted within the law, but in a manner that raised political questions. Apparently, no woman may hold high office if she hired live-in help, unless that help was a fine, upstanding U.S. citizen.

But how many upstanding U.S. citizens will take such a thankless job? Few indeed. Therefore, women pursuing powerful careers must hire whoever will do the job. In Baird's case, this meant breaking the law, and she was disqualified as Attorney General. But in Judge Wood's case, there was nothing done illegally, and nothing should prevent her from attaining office.

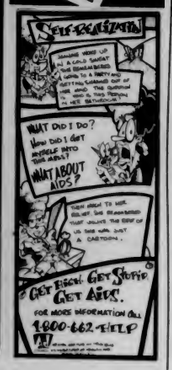
Except perhaps that she is a mother — that seems to be the case. After Baird's withdrawal, Ronald H. Brown, the secretary of commerce, came forward as having been delinquent with his Social Security taxes. He paid up and is still in office. Isn't the double standard apparent? Most certainly it is. Judge Kimba Wood has been denied top office for her legal hiring of an illegal immigrant, while Ronald Brown, who was never asked about his domestic life, admitted to wrongdoing, and kept his job.

It is strange that, in the wake of Anita Hill and the "Year of the Woman," this goes by almost unheralded. Perhaps we have all become numb from the constant lists of crimes, but it is a numbness we cannot afford. It is too late for Judge Wood. But perhaps we can learn from her experience.

Jonathan Frantz
Orchard Hill

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
FRIDAY and SATURDAY
9 PM TIL 1 AM

Continuous Round Trip Shuttle
Between Fleet Bank and Rafters
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040



HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
FIT FOR LIFE
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road
•PVTA bus route to Rolling Green•
• pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics •
• steps • nautilus • racquetball •
• free weights • jacuzzi • sauna •
• massage • bikes • tennis •
• rowers • treadmills •
• stairmasters •
• student discounts •
Call about our 15-week Semester Special-$169
Ends 2/14

Prosecutor says Meese lied in Iran-Contra case

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press

BOSTON — It would have been difficult to assemble an Iran-Contra criminal case against former Attorney General Edwin Meese III because key evidence was not uncovered for years, special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh says.

Walsh's comments Tuesday came a day after he issued a report that said Meese knew he was making a false statement when he told then-President Reagan and his advisers on Nov. 24, 1986, that Reagan hadn't known about a 1985 arms-for-hostages deal with Iran. Meese has denied that he lied.

Former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's notes - which prosecutor didn't uncover until 1991 — suggested that Meese "was warning the president's advisers that to disclose the president's knowledge" of a shipment of Hawk anti-aircraft missiles to Iran "would expose him to a charge of illegal activity."

Asked whether a conspiracy case might have been brought against Reagan, the independent counsel said: "Those are very difficult cases. And there's the added consideration that presidents are entitled, I think, to a particularly protective surrounding area because they are the one person in government who is never off duty."

Walsh also said that if Weinberger had gone to trial and taken the stand, the former defense secretary would have had to "disclose his knowledge" of the Reagan White House's arms-for-hostages deals with Iran.

Weinberger told Congress in 1987 that he hadn't known about either the shipment of 508 TOW anti-tank missiles to Iran in the fall of 1985 or the delivery of 18 Hawk missiles to Tehran airport in November 1985.

He also said he hadn't known that the Reagan administration was replenishing Israeli supplies of the U.S.-made weapons, which the White House had drawn on for the deliveries to Iran.

Weinberger had faced a Jan. 5 trial on charges he lied to Congress about the Contra aid and the 1985 shipments and had lied about the existence of his own notes.

Then-President Bush pardoned Weinberger and five other Iran-Contra figures last Christmas Eve — and act Walsh called an abuse of power.

"The pardons in a very odd way demonstrated the effectiveness of the investigation," the prosecutor said. "Why would a president do what he did unless the investigation were effective and thus the likelihood of conviction were there?"

Walsh said that if Bush had been called to testify at Weinberger's trial, "He would have to explain his being present at a meeting (on Nov. 24, 1986) in which the attorney general announced without dispute a false position as to the president of the United States."

However, he said Bush was less directly involved in the affair than Weinberger and others.

Walsh told the bar association meeting that the pardons issued by Bush were "perhaps the most dramatic demonstration of the need for an independent counsel act" for investigation of top government officials.

The law was inacted in 1978, five years after President Nixon fired Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox. It was renewed twice, but it expired last Dec. 15 after Republican senators blocked legislation to renew it again.

■ women

continued from page 1

My worst enemy was myself. People took me seriously."

Robertson said she ran Swift's campaign office by getting volunteers for events, doing mailings and fundraising, advertising and acting as her press liason. Swift ran in a district in which 15 percent of the voters were Republican, but managed to win 61 percent of the vote.

Robertson said she believes Clinton's victory may actually help the Republican Party in the long run.

"Nationally, the Republican Party is a mess. It is the best thing that could have happened because it will make them reorganize," Robertson said. "State Republicans are more down-to-earth."

Robertson said she believes Massachusetts Republicans are generally more liberal than national Party members as a whole.

Robertson noted how strange it is for a Catholic Republican to be pro-choice.

"Jane Swift as a person is pro-life. Jane Swift the legislator believes that the choice is up to every woman," Robertson said.

Swift is currently supporting Gov. Weld's proposal to reduce the state's age for eligibility to have an abortion from 18 to 16 and to reduce the number of consent forms needed by the women from two parents to one.

In 1994 Robertson will be graduating and Swift will be up for re-election. Robertson said she may team up with Swift again or start her own career in state government.

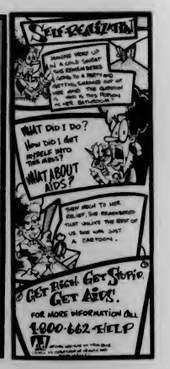
"I am going through campaign withdrawal," Robertson said.

Decker was witness to a success for Schroeder. The Family Leave Act that was introduced in 1985 by Schroeder recently passed, giving parents the option of two weeks unpaid leave from their job in cases of family matters.

About working in Schroeder's office Decker said, "I have found by talking to other interns that it is very different from other representatives' offices. People welcome you — it is very relaxed."

"Everyone in D.C. seems happier now that Clinton is in," Decker added. "The bottom line is that we now have opportunities that were never possible before."

It may be cold but these savings are HOT at Scott's!!
Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M.
Tel: 549-2692
Miller High life 24-12 oz. cans $9.99 + dep.
Natural Light $32.99 1/2 Kegs
No permit needed to purchase kegs
Koch's Golden Anniversary 24-16 oz. bottles $8.99 + dep.
Keystone Regular & Light $4.99 + dep. 12 pk. cans
Glen Ellen Chardonnay, Cab. Sauv., Sauv. Blanc $3.99 750 ml
Southern Comfort $8.49 750 ml
Bacardi Silver Rum $7.99 750 ml
CHECK OUT OUR IN-STORE SPECIALS BOARD: SAVE ON BEER, WINE AND LIQUOR!
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
Tele-check for your personal check.
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games!
FULL SELECTION OF NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE & BEERS



■ director

continued from page 1

Robinson said he wants to find a permanent replacement for Rinehart by July, but in the meantime Ruth Green, the associate director for Freshmen Admissions, will act as the director.

"I hope they will find someone who believes in the mission of the University, especially in public education and access to education," Rinehart said. "[I hope they have] a firm commitment to a more multicultural campus, and a sense of humor and a lot of patience."

■ culture

continued from page 3

books, including The Sixties: Years of Hope, Days of Rage, Inside Prime Time, and his newest novel, Maid of Albert Einstein.

Fred Fierst, a member of the General Council at Mirage Studios, will give the second lecture on Tuesday, Feb. 16 in Smith College's Alumni House conference room at 7:30 p.m., entitled "The Teen Age Mutant Ninja Turtles: The Explosion of a Worldwide Phenomenon."

Recycle this paper.
It'll make you feel good.

THE COLLEGIAN IS HERE AND READY TO TAKE YOUR SUGGESTIONS.
WRITE TO 113 CAMPUS CENTER OR CALL 545-3500
WE'RE HERE FOR YOU!

Valentines Day
1993
Still Cozy After All These Years!
The Pub Celebrating 25 Years in Downtown Amherst
THE PUB CELEBRATES 25 YEARS 1968 • 1993 IN AMHERST
• 15 EAST PLEASANT STREET •

CAREER OPPORTUNITY
EXPERIENCE is a must to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World...
The Collegian is looking for dedicated, responsible, organized Sophomores for positions of Associate Business Manager and Assistant Finance Manager
Applications are available at the Collegian
113 Campus Center
For more information, call 545-3500
Deadline: February 17, 1993
The Collegian is an equal opportunity employer

You'll find a "Sweetheart" of a deal at ... LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEER WINE LIQUORS
MEISTERBRAU $7.29 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
BUDWEISER $12.49 + DEP. REG, LIGHT, DRY CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES
KEYSTONE $9.49 + DEP. REG, LIGHT, DRY CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
FOSTERS LAGER $7.99 + DEP. 12 PK. BOTTLES
LOWENBRAU $6.49 + DEP. 12 PK. BOTTLES
FRANZIA WINES $8.49 5.0 L CHABUS, WHITE GRENACHE, RHINE, BLUSH
BERINGER $3.99 750 ML WHITE ZINFANDEL
GLEN ELLEN $3.99 750 ML CABERNET SAUVIGNON & CHARDONNAY
CONCHA Y TORO $5.49 1.5L CABERNET SAUVIGNON/MERLOT SAUVIGNON BLANC/SEMILLION
MARTINI & ROSSI ASTI SPUMANTE $8.49 750 ML
COSSACK VODKA $7.49 1.75L AFTER REBATE SALE 9.49 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00
BLACK VELVET $13.49 1.75L
DEWARS SCOTCH $26.99 1.75L
AMARETTO DiSARONNO $14.49 750 ML ROSE BOX
FLEISCHMAN'S GIN $11.99 1.75L
not responsible for typographical errors
OPEN: 9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
• TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS •
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS 2/11/93 THRU WEDS. 2/17/93
Full Redemption Center

Pearl Street
DANCE CLUB
Wednesday - DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R. Feb. 17 - Mardis Gras Party/ Masquerade Ball - Come In Prizes for Best Costume, Giveaways All Night
Thursday - WHMP EIGHTEEN & OVER DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R. WHMP's Ann Spenner Broacasting Live
Friday - DANCING WITH DJ PETER Playing the Best Dance Music • Free Admission Before 10pm• ••Free All Night With College ID••
Saturday - THE AREAS BIGGEST & BEST SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY WITH DJ DAVE Featuring The Best Dance Hits From The 70's, 80's & 90's Mt. Tom Ski Pass Giveaways
Sat. Feb. 13 - WMAS VALENTINES PARTY Win a Romantic Weekend Get-away to Vermont, Flowers For Every Couple, Chocolate Hearts Courtesy of Ben & Bills, Other Giveaways All Night - Listen to WMAS For Details.
LIVE MUSIC
Thurs., Feb. 11-9:00pm/18+/ MURPHY'S LAW Patchwork Revolution
Fri., Feb. 12-9:00pm/Rock 102/ Free Rock Friday THE SAINTS Free Before 10:00pm Free All Night w/College I.D.
Sat., Feb. 13-9:00pm FREE PRESS Rock Gods From Chicopee
Mon., Feb. 15-9:00pm/ Free LOW DOUGH SHOW $5 in advance THELONIOUS MONSTER
The Bell Tower Monghani Half Price Admission w/Metallica Ticket Stub
Thurs., Feb. 18-9:00pm/18+/ SHOCKRA Jiggle The Handle
Fri., Feb. 19-9:00pm Male Dance Revue CALIFORNIA PLAYGIRL CENTERFOLDS Tickets Only $5 in Adv.
Downstairs-9:00pm Free Rock Friday TEXAS FLOOD Stevie Ray Vaughn Tribute
Sat., Feb. 20-9:00pm EIGHT TO THE BAR Andrea & The Mortones
Tues., Feb. 23-9:00pm WAMH Presents TECHNO/RAVE DANCE PARTY
Thurs., Feb. 25-9:00pm/18+/ BIM SKALA BIM Duck Duck
Fri., Feb. 26-7:00pm Virgin/Charisma Recording Artists, THE SIGHS Ray Mason
Downstairs-9:00pm JOAN OSBORNE Borderland
Sat., Feb. 27-9:00pm WHO'S KIDDIN' WHO
Thurs., Mar. 4-9:00pm/18+/ THE MACHINE
Sat., Mar. 6-9:00pm JOHN CAFFERTY & THE BEAVER BROWN BAND
Tues., Mar. 9-9:00pm/18+/ TOO MUCH JOY
Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Box Office, For The Record in Amherst, Ticket Pro (800) 828-7080 10 Pearl Street Northampton 584-7771

Come to the DELTA House
- For Open Rush _
and get HYPNOTIZED

• TONIGHT •

Hypnotist John Sacco
visits DELTA UPSILON

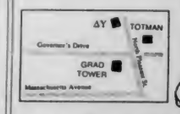
Feb. 11 8:00 P.M.

RUSH ΔY



For more information:
Call Jim or Jay
549-3831
Feel free to call for a ride

RUSH DELTA UPSILON

It's 12:42, and the folks at the folks at the Collegian...are...dozzzing.....zzzzzzzzz

BMCP & UPC PRODUCTIONS present

BRAND NUBIAN

PositiveK
DOUBLE X POSSE
DIAMOND &
THE PSYCHOTIC NEUROTICS

feb 17th 1993
S.U.B
UMASS
Amherst
doors open 7:30
tix:
$10 umass
$13 other

17+ ONLY
(unless accompanied by an adult)

available at:
Tix Unlimited
& For The Record in Amherst

Are You Sick of Being Just A Face In The Crowd?

Stand Head & Shoulders Above The Rest! ! !

Rush Nights and Events

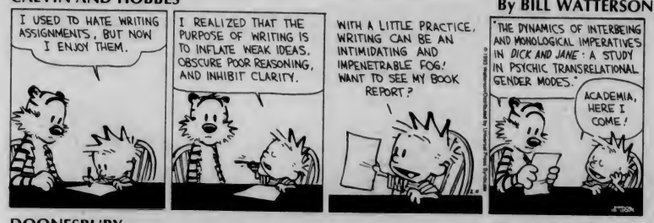
Thurs. Feb 11	D.P. Dough Calzone Night
Tues. Feb 16	Las Vegas Casino Night
Thurs. Feb 18	All you can eat Buffalo Wings Extravaganza

All Events from 7:30 - 9:00 PM

THETA CHI SPRING RUSH

496 North Pleasant Street (Right next to the Newman Center)
253-9015 549-4302

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON



DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Well, kid, ya beat me — and now every punk packin' a paddle and tryin' to make a name for himself will come lookin' for you! ... Welcome to hell, kid."

Quote of the Day

"Go that way, very fast. If something gets in your way, turn."

– The movie Better Off Dead on how to ski

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Lie low and wait for future developments to furnish the clues you need. Concentrate on your dear ones or a favorite hobby.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may not be able to put your finger on the cause of a blue mood. Contact old friends. An interest in business is revived. Turn an unusual opportunity into future financial gains.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Going quietly about your business is the surest way to head off interference. Let your imagination roam this afternoon. Prepare for the long climb toward a major objective.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Contact with an admirer at a distance could be a sweet surprise. Luck smiles on your long-range plans. A harmonious atmosphere at home allows you to concentrate on business goals.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emotions may run high today; strive for stability. Make certain higher-ups get what they expect from you. Bargains abound for holiday shoppers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An encouraging message or welcome visitor boosts your expectations. You feel much more optimistic!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take a chance on love. Plunging into an affair of the heart will recharge your batteries. Spend only what you must, not what you would like to. A holiday message brings wonderful family news.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Kind feelings flourish within the family circle. A joint planning session will produce spectacular results. A new household project has special merit. Persevere!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Even minor career gains could lead to big benefits down the road. You have an innovative way of doing things.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your financial prudence will pay off today. Keep your ear to the ground for snippets of news. An employment situation could annoy you. Advertise your talents.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A partner could prove difficult to please. Business squabbles may have to be ironed out legally. Be adventuresome if you see a way to make new profits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your financial prospects get a dramatic boost. A change in technique or attitude will bring you rich rewards. You meet someone at work who electrifies you. Go slow.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

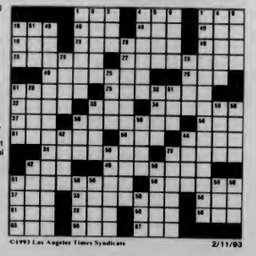
ACROSS
1 Bud to sis
4 Actor Guleger
7 Clean the floor
10 "Nightmare" street
13 Corn or pod lead-in
14 Towel marking
15 Soprano Sumac
16 Napoleon's marshal
17 Boardinghouse clientele
19 Cariou or Deighton
20 Realm
22 Rawlings' "The —"
24 Compensates
26 "— a girl!"
27 British tempo
29 Lab worker, often
32 King of Greece: 1832-82
33 Be human
34 Type of computer
37 Downed
38 Compress
40 "The Name of the Rose" author
41 Part of FBI
43 Summer along the Seine
44 "The Tentmaker"
45 Tops in neatness
47 Abundance
48 Her, in Frankfurt
49 Bar mat
51 Former slave
54 Housing for 58 Across
57 Rumpus room, briefly
58 Flying fleet unit
60 Bachelor's final words
61 Actress Munson
62 Wager
63 The works
64 Cartoon shriek
65 Debussy subject
66 "A Chorus Line" number
67 O'Neill play

DOWN
1 Controversy
2 Actor Jeremy
3 Life story, for short
4 Swiss or American
5 Milan money
6 Former Communist initials
7 TV oldie
8 Portents
9 Three
10 Remnant
11 The Lion
12 TV oldie
18 TV oldie
21 Mod hairdo
23 Entertainer Kirk
25 Decorator's color
27 Region of Jordan near the Dead Sea
28 Memorable words from Caesar
30 Labyrinth
31 Paul feminizer
33 Distant or table start
35 One- —: ball game
36 Clinton's Veep
38 Downcast
39 Kett or James
42 Emerald Isle
44 Ready for customers
46 Card game
47 Rice or flour, e.g.
48 "Good night" girl of song
50 Accomplice, of a sort
51 "..— sea to shining sea"
52 Actress Maryan
53 Bearing
55 Humorist George
56 Korean soldier
59 "Bali —" from "South Pacific"

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

B	O	T	H	S		H	A	C	K		A	P	S	E
A	N	O	E	S		O	R	I	S		S	P	A	T
C	L	E	A	N	S	W	E	E	P	S		S	P	A
H	Y	S	S	O	P		S	E	L	F		P	R	E
			E	R	I	E		S	P	E	L	L	E	R
H	E	R		T	A	R	S		P	E	A	R	L	S
O	L	E		S	N	A	G		E	S	C
G	I	V	E	T	H	E	B	R	U	S	H	O	F	F
			E	R	I	E		B	A	C		N	O	E
		D	O	N	E			S	N	O	W
B	L	A	S	T	E	D		E	N	O	W
H	A	I		S	A	R	I		D	I	A	N	E	S
I	R	I	D		C	O	N		E	A	N	D	A	I
N	E	O	N		L	E	V	I	S		S	E	T	T
E	D	M	A		N	E	S	S			R	O	S	A

2/11/93



©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

2/11/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Marc Elliott
Copy Editor	Michelle Robbins
PhotoTechnician	Aram Comjean
Production Supervisor	Lisa Jezowski
Production	Amanda Mead, Jim Ganley, Sean Ramsey

Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Reuben Sandwich	Rotini / meat sauce
Clam Roll	Cheese Strudel
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Hummus Veggie Pocket	Rotini / sauce
Clam Roll	Cheese Strudel

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS

Discount Discount

18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Miller "High Life"
only $9.99 case cans

Michelob (your choice) $6.99 12 pk bottles

BUD DRY BOTTLES
$10.99 case

Freixenet Gordon Negro $5.99 750 ml

Dos Equis Amber
$8.99 12 pk bottles
Schaefer (close out)
$7.99 case cans
American Beer
Still Only $7.29 case cans

Finlandia Vodka 7.99 750 ml

Sutter Home White Zinfandel $3.99 750 ml

(Quanity Discounts Available)
Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) Delivery Available

■ hockey

continued from page 12

Smythe Division: The Smythe has fallen a long way from the glory days of the powerhouse Oilers and Flames. The Canucks have emerged as the top team in this relatively weak division, led by the "Russian Rocket" Pavel Bure and the impressive goaltending of Kirk McLean.

But in a playoff series an opponent needs only to defuse "the Rocket" and Vancouver's weak defense, and lack of other offensive weapons will expose themselves. Winnipeg is improving, led by rookie Teemu Selanne, but it will probably be at least another year before the Jets are contenders.

All-Star Weekend: New commissioner Gary Bettman had better hope that a very few people tuned into this year's All-Star (no defense) game, because it was an embarrassment to the NHL.

Pre-game ceremonies were to feature former Canadian great Maurice "Rocket" Richard skating around the ice displaying the Stanley Cup. The once graceful Richard tripped as he stepped onto the Forum ice, dropping and denting hockey's greatest prize. It was an omen of how the day would go.

I'm fantasizing a little here, but the skills competition would be considerably enhanced by a Best Fighter Competition. The eight players with the most penalty minutes would square off against one another, with the first one to fall eliminated and the winner advancing. Fans across the country would tune in to see a Bob Probert and Tie Domi battle at center ice.

Less than year until the first puck is dropped for UMass hockey at the Mullins Center. For those who can't wait, check out the intramural action at the practice rink.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian correspondent.

■ ■ ■

Teradyne
The right place for you.

Tom Conner
Software Engineer
Electronic Design Automation
Boston, MA

BS, Electrical Engineering
Cornell University, 1989

Teradyne is the right place for people like Tom Conner. It's a stimulating environment that challenges people every day. You're free to do the things you think need to be done, with a minimum of rules, regulations, and bureaucracy. We want people who don't need to be led by the hand. We want talented, bright people with new ideas and the initiative to give those ideas a shot.

You'll have plenty of opportunity at Teradyne. We're a $500 million electronics company that competes in the global market, working with the world's largest companies. Our technology is unmatched, and our commitment to Total Quality Management is unwavering. In other words, we're big... but not too big!

If you want to learn more about your place at Teradyne, visit your Career Services Office, or see us when we're on campus.

The only limits at Teradyne is on the work we do – not on the clothes we wear or the size of your office.

We will be on campus February 25, 1993

TERADYNE
An Equal Opportunity Employer

IMPORTANT: Please learn American Red Cross Infant/Child CPR

SPRING BREAK
PANAMA CITY BEACH
FLORIDA
- High quality beachfront accommodations for 7 exciting nights
- Round trip chartered motor coach
- Free pool deck parties, activities, & promotions
- Inter-Campus Programs I D /Discount card
- On-location staff for complete assistance
- All taxes, fips, & service charges included

$119 $209

Call Jon or Matt
549-3749

SKI
SPRINGBREAK
3RD ANNUAL INTERCOLLEGIATE
SKI WEEKS
MT. SUTTON, CANADA
(Just across the Vermont border)
ONLY
$209
Party in the Snow!
Includes:
5 Day Lift Ticket
5 Nights Lodging
(Mountainside Condo)
5 Days Intercollegiate Activities
Sponsors Include: Labatt's, Evian, and Molson.
Legal Age for Alcohol is 18
Group Leader Discounts
SPRINGBREAK '93
CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
1-800-999-SKI-9

■ hardwood

continued from page 12

If Isiah didn't make the team, would he have blamed it on a conspiracy headed by Jordan to keep him off? Sure he would.

Speaking of another omission: the best coach in the NBA, Pat Riley, decided that no rival New Jersey Net deserved to be in the Game when he named Joe Dumars to the team instead of Drazen Petrovic. Petro is averaging 23.4 points per game for the vastly improving Nets (27-20). Dumars is averaging about the same, on a Pistons team that is 15 games worse than New Jersey. Can you say slighted?

I've heard some say that Scottie Pippen, another starter in the Game, is second to only his All-World teammate as far as skill goes. Let me say right now that Pippen is not the second best player in the NBA. He is inconsistent at times, gets into dazes sporadically, and is just close to an All-Star playing on any other team. If not Pippen, then who is? Try Lord Charles.

A fallen hero, Chris Mullin, will be out for six to eight weeks after surgery on his hand. This just in: the Warriors are done. Without Mullin and Billy Owens, Golden State will have to win the Hardaway, Tim that is.

Hardaway is inconsistent, despite being the second best distributer of the rock in the NBA. Some nights he shoots 14 for 17 and other nights he can't put one in the ocean.

It is nice to see Mark Jackson continue his incredible play for the Clippers. Jackson, averaging 14.6 points per game and nearly nine assists per game, deserved to be added to the Game. This man is one reason why the Clippers have a chance to go far in the Playoffs.

Did you see that?

- Shaq's dismantling of the entire hoop in Sunday's loss at Phoenix.
- Richard Dumas' performance against the Magic. This man belongs in the Game.
- Willow Bay of NBC's Inside Stuff. Enough said.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN:
THE LARGEST DAILY COLLEGE NEWSPAPER IN NEW ENGLAND. PUBLISHED FOR STUDENTS BY STUDENTS. KEEPING YOU INFORMED OF LOCAL AND WORLD EVENTS, AND REMINDING YOU OF STUFF YOU MIGHT FORGET!

COLLEGIAN CONCERT SWEEPSTAKES
TWO WINNERS WILL BE CHOSEN BY RANDOM DRAWING!
WIN A PAIR OF FREE TICKETS TO
THELONIOUS MONSTER
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB • MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15

THELONIOUS MONSTER/OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM
Name:_____
Phone #:_____

RULES
Must be at least 18 years old to enter. Tickets are non-refundable.
Drawing to be held on Thursday, Feb. 11, 1993. No entries will be recieved after 3:30pm on 2/11/93. Collegian Staff are not eligible to enter. Winners will be contacted by telephone. Drop off entries at Collegian business window, 113 Campus Center (basement), UMass , Amherst. Winners are responsible for picking up tickets at the Collegian office before 3:30pm on Friday, Feb. 12. Only one entry per person will be accepted. Only official entry form from newspaper will be accepted.

Grand Opening Weekend
Thursday - Friday - Saturday - Sunday
Dancing
with
D.J. Pete Free
Every Night
Any Menue Nachos Only $2.00
9:30 - 10:30
THE 25 PUB
CELEBRATES 25 YEARS IN AMHERST
1968 • 1993
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Leadership, Friendship, Service
Rush Alpha Phi Omega
Information Meetings
TONIGHT - 7pm - Crabtree Lounge
TOMMOROW-7pm Patterson TV Lounge

SPECTRUM GENERAL MEETING
New members welcome!
Old members please attend!
EARTHFOODS 8pm Thurs 2/26

Spectrum Magazine seeks submissions: Art, photography, poetry, prose. Due date: 2/16/93
406 S. Student Union
Questions? Visit office or 545-2240

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Attention all students of Indian, Pakistani, Sri Lankan, and Bangladeshi origin: First general south Asian club meeting to be held tonite at 7:00 pm in the Duke's Room – Student Union. Come by and see what we're all about.

Europe this summer? Only $169!! Jet there anytime for $169! Reported in Let's Go! & NY Times. Caribbean – $189 r/t air to somewhere sunny. California - $129 one way, either way. AIRHITCH@ 212 864-2000

Having problems with your roomate? Contact OCHO, 428 Student Union or call us at 545-0865. We can help!

Join the UMass Raquetball Club. All levels welcome. For more info. call Don at 546-1527

Looking for a place to live off-campus? Questions about your commuter living situation? Subletting In May? Come to OCHO, 428 Student Union, 545-0865.

Mortar Board Week 2/16 - 19 on the concourse -- Get write on it and help to author a UMass book to raise $ for the literacy project, raffle for $100 and other prizes, information about this senior honor society.

Space Allocation Process
Attn: RSO's and GSO's who would like to apply for office space in the CC/Student Union complex may obtain applications to do so at the Board of Governors office 817 CC or SAO 416 Student Union.
Deadline to submit applications: March 5, 1993

The Movie Club at Hillel House presents "When Harry Met Sally," Thursday Feb 11 7:30 pm in the downstairs lounge at Hillel, 549-1710. See you there.

Valentine Roses Campus Center Concourse (Wed-Fri) or call Chris 259-1589 (6-10pm) Visa/MC Deliveries Available

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-6098
549-6073

FOR RENT

Amherst room to rent 300 mo. first last security daytime 545-6395 nite967-4065

Fridge Rental 253-9742 delivered free

Ideal Main Street location
Perfact for two $500/mo
Avail imm. 498-2631 Erik 6-10 pm

Room Available $275/mo S. Amherst call Stacey 253-5326 large apt great roommate

FOR SALE

Atomic ARS Sport 195 cm
Marker M46 bindings
Good condition -- $100 or B.O.
Call Reid 256-0301

MAC 512K Computer
Panasonic 52 Watt Boombox CD & Double Cassette Mint $175 Nicole 256-8311

Metallica Tickets for sale call 549-6783

PH 608 Used Book
Public Campaign $9.50
Prime Activitism $7.00
Call 546-2862

Printer for sale 413-245-9542 after 7 ask for Don

Rossignol 4S Sz 190 and Atomic 723 sz195 Real Cheap! Call Kim 549-2816

FOR SALE - AUDIO/VIDEO

Stereo components: Used /reconditioned, area's largest selection. Buy/sell/trade at Stereo/video Exchange, Sundays 10-4 inside Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

GREEKS AND CLUBS

$1000 an Hour!
Each member of your frat, sorority, team, club, etc, pitches in just one hour and your group can raise $1000 in just a few days! Plus a chance to earn $1000 for yourself! No cost, no obligation. 1-800-932-0528 ext. 65

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

COUNSELORS: CAMP EMERSON, coed, Massachusetts. Swimming, tennis, landwater sports, arts/crafts, archery, theatre, woodworking, rocketry, computers, yearbook, photography, administrative, more! Super kids, great food, friendly fun! No general counselors. 800/955-CAMP

EARN UP TO $10/HR
Are you looking for great hours? Great $$$? And a great experience? Don't look any further. Market for Fortune 500 Companies! CALL NOW
1-800-932-0528 ext. 17

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Ocean Water Action. $100/wk. +. On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex areas. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours -- good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon. - Fri. + Sunday. Early hours - good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT -- Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000 - $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Postal jobs available! Many positions. Great benefits. Call 1-800-436-4365 ext. p 3306

Student Groups raise $1000 in 1 week! No cost or risk! Call 548-4330 Marcel

Summer jobs and internships University Directories, the nations largest publisher of campus telephone directories (including UMass at Amherst), is interviewing goal oriented students for a challenging, full-time summer position. Gain valuable experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings $3900. Expense paid training program in Chapel Hill, NC. College credit may be available. Interviews on UMass at Amherst campus February 24th. Information and interview sign up available today at the Visitors Center or call 1-800-743-5556

Today is the LAST DAY applications will be accepted for tour guides, student admissions representatives, and new students program summer counselor positions. Applications available in the Admissions office.

INSTRUCTION

Learn to Scuba diva earn two credits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday at Curry Hicks 7-10 pm 1-800-282-0977

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

Lost Ring – Reward
Totman -- Feb 1st
Friendship "LTM"
Call collect 508 827-4555

Prescription sunglasses lost 2/3/93 please call Ed at 566-9565 w/info.

Silver + Gold Seiko watch on Montague Rd. In Amherst. If found please call 549-0338

MUSIC

OSB Underground
Recording Studio
1-746-8028

Speakers, Reconing + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

MUSICIANS

Keyboardist Wanted: Phish, Allmans, Creative Improv 256-8115

PERSONALS

Dimos
You are the mostest
Happy Valentine's Day
From your fan club

Marianne O'Neill
Feliz Dia de San Valentin
de tu no tan secreto admirador
XXOOXX

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Colby College this weekend. Of course I'll split gas and tolls. Please call Michelle at 6 1338

Seek car poolmates from Boston area Tuesdays and Thursdays Call Bruce: (617)326-9468

ROOMATES WANTED

2 females or couple to share room $160 each or $275 for single, beautiful apartment 665-7604

SERVICES

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Legal Services Center regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center 545-1995

Need Help With Your Taxes? Student tax return preparation. Starting at $20.00 Rich 549-8109

Resume Preparation assistance with complete resume development. Keith Anderson, Ph.D. 582-4037

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

TRAVEL

Scuba Dive Key Largo
Spring Break, Call Project Deep
1-800-282-0977

SKI – Springbreak Intercollegiate Ski Weeks, only $209. Includes: 5 DAY LIFT TICKET/5 NIGHTS LODGING (MOUNTAINSIDE CONDO) /5 DAYS INTERCOLLEGIATE ACTIVITIES (Drinking age – 18). Sponsored by Labatt's, Evian, Molsen, and Mt. SUTTON, CANADA (Just across the Vermont border) Group leader discounts. Springbreak '93. Call Ski Travel Unlimited. 1-800-999-SKI-9

Spring Break:
CANCUN, NASSAU
from $299
Organize a small group for FREE trip
Call 1(800)Get-Sun-1

Spring Break '93****
Cancun $479! Jamaica $499!
Daytona Beach $169! Organize a small group and travel FREE! New England's largest spring break company!
TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL
1-800-328-SAVE

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

Want to Travel!!!
Great rates for
Cancun Jamaica
and others
Great rates
Call Jason 549-3525

WANTED

UMass Updata is looking for reporters and writers for the news show call Sempy at 545-1336 or at 546-3021

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. In Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

Men start long road trip versus St. Joe's

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

Harper Williams and the Minutemen are in for one tough weekend. They play St. Joe's tonight at 7:15 p.m. and George Washington Saturday at noon.

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts basketball team places its nine-game winning streak and sole possession of first place in the Atlantic 10 on the line tonight (7:15 p.m.), when it faces St. Joseph's in Philadelphia.

Massachusetts (15-4, 7-1 in the A-10), ranked No. 22 in the country, will be tested by the second place Hawks (14-5, 5-2) in front of a capacity and most likely unruly crowd of 3,200 inside the Alumni Memorial Fieldhouse.

St. Joseph's has become the surprise team of the A-10 this season. After finishing 6-10 in conference last season, the Hawks were selected to finish in the second tier of the league by nearly every preseason poll, only now to find themselves in line for an NCAA Tournament bid.

"I take no credit as a coach for the turn around," Hawks coach John Griffin said. "It must be luck."

While Griffin, the leading candidate for A-10 Coach of the Year honors, may think luck turned things around, most would agree junior guards Bernard Blunt and Rap Curry have something to with it.

Blunt, who is averaging 18.5 points a game, has hit the big shots all season for the Hawks, while Curry (13.3 points and 5.1 assists per game) has rebounded from injuries to be the floor general St. Joe's have been searching for.

"Rap has been doing it all for us," Griffin said. "This team was in desperate need of leadership and he has provided it. He has given us a calmness when we get down."

The Hawks have a never-say-die attitude and have rallied from large first half deficits to win at both Temple and Rhode Island.

"Our players are older and a lot more confident this year so we haven't been intimidated on the road, even when we get down," Griffin said.

The Minutemen will have to be able to do the same tonight as they enter an arena which has been sold out for over a week to play a game which has been hyped up considerable on campus. The Hawks are 7-0 at the Fieldhouse this season.

"We're trying to get a rage in the Cage going down here," Griffin said of the Cage-like Memorial Fieldhouse which promises to be rocking tonight. "This is a big game for us. We're happy to be playing a game which means so much.

"Usually we're playing for a winning season right now, not first place in the league."

Despite the success thus far, Griffin is not overly confident in his team.

"I don't think many people are convinced we're that good," Griffin said. "And I may be one of them."

The prospects of playing the Minutemen, even at home, are unsettling for Griffin.

"We are going to need as much kryptonite as we can get tonight," Griffin said. "UMass is very deep and very talented. They have a number of ways to beat you."

Griffin says he has a match-up problem in the front court, but his forwards have played very well this season, especially 6-7 Carlin Warley (12.6 points, 9.6 rebounds per game) and 6-5 Bernard Jones (11.7 points).

"St. Joe's is the best rebounding team we've faced," UMass coach John Calipari said. "The key to the game will be whether we can rebound with them. I don't think we can out rebound them, they are going to be up to play us since we made the top 25."

Griffin said, "We have enough incentive to play well against them because its a league game and we haven't played well against them recently. We are all excited to be playing in such a big game."

Rutgers outduels UMass

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

Sometimes the final score is not always indicative of how close a game was.

Such was the case last night for the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team as they battled a much stronger Rutgers squad with everything they had at the Curry Hicks Cage, keeping the score close the whole game, only to lose their third straight, 65-47.

"We kept it close all game and played well defensively, but we had no one step up offensively," said UMass head coach Joanie O'Brien. "Since we had no perimeter threat, they (Rutgers) were able to collapse down on Melissa (Gurile) and Octavia (Thomas) — that made it very difficult for us to score."

UMass (8-11, 4-5) trailed 28-19 at the half and looked to be right in the game but Rutgers (8-0 in A-10) came out of the locker room with fire in their eyes, scoring two easy buckets to push the Lady Knight advantage to 13. But the Minutewomen came back with some fire of their own, running off 12 unanswered points cutting the deficit to one thanks to eight points from Kim Kristofik (10 points).

Rutgers responded after a time out with C'ta Mitchelson (eight pts, five rebounds) and Liz Hanson providing some key baskets. UMass went into the game knowing they had to stop Rutger's top-gun Caroline DeRoose (16.4 ppg, 5.5 reb) and did an admirable job of doing so, but it was Hanson who was a nemesis for UMass all game long, scoring a career-high 12 points off the bench.

"She really gave us the shot in the arm that we needed," said Rutgers ~~head coach~~ Theresa Grentz. "We were sluggish in the beginning but Liz was just great in both halfs."

O'Brien was equally dismayed as Grentz was excited about Hanson's performance.

"She really surprised us by hitting all those shots," she said. "We were focusing on stopping DeRoose [13 pts, 4 rebs] and Mitchelson but Hanson really stepped up."

Neither team scorched the nets in the early going, but UMass managed to take an early 9-8 lead thanks to some smart play at the point by Trish Hopson and stellar shooting by Gurile (14pts, 11boards). Gurile's jumper at the 16:23 mark started UMass on a 6-0 run, causing the Lady Knight's to call time out.

After the time out, Rutgers came out with a fury, scoring timely baskets and shutting down the UMasss offense for six minutes. After a Kristofik jumper at the 10:26 mark of the first half, UMass didn't score until Trish Hopson hit a three-pointer at the 4:06 mark. Still, UMass only trailed by three at this point.

"We definitely could have pulled this game out," said Gurile. "But we have to just look past this [loss] and be ready to get after it on Saturday against Rhode Island."

Hockey's second half

The second half is here, hockey fans. Here's how the league shapes up for the home stretch.

Adams Division: Whoever wins the Adams could find themselves well on their way to the Stanley Cup. Although the smart money is on Montreal to finish atop the regular season standings, the divisional playoffs will be up for grabs. The off-season additions of Brian Bellows and Vincent Damphouse have made the Canadian offense a nightmare for opposing defenses.

Matt
VAUTOUR

To be competitive in the playoffs though, Patrick Roy has to return to top form. The usually impenetrable Roy, has proved vulnerable during the first half of the season. The Bruins, with the return of Cam Neely, and Buffalo, who has finally acquired a top-notch goalie in Grant Fuhr, will both present challenges to Montreal.

Patrick Division: The Penguins have a firm hold on the Patrick Division's regular season title, leading the second place Capitals by seventeen points. This impressive first half was due largely to the scoring and leadership of Mario Lemieux.

With Lemieux battling Hodgkin's Disease and likely out for the season, the Penguins will be beatable. Although Pittsburgh are a talented team even without Lemieux, his leadership and big game play will be sorely missed in the playoffs. Fortunately for the Pens, no other Patrick division club seems ready to topple the defending champs.

Norris Division: This is always one of the most competitive divisions. Barring injury, Chicago should remain atop the division. There are three key ingredients to NHL success: a) A hot goalie. Eddie Belfour has been steady all season for the Blackhawks. If he continues to play well, he could carry Chicago in the playoffs.

b) Defense. Anchored by Chris Chelios and Steve Smith, the Chicago defense been nearly unsolvable. c) A leader on offense. Jeremy Roenick has become one of the league's top centers. He's been a force for the Blackhawks so far this season, and should be a factor in the playoffs.

Only the high powered offense of the Detroit Red Wings has a chance of beating the Blackhawks, but their inconsistent defense and goaltending will likely hinder the Wings playoff aspirations.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 10

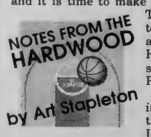
Isiah Thomas not an All-Star



Last week my trip around the NBA came to a screeching halt, so I've decided to pick up where it left off. First of all, the All-Star squads were named, and it is time to make a few complaints. Isiah Thomas does not deserve to play in the Game, let alone start ahead of Jeff Hornacek, Kenny Anderson, Scott Skiles, and Mark Price.

But, oh, those loyal fans in Detroit decided to stuff the ballot boxes and get Isiah elected. Fine. Just think of the communication between Thomas and his starting backcourt mate in the Game, Michael Jordan. Boy, they should really have fun trying to keep the ball away from each other.

Turn to HARDWOOD, page 11

Swim team pumped for N.E. Champs

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Staff

Miles of practices and months of pain have spiraled down to one very major event for the University of Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team, and they say they are ready.

Seventeen swimmers and three divers will embark upon a tour of duty to Kingston, R.I. where they will try to capture a top three spot at the much awaited New England Championship.

It has been two years since the Minutewomen have accomplished such a feat. However, the team is confident that the goal is within their grasp.

"This is what we've trained for all season," said co-captain Kari Edwardsen. "The object of our training was to peak for New Englands. This weekend will be the ultimate test."

In what is one of the largest conference meets in the country, the Minutewomen will compete with about sixteen Division I and II New England teams. Providence College and the University of Connecticut are favored for first or second. If all goes well, UMass will be battling Boston College and Rhode Island for third.

"The team has a shot at the top three and they are very focused on achieving it," said assistant coach Ed Melanson.

UMass has gotten stronger meet by meet. This is due to their training regimen, says head coach Bob Newcomb.

"Our training plan isn't geared toward swimming exceptionally fast in the early part of the season," said Newcomb. "A lot of teams will swim the same times all year. We train for continual growth and patience has helped get us there."

Rankings reflecting dual meet records currently place the Minutewomen at fifth in New England.

An optimistic Newcomb and Melanson say that all 20 members are capable of scoring points in the championship. "It's a pretty impressive feat to pull off," said Melanson. "However, I feel confident on how we're going to perform."

Newcomb is looking to start off the meet strong, scoring points early in the 200-yard freestyle relay. He expects the sprinters to pull through and start the team off in a good fashion. Junior diver Allison White is the defending three-meter champion, and should rack some quality points for the team.

The Minutewomen are intent on defeating Boston College again. "We'd like to show BC that beating them was no fluke," said Melanson.

Enter the MurphyFishBosstonbuddha Triangle

MURPHY'S LAW

By ADAM RATTINER
Collegian Correspondent

"Good clean fun," is the Murphy's Law philosophy. They claim to be "New York's single most entertaining live act" and this may very well be true. Murphy's Law will be playing at Pearl Street this evening at 9 p.m. with Patchwork Revolution opening up.

They formed at a party in 1983 where they chose the name Murphy's Law because everything went wrong that could go wrong. Jimmy Drescher, the vocalist, is the only original member left with the band. "I remember the snare drum rolling by — followed by the guy who owned it. But, everybody liked it. They kept asking for more and still do," Drescher said.

The current bassist, Chuck Valle is an accomplished engineer with credits on releases such as Public Enemy's It Takes A Nation of Millions to Hold us Back and L.L. Cool J's Walking With a Panther.

In 1986 Murphy's Law made a breakthrough on the Beastie Boy's Licensed To Ill tour. They took over where New York hardcore bands like Minor Threat and the Descendents left off. Their album Back With A Bong was very popular in the New York City skin head/punk (peaceful ones) and skateboarding maniac's scene. Interestingly enough Public Enemy made their first live debut opening up for Murphy's Law on the Licensed to Ill Tour.

Murphy's Law's latest album The Best of Times is musically supreme. Songs like "Big Spliff," "Did You Play War," and "The Best of Times" bake the cake. "Spliff" is mellow but excellent to mosh to. "Did You Play War" is a song about generations of children raised on violence. "The Best of Times" is a great tune that emphasizes the seriously serious fun Murphy's Law is all about.

The album was produced by Fishbone's own singer, Angelo Moore who also sings with Drescher on "Ebony and Ivory."

The Bosstones and Fishbone were at a Murphy's Law show a year ago at a Boston night club. My friend Dan told me, "The pit was incredible. Angelo Moore swam across the pit and the Bosstones were slamming in there also. Angelo fell and I helped him up. He gave me a noogie on my head in appreciation."

I think there is a triangle of bands in the United States that emphasize fun, peace, and moshing (slam dancing). They are the Bosstones in Boston, Murphy's Law in New York and Fishbone in Los Angeles. It should be called the MurphyFishBosstonbuddha Triangle. Murphy's Law is quite commonly compared to these other two bands and they deserve it!

The Murphy's Law show at Pearl Street should have a thrilling mosh pit and some wonderful melodic tunes pumping from the speakers. Drescher explains, "It's for everybody, from frat dudes to Deadheads to punk rockers to metal heads. When we have a show, we don't want it to be a show so much as a party. . . . When people come to see Murphy's Law, they go to vent, to unwind, to jump around and feel uninhibited about themselves, about what they look like and what everyone else looks like. They go to have fun."

Murphy's Law will play tonight at Pearl Street at 9 p.m. for an 18 and over crowd. Opening for the band will be Patchwork Revolution.

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Exercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 115, South Amherst
256-0080

Council Travel
79 So. Pleasant Street
Amherst
256-1261
SPRINGBREAK!
JAMAICA $469
CANCUN 439
KEY WEST 269
7 Nights, incl. Airfare from Boston, Hotel & transfers. Taxes not included. Rates subject to change.
CALL NOW!!

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT
ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS
THE BROOK AT AMHERST GIRLS
QUIET CONTENT & FLEXIBLE
253-3834

Space Allocation Process

Attention:

R.S.O.'s and G.S.O.'s who would like to apply for office space in the Campus Center / Student Union Complex may obtain applications to do so at the Board of Governors Office
817 Campus Center or Student Activities Office
416 Student Union

Deadline to submit application:
March 5, 1993

Wanna get lost in the Cracks?

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Staff

A Crack in the Jamb
Yep!
Duckwater Productions

Despite winning last semester's Southwest Battle of the Bands, Yep! is still a band with an undeserved lack of exposure in it's own back yard. A Crack in the Jamb, the band's first studio effort, should change all that — and the sooner, the better.

Yep! can flat-out play and A Crack in the Jamb bears that fact out. The five-song tape shows off the band's song-writing creativity and sense of humor (i.e. a reggae cover of the Mario Bros. theme song) as well as some genuine musical ability.

If you're looking for a label for Yep!, forget it. The band's sound reflects too wide a breadth of influences to assign one classification to it. So if you must have a label, "eclectic" will have to do.

The band's influences range from rhythm and blues to reggae and jazz, and the musicians in Yep! are more than qualified to pull off any or all of these forms. Drummer Fred Hazelton, for instance, rolls through heavy, fast fills or lays down a complex reggae beat equally well. Guitarist Jack Carson's saxophone solos are just as good as his guitar licks.

Bassist Raul Goodness also sings ("Blinders") and keeps a solid bassline moving underneath Shawn Gundersen (vocals and guitar), Carson and John Greene (keyboards).

By themselves, Goodness' bass lines might seem understated. But this plan of attack makes sense when one considers how often and well the other band members improvise.

When so many improvisational elements take the stage at once, keeping everything tight is important. Otherwise, the results could be messy, even disastrous. But on stage and on A Crack in the Jamb Yep! achieves a tightness that suggests a lot of practice and control while maintaining free-form creativity that works well.

A Crack in the Jamb starts off with "Purples," a hyper-paced 12-bar blues about a tenant's "relationship" with a mean, green-toothed landlady. Gundersen rattles off funny lyrics about having to live off breakfast cereal and pork rinds, quickly and playfully. It's a good introduction to the band's creative, irreverent style and tight musicianship.

The kind of range Yep! posseses is seen in the variety of material they play. Yep! can speed straight ahead ("Seems to Me") or go for slower, more scenic drives ("Sleeping Willow"), and both work well.

In sum, if you haven't heard Yep! yet, get your paws on A Crack in the Jamb. Better yet, find out when they're playing live next and check 'em out in person. Yep! has a lot more material than the five songs on the tape would suggest — two set's worth, to be exact — and unlike some of the area's better-known bands, they play very few covers, a point the band makes with pride.

A Crack in the Jamb is available at For The Record and Al Bum's in Amherst.

QUALITY SILK SCREENED SPORTSWEAR
Free screen $15.00 value over 16 shirts
T-SHIRTS • SWEATS
BUMPER STICKERS
MUGS
KENNEDY SCREEN GRAPHICS
16 Armory Street
Northampton, MA 01060
(413) 584-2124
1-800-287-2124

BEYOND THE NAMES PROJECT
Quilt Exhibition • February 1993

The Health Education Division is proud to display the panels from the Five-College AIDS Quilt Project at the University Health Center gallery through February, 1993.

The five area schools have given students an opportunity to express their personal reflections on the AIDS/HIV crisis. Using donated cloth, yarn, fabric markers, buttons, paper, glitter, etc. students have expressed how they have been affected in their attitudes towards sexuality, health care, the political process and the future. These individual panels have been and will continue to be collected at each school and joined together to educate our communities about the depth and spectrum of response to HIV disease.

A LIVING ENVIRONMENT FOR PEOPLE WITH AIDS
The Gables - "A Celebration of Life"

an Interior Design
B.F.A. project
by Rebecca Tinelle

There will be an open reception to recognize the students and staff who have made these projects possible.

February 11
5-7 p.m.
University Health Services Gallery
(1st floor between clinics 1 and 3)

For more information please contact the Health Education Division at 549-2671 ext. 181.

The Beyond the Names Project has been sponsored by a grant from American College Health Association and by gracious contributions from: Serv-U, Greenfield Eastern Textile, Home Fabric Mills, Family Planning, Hastings, Ames/Greenfield and Polymark Fabric Paint.

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

Calendar of events in the 5 College Area

THURSDAY

LECTURE — "Bonding and Bondage," a lecture/workshop presented by Donald Wert, M.S. of the Regent Hospital in New York, focusing on family relationships and coming out, will be held from noon to 1:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 804-808. This event is sponsored by the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, the New World Theater, and the Regent Hospital of New York.

ICE CAPADES — Ice Capades, starring Dorothy Hamill, will be performed tonight at 7:30 at the Mullins Center. Other shows are Feb. 12 at 7:30, Feb. 13 at 11:30 a.m., 3:30 and 7:30, and Feb.14 at noon. Call 545-0505 for tickets.

COURTESY ICE CAPADES
Dorothy Hamill

CONCERT — Two extraordinary solo artists, Andre-Michel Schub, piano and Eugenia Zukerman, flute, will join forces in a unique performance tonight at 8 p.m. at Bowker Auditorium. Tickets start at $20 with half-price tickets for Students. Call the FAC Box Office at 545-2511 for ticket reservations.

CONCERT — Diedre Murray and Jeanne Lee, an innovative cellist and vocalist jazz duo, will perform tonight at 7 p.m. at the Augusta Savage Gallery, New Africa House, in Central. Free and open to the public.

DANCE CONCERT — The Hampshire College Dance Program will present its Winter Dance Concert tonight at 8 p.m. in the Studio Theater of the Music and Dance Building. Other performances are Feb. 12–15 at 8 p.m. The concert features new works by students, and faculty member Jim Coleman. Reservations are suggested and can be made by calling 549-4600, ext. 228.

CONCERT — Lucie Blue Tremblay, a singer, songwriter, guitarist and pianist whose songs speak to a need for social change and awareness, will perform tonight at 7 p.m. at the Iron Horse in Northampton. Dinner is served from 5:30 p.m. Call 586-8686 for tickets.

PANEL — A rape awareness panel discussion including survivors, members of the Smith College Rape Awareness Workshop Group, and Smith security personnel will take place today at 3 p.m., in Wright Hall Common Room. Free.

THEATRE — Hampshire Shakespeare Company's Lear Solo, the world premier of their newest one-man play, adapted and performed by founding member Brian Marsh, will be performed tonight at 8 at Hampden Theater, Southwest. Other performances are Feb. 12, Feb. 13, Feb. 18- Feb. 20 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $7, $3 for Five College students. Call 545-2511 for tickets.

FRIDAY

CONCERT — There will be a faculty recital featuring Jane Bryden, soprano, and Craig Smith, piano at Sweeney Concert Hall, at Smith College, at 8 p.m. The program includes works by Reger, Schumann, Schubert, and Wolf. Call 585-3150 for further info.

CONCERT — Cathy Winter, a guitarist, singer, storyteller, and songwriter, will be performing at 9 p.m. at the Green River Cafe, Greenfield. Tickets are $5. Call 773-8655 for info.

CONCERT — Mark Maulucci, a solo rock guitarist, will be performing at the Coolidge Park Cafe at the Hotel Northampton from 5-8 p.m. Tom Savoy will perform from 8:30-12:30. Savoy will also be performing tomorrow from 8:30-12:30. Call 584-3100 for info.

FILM — Cry Freedom, the critically acclaimed film starring Denzel Washington, will be shown at Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College, at 7 & 9:45 p.m. Tickets are $2.50.

THEATRE — "Loving, Losing, Laughing: 3 Phases of Emotion," will be presented by Shades of Expression of Mount Holyoke College, a multi-cultural performing arts group created to allow men and women of color to present their talents. The performance will include dance, theater and vocal performances and will take place tonight at 8 p.m. Other shows are Feb. 13 and Feb. 14 at 8 p.m. and Feb. 13 at 2 p.m. Chapin Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College.

FILM — Casablanca, starring Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman will be shown tonight at the Amherst College Campus Center Theater at 7:30 and 10 p.m. Tickets are $1.75.

CONCERT — The Saints will come to Pearl Street in Northampton tonight at 9 p.m. There will be no cover charge before 10 p.m. Tickets are available at Pearl Street, Strawberries Records, and by calling Ticketpro at (800) 828-7080. Call 584-7771 for more details.

COURTESY FLEMING & TAMULEVICH
Lucie Blue Tremblay

SATURDAY

CONCERT — Leroy White's "Soul and Conscience Tour of the Latter 20th Century" makes its third stop at the cafe tonight at $8. The show is made up of a stageful of instruments, superb singing, riveting storytelling, and physical movement so graceful and so fine that audience members have a hard time staying in their seats. Tickets are $5. Call 773-8655.

CONCERT — Enjoy the elegant piano music of Chalyce Blair tonight at Wiggin's Tavern at the Hotel Northampton from 6:30-10:30 p.m. Call 584-3100 for further details.

OBSERVATORY OBSERVING — There will be free observing tonight at the Amherst College Wilder Observatory at 9 p.m. All ages. Call Tom Whitney at 256-6234 for details.

CONCERT — The Hershler Brothers, locally renowned folk-rockers from Northampton, will perform tonight at the Book Mill in Montague. Showtime is 8:30 and tickets are $4.

SYMPOSIUM — "Global Climate Change: Past, Present and Future," a symposium concerning geological and biological records of climate change on various time scales, will take place today from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Amherst College Stirn Auditorium, Mead. Bring a bag lunch. Tickets are free for Five College students & faculty, $15 for all others.

CONCERT — Free Press, "Rock Gods from Chicopee," will come to Pearl Street tonight at 9 p.m.

DANCE — La Unidad presents a Valentine's Day Ball tonight at 10 p.m. at the Blanchard Campus Center, Mount Holyoke College.

FILM — Victor Victoria, with Julie Andrews will be shown tonight at Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College, at 7 & 9:30 p.m. Tickets are $2.50.

DANCE — There will be a Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Concerns dance at the Blue Wall from 9 p.m.-2 a.m. Tickets are $4.

COMMUNITY — There will be a service and Shabbat meal today at the Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Rd. at 10 a.m.

CONCERT — The Asparagus Valley Music Ensemble, conducted by Karen Gordon, will perform this evening at 8 at the Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall. FREE.

SUNDAY

CONCERT — Four of the Valley's songwriters, Liz Kaufman, Jennifer West, Ed Awoub, and Rob Skelton, will perform in an afternoon show today at the Book Mill in Montague from 1-5 p.m. Call 367-9206 for details.

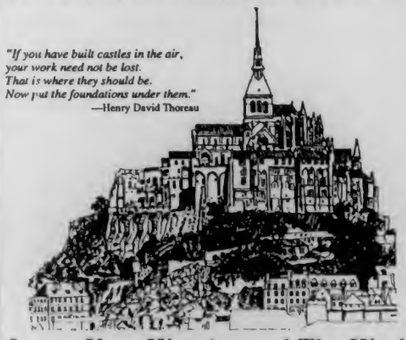
CONCERT — There will be a faculty recital featuring Laura Klock, horn; John Van Buskirk, piano & Veronica Kadlubkiewicz, violin, and the world premiere of Salvatore Macchia's Horn Trio tonight at 8 at the Fine Arts Center Bezanson Recital Hall. Tickets are $5, $2.50 for students and elders. Call 545-2227 for info.

THEATRE — The Northampton Arts Council's series "Four Sundays in February" continues at the Academy of Music Theater today with a special performance of "Wilde About Oscar," a miniature Theater of Chester production starring its Artistic Director, Vincent Dowling, the distinguished actor of Dublin's Abbey Theater. "Wilde About Oscar" is Dowling's own version of the life, times, tempatations, tragedy, and triumphs of the Irish genius, Oscar Wilde. Showtime is at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10 .

THE COLLEGIAN

BROUGHT TO YOU BY YOUR FRIENDS IN THE BASEMENT, THE LETTER F AND THE NUMBER 42

University of Wisconsin-Platteville



Learn Your Way Around The World

- Study abroad in London, England or Seville, Spain, for a summer, for a semester or for a full academic year
- Courses in liberal arts and international business
- Fluency in a foreign language not required
- Home-stays with meals
- Field trips
- Financial aid applies (except for summer session)

Application deadlines:
- April 1 for summer session
- April 30 for fall semester
- October 20 for spring semester

For a program description and an application, call toll free: 1-800-342-1725

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

TONIGHT

CHARTREUSE SKI PARTY

Special Drink ~ Swampwater

Register to win a $1000.00 Ski Package to be drawn from Chartreuse and Competitive Edge on Feb. 25

FRIDAY HAPPY HOUR 4 - 6

Free Pizza Slices

SATURDAY

UMASS vs George Washington

NOON Tip Off

SUNDAY

50¢ Pizza Slices Day & Night

WE'RE THE ONE TO WATCH!

University Drive & Amity Amherst • 549-4040

HOW'S YOUR FIRST AID?

American Red Cross

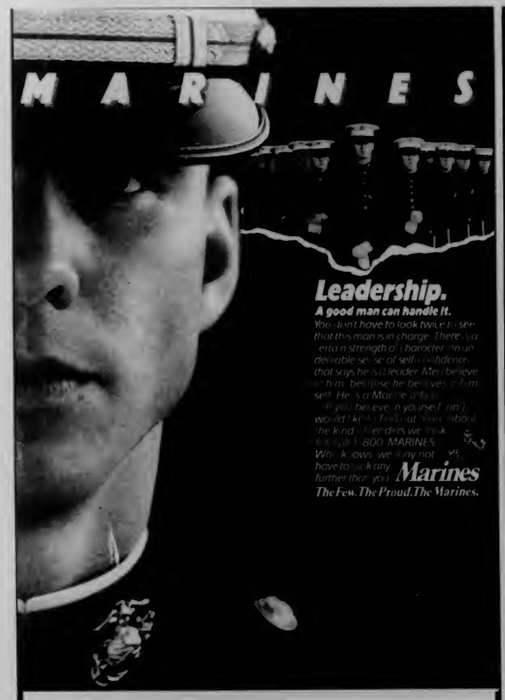
TRAVEL SMART!

FROM NEW YORK CITY

	Roundtrip	One Way
London	$305	$155
Paris	$398	$219
Costa Rica	$490	$245
Guatemala City	$470	$235
Mexico City	$360	$180
Oslo/Stockholm	$458	$229
Athens/Istanbul	$630	$315

Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs-Immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change

PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave NY NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC
Call for Spring Break Now!



OPPORTUNITIES AVAILABLE THIS SUMMER FOR FRESHMAN ON UP TO SENIORS. INTERESTED - SEE CAPTAIN BLAZIS AT THE UMASS CAREER FAIR IN THE CAMPUS CENTER ON FEBRUARY 10TH OR STOP BY THE NEWMAN CENTER CAFETERIA BETWEEN 10AM AND 2PM ON FEBRUARY 11TH & 12TH. FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 1-800-255-8762.

Hotel, Restaurant, and Travel Administration

CAREER DAY 1993

CHECK US OUT

Tuesday, February 16, 1993

Campus Center Auditorium 9:00-3:30

• ALL MAJORS WELCOME •

Tanya Donelly goes solo on her latest release

Eclectic CD contains creepy lyrics

By BRIAN BABINEAU
Collegian Correspondent

Star
Belly
Sire Records

Belly is the name of the new group fronted by former Throwing Muses and Breeders singer/guitarist Tanya Donelly. In each previous group, she has lived in the shadow of another band member—Kristin Hersh in the Muses and Kim Deal in the Breeders.

Belly is Donelly's first step into the songwriting spotlight, and the resulting album Star is an eclectic group of rock songs that bear no surprising resemblance to groups like the Pixies and Breeders. However, it is only a resemblance, and the songs stand apart, due to Donelly's intriguing, challenging and sometimes downright creepy lyricism.

There are even a few songs where the lyrics give little clue to the meaning behind them. I can't figure them out, but this is not necessarily a bad thing.

Donelly's voice makes the perfect complement to the lyrics, as she recalls a rougher edged Sinead O'Connor, coaxing both gentle coos and notes that border on screams from her throat throughout the entire album. In fact, certain songs suggest material that O'Connor might have written, had she not taken a Natalie Cole-like turn at performing songs written by dead people (but that is another story).

Star opens with the slow acoustic pluck of "Someone to Die For," and Donelly hauntingly chants "Don't you have someone to die for?/Step one tiptoe in hell for her?" "Dusted," the third song on the album, is propelled by the bass of Fred Abong, and sports some of the album's most unsettling lyrics, "Baby's playing dead in the cellar/ Gave her water, she got paler/ Grass stains, back burns, she's a screamer. . ." The words are sung with a deliberately casual air that offsets the music's angry feel.

"Gepetto" is strummed in cheery waltz time, and appears to be a happy song until the lyrics reveal ". . .a kid who came over my house again and decapitated all of my dolls." The first single off of the album is "Feed the Tree," a song whose backbone is again Abong's very agile basswork. It seems to be about growing up from a very personal and very feminine perspective. The chorus is beyond catchy, and almost anthemic, as Donelly orders," Take your hat off boy, when you're talking to me, and be there when I feed the tree."

Occasionally, slide guitar adds a nice country-ish tinge to a song, such as the beautiful "Witch," a track that recalls the dreamy sound of the Cocteau Twins, and the beginning of "Full Moon, Empty Heart," which eventually develops from quiet beginnings into a good mid-tempo rocker (even though the title is kind of silly).

"White Belly" has obscure lyrics, and a slow beat thickened by a layer of feedback that gives the song a syrupy quality.

Donelly and her Belly-mates save the best for last, as the final two songs "Sad Dress" and "Stay" prove to be my two personal favorites. "Sad Dress" describes a woman trapped in a relationship with lyrics like, "She made up three bad reasons to stand by her man. . ./(I'd chew off my foot to get out of this dress.)" Here, Donelly's voice soars through the chorus, and the choppy guitar chords are pushed along by Chris Gorman's very evident percussion.

Finally, "Stay" is a very simple song, musically based in slow guitar arpeggios and a tempo that recalls Otis Redding. The embellishment of a violin and Donelly's lyrics. "I look up and see the raising of an old hope, brave and tattered moon, you made me cry when I was young. . . stay. . ." make this a truly beautiful way to conclude the album.

Star is an eclectic and intriguing album that contains a wonderful array of musical styles and lyrical ideas. Tanya Donelly has successfully broken away from the Throwing Muses and the Breeders and stands, uniquely and successfully, on her own.

COURTESY BELLY

Tanya Donnelly's latest CD

DANCE WITH SPOLETO

MARCH 5, 8pm
FAC Concert Hall
Visuals by Robert Rauschenberg and Donald Judd
Tickets: $22, $20, $18, Age 16 & Under $8
5-College Students: $11, $10, $9

FEBRUARY 16, 8pm
FAC Concert Hall • World Premiere of "New Work"
Tickets: $22, $20, $18, Age 16 & Under $8
5-College Students: $11, $10, $9
Presented with the support of The Valley Advocate, Springfield

WIN dinner for two and tickets to both performances.

WRNX 100.9 FM

Listen for details on how to win!

PUT US TO THE TEST.

SSAT • PSAT • SAT • ACHIEVEMENTS • ACT • LSAT • GMAT • GRE • MCAT • DAT • GRE PSYCH • GRE BIO • OAT • TOEFL • NMB • NDB • NCLEX-RN • MSKP • FMGEMS • FLEX • CGFNS • CPA • BAR EXAM • NTE

If you have to take one of these tests, take Kaplan first. Our students get the highest scores. We've proven it to over one million students. Let us prove it to you.

KAPLAN

The answer to the test question

New Location: 150 Fearing Street

549-5780

The Vanishing: if it ain't broke, why did they fix it?

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Invariably, when the suits in Hollywood remake a successful foreign film, they suck out any originality, design and complex characterization in order to make the story more palatable for us clueless American audiences (imagine The Crying Game reworked by Tinseltown?!). The original filmmakers, then, have to watch their precious property fall into the hands of the mass marketers.

So when I heard that director George Sluizer would helm the remake of his 1990 Dutch thriller, The Vanishing, I held out some hope. Yet while Sluizer maintains at least some of the atmospheric qualities of his excellent original, The Vanishing falls completely apart in the third act. Once three-dimensional characters become suspiciously un-dead and easily labeled into convenient categories like slasher and slash-ee.

It's a shame too, because strong performances all-around get wasted in the standard psycho finale and any hint of full-bodied characters drown in the slam-bam-it's-over conclusion.

But at least getting there is somewhat interesting. Keifer Sutherland plays a man whose girlfriend, Diane, disappears from a crowded rest area on the highway. Flash forward three years later, where Sutherland has lost his job, and most probably his mind searching obsessively for his lost girlfriend. He meets up with a waitress (Nancy Travis), and they fall in love, but Travis must deal with Sutherland's reluctance to let go with the memory of you-know-who.

What we know is that college professor and family man Barney Cousins (Jeff Bridges) has abducted Diane, mainly because he keeps practicing various scenarios in order to capture and chloroform unsuspecting females in the first half of the film. Bridges' Barney is not your garden variety psycho, he's more like your thinking man's schizo with a slight speech impediment.

Three-quarters of the way through, Bridges meets up with Sutherland, offering to show him what happened to Diane — bu he must experie5nce it exactly the way Diane did. Travis gets wind of the plot and, in a string of coincidences, runs to the rustic cabin where Bridges is holding Sutherland captive. There are a lot of shots with Travis running through the wet forest — think of it as one of the Friday the 13ths with better cinematography. And before you can say "this looks familiar," the hackneyed climax unfolds (rather, it stumbles) to a grisly resolution.

The problem isn't with the idea — it's a clever premise — but in how quickly it becomes generic, slasher-movie filler. There's the routine stuff on why Bridges did it (it goes back to his childhood — surprise!), and a Misery-esque coda that tries to be funny, but is really quite lame.

Keifer Sutherland turns in a solid performance in The Vanishing. Just contrast the empathy and pathos Sutherland creates with this character with his sicko religious nut he played in A Few Good Men. It's too bad that Sutherland's career is eclipsed by his personal life.

Jeff Bridges, who was very good as the down and out disc jockey in The Fisher King, is fine here. The only problem is that he comes off as a goofball sometimes with all the ticks of the the movie psycho. And Nancy Travis does some smart work as

TURN TO VANISHING PAGE 7

There's A New Way to Get to Mt. Tom.

Here's a hint:

()

Now it's even easier to ski closer to home! And purchasing a combination bus/lift ticket saves you money, too! Take the Peter Pan bus, any day of the week, from any one of these locations and enjoy great skiing day and night at nearby Mt. Tom:

AMHERST/UMASS HARTFORD
NORTHAMPTON MIDDLETOWN
SPRINGFIELD MERIDEN
BRIDGEPORT NEW HAVEN

Mt. TOM SKI AREA Peter Pan Trailways

Route 5, Holyoke, MA • Call Peter Pan for info: 781-2900

Valentine Special: Red Rose and Chocolate Heart-$8.95
(413) 584-3798
Montgomery's Flower Shop & Greenhouse
Roses are our specialty
RT. #9 350 RUSSELL STREET
HADLEY, MASSACHUSETTS 01035
Fri., Feb. 12th - Sun., Feb. 14th
8am - 7 pm

Nick & Dick's
The finest family style restaurant on Cape Cod serving breakfast, lunch and dinner is currently seeking experienced individuals to join our team.
Dining Room Supervisor
Waitstaff
Ice Cream Counter Help
Bus Persons
Cashiers/Hostess
Nick & Dick's RESTAURANT & ICE CREAM
All positions are seasonal. Interested candidates should call Cheryl at (508) 432-1000 to arrange an interview.
Route 28 • Harwich Port, MA • (508) 432-1000

COME CLEAN WITH US!
Open 7 days a week 7am - 10pm
SOUTH TOWNE COMMONS LAUNDROMAT
479 West St., South Amherst

Speedwash
Open 24 Hours
11 Pray St., Amherst

Summer! Make it the Best
Work with us at Thompson's Clam Bar, the finest seaside restaurant on Cape Cod. We currently have outstanding opportunities for talented individuals to join our team. Candidates should call Cheryl at (508) 432-1000 to arrange an interview.
• Dining Room/Cocktail Waitstaff
• Porters
• Bus Persons
• Dining Room Supervisors
• Cashiers
• Hostesses
• Bar Staff
All positions are seasonal.
Thompson's CLAM BAR
Snow Inn Road • Harwichport, MA 02646 • 508-432-1000

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL OF AMERICA
If you are over 18, and would like to earn Full Time Income Working Part Time Be a Bartender
• Day/Evening 1 Week
• Local/National Placement
• Limited Openings Remain For March and April Classes
• Make Your Move Today and Receive Additional Savings On Tuition Fees
Call Today! 747-9888 • 1655 Main St., Suite 202 • Springfield MC/VISA/AE

The GYM at mountain farms mall 584-2175
COMPARE & SAVE
Semester Special ONLY $99.00!!
Membership Good Thru 5-31-93
TANNING AVAILABLE
"On the bus route!"

Thank you for your Patronage The Krupczak Family
4 Seasons
Rte. 9 • Hadley • 584-8174
Between Burger King & Dunkin Donuts
NO KEG PERMIT REQUIRED!
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE
KEGS AND ICE
LARGEST KEG INVENTORY IN WESTERN MASS!
FREE BEER BANNER W/ KEG PURCHASE

CORONA 24-12 oz.bott $16.99 + dep	½ BBL. NATURAL LT OR MILW. BEST $32.90 + dep
BUD DRY 24 bar bott 10.99 + dep.	½ BBL. BUSCH $38.99 + dep.
COORS GOLD 24 bar bott $10.99 + dep.	½ BBL M.G.D., LITE $38.99 + dep.
BUSCH & LT. 24-12 oz. cans $9.99 + dep.	BOONES FARM ALL FLAVORS $1.99 750 ml
BUD/B. DRY/B. LT. 12 pk-bottles $6.49 + dep.	M/D 20-20 ALL FLAVORS $1.99 750 ml
PABST 24 bar bott $7.99 + dep.	4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L
AMERICAN 24-12 oz. cans $7.29 + dep.	MATADOR TEQUILA $6.99 1.0L
KOCH'S GOLDEN ANNIV. 24-12 oz. cans $7.29 + dep.	EARLY TIMES BOURBON $6.99 750 ml
NARRAGANSETT 24-12 oz. cans $7.29 + dep.	4 SEASONS RUM $10.49 1.75L
TIRED OF STORES WITH BAD ATTITUDES? At 4 Seasons You'll Be Treated With GRATITUDE!!! AND... WE DELIVER	HADLEY ICE 10 lbs.-50 lbs. ..... 10¢ lb. 50 lbs.-100 lbs. ..... 9¢ lb. 100+ lbs. ..... 8¢ lb. CHEAPEST ICE PRICES IN W/MASS!!!

SALE 2/11/93 - 2/17/93
Not responsible for typographical errors
HOURS MONDAY-SATURDAY 9:00-11:00•Delivery Mon-Sat Late Afternoons & Evenings
KEG DEPOSITS HELD UP TO 30 DAYS • VISA • MASTERCARD • CHECK • CASH

Bausch & Lomb • Ciba Vision • Cooper Visio • Barnes-Hind • American Hydro • Johnson & Johnson
SAVE On Replacement Soft Contact Lenses
Everything you want in replacement soft lenses. Even fashion tints!
Ask our Pharmacist about Contact Replacements. Check our low prices!
SeeQuence, NewVues or Acuvue
1 FREE lens with 6, $22 • 3 FREE lenses with 12, $44
Most Contact Lenses Available in 48 Hours
Walgreens The Pharmacy America Trusts
Not available in TN, FL, CT, NJ NY & where dispensing by appointment is required
1919 Wilbraham Rd., Spfld....783-2535
50 Boston Rd., Spfld....543-5005
50 St. James, Spfld....733-3002
55 East Ludlow St., Ludlow...547-8128
78 Main St., Westfield...568-1929

The Player mocks Hollywood

Altman's acclaimed comedy/thriller revels in sardonic wit

By IAN CANADINE
Collegian Correspondent

Robert Altman's The Player originally came out last year to widespread acclaim, but it is currently showing again in Northampton and is well worth seeing for anyone who missed it.

Its central character is Griffin Mill (Tim Robbins), a cynical and amoral Hollywood studio executive whose job it is to listen to writers' "pitches" of idea for movies, and decide which should be produced and which should be rejected.

Mill is becoming anxious at the constant rumors that he is about to be replaced in his position of power by a slimy rival from another studio. His paranoia is redoubled by a series of threatening postcards, which are apparently being sent by a disgruntled writer who he failed to "get back to" months previously. In an attempt to relieve himself of this problem he commits an ill-advised act of violence, which apparently must surely lead to his downfall.

While this plot provides the ostensible black comedy/thriller structure of the movie, it is clear that its actual subject is Hollywood itself, and the process of cinema in general. Any film student worth his salt will immediately go into mental overdrive if you show him a film about making films, and complex theories involving postmodern self-reflexity are sure to follow.

The Player is the ultimate postmodern film about film, littered as it is with self-conscious references both to other movies and to itself.

Perhaps the most spectacular of these is the opening sequence, which lasts six minutes without a single cut, and is a direct homage to Orson Welles' famous opening of Touch of Evil.

The world which Altman portrays in the film presents a bleakly comic indictment of Hollywood's cynicism and self-obsession. The (hilarious) script proposals which Griffin Mill has to listen to every day are just a constant recycling of films that have already been made ("I see it as being kind of like Ghost meets The Manchurian Candidate"), and can only be considered if they have the right stars and the right ending (i.e., happy).

The way that Hollywood fulfills its social role, and constructs our own sense of reality for us, its highlighted and then undermined with wicked cunning by Altman. The audience is disoriented by the fact that some stars play themselves while others play characters, and that films exist within films so that eventually we're not sure which is the film and which is the reality.

In the end perhaps Altman is trying to show us that Hollywood has, in fact, disconnected itself completely from any sense of reality, and has drifted off into some kind of delirious hyper-reality.

The Player is a flawlessly constructed piece of cinema; every minor detail is there for a reason, every intricacy provides further sardonic commentary both on the film itself and cinema as a medium.

Altman has a talent for setting up situations which fit logically into the film, while simultaneously possessing an uneasy quality of bizarre comedy about them. Nothing is out of place or ill-conceived, and his direction is characterized by a cleverness that never goes as far as being smug. This is how he manages to come up with one of the most mind-being and audacious endings that Hollywood has produced in a long time.

There are more stars in this film that probably every other film showing this week put together, but most of them just have walk-on parts. The main performance is Robbins', and he works well as the inscrutable Griffin Mill, so that we cannot help getting caught up in his predicament, despite the fact that he is a repugnant character.

For me, the other brilliant performance here is Whoopi Goldberg as the hilariously vulgar police detective investigating Mill, playing it up for all she's worth.

If you haven't seen The Player yet, then it's worth making a point of catching it, because it is that rare thing in Hollywood — a film which is funny, thought-provoking, and above all, intelligent.

The Player is playing at the Pleasant St. Theater in NoHo.

■ Vanishing

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6

well, filling the film's pitifully underwritten role with some (but not enough) resonance.

The original Vanishing was sly and atmospheric — it took its time, peeking through the cracks of obsession and generating some real, tangible suspense. This version has been unjustly Hollywood-ized. By the end of The Vanishing, you'll wonder where the originality disappeared to. C

COURTESY TRI-STAR PICTURES
Tim Robbins, seen here in Jacob's Ladder, can be seen on the silver screen in Northampton's Pleasant St. Theater's showing of The Player.

THE EXPERIENCE OF YOUR LIFETIME.
The elegant HarborWatch Room, serving gourmet New England and Continental Cuisine, is currently seeking experienced individuals to join our team.
HARBORWATCH ROOM
Waitstaff
Formal Dining Room training a must Bartender
Bus Persons
Interested candidates should call Cheryl at (508) 432-1000 to arrange an interview. All positions are seasonal.
23 Snow Inn Road • Harwich Port, MA • (508) 432-1000

Summer! Make it the Best
Work with us at the Wychmere Harbor Beach Club on Cape Cod. We currently have outstanding opportunities for talented individuals to join our team. Candidates should call Cheryl at (508) 432-1000 to arrange an interview.
LIFEGUARDS
All positions are seasonal.
Snow Inn Road
Harwich Port, MA 02646
508-432-1000
Wychmere Harbor Beach Club

Don't get mad. Get promoted.

THE TEMP
R
STARTS FRIDAY
SHOWCASE CINEMAS
WEST SPRINGFIELD
RIVERDALE RD. • 733-5131
1-10 NO PASSES

ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741

Grand Opening Special
at ALPINE COMMONS
Short Term Leases
4 - Bedroom..... $650
3 - Bedroom..... $600
2 - Bedroom..... $550
Includes All Utilities

Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!

Don't wait another day, call today!

256-0741

Surprise your sweetheart this Valentine's Day with a Gift Certificate from the Mullins Center.

MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Gift Certificates are redeemable for any event. For information call 545-0505.

ALL NEW Thursday Night
Wheel of SAVED FORTUNES
8:30p.m. - Midnight

After Bowling, Spin the Wheel for your rate... YOU COULD WIN $50

Red Dot.....25¢ Off Each Game
Blue Dot.....50¢ Off Each Game
Green Dot.....1 FREE Game
Yellow Dot.....3 FREE Games
Orange Dot.....$5.00 Off Bowling
White Dot.....Pick up 5-7-10 and your bowling on us!
Black Dot.....$50.00 - Strike on the Headless Rack and WIN!

NORTHAMPTON BOWL
525 Pleasant Street • Northampton, MA • 584-4830

Make the Right Career Connections . . . Early!

COME TO THE CO-OP JOB FAIR
Thursday, February 18

Campus Center Auditorium

Paid Work Experience in Your Major

Summer and Semester Positions

Field Experience Information Sessions:
11 am, 12 noon, 1 & 2 pm
Employer Booths: 10 am - 3:30 pm

ALL Majors - ALL Day
Undergraduate and Graduate Students

Employer Workshops:
Co-Op: What to Expect
Employer Information Sessions:
Chubb, TASC

Sponsored by the Mather Career Center, 545-6265

Friday February 12, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 77

Mostly cloudy, snow developing today. Sleet tonight – drive safe

Sports:
Lou Roe and the Minutemen steal the show from the St. Joseph's Hawks in Philadelphia in an 81-69 victory. Page 12.

Local News:
MassPIRG asks newly-elected President Clinton to cut down on government perks and political contributions. Page 3.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England • Founded in 1890

ADAM SILVERMAN / COLLEGIAN
SAY CHEEZE — The neighborhood maintenance truck makes nice for the camera.

Clinton picks Reno for attorney general

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sticking to his original goal of naming the nation's first female attorney general, President Clinton nominated Miami prosecutor Janet Reno on Thursday after two earlier candidates stumbled because they had hired illegal aliens.

"She is a frontline crime fighter and a caring public servant," Clinton said.

Reno, 54, has been the Miami-area prosecutor for 15 years, overseeing 230 lawyers who prosecute 40,000 felonies a year.

In a reminder of Clinton's problems in finding an acceptable Justice nominee, Reno said with a smile in answer to a reporter's question, "I've never hired an illegal alien and I think I've paid all my Social Security taxes."

Clinton said he was "somewhat but not entirely" inclined to nominate a woman.

He said he considered numerous other candidates, including at least four men.

At a Rose Garden news conference, "I am humbled by the honor," Reno said.

Reno will be Clinton's second nominee for the top Justice Department post.

The first, Zoe Baird, withdrew because of a public outcry over her hiring illegal aliens and failing to pay Social Security taxes.

A second potential nominee, federal judge Kimba Wood, also withdrew because she hired an illegal immigrant for babysitting.

The White House complained that Wood did not initially offer details of the situation.

Reno is single and has no children.

One of Reno's best-known cases was the prosecution of five police officers who were accused of the beating of Black insurance agent Arthur McDuffie in December 1959.

The trial was moved to Tampa and the five insurance agents were acquitted, sparking the most violent riots in Miami history in 1980, also known as the Liberty City riot.

Reno has been state attorney for 15 years and has a reputation among her peers for integrity, political savvy and administrative skills.

"She is a frontline crime fighter and a caring public servant."

President Clinton on nominee Janet Reno

Critics say she has handed off some local political corruption cases to the federal courts and they contend she lacks investigative zeal.

Her office's prosecution of William Lozano, an officer charged with shooting a Black motorcyclist in 1989 that sparked three days of rioting, resulted in a conviction, later overturned. The new trial is scheduled for March 1.

U.S. Attorney Roberto Martinez of Miami, a Republican Bush appointee, said Reno "would be a first-rate choice, qualified in all respects, an excellent lawyer, experienced administrator, and most importantly, honest beyond question."

Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., said through a spokesman that Reno's nomination "was well worth the wait."

She attended Harvard Law School with Reno in the 1960s.

Gunman hijacks plane

104 passengers suffer 11 hour ordeal

NEW YORK (AP) — A gunman reportedly angry about U.N. actions in Bosnia hijacked a jetliner with 104 people aboard Thursday and forced it from Europe to New York, where he was taken into custody.

It was the first trans-Atlantic hijacking in more than 16 years. The ordeal lasted about 11 hours.

The Lufthansa plane was hijacked over Austria and flew to Hanover, Germany where it was refueled. German authorities said the jetliner was permitted to take off because the gunman threatened to kill hostages unless it went to New York. They said the hijacker, who had a pistol, gave assurances he would surrender once he arrived in the United States.

The twin-engine Airbus 310 landed safely at Kennedy International Airport at 3:50 p.m. and taxied to a remote area of the airport.

The hijacker was taken into custody about 20 minutes later, said Det. Joseph McConville, a police spokesman. Many law enforcement officials could be seen rushing on to the plane.

Turn to HIJACK, page 4

Women said to bring new ideas

By STACY MALONE
Collegian Staff

The exclusion of women from politics denied the nation new ideas that women could have contributed to the political system, a prominent political activist told a Smith College audience Wednesday as part of events commemorating International Women's Week.

Irene Natividad, an Asian-American woman who has served as director of the 1992 Global Summit of Women and as the executive director of the National Women's Political Caucus, said politics create different stereotypes for men and women.

Natividad said men are thought of as being good in times of crisis, foreign policy, budgetary issues and as travelling politicians.

She said women are portrayed much differently, such as, being better managers, administrators, humanitarians and as sources of new ideas.

"These stereotypes are starting to play effectively for women, because people now want politicians with new ideas who can administer and deliver," Natividad said.

Natividad said that although a fourth of Congress changed faces, the number of women increased from 27 to 48 in the U.S. House of Representatives, and from two to six women in the Senate, the Year of the Woman did not bring enough representation for 53 percent of the population.

"Look at how unequitable this institution is, that it passes judgements on the lives of women everyday without the permission of women," Natividad said.

She said that 1992 was called the Year of the Woman because redistricting opened new political seats for women and minorities, there was a general rage against politics as usual, there was a hunger for new faces and because

Turn to WOMEN, page 2

Do you feel like an 'imposter'?

Dr. says many women suffer from imposter syndrome

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

At some point in their lives, 80 percent of people feel incompetent, that others are smarter or more skilled than they. These people may fear discovery of their "inadequacies" and that they'll be revealed for who they really are: impostors.

This phenomenon is known as "the impostor syndrome," according to Dr. Valerie Young, an expert on issues dealing with women in the workplace, who spoke yesterday to about 50 undergraduate and graduate women in her seminar "The Impostor Syndrome: Issues of Confidence and Competence for Women."

"Despite evidence to the contrary, many bright, capable people do not experience an inner sense of competence or success," said Young, a 1985 doctoral graduate of the University of Massachusetts.

Young said many lack what she calls a "notion of entitlement."

"We don't feel entitled to make a mistake, to have an off-day, to not be perfect. I think that's the crux of the issue," she said.

Young, who described herself as "a recovering impostor", said success is often rationalized away, attributed to sources other than the self. Luck or timing, simplicity of a task, and the ability to charm or "fool" others are common excuses for success, she said.

"People have great imaginations," Young said, "I know of a woman who received a fantastic job offer, picked by a national search committee. She couldn't believe she

Turn to IMPOSTER, page 6

ADAM SILVERMAN / COLLEGIAN
LOST — Single dark glove seeks owner with one cold hand.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Expert discusses global effects of spreading AIDS 'pandemic'

By MATT McCARTHY
Collegian Correspondent

The world AIDS "pandemic" is linked directly to human rights and poverty factors, said Dr. Jonathan Mann, former director of the World Health Organization's Global Program on AIDS and current chairman of the Eighth International Conference on AIDS, on Wednesday.

The lecture was sponsored by the School of Public Health and the Five College Program in Peace & World Security Studies.

Memorial Hall was packed with people eager to hear his lecture titled, "The Global Dimensions of the AIDS Epidemic."

Mann described this as a critical time in the fight against infection and referred to AIDS as a "pandemic." He related the spread of the virus to human rights.

Two million people have been infected since its first detection and, according to Mann, that number will rise to 20 million by 1995.

Mann said AIDS must become a priority for every nation, even ones that seem little affected like Bangladesh, because as he put it, "It is not a question of if but when," the virus becomes a major concern.

Dr. Mann described the evolution of AIDS in four segments divided by years.

The first segment took place from the mid-'70s to 1981. This was the "silent" time of the virus as it spread undetected through the population.

The second segment occurred from 1981 to 1985. This started with the detection of the virus, when the first signs of action were taken only by the small groups that were affected by it. There was no government support from any nation until the U.S. government starting funding research in 1985.

The third segment spanned from 1986 to 1990, when most of the work for prevention and awareness was done. There was a global strategy at work and every country had an AIDS program. The fourth and most disturbing segment, Mann said, started in 1990 and continues today. Support started to fall apart and AIDS and public health are still not top priorities in any nation, Mann said.

The epidemic is still rising, but public response has plateaued.

Mann attributed some of this to poor planning and distribution. The resources are in the industrialized nations while the majority of cases are in underdeveloped countries. Help to these countries is hindered because the various health and rescue programs working with countries cannot agree on how to distribute aid.

"AIDS will require what we thus far have not addressed," he said. "AIDS flourishes because of societial weaknesses."

Mann said he was referring to the world's discrimination against different social groups. He also said AIDS is not just a virus, but a behavior and tied this to human rights issues.

"Women cannot say no to unprotected sex unless they have the financial resources and social power," Mann said. "Male-dominated societies are a threat to public health."

Mann concluded with the hope that the "final chapter on AIDS will end with a vision of health, solidarity and peace."

Pentagon tries to draft Rudolph

Army to study tough but light antlers and sea shells

By THOMAS SHEERAN
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — The Pentagon is trying to find out what makes reindeer antlers and sea shells so tough but light. The answer could mean better protection for soldiers and pilots, as well as stronger cars, better medical implants and bowling balls.

"We need very lightweight, thin, high-strength materials," said Wilbur C. Simmons with the Army Research Office near Durham, N.C., which commissioned the $2 million study.

Researchers at three universities are involved in the five-year project. Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland will study antlers, the University of Washington will examine sea shells, and Princeton University will do both.

Researchers will study the ceramic-type properties that provide a sea shell's hardness and the organic properties that enable antlers to absorb such shocks as the collision of two male reindeer charging each other. They will also try to understand why they're light.

"If you're going to have an application of say, armor, you don't want to carry all that weight around your body or on a tank or planes," said Ilhan Adsay, who is directing the research at Princeton.

"In both cases, the idea is to look at structures and learn lessons from the way nature designed them and see if we can design similar structures through synthetics," he said.

Studying items from nature is "the cutting edge of research in materials," said Frank N. Kelly, dean of polymer science and engineering school at the University of Akron.

At Akron, researchers are trying to determine why a spider web is stronger than nylon. The goal is to learn what lends special properties to natural minerals; for example, why do trees bend, but not break?

At Case Western Reserve, researchers hope to duplicate the toughness and fast-growing property of antlers through "biomimickry" — the manufacture of a synthetic material based on a principle found in nature.

Antlers interest scientists because the velvet-covered horns are incredibly sturdy and grow yearly, said Eric Baer, director of the research at Case Western Reserve. At their peak, antlers can grow an inch a day.

Antlers are stronger than bone, possibly because of complex layers of protein and minerals, scientists believe.

Their makeup may give clues to creating materials that could lead to sturdier medical implants, bowling balls that never nick and automobile panels that resist chips and dings from gravel.

And the Pentagon is interested in anything that offers better protection against high-velocity objects.

Baer has been promised a free supply of antlers from the herd of five Greenland reindeer at the Cleveland Metroparks Zoo. Reindeer, both bucks and does, shed antlers yearly.

■ women

continued from page 1

of Anita Hill.

"What happened to Anita Hill stirred much rage in women," Natividad said. "Women of all colors, ages and areas of the country were outraged with how she was treated."

Natividad said that in 1992 a larger percentage of women voted than men and women voted for women candidates regardless of their skin color and scandals because they wanted more outsiders inside the political process.

"Women legislators, both Democrats and Republicans, have carried the ball for women's rights," she said. "They are not perfect, but when it comes to the issues that you and I care about they work hard."

Natividad said that the women's movement is mostly a White middle-class movement and that she wanted to show through her political activism that there was enough room for women of color in the movement too, yet she found that women of color never seemed to see her as minority enough.

Natividad also said that there is an increasing diversity among the women who run for offices, 13 women of color now hold congressional seats and that women contributed generously this year because they are fed up with politics as usual.

Surprise your sweetheart this Valentine's Day with a Gift Certificate from the Mullins Center.

MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Gift Certificates are redeemable for any event. For information call 545-0505.

CHALLENGE
diversity
Opportunity

Three words that turn a job into a gratifying career. And gratifying careers begin at Woodward-Clyde. We're looking for thinkers and problem solvers who want to work on real projects right alongside engineers and scientists who are leaders in their fields.

Sound like your kind of company? Visit our representative on campus.

Woodward-Clyde
Engineering & sciences applied to the earth & its environment
EOE/M/F/H/V
Interviewing on campus
Thursday, March 4

Local News

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
John Donald Wert

Gays struggle with families

By MARIE KALLINEY
Collegian Correspondent

Health care professionals and families alike need to work to address the issues that face young gays and lesbians, said Donald Wert in his seminar "Family Ties: Bonds and Bondage."

Wert, M.S. of Regent Hospital in New York, led a lecture on Thursday specifically addressing one of the most difficult issues facing homosexual youths — coming out and dealing with family reactions.

He explained that today's society consists of nuclear families with closed structures. Parents today are generally unaccepting of their children's sexuality if it does not comply with societie's norms, Wert said.

Wert said mental health professionals and parents alike must begin working to stop denying and the burying problems within the family structure.

"Families develop secrecies about sexuality," Wert said. He asserted that society as a whole has a responsibility to learn about sexuality and understand how complex it is.

Turn to FAMILY, page 4

Women's Conference to be held

Registration begins for Feb. 27 educational program

By SANDRA ROSE
Collegian Staff

Participants in the 1993 Women's Conference scheduled for Feb. 27 can register on the Campus Center concourse starting Tuesday as well as the current registration center, the James/Emerson cluster office, announced the conference committee.

Theresa Frecker, chair of the conference steering committee, said the conference will be held in the Campus Center and "space is limited.

"It is critical that if you are interested in attending the conference to register today, because tomorrow there may not be a space," said Frecker.

Shyamala Ivatury, chair of the program committee, stressed that the conference "provides an analysis of the global structures of oppression — taking into account the inter-connectedness of race, class, ethnicity, sexual orientation, and religion, linking the international struggles with local and national movements."

Angela Davis, an African-American activist, author and academic will give the keynote address at the conference on Feb. 27.

The keynote address should not be confused with her separate lecture on the 26, noted Joy Goldsmith.

Nine panels are scheduled for the afternoon. The topics include:

Women and the economy, Women from developing nations, violence against women, Women and AIDS, and Women of color — a cross cultural perspective.

Some of the confirmed speakers in the afternoon sessions are:

Roberta Uno, director of the New World Theater, Professor Helan Page of the UMass anthropology department, Dalia Belfour, an activist from Honduras, state Rep. Ellen Story, Dr. Judy Toymama, assistant dean of Minority Graduate Recruitment, and Nancy Lyman and Michaelann Bewsee from ARISE, a non-government sponsored organization working with the homeless.

According to the steering committee, the conference is being sponsored by over 20 undergraduate and graduate student organizations, various university departments and offices, along with local businesses.

"This conference is working towards the education of women," said Njeri Thewell, a member of the programming committee.

"One of the most important things in life in order for progression and development is education. With this I work," she said.

Study says money equals votes

By DAVINA CHOJNOWSKI
Collegian Correspondent

Money buys both votes and people, according to the latest study released by the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group.

On Thursday, MassPIRG revealed that in the 1992 general election, Massachusetts congressional incumbents out-spent their challengers by a ratio of 3.3 to 1, and received 12 times as much money from political action committees as their challengers.

"This new data documents that campaign spending is out of control. It's time for President Clinton to take early action to clean up government and to sweep special interests out of our nation's capital," said Heidi Hill, spokesperson for MassPIRG's Campaign for a Clean Congress.

"We urge President Clinton to heed his inaugural day promise to 'give this capital back to the people to whom it belongs,'" Hill said.

Hill and Neil Carpenter from the UMass Clinton/Gore campaign called on President Clinton to take immediate action to deliver on his promise for "revolution in government" by enacting strong campaign finance reform.

"Moneymen can vote anywhere they want and as often as they want, with their checkbooks," Carpenter said. "Special interests contribute heavily to keep incumbents in office and maintain 'business as usual.'"

Hill suggested four different solutions for campaign reform: banning "soft money" contributions, substituting public financing for special interest money funded by ending special tax breaks for lobbying, drastically lowering campaign contribution limits from PACs and individuals, and establishing campaign spending limits.

"Moneymen can vote anywhere they want and as often as they want, with their checkbooks. Special interests contribute heavily to keep incumbents in office and maintain 'business as usual.'"

Neil Carpenter
UMass Clinton/Gore campaign

The coalition also announced the creation of a 1-800 number for citizens to send a telegram to the president and their representatives to register their support for the campaign finance reform package.

"The campaign hotline, 1-800-847-6611, is a direct way citizens can communicate their support for ending the gridlock and ridding government of special interest pollution," Hill said.

Center nears completion

Advocacy group searches for director

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

The Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) is conducting an all-out search for a director so it can begin functioning by the end of the semester.

SCERA is the research and advocacy arm of the Student Government Association that has been organized to help maximize the University's resources in order to meet the needs of students, according to the SCERA mission statement.

SCERA was originally formed in the '70s under a different name, but was disbanded in the fall of 1989. It was reorganized in November of 1991 and a charter was passed. Intense negotiations over the following intersession brought the reinstatement of SCERA.

Jennifer Wood, student government president said, "SCERA is intended to train student government officials and research the issues that are important to the students."

The permanent staff of SCERA consists of a director, and a student coordinator who will be chair of the board. Other members will include six undergraduate and three university professionals.

As an advocate of student interests, SCERA will conduct research and educate the undergraduate student body about issues that are important to the university community. They will also develop policy proposals and help to empower students to make changes.

"In cases of conflicts with the administration or the town of Amherst, SCERA will help students be prepared with information and facts to back themselves up," said Mike Poster, the undergraduate student speaker.

Including the student coordinator, other undergraduate student members will include the student government president, the undergraduate student speaker, the chair of the public policy committee of the undergraduate student senate, and two other undergraduate members appointed by the student government president.

Professional staff will include the directors of Legal Services, Off-Campus Housing, and Third World Affairs, according to the mission statement.

Issues that will be developed for student use are town by-laws, polling places, state budget and university regulations. They are also willing to work on any issue that concerns the undergraduate student body.

The search process for a director is still underway and members of SCERA are currently reading through resumes in order to hire someone.

Joanne Levenson, director of Off-Campus Housing, will do the actual hiring of the director. No final decision has been made, and members are reluctant to comment on the applications they have received.

UMass Police Log

Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety

compiled by JASON GEORGE

Vandalism

• An individual reported to police early Thursday that a chunk of curbing was thrown through the windshield of their parked vehicle. Police estimate the damage at over $300.

• According to police, an individual reported late Wednesday that the handlebars and brake levers were stolen from his bicycle. The damage is estimated at $200.

• An individual in Brown reported to police late Wednesday afternoon that graffiti was written on a message board directed at the Sylvan Area Government.

Larceny

• An individual reported Wednesday afternoon the theft of their personal belongings from a pay locker which was broken into. Police estimate the damage at approximately $30.

Injuries

• A woman fell late Wednesday on Commonwealth Avenue and injured her nose while returning to the parking lot at Mullins Arena. She was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital by ambulance.

Board examines layoffs

By DANIEL BOUCHER
Collegian Correspondent

In order to close a deficit in the Auxiliary Services budget without increaseing student fees, the Auxiliary Services deficit-reduction task force is considering laying off workers by closing some facilities or cutting back hours, said the chairman of the Board of Governors last night.

Ben Preston, chairman of the Board of Governors and a member of the deficit-reduction task force, said they were trying not to raise activity fees because the Board believe fees are high enough, and added that other fees and boarding charges at the University are already marked for increase in the next budget being compiled.

"Unfortuneately the task force is being bypassed in the budgetary process," said Preston who said the administration had already started the budget process.

Preston said the task force is considering closing the Worcester snack shop, closing one line at a dining commons, or cutting back hours at both.

The meeting ended prematurely after a member left, leaving fewer board members than required to continue.

Turn to B.O.G., page 6

The Collegian
Endorsed by noteworthy local superheroes such as Powdered Toast Man.

Fired workers sue truck school

Truck driving school faces charges of discrimination

BALTIMORE (AP) — A Massachusetts-based truck driving school is being sued by three former workers who claim they were fired because they refused to discriminate against Blacks at the school's Baltimore branch.

Mark Greenberg, president of the New England Tractor Trailer Training School, ordered employees to avoid recruiting in Baltimore, because the city's population is "too Black," according to lawsuits files last week in Baltimore City Circuit Court.

The three lawsuits contend the school used stricter standards for admission and student loans for Black students, and the school discriminated against Blacks in hiring and employment practices.

The suits were files on behalf of admissions director Melvin L. Toliver, associate admissions director Sheila Blue and accountant and registrar Mary Lasek.

Each plaintiff is seeking back pay plus $500,000 in compensatory damages and $1 million in punitive damages. The suits charge the school with violating the Civil Rights Act, wrongful discharge and infliction of emotional distress.

Norman Polovoy, a lawyer representing the North Quincy, Mass.-based school, said the lawsuit may be retaliation for suits the company filed against the three former employees and two others alleging they stole company files.

That suit is pending in Baltimore County.

Polovoy said the school does not discriminate.

■ hijack

continued from page 1

Dozens of FBI agents, police and airport officers were spread around Kennedy Airport as the plane landed. Members of special weapons teams donned jumpsuits and combat harnesses, and sharpshooters took up positions. Police hostage negotiators were in the airport control tower.

A U.S. military plane was also at the airport and a military helicopter hovered overhead.

Before the hijacked plane arrived, the airport's four runways had been operating normally. The plane was hijacked on a flight form Frankfurt, Germany, to Cairo, Egypt and Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Officials said the plane took off from Fankfurt at 4:45 a.m. EST., carrying 94 passengers and 10 crew members.

In New York, McConville said the police department had been informed the hijacker was a Bosnian traveling with a Norwegian passport.

Earlier, Marc Marchese, a spokesman for the airport authority, said the German consulate had told American officials that the hijacker identified himself as a Bosnian and "said he was dissatisfied with the U.N. decisions and he wanted to talk to some people in New York." The U.N. headquarters is the site of talks on ending the ethnic war in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Officials at the consulate said they couldn't confirm Marchese's statement, and authorities in Germany said they weren't sure of the gunman's nationality.

An American law enforcement source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there were reports the gunman was seeking asylum in the United States. He said the man was 26 and spoke German and English.

Hanover prosecutor Klaus Ramburg said German authorities didn't try to keep the plane in Hanover because "the hijacker threatened to immediately begin killing passengers if his demands were not met." He said the man's only demand was that the plane be refueled and flown to New York.

■ family

continued from page 3

He also stated that "families deny the nature of the problem and they are not involved with creating individuals who help derive self worth and value."

Wert also explained that our society has an image of how the ideal family should appear, and that we all have a responsibility not be threatened by family members who are gay or lesbian. Rather, gay and lesbian youths should be welcomed and understood.

"Gays must confront the internalized negative notions [about homosexuality]," Wert concluded.

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
FRIDAY, FEB. 19
Single Project/Event Grants for music, theater, visual art and design, performance art, literature, film and video, and other arts related events.
PROPOSALS ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
APPLICATIONS GUIDANCE/INFORMATION STOP AT STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE OR UMASS ARTS COUNCIL 203 HASBROUCK OR CALL 545-0202

Happy Happy

SKI
SPRINGBREAK 3RD ANNUAL INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS
MT. SUTTON, CANADA
(Just across the Vermont border)
ONLY $209
Party in the Snow!
Includes:
5 Day Lift Ticket
5 Nights Lodging (Mountainside Condo)
5 Days Intercollegiate Activities
Sponsors Include: Labatt's, Evian, and Molson.
Legal Age for Alcohol is 18
Group Leader Discounts
SPRINGBREAK '93
CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
1-800-999-SKI-9

CAREER OPPORTUNITY
EXPERIENCE is a must to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World...
The Collegian is looking for dedicated, responsible, organized Sophomores for positions of Associate Business Manager and Assistant Finance Manager
Applications are available at the Collegian
113 Campus Center
For more information, call 545-3500
Deadline: February 17, 1993
The Collegian is an equal opportunity employer

LOVE IS IN THE AIR

SO WHAT ARE YOU WAITNG FOR??
SAT. FEB 13th
9–2am
BLUEWALL
$4 (donation)
LOVE BALL · LOVE BALL · LOVE BALL · LOVE BALL

DJ's PARAPHONIA
WILL MAKE YOUR HEART SKIP A BEAT RUSH LBGA!
Sponsored by the UMASS LBGA

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Day for 'love' is really stupid

Oh, boy, Valentine's Day is this Sunday.

This is the day when one half of a relationship is supposed to buy gifts for the other, such as candy, balloons, flowers (preferably roses), champagne, diamonds (because they are a girl's best friend), and other materialistic items like that.

This year is not different from any other for me at this time of the season. I'm trying to get psyched up for my birthday, which is three days after this overblown holiday. Why is it overblown?

Because people pack all of these promises into one day. "Love" is a misused word by many. I've known plenty of people who have fallen in and out of "love," several times I might add, without regretting a thing.

Arthur STAPLETON

No, I don't have a significant other, and some may think I don't deserve one. I'm a hopeless romantic, but Valentine's Day is not the time or the place for public displays of affection. PDA is not cute, cool or mature. I agree that people should show their "love" for their sweetheart, but do it alone.

Call me jealous and call me bitter, but I don't need to watch two people groping each other and whispering sweet nothings in each other's ears, as I walk through the Campus Center on the way to the Collegian. Someone I ran into in the Hatch had this to say about our Grand Holiday:

"It is supposed to be the only day in the year to say you care for someone, when if you do, you should say it anytime, anywhere."

Because it is Valentine's Day, some people feel they can't fight with their mate. But wait until the day after, which is only Washington's birthday, and they'll make each other's life a living hell, because that is what relationships are all about, right?

When I think of all of the money I have saved over the years by not buying Valentine's Day gifts, I smile. I've always been the type of person to complain about luck in finding a girlfriend, but this is the time of the year when I don't regret it one bit.

One of the only reasons this holiday is kept going is the constant need for companies to release stupid gifts to bring in profit, profit, profit. I'm content with abolishing the holiday all together, but where would Hallmark's Shoebox greeting cards be without it?

Stores would have no need for Valentine's Day boxer shorts, chocolate hearts, chocolate roses, Brach's candy conversation hearts with cutsey sayings on them, and little wind-up Garfields carrying candy boxes with "Happy Valentine's Day" written on them.

There is no way for this to happen, because we like spending money on the holidays for no apparent reason but to say, "Yes, I got her/him a gift, just because he/she wanted one."

On Sunday, I'll probably be hanging out in my room, wearing my Valentine's Day boxer shorts, and playing Sega with some friends. If you're looking for a Valentine, give me a call, I'm a cheap date.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

Space for rent on the S.U.B. steps

Anybody who has spent time in and around the Campus Center and Student Union here at the University will probably know who I'm talking about.

You can find him just about any time of the day or night, down in the Campus Center basement, up in the Hatch, or possibly even the Cape Cod Lounge.

He's a pretty tall guy, and his features might be classified as "long." His clothes are not quite as long as he is, but at least he doesn't have to cuff his pants like I do. He sports a fairly advanced hairstyle, long on the sides and clean on top, with a leprechaun-esque beard. I'm not sure what his name is, so I call him "Lucky".

Jeff MCKENZIE

Even if you've never seen him before, you can still read my story. Just substitute a mental picture of the guy on the box of Lucky Charms cereal, whose name also happens to be "Lucky."

So, I was sitting in Earthfoods eating my rice and ruffage and in walks Lucky. I'm pretty interested in what Lucky's gig is so I usually watch to see what he does when he comes around.

Lucky walked into the middle of the room and said, "Governor Weld is going to be at the Campus Center at 1:30 today, is anyone interested in protesting?"

He didn't say it very loud, and someone else said, "Who?"

Lucky cleared his throat and said, "Governor Weld. Governor Weld is coming to UMass today. Who wants to join the protest?"

Nobody moved.

Lucky stood there, pamphlets in hand.

"Well then you all get what you deserve from politicians!"

Lucky then stormed out, I presume headed for Northampton, which is the only place left to go when a protest rally fails at Earthfoods.

Everybody took a second to gather themselves and think something profound like, "I've seen that guy before," and then went back to munching.

Something, though, some empty feeling deep in my soul, kept me from eating anymore. A surplus of fiber? Possibly.

Something else was troubling me. Why didn't anybody want to join in the protest? I glanced around and sure enough, they all looked like protester-types to me. And what better target than Governor Weld. I mean, you could be in a pretty good mood and still protest that guy.

Maybe it was because of last semester. Everybody was probably just exhausted from such a busy fall. Making all those signs and banners, all that chanting, it was enough to give anyone arthritis of the fist and run down the batteries in even the best bullhorns.

I don't blame them for taking a break. I'm sure some of you think that there is no excuse for shirking one's duties like that, but protesting is back-breaking work.

As a matter of fact, I think this entire semester should be declared a holiday for protesters. I'll call up Weld and demand that he make it official. If he doesn't give in to my demands, well, meet me and Lucky on the steps of the Student Union on Monday, high noon.

Jeff McKenzie is a Collegian columnist.

Political hacks give UM a bad image

We deserve better. Period.

The 17,000-some odd undergraduate students here at UMass have gotten the shaft for as long as I've been here. The state drains our parents' and our own wallets dry, the administration tweaks its collective nose at us, and graduate students acting as teaching assistants teach us the political correctness of it all.

Currently, UMass is the third most expensive state school for out-of-state students, behind only California-Berkeley and the University of Michigan. Do you really think our school is that good? I certainly don't.

Michael MORRISSEY

The reason: for the most part, the state has filled the administration with a bunch of political hacks, rejects from the Dukakis era. These "administrators," instead of guiding the University into a period of prosperity, have slept while tuition has climbed higher and higher.

These hacks at Mount Olympus (Whitmore) go from three-day weekend to three-day weekend, shuffling paperwork and pretending to work. While you go to class today, the reality is that most of our administrators got a head start on the weekend, and are off buying suntan lotion.

If you don't believe me, call the chancellor's office today. My bet is that he won't be in, but if he is, ask to speak to him about the state of UMass. Again, my bet is that Dick will not talk to any student, because the chancellor is basically a lame duck administrator, coasting out of office praying that nothing controversial happens before his term expires.

O'Brien's ineptness is a symbol of the rest of the place, but with affirmative action in place, chances are the next chancellor will be chosen as much for his/her skin color as for his/her ability. Things will only get worse.

Most of you are probably hunting for summer jobs, co-ops and internships. If you don't think UMass is looked down upon in Boston, then why were you passed over for a job in favor of a political science major from Harvard, a communication major from Boston University, or God forbid, a pre-law major from Boston College?

Why? Because employers in the state won't look seriously at UMass students until the state stops dumping political hacks into our system while milking us for everything we've got.

Take a look at our teachers. Most aren't even professors, but rather teaching assistants. One "teacher" told 12 students that they could not add his class, even though his roster read 21 students and there were 40 empty seats in the classroom. I don't know where this man learned to add, but I know 12 + 21 is less than 40.

We are either put in overcrowded classes or told we can't add necessary courses. Some choice of education.

Adding insult to injury, Dick O'Brien and his cohorts laugh down from Mount Olympus. In the past, O'Brien called former Collegian editor-in-chief Dan Wetzel "guilty of a most flagrant lie . . . designed to cover up his own inadequate performance." Do we pay for the chancellor to personally attack us? I guess so.

Where's UMass president Michael (T.J.) Hooker during all this? The last time I saw him, he was smooching Governor Weld as his Lincoln Continental screeched out of Amherst. The car was going so fast en route to Boston, it almost mowed down innocent students.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist.

The 'break beard' myth

I was back at Sully's Suds, you know, the local establishment that opened last fall? I was doing my laundry (times are tough — even Sully's had to diversify to survive: a combination bar and laundromat) when my crass but lovable friend Slats Grobnik Jr. came in for the convenience of my column, oops — I mean to visit.

"Big guy! Doesn't your Mom do your laundry?"

Luke ERICKSON

Slats, ever the observant one, saw me loading heaps of dirty laundry into the machine, and made the inevitable conclusion.

"Yes, Mr. Grobnik, but not when there's 35 pounds of laundry from 13 workouts a week. I'm in training for the Boston Marathon," I replied.

"How do you like the beard?" Slats asked, changing the subject from my sweat-soaked clothes to his pathetic stubble.

"Beard? I thought that was dirt."

"I thought I'd go with the Don Johnson look," Slats remarked.

"Hate to break it it to you, Grobnik, but Miami Vice was cancelled four years ago, and Mr. Johnson would kill for the part of 'Dad' in a dog food commercial these days. You'd have better luck getting castrated for the New Kids On The Block sound."

Slats had let the "break beard" grow out in hopes of looking older and more masculine; he is not alone in that endeavor, joined by hundreds of guys in college every year.

"What do you want me do, Luke? Get a flat top, wear my clothing two sizes too small and start worshipping Anheiser-Busch?" Slats accused.

"No, Slats, I don't think the Southwest jock look is you," I replied.

"Well, I gotta do something to change my look — and my luck," Slats said, referring to his social life that would make Rodney Dangerfield look like a gigolo.

"So what about a mustache?" Slats asked meekly.

"That's fine if you have a chipped tooth, but unless it grows in within a month, you're going to hear 'you got dirt on your lip' wisecracks," I explained.

"How do you know so much about this?" Slats asked incredulously.

"Experience, my friend. Oh, wait a minute. I almost forgot to do my shameless plug for Sully's. Here goes: Sully's Suds, located in downton Amherst is the perfect place to have brew when you've got laundry to do. This week's specials include 75-cent drafts and drying machines and dollar-shots and soaps."

"So I guess I have to lose the beard and stick to being myself?" Slats asked.

"That's right. After all, would you like a woman who's more concerned about her looks than herself?"

"No, because women like that, you blow in their ear and they say, 'Thanks for the refill,'" Slats, the politically correct NOT commentator said.

"Slats, ease up on the airhead jokes — there are militant feminists reading this column who don't have a sense of humor and will have forgotten that I just made fun of 'I'm-too-big-for-my-shirt' macho men just a few lines back!"

"Sorry, Luke."

"That's okay, Slats, just be yourself."

Luke Erickson is a Collegian columnist.

Help restore democracy to Haiti

Over a year after a brutal coup toppled its first chance at participatory government, Haiti is being bled to death by its military. Since the overthrow of Jean-Bertrand Aristide, the United States has publicly supported the return of democratic government while secretly undercutting Aristide's power and the chance for his return to Haiti. It has also violated the economic embargo, allowing the illegal government to become further entrenched.

This year, Feb. 7-13 is Haiti Solidarity Week. Celebrated around the country with demonstrations, vigils, petitions and other acts of resistance against the illegal military regime that is now in power, Haiti Solidarity Week is an opportunity for all Americans to pressure Clinton's administration for a change in the current U.S. policies regarding Haiti and its people.

I challenge all UMass students, faculty and staff to become involved, whether it means signing a petition, writing a letter to Congress or telling a friend about Haiti Solidarity Week. Feb. 7 was the two-year anniversary of Aristide's inauguration — let's work for next Feb. 7 to honor his return to power.

Joan B. Cohen
Ctr. for International Education

■ Men's track

continued from page 11

mances from their main contributors. O' Brien is relying on sophomore long and triple jumper Tom Galligani, senior long jumper John Johnson, freshman shot-putter Mark Lefebvre, senior miler Matt Simon, and junior distance runner Craig Cormier to place high in their events and score the bulk of the team's points. They're all rated in the top three in the conference, according to O'Brien.

"We have no margin for error. We're walking a tightrope," said O'Brien. If they should slip, there's no net, and it could be a long day for the Minutemen.

O'Brien figures that most of the top spots and most of the points will be garnered by the top three teams so UMass will have to scramble for the rest of the points.

"I don't think it's going to take a lot of points to grab fourth, maybe 50 to 55 will do it," O'Brien said. "If we get fourth place, it would be outstanding."

The A-10 Championships is one of the more important meets of this season for the Minutemen. A strong showing would add to the team's confidence for future meets and make the Minutemen a force to be reckoned with for the rest of the season.

■ imposter

continued from page 1

was really the best. She reasoned, 'Well, my interview was on July 5, the day after the Fourth of July. So, what probably happened is that everyone was hung over and didn't know what they were doing."

Young also spoke of a Massachusetts woman, who received the highest score in the state on the Certified Public Accountant exam. "She reasoned that it was only because Massachusetts is a small state," said Young. "She thought it never would have happened if she'd taken it in Texas or California."

Internalization of failure is more common among females than males and begins at a very early age, Young said. "Girls often blame themselves for failure. While boys tend to blame it on things outside of themselves — 'the teacher was too hard, the questions were tricky, the dog threw up on my paper.'"

Young offered some suggestions for overcoming The Imposter Syndrome.

"We need to learn to own your own accomplishments. Learn to practice saying 'I'. 'I did a good job. I work hard,'" she said.

"Change your expectations. It's okay not to feel quite comfortable," Young said, "I think that when you get a new job, for instance, you should give it nine months.'

■ B.O.G.

continued from page 3

The other proposed motions would investigate the stresses imposed on Building Services by the concourse table vending program, reduce the price of Bluewall cookies by 10 cents, and change its internal rules so voting on the Board's officers would be held two weeks before new Student Government and Board members are elected, instead of two weeks after.

The Collegian.
We eat our Wheaties, but DRY, without milk.

Want the Boston Globe delivered?

Monday - Friday and Sunday

Call 1-800-858-4275
Then press zero

La Boutique Rosalina
26 Main Street • Amherst
256-8522
All are invited to come in and enter our Raffle! Three Grand Prize Winners will be chosen on Feb. 11.
Free Hebert Heart Shaped Chocolate ...with a $35 Purchase of any non-sale item
Prizes Include: $50, $35, & $20 Gift Certificates for La Boutique Rosalina
Offer is Good While Supplies Last

Legal Problems?
Call UMass Student Legal Services!
Housing • Family • Student Rights
Civil Rights • Workers Rights
Criminal • Consumer Law
Military and Draft Law
922 Campus Center 545-1995

HUNAN GOURMET
京 CHINESE RESTAURANT 湘
The aroma, sound & taste of authentic Chinese cuisine prepared Hunan, Szechuan, Manderine or Cantonese style – especially for you!
ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1992 1st Place
FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
261 King St., Northampton • 585-0202 • Ample Parking
Open 7 Days A Week
TAKE OUT SERVICE AVAILABLE

WOMEN'S GYMNASTIC MEET
UMass vs. Northern Illinois
Monday
Feb. 15
7:00 p.m.
Curry Hicks Cage
Shawmut Bank
11 Amity Street, Amherst, MA 01002
Tel. 413-256-3200
A Shawmut National Company
Free Pizza Hut Pizza for the first 100 spectators.

I NEVER THOUGHT I WOULD BE RUNNING around with a group of five year olds playing Duck, Duck, Goose in a classroom in the heart of the South Bronx, and I never thought I would be chaperoning a high school dance in Arkansas, and I never thought that anything could be this challenging or rewarding or frustrating or incredible....

UNTIL SOMETHING INSIDE OF ME STIRRED and I asked myself that if I didn't like what I saw in the world around me what was I going to do to change it?

TEACH FOR AMERICA
STILL HAS INTERVIEW SPACE AVAILABLE

APPLICATION DEADLINE
MARCH 1, 1993

See your career office first for applications. If they are not available call 1-800-832-1230. If you have applied by the January 15, 1993 deadline, you have been guaranteed an interview and should have received notification in the mail.

SAN JUAN BAUTISTA SCHOOL OF MEDICINE IN PUERTO RICO
Accredited by the Puerto Rico Council on Higher Education
Affiliated to the McGill University School of Medicine in Montreal, Canada is accepting admission applications to students who wish to study Medicine for the semester starting August 1993.
Approved for Veterans and their beneficiaries. For more information and to obtain application for admission, please call or write to:
AGUSTIN AUFFANT, M.A.
AUFFANT COLLEGE CONNECTION
P.O. BOX 7100 • WORCESTER, MASS., 01605
CALL 508-853-2949
The School does not discriminate against race, age, color, ethnic or national origin, social condition, physical disability, political ideologies, religion or civil status.

Arts & Living

Mikey scores, Oprah snores

It was the interview that Oprah has always dreamed of. It was a very exciting 90 minutes for Oprah Winfrey, pop talk show diva, who interviewed Michael Jackson LIVE on television from his 2700-acre ranch Wednesday night. Michael's estate is named Neverland Ranch Valley, located in California's Santa Ynez Valley. It was the first televised interview for Michael in almost 14 years. Oprah and Michael insisted that they had not gone over any of the questions that she had planned to ask — thus making Michael fair game.

"Tonight the silence is broken," exclaimed Oprah at the beginning of the interview. Michael walked slowly into the room where to greet Oprah. Michael's slender body was covered in tight black pants and a bright red shirt which had gold squares on the shoulders.

Adam Scott
ROBERTS

Raised in Gary, Ind., Michael was the seventh of nine brothers and sisters, born to Joseph and Catherine Jackson. Michael explained that the stage is his home. Since his early childhood, around 8 or 9 the young Michael "cried due to loneliness." From the time Michael was very young and until today he would always have to be protected from his fans. Protected from his success. Michael would always be surrounded by body guards. Although he never really had a childhood Michael admitted that today, he compensates for that by surrounding himself with children. Michael later went on to say that his friends were his brothers.

When asked about the dirt that sister Latoya dished in a tell-all book Michael told Oprah, "Honestly, I couldn't answer that Oprah, I haven't read the book." This is when Oprah asked quite delicately "Did your father beat you?" Michael almost blushed as he answered without any reservations; "Yes he did." Michael immediately looked at the camera and apologized to his father for saying that. Michael explained how as a child and still today that he feels "frightened" by his father. Michael described such verbal abuse as when his father told young Michael "You're ugly." Michael then said to Oprah in a sense of cheerful promptness "Go down the list Oprah, go down the list," referring to the questions that lie ahead.

As Oprah went down her list of questions Michael denied that he ever slept in an oxygen tank; rather that it was a device used at The Michael Jackson Burns Center. Michael's reaction to the tabloids: "It's all a complete lie."

Michael also wanted to make it clear that never once did he declare that Oprah refer to him as the King of Pop. Oprah then got to the juicier questions by starting with asking the star if he dates. Michael said "Yes."

However as Oprah pursued this question with "who?" the words 'Brooke Shields' flowed from his mouth before she finished the question. I speculate that if this were really true, wouldn't we as the public already know this? Perhaps it is a cover up on Michael's behalf?

Finally, the question we all wanted to hear: "Are you a virgin?" Immediately, Michael blushed as he answered, "I'm a gentlemen." Well, gentlemen or not — men do have sex and this wasn't the answer we wanted to hear. Maybe a more appropriate question would have been "Do you prefer a specific gender? But as reported in USA Today Oprah said that she would never ask a guest of hers such a question.

Michael told Oprah, "I'm a Black American." He denies reports that he ever bleached his skin. Instead, Michael told Oprah that he has a rare pigment disorder that makes his skin blotchy and that he uses make up to even it out. Well, why not use a darker shade, Michael? He also told Oprah he's had two plastic surgeries (one being his nose). He continually said, "Read my book Moonwalker — it's all in there."

Michael says that he is lonely and that "I'm never pleased with anything. I'm a perfectionist. I'm never pleased with myself and I never look in the mirror."

Michael explains that grabbing his crotch is caused by the music: "You become the emotion of what the sound is. It just happens."

Michael has an amusement park on his premises and every three weeks he has terminally ill children come and play with him. Michael has started the Heal the World Foundation and The Heal L.A. Project. In addition, he built a theatre on his property for the children. Michael comes off as very giving and caring; the quiet and caring side of him shined

Turn to OPRAH, page 8

A folk hero for real people

Self-taught songwriter Garnet Rogers to play NoHo

By BILL ROGERS
Collegian Staff

One of the premier performers on the contemporary North American Folk Circuit has stories to tell and will be coming by the Iron Horse on Sunday night.

A native of Hamilton, Ontario, Garnet Rogers has, using his amazing self-taught musical skills, been walking audiences through a wide range of emotions for many years now. His songs describe the lives of people who aren't obvious heroes (maybe even to themselves) and the important struggles of everyday life, small victories and personal triumphs.

Rogers is, in his heart, an optimist whose stories are remembered as fondly as the songs he sings. Each song, in its own special way, clearly states the message that there is dignity to be found in each person's strength of character.

COURTESY MICHAEL HOUGH
Guitarist Garnet Rogers

Rogers is everything you would expect a folk singer not to be. No red plaid shirts and badly tuned guitars for this guy. It's more like a ripped tie die T-shirt on a man playing about 300 volts of voice that fill the room and guitar work that rings like crystals.

Rogers is the kind of performer capable of awe-inspiring and unpredictable performances, and that includes more than just his music.

Rogers is a man with a powerful physical appearance and a voice to match; a resonant baritone capable of commanding a roar or a whisper. Hailed by The Boston Globe as "a charismatic performer and singer," he has done nothing but impress the hordes of fans across the continent.

It all started back when he was side man fiddle player for his brother, the late great Stan Rogers, who died a heroic death in the early '80s when he tried to save passengers on a plane that had caught fire. Stan's band was one of the most powerful and important musical forces to emerge from Canada.

Over the past few years, Rogers has grown into a much admired arranger and producer, credited with the discovery of some of the best performers on the circuit today.

Rogers is also regarded as one of the better interpreters of traditional folk material. In all of his artistic endeavors, including composer, producer and sideman, Rogers has traveled nearly half a million kilometers as a headlining performer in the last several years.

Rogers has been a featured performer on CBC Radio and television and radio programs, including The Gaberreau, The Entertainers, Mountain Stage, Good Evening and All Things Considered. He has taken the main stage at folk festivals across North America, including Philadelphia, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton, Ann Arbor and Mariposa.

His loyal fans include such greats as June Tabor and Mary Chapin-Carpenter, with whom he has shared the stage.

Rogers has recorded four solo albums to this date, including Garnet Rogers, Speaking Softly In The Dark, The Outside Track (hailed as one of the greatest Canadian recordings of the decade), and Small Victories, the first release to feature all Rogers Originals. Small Victories is constantly praised by fans and critics alike.

In addition to numerous well-received recordings, Rogers has also been nominated for a NAIRD Indie Award.

This is surely not a concert to miss, for this man has much to share with his loyal valley fans. It will definitely be a night to remember. Come see Garnet Rogers play his "guitar from hell" (his pet name for his synthesizer).

Garnet Rogers will be playing the Iron Horse in NoHo Sunday night at 7 pm. The $10.50 tickets must be purchased in advance at the Northampton Box Office (586-8686)

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE
Busch Suitcase cans ..... $9.99 (+ dep)
Octoberfest Clearance:
Wurzburger & Dinkel Acker 6 pk ....$4.69 (+ dep)
Becks Beer 12 pk bottles only .....$9.99 (+ dep)
Miller High Life 6 pk cans .....$2.70 (+ dep)
Suitcase cans .....$13.99 (+ dep)
Gallo: Chablis, Rhine, Burgundy, Blush 1.5 L $3.99
Smirnoff Vodka 90 proof 750 ml $6.99
Gordon's Pepper Vodka 1 L $6.99
M.D. 20/20 All Flavors 750 ml $1.99
Seagrams Gin 1.75 L $13.99
Yukon Jack 1.75 L $13.99
LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
Open 9 am - 11 pm
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
FRIDAY, FEB. 19
Single Project/Event Grants for music, theater, visual art and design, performance art, literature, film and video, and other arts related events.
PROPOSALS ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
APPLICATIONS GUIDANCE/INFORMATION STOP AT STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE OR UMASS ARTS COUNCIL 203 HASBROUCK OR CALL 545-0202

■ Oprah

continued from page 7

through from the whole interview. Selfish, Michael is not, giving he is.

Liz Taylor dropped by to say a few words about Michael and how she feels about him. She said to Oprah, "A wonderful, giving, caring man he is."

Michael showed the premiere of his latest video: "Give in to Me." Michael even demonstrated the moonwalk for Oprah. Michael said he took this from the ghettos and improved it. He appeared to be having a fiesta; it couldn't be more clear that he loves his work.

Michael talked about wanting to get married and starting a family but at this point he said, "I'm married to my music." When he's comparing himself to Christ by saying unclearly, "I try to imitate Jesus — to be as pure as children and to be innocent," he admits that he loves that.

So whether he's performing at the Super Bowl or signing million dollar contracts with Sony, Michael clearly remains a "Thriller."

Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian columnist.

Men's gym to meet Temple

By ANDREW BRYCE
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team went into Wednesday night's home meet with Springfield College hoping to wrap up the first five events, because they knew their opponent would be the stronger team in the last event, the high bar.

The Minutemen did just that, as they won the meet 240.90-238.85, despite being outscored by Springfield in the high bar.

Junior Jason Braud had what head coach Roy Johnson said was "the best overall performance of his career." Braud finished first in the floor exercises (9.60) and the rings (8.70), second on the vault (8.95), and third on the parallel bars (8.50). Braud's score in the floor exercises was a tenth of a point off the UMass school record.

"I want that record," said Braud. "I know I can get it this weekend; going against the likes of Temple should help me get it." Senior captain Steve Christensen was the other top performer for the Minutemen as he garnered two first place finishes, on the pommel horse (9.25) and the parallel bars (8.65). Christensen also finished second in the floor exercises (8.75).

Other stand out performers for UMass were junior Jason Lee, who finished first in the vault, junior Jay Santos, who finished second in the parallel bars and third in the high bar, sophomore Stu Backer, a second place finish on the rings, and sophomore Tim Smith, who tied for third place on the vault.

Johnson was impressed with the team's overall performance.

"This win was a team effort. There wasn't any one person that got us the win," said Johnson. "It was a great effort in a real exciting meet."

"Ever since the Navy meet, we have been focusing on this meet," said Backer. "We were worried about Springfield, but, tonight, we proved we could beat them."

The next meet for UMass is tomorrow at 1 p.m. in Boyden Gym against powerhouse Temple University. Despite their opponents being a notch above the Minutemen in talent, the team and coaching staff are hoping for some excellent individual performances.

"Temple is a great team," said Christensen. "We're not expecting to beat them. Our team goals and personal goals are key."

$1.00 Off Any Grinder or Dinner
* Equal or Lesser Value

KRETE
Family Restaraunt & Pizza
FREE DELIVERY
Ask about our Daily Specials
586-8255
331 Russel St. • Rt. 9 Hadley

$1.00 Off Medium 14" Pizza, $2.00 Off Large (18") or Ex-Large Pizza with 1 item or more
* Equal or Lesser Value

The GYM
at mountain farms mall
584-2175
COMPARE & SAVE
Semester Special
ONLY $99.00!!
Membership Good Thru 5-31-93
TANNING AVAILABLE
"On the bus route!"

CAN'T AFFORD TO VOLUNTEER?
Consider This:
Overseas Travel — PAID
Language Training — PAID
Living Expenses — PAID
Medical and Dental Care — PAID
Student Loans — DEFERRED
$5400 — CASH TO YOU
All this, and a better world to show for it.
Maybe you can't afford not to volunteer.
Peace Corps Information Meeting
Wednesday, February 17
7:00 PM
Campus Center Room 804
Call the UMASS Peace Corps Office
at 545-2105 for more information
or stop by 12 Draper Hall
An Equal Opportunity Employer

NORTHAMPTON BOWL
Sunday Night
☆ Special ☆
99¢ Per Game
From 8:30 til close
525 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA 01060 • (413) 584-2491

THIS SATURDAY!
Very Funny Valentine
Host of USA's "Up All Night"
SPECIAL VALENTINE'S DAY SHOW
All Ages
All Shows
Rhonda Shear
COMING SOON
MARC DeCARLO "STUDS" Feb 20
MICHAEL WINSLOW "Police Academy" Feb 27
JAMIE FOX "IN LIVING COLOR" Mar 6
JUDY TENUTA "The Love Goddess" Mar 27
DAVID ALAN GRIER "IN LIVING COLOR" Apr 10
COMEDY CONNECTION AT THE HU KE LAU CHICOPEE
CALL 413•593•5222

CALVIN AND HOBBES — By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL — By JIM

DOONESBURY — By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE — By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED — By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RUBU — By PITT

THE FAR SIDE — By GARY LARSON

Henry VIII on the dating scene

Quote of the Day

"Took a shower/Went to bed/Read a book I've never read."

– Mighty Mighty Bosstones

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New Material gains are indicated now. Those who are trying to capitalize on their creative or artistic gifts, as well as those in science, will benefit.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take the overview and look at your revised plans from a long-range perspective. Dreams could provide important clues. Seek professional advice if desired.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be tempted to be a bit brusque with a customer or co-worker. Practice sensitivity toward other people's feelings. There may be a need to change work procedures suddenly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone in a position of authority may choose the path you must take now. Be a good sport. Travel is indicated for some. Getting away for the weekend will lift your spirits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This is not a good day for shooting from the hip. Freudian slips may give clues to your real needs or motives. Watch that body language! A move to new quarters may be necessary.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Public dealings, business partnerships and close ties receive new attention this weekend. Prominent people who share your optimism provide strong moral support.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New work methods or job projects hold great promise. Intellectually stimulating companions are a source of inspiration. Strive to strike a better balance between career and family interests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Shipups are possible today. Protect funds and items of value. A brilliant brainstorming session gets the creative juices flowing. Heed the signals you are receiving in romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A hidden factor adds to the excitement of romance. A powerful new person could enter your life this evening. Dress up and be on your best behavior.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Guard your funds in the days just ahead. A lofty project could run aground. You have all you need and may be more fortunate. Your interest in a former hobby is rekindled.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Sharing coincidences will enhance a new partnership. A banker or broker could make an important tip. Real estate or domestic matter demands immediate attention.

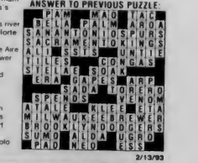
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be more receptive to suggestions from people who love you. What was difficult to discuss before can be approached favorably now. Attending a gala social event excites you greatly.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

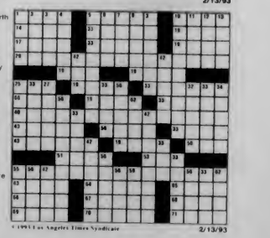
ACROSS
1 They appear in both "Cats" acts?
5 Composer of "Parade"
10 Capital of Manchu
14 Till, of old
15 Last word in many letters
16 Walked on
17 Part of SAL
18 "— Hall"
19 Word in a Mozart title
20 BIG BEER FOR THE KING
23 Opp. of NNE
24 Per — daily
25 Much used article
28 Treaty
31 Metroliner stops
35 Partner of Zeus
37 Kind of avs
39 Turf excision
40 WYATT'S EXTRALANCE
43 Figure of speech
44 Rotate
45 Wagner's earth goddess
46 Fry's "— of Prisoners"
48 Glut
50 Child's meas.
51 Botanist Gray and others
53 Scottish explorer
55 FRESHEST STORES
63 Teen's bane
64 Shire of films
65 Locus
66 Norse god
67 Upright
68 Green land
69 Long periods
70 Office furniture
71 Mardi Gras follower

DOWN
1 Pick out
2 Buffalo's cousin
3 Head the bill
4 Iceman's tool
5 Film with Vader
6 "Rule, Britannia!" composer
7 Chinese tree
8 Homeric epic
9 Ocular cover
10 Radiator part
11 Branch of math
12 Like Texas's star
13 Frankfurt's river
21 Psychic's forte
Abbr
22 City on the Ave
25 Ella's follower
26 Harkens
27 Leon of old movies
29 Berets
30 Snares
32 In the open
33 Nattering jacks
34 Sandal part
36 Peddlers
38 La Scala solo
41 "What thou — write, in a book"
42 Implores
47 Walloped
49 Dine or sup
52 Gaze
54 Canvas support
55 Like George Apley
56 Resound
57 Soon or later
58 Stout and porter
59 French —, Indiana
60 Pisa's pesos
61 "— Arcadia ego"
62 Dispatched

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE



2/13/93



© 1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

2/13/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Copy Editor ..... E.C. Thomas
PhotoTechnician ..... Josh Reynolds
Production Supervisor ..... Alan Blagg
Production ..... Todd Elliott
Tony Morse

Menu

LUNCH
Macaroni & Cheese
Italian Sausage Grinder
BASICS LUNCH
Red Beans
Macaroni & Cheese

DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Barbecued Spareribs
BASICS DINNER
Curried Chick Peas
Savory Baked Chicken

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

PRESIDENTS WEEKEND SALE!

EVERYTHING IN THE STORE ON SALE!

SAVE 10 "BILLS" — BUY ANY 3 CD'S OR 6 CASSETTES — GET $10.00 OFF — Any regularly priced CD $11.99 or higher/Cassette $8.99 or higher

SAVE 5 "BILLS" — BUY ANY 2 CD'S OR 4 CASSETTES — GET $5.00 OFF — Any regularly priced CD $13.99 or higher/Cassette $8.99 or higher

SAVE 2 "BILLS" — BUY ANY 1 CD OR 1 CASSETTE — GET $2.00 OFF — Any regularly priced CD $9.99 or higher/Cassette $8.99 or higher

TIPPER GORE SPECIAL — SAVE AN ADDITIONAL 50¢ ON ANY PARENTAL ADVISORY STICKERED COMPACT DISC, CASSETTE OR VIDEO

6.99 Cass 9.99 CD

7.99 Cass 11.99 CD

8.99 Cass 11.99 CD

7.99 Cass 11.99 CD

7.99 Cass 11.99 CD

EVERY ARTIST, EVERY TITLE, EVERY CD ON SALE!

The Spindoctors • Brand Nubian • Kenny G. • Pearl Jam • Phish • Eric Clapton • Arrested Development Sade • Bon Jovi • Neil Young • Metallica • Mary J. Blige • R.E.M. • En Vogue • 10,000 Maniacs • Annie Lennox • Lemonheads • Jesus Jones • Alice In Chains • da da • Soul Asylum • Dream Theater • K.D. Lang Brian May • Toad The Wet Sprocket • House Of Pain • Elvis Costello • Peter Gabriel • U2 • Queen • Kriss Kross • Nirvana • Keith Richards • Chante Moore • Michael Bolton • Guns N' Roses • Bonnie Raitt

1993 Playmate Calendar Video — ON SALE 16.99 VIDEO
ALL PLAYBOY VIDEOS ON SALE

Penthouse Pet Of The Year Playoff 1992 — ON SALE 16.99 VIDEO
ALL PENTHOUSE VIDEOS ON SALE

SAVE 20%
BUY ANY ACCESSORY GET 20% OFF
BUY ANY VIDEO GET 20% OFF
Offer valid on regular priced items only

YOUR CHOICE $4.99
FUJI DRI 90 5 Pack + 1
FUJI DRI 60 6 Pack + 1

Everything sounds better on Fuji. All purpose tape in an extra slim tape.
ON SALE 4.99 FUJI DRI 90 5 Pack +1 FUJI DRI 60 6 Pack +1
ALL FUJI BLANK TAPE ON SALE

Revolving CD tower holds and protects 200 CD's, in a black or oak finish.
ON SALE 89.99 J.D. Whitney Sound Column
ALL HOME STORAGE UNITS ON SALE

Clip And Save

Clip And Save

Clip And Save

SAVE BIG BUCKS ON EVERYTHING IN THE STORE!

Strawberries
MUSIC AND VIDEO STORES
On sale 2/12 through 2/15 Some restrictions may apply

HADLEY, Russel St. & Route 9 (413)256-3160
HOLYOKE, 2275 Northampton St (413)536-2222
PITTSFIELD, 241 North St. (413)499-0357
SPRINGFIELD, 1550 Boston Post Rd. (413)543-1517
W. SPRINGFIELD, Memorial Ave. (413)737-4128
ENFIELD, CT, Rte. 190 Hazard Ave. (203)741-3030

Men ready for A-10's

By SEAN P. HAYDEN
Collegian Correspondent

This Saturday, the University of Massachusetts men's indoor track team travels to the University of Rhode Island for the first ever Atlantic-10 Track Championships being held at the Mackal Fieldhouse. Head Coach Ken O'Brien has his squad rested, healthy, and poised for a strong showing.

Coach O'Brien views the championships as a two-tier meet. Rutgers, W.Va., and URI are head-and-shoulders above the rest of the league and should battle it out for the first three spots.

O'Brien feels that his team falls somewhere in the next group, along with Temple and St. Joseph's.

"I don't think any one of the three in our bracket will bump the other three. It would take a total collapse by one of those teams. I think we're wrestling with St. Joe's and Temple for four, five, and six," said O'Brien.

UMass's strength lies in its depth as they've had 28 different team members contribute points so far this season.

"We don't have a large senior group, but we've got some great balance. That's our major strength," O'Brien said.

If UMass has any hopes of doing well this weekend, they'll need strong perfor-

Turn to MEN'S TRACK, page 6

■ Women's gym

continued from page 12

Minutewomen came away with a confidence, according to Mitchell, which will help them immensely in future meets.

"We had been having problems with beam all year long. What we found out in this meet is that beam is going to be a very strong event for us for the rest of the season," Mitchell said.

Overall for the Minutewomen, Furtado won the All-Around for the second straight meet with a 36.85. A UMass gymnast has won the All-Around in every meet thus far this season (Furtado twice, and Marshall four times).

The Minutewomen have this weekend to prepare for Monday night's dual meet with Northern Illinois University (7 p.m., Curry Hicks Cage). The Huskies are 4-5 entering this weekend's action, which includes a Saturday trip to New Hampshire before arriving here in Amherst.

In their last meet versus the University of Illinois, the Huskies scored a record setting 189.75, higher than any score this season for the Minutewomen. Sophomore Goha Mroz from Poland leads the way for Northern Illinois, having just set a school record for the All-Around (38.50).

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

ST. JUDE'S NOVENA

May the sacred heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved throughout the world now and forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. Say this prayer 9 times a day, by the 8th day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail. Publication must be promised.
Thank you St. Jude for granting my petition.
L.S.

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 Days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

the SUB now has PIZZA & WE DELIVER
The SUB, Amherst's #1 Sub Shop Since 1977, now has Pizza. Select from our wide variety of Pizza Subs & Calzones. For delivery or take out orders. Call 549-5160

ADVOCATE ★BEST★ THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1992 1st Place
PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3PM
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS FRI. & SAT.
OPEN & 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202 FREE PARKING ON RT. 9 HADLEY
VISA MASTER CARD

DAYTONA BEACH
The BREAK of a Lifetime $19.93*
Break away! Break out! Big Beach-Big Fun- BIG VALUE!
Quality Oceanfront Resorts.
Beachcomer Oceanfront Inn
2000 N. Atlantic Ave.
Mayan Inn - newly renovated
103 S. Ocean Ave.
1-800-874-7420
Oceans Eleven Resorts, Inc.
*per person, per night, based on 4 per room. Limited availability at this rate.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Unitarian Universalist Young Adult Group meeting this Sunday. Contact Sean at 546-3935 for more info.

Spectrum Magazine seeks submissions: Art, photography, poetry, prose. Due date: 2/16/93
406 E Student Union
Questions? Visit office or 545-2240

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Join the UMass Raquetball Club. All levels welcome. For more info, call Don at 546-1527

Mortar Board Week 2/16 - 19 on the concourse – Get write on it and help to author a UMass book to raise $ for the literacy project, raffle for $100 and other prizes, information about this senior honor society.

Open Rush
Meet the Sisters of
Alpha Chi Omega
Feb 16, 17, 18
5:30 pm
38 Nutting Ave.
Any Questions call 549-1680

Space Allocation Process
Attn: RSO's and GSO's who would like to apply for office space in the CC/Student Union complex may obtain applications to do so at the Board of Governors office 817 CC or SAO 416 Student Union.
Deadline to submit applications: March 5, 1993

Valentine Roses Campus Center Concourse (Wed-Fri) or call Chris 258-1588 (6-10pm) Visa/MC Deliveries Available

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-6098
549-6073

FOR RENT

Amherst room to rent 300 mo. first last security daytime 545-6395 nite967-4065

For rent
Two bed apt/$460 at 44 Mill Hollow 549-7757 (rental office)

Fridge Rental 253-9742 delivered free

1 bdrm in large apt. $350/ heat incl. 665-3615

Room Available $275/mo S. Amherst call Stacey 253-5328 large apt great roomate

FOR SALE

Atomic ARS Sport 195 cm
Marker M46 bindings
Good condition – $100 or B.O.
Call Reid 256-0301

Metallica Tickets for sale call 549-6780

Moving sale/Yard sale
You want it? We got it. Sofas, refrids., bikes, oven, etc.
82 S Main St. Sunderland
Saturday Feb. 13 9 am

Printer for sale 413-245-9542 after 7 ask for Don

Special Gift for Valentine's!
14K New Men's Claddaugh ring
Call if interested b/o 546-2215

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

CAMP COUNSELORS WANTED: Magnificent coed weight loss. All sports, crafts, sewing, ceramics, computers, WSIs, theatre, piano, dance, aerobics, weight training, riflery, backpacking, kitchen, office.
Camp Shane, Ferndale, NY 12734 212-877-4644

EARN UP TO $10/HR
Are you looking for great hours? Great $$$? And a great experience? Don't look any further. Market for Fortune 500 Companies! CALL NOW
1-800-932-0528 ext. 17

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action. $100/wk. +. On Bus line 584-9830.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery coordinators + delivery help for the Boston Globe Mon-Fri + Sunday in Amherst apt. Complex area. Routes available with or without transportation. Early hours – good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

Extra $$$ Extra $$$ Extra $$$
Wanted reliable + dependable delivery persons for dorm + office delivery of the Boston Globe Mon. Fri. + Sunday. Early hours good pay. Please call 1-800-858-4275 then press zero.

GREAT SUMMER OPPORTUNITY
Jewish co-ed residential camp seeks counselors and specialists. Capital camps, located in the beautiful Catoctin Mountains, one hour from Washington D.C. offers tennis, water sports, nature, arts, video, gymnastics, radio, drama, photo, etc. if you are interested in the challenges and excitement of working with campers in grades 3-10, we want you on our team. GOOD SALARIES, GREAT FUN! Our director will be at the Camp Fair on March 2. For more information and an appointment call 1-800-229-7852

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT
Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000 - $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Student Groups raise $1000 in 1 week! No cost or risk! Call 546-4330 Marcel

Summer jobs and internships – University Directories, the nations largest publisher of campus telephone directories (including UMass at Amherst), is interviewing goal oriented students for a challenging, full time summer position. Gain valuable experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings $3900. Expense paid training program in Chapel Hill, NC. College credit may be available. Interviews on UMass at Amherst campus February 24th. Information and interview sign up available today at the Visitors Center or call 1-800-743-5556

INSTRUCTION

Learn to Scuba dive earn two credits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday at Curry Hicks 7-10 pm 1-800-282-0977

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

Lost Ring – Reward
Totman – Feb 1st
Friendship "LTM"
Call collect 508-827-4555

Silver + Gold Seiko watch on Montague Rd. in Amherst. If found please call 549-0338

MUSIC

OSB Underground
Recording Studio
1-746-9026

Speakers, Reconing + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro.
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

MUSICIANS

Keyboardist Wanted: Phish, Ailmans, Creative Improv 256-8115

PERSONALS

Dimos
You are the mostest
Happy Valentine's Day
From your fan club

Frank
Happy Birthday "Tex"
Luv
Marcie

Kerrin Wood
Happy Birthday
Love,
Honey Lamb and Apple Dumplin'

Kim Remember one year ago?
Michael

Megan Zidle
Here's to February and all of it's surprises

Novice Women's Crew
Think of your goals.
Don't settle for less
Reach for the strength
AND KNOW YOU HAVE MORE!

Lauren
21 is fun
That may be true
But you can still drink
at 22!
Happy Birthday Lou!
Love
Your Partners in crime L & T

Marianne O'Neill
Feliz Dia de San Valentin
de tu no tan secreto admirador
xxooxx

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Colby College this weekend. Of course I'll split gas and tolls. Please call Michelle at 6-1238

SERVICES

Need Help With Your Taxes? Student tax return preparation. Starting at $20.00 Rich 549-8109

Resume Preparation assistance with complete resume development. Keith Anderson, Ph.D. 582-4037

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

SPORTS CARDS

Sportstop cards
Mt. Farms Mall

TRAVEL

Language/Cultural programs university of Granada, Spain $2300 all inclusive one month: Airfare, tuition, diploma, room/board with family, excursions June, July August September.
Contact:
Seven Continents
26 Clauss Ave
Paramus, NJ

Scuba Dive Key Largo
Spring Break, Call Project Deep
1-800-282-0977

SKI Springbreak Intercollegiate Ski Weeks, only $299. Includes 5 DAY LIFT TICKET/5 NIGHTS LODGING (MOUNTAINSIDE CONDO) /5 DAYS INTERCOLLEGIATE ACTIVITIES (Drinking age – 18). Sponsored by Labatt's, Evian, Molsen, and Mt. SUTTON, CANADA (Just across the Vermont border) Group lesder discounts. Springbreak '93. Call Ski Travel Unlimited. 1-800-999-SKI 9

Spring Break
CANCUN, NASSAU
from $299
Organize a small group for FREE trip
Call 1(800)Get Sun 1

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800 426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

Want to Travel!!
Great rates for
Cancun Jamaica
and others
Great rates
Call Jason 549-3525

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Resumes, papers, theses.
Laser printing, on campus
Pick up and delivery
Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED

UMass Update is looking for reporters and writers for the news show call Sempy at 545-1336 or at 546-3021

Wanted legal 250 books Angela 5-0444

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

The WHMP-FM
Game Summary

Massachusetts 39 - 42 81
St. Joseph's 27 - 42 69

Massachusetts (16-4, 8-1)
Barbee 4-7 3-4 12, H. Williams 8-16 5-7 21, Roe 4-8 8-11 16, Kellogg 1-6 8-10 11, Malloy 6-12 3-4 18, Dingle 0-6 3-6 3, M. Williams 0-0 0-0 0, K. Robinson 0-0 0-0 0. Totals: 23-56 30-42 81.

St. Joseph's (14-6, 5-3)
Blunt 6-19 2-5 15, Jones 4-5 4-4 12, Warley 5-13 3-3 13, Bass 4-7 3-3 13, Curry 2-8 7-8 13, Poles 0-0 3-4 3. Totals 21-54 22-27 69.

Rebounds: Massachusetts 43 (Roe 13), St. Joseph's 29 (Poles 7). Assists: Massachusetts 19 (Kellogg, Malloy 5), St. Joseph's 13 (Blunt 6). Fouled out: None. Attendance: 3,200.

Player of the Game

Lou Roe, 6-7 So. Forward

Roe dominated the glass last night, grabbing 13 rebounds to go along with his 16 points. Roe ate up the three-guard offense of St. Joseph's and he averaged his third double-double in a row. His defensive intensity lasted throughout, and no Hawk was able to pull down more than seven boards.

Why UMass won

The Minutemen jumped out to a 10-0 start at Hawk Hall, and played St. Joseph's even the rest of the way. A strong defensive effort thwarted the Hawks, who shot only 38.9 percent from the field. Lou Roe and Harper Williams had exceptional games, and UMass grabbed 20 offensive boards.

UMass' next opponent

The Minutemen travel to the nation's capital to take on A-10 rival George Washington. The Colonials are tied for second in the conference, and are looking to avenge a 76-68 loss to the Minutemen earlier this season.

Catch all the Minutemen Basketball Games – Home and Away – on the New 99.3 WHMP-FM!
New 99.3 WHMP-FM
Join us live from Rafters each Wednesday from 6-7 p.m. for the John Calipari Radio Show.

Men's hoop rolls past Hawks 81-69

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Chris Robinson, seen here against West Virginia, and the UMass basketball team next travel to George Washington University for a Saturday game with the Colonials.

PHILADELPHIA — The University of Massachusetts basketball team proved it was the class of the Atlantic 10 last night, by defeating the conference's second place team, St. Joseph's, 81-69.

Massachusetts (16-4, 8-1 in the A-10), ranked No. 22 in the nation, played an inspired defense and dominated the boards throughout the game, never giving the Hawks a chance to get on track offensively.

"We heard they were pumped coming in, so we didn't want to give them a chance," said UMass center Harper Williams (21 points).

From the start, St. Joseph's (14-6, 5-3) looked overwhelmed as the Minutemen stormed out to a 10-0 lead in the first four minutes, silencing a boisterous Memorial Hall crowd of 3,200 in the process.

"We got out to a fast start because we were jacked up to play," said UMass forward Lou Roe (16 points, 13 rebounds). "We wanted to get right on them and let them know we were here."

The Hawks knew Roe was in the game from the start as the sophomore played one of his best games of the season.

"Lou Roe is starting to play full basketball games and I am happy to see that," said UMass coach John Calipari.

UMass, never trailing in the game, scored the first 10 points and jumped to a 17-8 lead on a layup by Roe.

Roe grabbed seven offensive rebounds leading the way for the Minutemen, who outrebounded St. Joseph's 43-29.

"The key to the game was rebounding," Roe said. "St. Joe's is a good rebounding team, so Harper and I wanted to keep them off the glass by boxing out well and crashing the boards at every chance."

UMass was in control throughout, answering every Hawk run. UMass claimed its largest lead of the night, 19 points, midway through the second half on a 12-2 run, highlighted by a Jerome Malloy three pointer. The Minutemen never allowed its lead to shrink below nine.

Each UMass starter scored in double figures. Malloy poured in 18, forward Tony Barbee had 12, and guard Derek Kellogg added 11.

Balanced scoring aside, it was the Minutemen's pressure defense which was the key. St. Joseph's started the night with an airball by guard Bernard Blunt (15 points) and ended shooting only 38 percent from the floor.

"We got a little tired in the second half, but because we were defending so well and rebounding so well, we were able to hold on," Roe said.

"We gave an honest effort, but we were just outplayed," said St. Joseph's coach John Griffin. "That's a fine basketball team."

The victory put UMass in command of the conference race as it travels to Washington D.C. Saturday to play George Washington (noon start).

Eight years removed, still a legend

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA—There has not been much winning basketball at St. Joseph's University in recent years. Ask UMass assistant coach James "Bruiser" Flint. He should know.

Flint played for St. Joe's from 1983-87, and was the starting point guard for the 1985-86 Hawk team that reached the NCAAs. Even from a school that was traditionally strong at guard, Flint remains one of the best to have ever played at Hawk Hill.

"He was an over acheiver, a tough kid who never quit," said J.T. Wilcox, a Hawk alumnus who has followed St. Joe's since 1950. "Bruiser was very bright, and I remember that he always had a smile on his face."

This year's St. Joseph's team has the standard quota of exceptional guards; Bernard Blunt, Rap Curry, and fabulous freshman Mark Bass are the main reason the Hawks may be returning to the NCAAs for the first time since Flint left.

"I knew Bruiser since high school, and his smile is the thing I remember the most," former St. Joe's sports information director Andy Dougherty said. "He was the player of the year in Philadelphia his senior year, he played across the street at Episcopal Academy.

"He reminds me a lot of [NBA star] Michael Adams, the way he pushed the ball up. He was a helluva point guard. . .not afraid to go to the hole."

Flint was the unquestionable leader of a Hawk team which won the Atlantic 10 with a 16-2 record in 1985-86. His hawks went from the friendly confines of Hawk Hill to the Carrier Dome in Syracuse, New York for the NCAA Eastern Regional.

There, the Hawks defeated a tough University of Richmond team by one point before falling to giant-killer Cleveland State.

Coincidentally, the NCAA Eastern Regionals this year are being held in Syracuse, and Flint says he feels the Hawks may be there.

"They definitely have a chance," Flint said. "If they keep winning, then they'll definitely be in the tournament.

"I'm really happy for the team, and I'm hoping it will be an exciting game," he said before the 81-69 UMass victory last night. "This is the fourth year I've been back here as coach, and it's always exciting, but it makes it more exciting when this is a game between the top two teams in the A-10."

One thing's for sure, if Curry, Blunt and company want to reach the NCAAs this year, they may want to take a page from Bruiser Flint's old playbook.

Women try to end skid

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

After losing three straight games, the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team looks to bounce back tomorrrow against Atlantic 10 rival Rhode Island at 2 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage.

URI is having a similar season to UMass (8-11, 4-5), as they've gone 9-11 overall and have compiled a 3-5 record in the A-10. Both teams would like nothing better than to start on their winning ways tomorrow.

"We were on cloud nine earlier in the season but now we're playing up and down," said center Melissa Gurile. "It's important that we be ready to take it to them [URI] and be ready to win at home."

Rhody boasts some pretty impressive individual statistics offensively, so the Minutewomen will certainly have their hands full defensively. Anne Kelsen leads the way for URI with 15.4 points, 4.1 rebounds and 3.8 assists followed by teammate Rebecca Bright, who has 14.4 pts and 6.4 rebs.

Keeping Monica Garnes off the glass will also be a challenge for UMass, as she averages eight rebs/game. She's also no slouch on the offensive end with 10.3 pts/game.

"Tomorrow will definitely be a different game," said UMass head coach Joanie O'Brien. "They are not a big team like Rutgers but they're extra quick and they play a funky match-up defense."

Although O'Brien is confident going into tomorrow's game, she knows that the Minutewomen will have to execute in every facet of the game to beat the WRams.

"We'll have to open up our inside game, but to do that, we first have to shoot from the perimeter," she said. "Someone will definitely have to step up offensively for us."

Part of that burden will fall on the 6'3" Gurile, who is averaging 15.1 pts and 8.4 rebs as a freshman. Gurile has been a force all season long, showing not only strong power moves on the inside but great range from the outside. Another freshman, Octavia Thomas, has quietly had an impressive first year (12.4 pts, 7.8 rebs) and will be counted to provide some timely points and rebounds.

As usual, another freshman, point guard Trish Hopson will be running things from the point and senior forward Kim Kristofik (13.8 pts) and junior Maleeka Valentine will have to step up.

Women's gym hosts Huskies

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

As the University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team learned in their last meet, a 182.80-179.65 lackluster victory over Southern Connecticut State University, winning is great, but learning is everything.

The Minutewomen had one goal going into the meet with the overmatched Division 2 powerhouse, according to UMass head coach Alfie Mitchell: "do not come away with a wasted outing."

"No outing is wasted as long as you learn something from it," said UMass assistant coach Sue Allen.

UMass took this credo set by Mitchell and the coaching staff by scoring a season high 47.10 on the balance beam. Led by Tammy Marshall (9.8), Margaret Furtado (9.65), and Abby May (9.65), the

Turn to WOMEN'S GYM, page 11

Valentine's Day Personals
SPECIAL
Massachusetts Daily Collegian
February 12, 1993

COME CLEAN...IN COMFORT
$1.25 per Washload
Sit Back, Relax & Enjoy Coffee... Soda...Snacks... and T.V.... While You Do Your Laundry!
Large Capacity WASHING MACHINES 12-20-30 lbs.
OPEN 24 HOURS A DAY • 7 DAYS A WEEK
SPEEDWASH 11 Pray Street • Amherst 549-1665
South Town Commons LAUNDROMAT
Enjoy the Convenience of State-of-the-Art Washers & Dryers in our Pleasant Atmosphere.
OPEN 7AM~10PM 7 DAYS A WEEK
479 West Street • South Amherst

Now Open In Amherst
Just in time for Valentine's Day!
40 Main Street
Amherst, MA • 256-1451
Thornes Market
Northampton, MA • 584-0404
"Just a little hint"
Flowers á la Carte
$5.00 off
1 Dozen Roses (boxed or wrapped, long stem)
Offer good through February 14th 1993
Flowers à la carte
Visit our new store's Grand Opening in Amherst & receive a complimentary Flower

"GRAND" OPENING!! FEB. 13th
Open Now!
SAFE EXCHANGE
Valentine's Day Ideas
Variety T-Shirts
Clever Novelty Gifts
Over 25 Brands of Condoms with Close to 100 Varieties Like:
Beyond Seven • Maxx • Contempo • Sheik • Kamino • Ramses • Lifestyles • Rubber Ducky
256-0771
Plenty of Free Parking • 178 North Pleasant Street
Behind Tibetan Treasures • Take Alley to Parking Lot

Happy Valentine's Day from all your friends at the Collegian

Valentine's

Pagel I love you Laurie

GOOD, MUCH BETTER!

Queen Susan: Sending you my love Happy Metallica Day – Pete from across the street

Tracy I'll forever be your loving iguana let's make it real.

Tara I realize how stupid I've been please give me another chance pf

Danielle we've already wasted too much time this weekend is gonna be special you captain crunch

Dear Colin C. I'm sending you a valentine because I want you to be mine. I LOVE YOU. LOVE JEN

Dear Lauren Happy Valentines Day Love Your Sclabb Josh XOXOX

Declaration of My Love to BP The Nice looking flight instructor even though I am featherweight my love for you is heavyweight I love you so much and I want the who of UMass to know it. Be my Valentine forever.
CUTE Body

Jason – Happy Valentines Day Sweetie! I'm looking forward to a great weekend ILYJT! Love, your jitterbug xoxo

Jen Marlowe
Happy Valentines Day
Happy Anniversary
Happy Happy Joy Joy
It's been a great year together
Love always, Keith
P.S. Let's fight some crime

Liz,
Will you be my hyper active Valentine's sloth? Let's go find a tree to hang and exchange kissies and huggies!
Love,
Goose Meister

MJN,
Happy Schmalentines!
Love ya,
MM
No squeaks allowed

Rachael,
Yeah you, selling b-ball shirts
Keep smiling and
Happy Valentines Day
An Admirer

This is your breath in solid form
How about rollerskating the next time?

Adone, Leone, Tara
Happy Valentines Day
Boogerheads!
Kiss Kiss
– Boji

J.M.F.
Happy Valentine's Day
I Love You!
EMO

Brian C. Crabtree
The 14th is coming up!
Your tub or mine?
Lots of suds,
Misty

–Susan
Thank you for the best year of my life.
Happy Anniversary!
Love, Mike

Wanted:
Nice Jewish Girl seeks
Nice Jewish Boy with Large trust fund for Valentines Day romance
Please respond here!

Mike,
Are you looking at me?
Who knew we'd still be together after "just talking" for so long.
I LOVE YOU CUTEY!
Love,
Your Little Hick

Happy Valentine's Day
to my Johnny!!
You're my one and only
I love you...
–Deanie

Amy, I know this Valentine is not as good as last year, but I love you just the same (I'm just broke). Love, Rob

Erik,
HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY!
Love you always,
Musky

EOJ, I'm so glad you're a part of my life. I love you. Happy Valentine's day! A&F, NEJ

James F. Ryan, III of Montvale, NJ: My love for you grows stronger every year! Happy Valentine's Day! Love Always, Kim

To Blue Eyes, I will always love you From Cutie

Tri,
Poopsie, Snookums,
Happy Valentine!
XOXO, EM

Happy V-Day Shnookums Love, Art, Billy, Meisha and the fish

Sharon Gaffney
It was great to see you again
The hug reminded me of old times
But the next time I see you, I want to see a smile. OK? Happy Valentine's Day
With much, much love from an old friend

BECCA: Happy "V.D."! Love, G.W.

SPAG
Love looks not with the eyes but with the heart
Love you Valentine
Janelle

Sheryl & Crissy
Happy
21st Birthday/Valentines
Love
The Puffton Posse

HAPPY VALENTINES DAY
ANDREW V.
YOU ALWAYS MAKE ME SMILE
LOVE YOU ALWAYS, OHCNAR LE

Pookie
Happy Valentines Day
All my love forever
your 24 hr snugglebunny

Duvan
Tu est un amie tres manifique!
Je t'aime
Jessame

OC
Will you be my Valentine?
– Madonna

Roast Beef Sandwich
You are the greatest
Happy Valentines Day
Lots of love Suzanne

Habibi Lorna: Happy Valentine and Kossom anybody who says otherwise
Love,
Mohamed

Dear Pushpi
My love for you is increasing at alarming proportions. Missing you greatly.
Love,
Bobby

Sue, Remember all the wonderful times we've shared, the long talks, late nights, forget the hard times for this weekend – I love you mor ethan words can say

CANDY!
CANDY!
CANDY!
For Mr. Roberts of IOTA
tPhi Thetal
Exclusively
RR
In Thets
Epsilon

Candy Andy –
Won't you be Mine?
Guess Who Honey!

Carter–
The past year has been fabulous! I love you very much!
Charlotte

Dave,
Rest up because Sunday you're all MINE! Happy Valentine's Day.
Love,
Steph

Halligan,
I love you. I'm so glad you're here.
Happy Valentine's Day Babe.
Love always & Forever
Suzaramovitch

Happy Valentines Day Myra
Even though I can be stubborn
I still love now as much as I did the day
I first saw I'll always love you!
–With Love Preston

Happy Valentine's Day and Happy Bday Christine good luck with the Omegas
Love Scott

Happy Valentine's Day to my Southern Belle Love Always your Southern Yankee John

Heath Bar,
Thanks for always being such a great friend
Happy Valentines Day
Love Always,
The Ump

Honey–
I love you very much! I'm so glad we are together. Happy 2nd Valentines Day.
Love Always,
Cuddly

Jeanne I am so glad we are finally together. You have made me happier than I ever dreamed possible. Love H.H. Bear

Kim, Gina, & Jenn
Happy V Day
I Love U Guys
Bethie

LAWRENCE
I will always love you
You sexy creature!
Keri

Omar
Happy Valentine's Day
Pick me up at 3:30 on Sunday
I'll be waiting

RKB
He's awesome, hillarious, brilliant, sensitive, sexy, and loyal. Eat you heart ou girls...HE'S MINE! I love you, Rob!
–ALG

Rich D., thanks for the wonderful two years together. Here's to more – Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Kris Timmy Newman,

Happy Valentine's Day Snoopy
I Love You
Tracey

Hey Hennigan – (My Favorite guy at 1010)
Will you be mine?
Love,
Blossom

SAG–
Happy Valentine's Day!
See you at Barsie's sweetheart.
Love,
Maria

Teddy Cottrell,
I love you more every day.
Keep up the good work.
Love, Carey

Stewy–
Can I touch you hair this Valentine's Day?
Love,
The Guppie

Jessie–
I've only met you once but I think you're

Personals

Happy Valentines Day
to Jen, Kaiʻoi and Maureen Lane!
– Sacha

Paul,
I love you and this permanent situation we're in.
–Jessica

Sweets,
Thanks for loving me and being my best friend. I'll love you FOREVER.
Snookie

May I humble dog face to the bananna patch

CB Happy Valentines Day I love you SB

Heffer Steffer
It has been 3 years since that first kiss. I am so happy that you are going to be my wife. We will have so many more Valentines Days in the years to come. I will always remember the kiss that started it all!
Love always,
Mike

Sunshine,
I love my job
I love my life
I love you.
I must be a weasel
Hugs,
Skye

Pitchwhoo
I don't know what I'd do without you this semester your my little Princess
Happy Valentines Day
Love
Your Frog

Poopy, Roses are Red Violets are Blue
There's nothing else to be said except I Love you! Love, you little Spunky

Brian
Thank you for bringing me the love I never imagined I could fee. To many more!
Love, Amy

To all the Lucys
I love you all–
and you will like it
Happy Valentines Day
–Joanie Lucy

Ben its only been three months but I love you like crazy. Happy V-Day. Love MEL

Happy Valentine's Day Chad!
It's been a wonderful 2 years and 6 month and 20 days! And I love you more every day!
Love, Jennifer

Jason,
You are my best friend and the love of my life. Together we are the best! I love you very much and will forever!
Love,
Stephanie

Sparky A B-Day and V-D day wish for you! For your B-Day, I'll listen to Pantera, for Valentine's ... I love you.
Tina

Todd,
Thanks for being the most special man, lover and friend I could ever ask for. I love you!
Happy Valentines Day!
Love, Julie

Now we're even Chad!
Happy Valentines Day
Love, Jennifer

Carrie,
Happy Valentines Day!
Hope to see you soon
Have a great weekend
Love Robs

To my Roomates
At 33 Phillips St. Happy Valentines Day and have a Happy New Year!!
With Love, Rubbage (Rich)

OK
Joyuex de Jour St. Valentine
Je T'aime
PK

Happy Valentine's Day to the fiercest fag D.J. in the world! I can't wait till Saturday night you sexy man! Love the man who really loves you, miss thing

Jeema–
You are special. Believe it.

BooBoo,
If I knew where to begin I'd still be lost. The thousands of miles between us are nothing compared to my love for you. My body may be far away but my heart always likes lies beside you. Let the summer roll on, for the world is ours to discover. BB.

Michelle
As time passes by
My love continues to grow
Although it has grown so much,
It has not aged
Each and every day, a new love is born.
Love, EGU!

Robin Peterson – you are the woman!!! Run away with me to Vegas and spend the rest of you life with me! Otis is no place for a woman like you. Yours forever and always, you know who JAGENOW, Next time you've got the hiccups and you need to climb stairs I'll be there. Will you ever let me pay for dinner?

Miss Kimberly
Happy Valentine's Day
Enjoy! Will

To my one and only Strutter–
"I know a thing or two" (about you) Hey. Wanna Rock and Roll over and be creatures of the night?!
My love to you,
You 5'5 blonde

Krista lets frolic some more your secret admirer

Pook I still can't believe it's you! I hope that our Valentine's Day lasts forever. I love you! Chowmama

Peter F. I'll always love you
Happy Valentines Day
Love Kristin . M XO

Dear Mel, Happy V-Day! I'll love you forever! – Ben PS – Smile, you're wicked dope!

Mike D.
I am so glad we are together
Happy Valentines Day
Love
Lauren (The Subtle One)

Terri Happy Valentine's Day!
Happy February 17th Love, Tom

Saordna,
Happy Valentine's Day
–Guess Who!

Dave B.
Happy Valentines Day!
Love, you musical admirer

Shawn?
Will you be my valentine?
R?

Elin– I love you more than you could ever possible imagine! You make me so Happy! NYC awaits us. Happy Valentines day. Elevator! Love, Rachel

KG SH and KS
Happy Valentines Day Ladies
Love Me

Happy Valentines Day Craig!
I love you!
Your Secret Admirer

Happy Valentines Day Denise!
Have a great day
And beware of the week to come
Love Jenn

Ally Rae
Will you be my Valentine?
Alan

Jonney Hanny Fanney
Happy Valentines Day to my favorite redhead
From your little big man

To the E-3 Fireboys!
I can tell you what's hot.
It's the twelve brothers I've got.
This redhead wants to say,
On this Valentine's Day,
She sure does love you a lot!

Kim Hudson– Happy Valentine's Day Please call John from Labor 290A 256-3544

Pam,
Even though we can't be together, the feelings I have for you are still as strong. Being without you has made me realize how important you are in my life. Although I'll be spending this day alone, I have the consulation that each day that passes, will be one less I have to spend without you.
Love, Steve

PAPA BEAR
Tell me why I love you like I do
You are the sweetest, most thoughtful man I have ever met. I love you! Happy Valentines day. I'm keeping the stove warm!
Love,
Your Princess

Vicki–
I LOVE YOU! Happy Valentine's Day Sweetheart! Let's take a ride in the Batmobile!
Love Always,
Batman

Tim,
You are a wonderful person.
You have swept me off my feet and made me you princess!
Happy Valentines Day!
Love, Your Honey

Jenn,
I love you very much! Have a fantastic Valentine's Day. I'm still trying to find a Castle!
I love you lots n' lots!
John

Kristen Maines
Happy Valentines Day Keep smiling
Love,
Jenn

Mike you rock my world Happy Valentines Day Love Susan

To all PSP members
I Hope we all get to cash our checks!
Happy Valentines Day
Love and the President and Founder Angie

Drew–
143
Happy Valentines Day!
Love Always Angie

Keith
Two Valentines Day Down, many more to go (I hope!)
HAPPY VALENTINES DAY!
Love, Lauri

To my Hugga Dougga
You are always in
My thoughts and prayers!
Love, Cutes

Krezy K.
One year with you
is not enough!!
Happy Valentine's Day!
Love Jen

Jen Marlowe
You're such a babe
I figured you deserved
Another personal
Love Krazy

Jen Marlowe
Happy Valentines Day
Get ready for a good day and a great night
your secret admirer
The Sensitive Naked Man

Tracey,
Are you ready
For your surprise?
Love, Danny

If You Have Your Own View of What's Important . . .
Drop Into The Arts Council
Spring Deadlines
2/19 and 3/26
and Land a Grant
The Arts Council supports diversity and fosters excellence in the Arts on Campus.
RSOs, Art Organizations, ACA Departments, Questions?, Guidance, Applications!
203 Hasbrouck 545-0202

SLEEP IN CLASS
While Your Car Is Being Repaired
Use the
FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE
to Campus plus
10% OFF with Student I.D.
Not Valid with Other Discounts. OFFER EXPIRES 2/28/93.
MIDAS
MUFFLERS BRAKES SHOCKS STRUTS COMPUTERIZED ALIGNMENT
RTE. 9/HADLEY 586-9991 NEAR HAMPSHIRE MALL

Special
Valentine's Day Cakes
$4.99 and up...
Right in the heart of downtown Amherst
Olympic Chinese Bakery
17 Kellogg Ave. Amherst, MA
7 am - 11 pm Sun - Thurs
7 am - Midnight Fri + Sat
256-8705
Ask about our free Birthday Cake Give-Away!

Valentine's Day at the "Top of the Campus"
Dinner Served From 5:00 - 9:00 PM
Regular Menu
Special R.H. Phillips "Wine for Two"
Red Carnation for the Ladies
The Ever Fabulous "Jennifer Paul" at the Piano
Call Now for Reservations 545-3216
Top of the Campus Restaurant

Valentine's Personals

To My Sweetheart- A.J.
I just thought I'd send you this message to let you know how much
I love you!
I'm so happy that you are a part of my life – you'll always bill e special place in my heart. I can't wait to spend Valentine's Day with you!
From your Pumpkin - Carolyn

To the boy with the bread infection. Handcuffs tonight?
I promise I'll be healthy
Happy Valentine's Day!
Love,
Brenda

To my Butthead:

Will you be my Valentine A.J.?

From your Butthead

To the four sexiest Babes on campus: Becky, Diane, Joyce, and Leigh –
You guys are the greatest! I'm so glad that we've become such great friends!
I'm sure if S., J., R., and D. knew what was up, that they'd want to spend V Day with you! Anyways –
Happy Valentines Day!
Love the Fifth Sexiest Babe!

Divorced White Female
Seeking Single Male
To share salmon pie
on Valentine's Day – Call Anne!

Sally
Wow, look at all these personals –
And you've got one too!!
(You knew you would!)
I live for being personal with you
You make lovin fun
And me very happy
I love you,
Smosh

Elizabeth Anne,
My Princess
Since the day you walked into my life this day has had a meaning. I LOVE YOU
Love,
Your sweet Prince,
Hero TM

Hey Lisa!
Would you be
My Valentine?
Tee hee
Brian

Dear Lori
Happy Valentines Day
Are you still eating
Gum off the sidewalk?
I love you
Bill

Raph My Duke
You are a God among Gods
A devil among devils
And a friend for life
So run away --- Love Mona

Adam H. (AKA Rocko)
There is no one I'd rather dance on a bar for
I saved the last candy for you.
Love,
Victoria G. (ADA Crocostimpy)

TAJ
Embrace me, kiss me, hold me tight, I'll have a surprise for you Sunday night!
Happy V-Day!
Love Always,
Buenevere

Mandy--
Looks like we made it.
So happy v-day and
2nd Anniversary.
Love, Railroad Bill

Suz--
The past three months have been great and I look forward to the Spring semester.
Happy Valentines Day!
XOXO Jason
P.S. I still think you're tapped!

Andy Happy Valentine's Day I love you your the best 0107 DD's

Billy Gaffney Happy Valentine's! Love Mariah, Louie and Ralph

Rina
Happy Valentines Day, sugar! I miss you and can't wait to see my little mermaid this weekend. Love Endless, Kevin

Dear Sheba,
These past weeks have flown by, I can't seem to be satisfied of you, it only gets worse when I have to leave. My feelings tell me that I haven't made a wrong choice and only through our commitment will we find intimacy.
Love,
Momo

Ben -- Happy Valentine's Day to my best friend! You are the best and the greatest friend I could ask for! I don't forget our good times together here -- or stop thinking about the ones to come!
I love you cute!!! Kathy

LKD -- Happy Birthday -- Love MJD

Stink! Black Sunday? I think not. Not while I'm with you! Happy V-day Love J.A.P.

Alison meet me at the Bluewall at 7:00
Love Matt

Jen meet me at the Bluewall at 7:30
Love Matt

Gina meet me at the Bluewall at 8:00
Love Matt

Dave meet me at the Bluewall at 8:30
Love Matt

Gary meet me at the Bluewall at 9:00
Love Matt

Russ Andrade
I have fun when I'm with you. Happy Valentine's Day!
All my love,
Nikki

Lee--
Good luck with Anderson Consulting.
Do you remember me? Happy Valentine's Day!
Niki

Dee, Steph, Trish, Sam --
Guys come and go, but friends last forever. Have a great day!
Nikki

Happy Valentines Day Stacy Love Jason I love you Stage

Turkeyface,
I like yer butt!
Wierdo

Kim
I know how wonderful love can be because of the wonderful person you are!
Happy Valentines Day.
I love you
Pat

Attention Goopy!
I love you!
Sparky

Jay
En un dia como hoy, hace 4 anos atras, te robaste mi carazon al decirme las cosas mas bellas que jamas alguien me haya dicho. Desde que me declaraste tu amor por mi, he sido la mujer mas afortunada!
Te amo,
Giselle

Hey C.D.
Happy 21st
Love, Jeff

Joey
How many times have I said I love you and it grows every day. I know you can achieve you dreams! Always remember you're the greatest!
Love, Lillian

Greg, You have made my past two Valentines Days very special, and I look forward to spending this years with you! You continue to make me very happy. I LOVE YOU SO MUCH -- Beth

Sleepy --
You're absolutely incredible .... in every way possible!
Love,
L.O.

Trish Dawn Debbie Cathy, Wendy Steph Happy Valentines Day Call Your Mother

Aniah,
Happy Valentines Day Sweetheart!
The best years of my life have been the one's spent with you. I'll love you always and forever.
Love,
Tare

Jodi, Amy, Ally, Dahlie, Michelle, Becky, & Jackie, Happy Valentines Day! Love Always, Tiffany

ATTENTION JEFF LALIMA
I'm in love with you
I'ts forever true
you will always be
My very best buddy!
Happy Valentine's!
Love,
Natasha

To Beckie, Amie, Mimsi, Nickis, and Miss Elizabeth, Happy Valentine's Day! Your the greatest roommates in the world! Love you know who

Shannon our time has finally come to be together please say you'll be mine rb

Smooth Dave,
"You don't want the cheese, you just want to get out of the trap" .... at least for now... I hope
Happy Valentines Day
I love you
With love
Stinkpuss

OWO,
"I'm going to turn on the light, and we'll be two people in a dark room looking at each other and wondering why on earth we were afraid of the dark."
Happy Valentine's Day!
With Love
Baby Doll

Carter--
Do you want to play with me?
Love, Charlotte

Hey Lesbee,
A special Valentine to the love of my life! You wil always be a twink to me! Dome is the word that does it to me!
Love,
Will

Here it is
Short and sweet
Deb
Happy V-Day
Love Ya
Eric

SBC
Happy Valentine's Day Goofy
143
Love
WLF

Scott,
2 1/2 months ago "Love at First Sight"
Happy Valentine's Day --- Adam!
Love you,
Mwy
P.S. Thana Bard!

Howie Baby,
Happy Valentines Day
Stop being rude to me or
I'll eat Rocky & Bullwinkle
I love you Babeee.....
Why aren't we ten baby?
Sandybaby

DAN LOACH!
Yes you, Danny-bear. Thank you for making the past year so wonderful. I'v enjoyed every moment we've shared and every memory we've created. You're a very special person -- never forget how much I love you!
Happy Valentine's Day!!
Love, Your D-Bear

Towtruck -- Happy Valentine's Day. Let's go for a drive! Popie

Dani
Arrrgh (frustrated, I miss you scream) I miss you and I love you
Love, Douglach

Good luck John at the Crash B's this weekend, pull HARD! Hurry home so we can celebrate Valentine's Day. Love your AXP sweetheart

To my Fuzzy Monkey
Happy Valentines Day
Love Me

Jennifer,
Have a great Valentine Day!
You're the best babe
Love always
Chad

Robin, Happy Valentines Day!!
You're the sweetest Valentine in the world. I love you with all my heart.
Love always
Jon

Preston--
Before high tech, how did love manage to survive?
Thankfully, we'll never know!
I love you
HAPPY VALENTINES DAY
Hugs & Kisses
Tami

Heather Happy V-Day Have an Eskimo kiss, a home brew, and a smile. ANI OHEV OTACHI Always, Ben

VIC I love and miss you immensely! Love, Lisa

Glinda loves Barney
I love you Sheisseksopf for always and forever
Here's to nine months

Michelle,
If God one day struck me blind, your beauty I'd still see
Love is 2 weak 2 define
Just what you mean 2 me
I truly adore U
John

Sweetcheeks
I'll love you forever!
Happy Valentines Day
Love,
Diane

Kathy,
Happy Valentines Day
I love you very much but thank the lord I am leaving
Stinky

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

'COLLEGIAN' TO PUBLISH DAILY; BUDGET APPROVED BY SENATE

by JACK DEAN
Managing Editor

UMass will have a daily newspaper next year.

In a marathon meeting which ended early Thursday morning, the Student Senate unanimously approved Collegian expansion plans by passing its $67,948 budget. This sum is the largest appropriation to any Recognized Student Organization.

The plan, according to Editor-in-Chief Chet Weinerman, will provide the campus with fresh news each day. "Not only will we be publishing daily", Weinerman told the Senators, "we are also planning for morning distribution."

Under this plan the Collegian will publish eight pages per day, Monday through Friday. An 8:30 campus delivery to the Dining Commons' and Union is planned.

Included in the budget is provision for an official Collegian automobile. Weinerman pointed out to the Senators that in one year the car will more than pay for itself.

At a general staff meeting last night, Weinerman announced the Senate action and expressed his hope for cooperation from the staff to make the "new" Collegian one of the finest collegiate dailies.

Weinerman told the staff that the paper will publish each day during the week of May 8-12 in preparation for next Fall's daily schedule.

Also at the meeting Bob Gorman announced his resignation as News Editor to take the post of South College Reporter.

The Massachusetts Collegian – Friday, April 28, 1967

This is a reprint of an article from 1967. The Collegian no longer receives any funding from the Student Senate or the University.

Collegian to Publish Daily

(Editor's note: The following editorial appeared in the Greenfield Recorder on May 3.)

The Greenfield Recorder, one of the oldest daily newspapers in the United States, is happy to note the impending birth of the daily Massachusetts COLLEGIAN at nearby Amherst.

This change to daily publication reflects the growth of the University of Massachusetts and its increasing importance in the lives of Bay State youth. It also is an indication of the value of a campus newspaper that has been growing in size, scope and frequency of issuance.

Some of The Recorder's readers would be regularly shaken and shocked by the COLLEGIAN. It is sometimes impudent and often brash. No sacred cow is safe from its barbs and not even UMass President John Lederle is above criticism by the student editors.

That is how the COLLEGIAN should be. It is published by, of and for the student body at the University's Amherst branch. Since both its staff and readers are totally involved in the institution and student activities, anything that bears upon them is fair game. And when the UMass world is not right, youth chooses its most effective weapons to carry into the fray.

There are issues when our student friends at the Collegian office are a most unbearably stuffy and righteous. But their sense of humor always gets the upper hand again and the next edition is sure to have something that will delight—or enrage—the more elderly society of faculty and parents.

Publishing a newspaper daily is a demanding task. Now that the student body is larger than many a city, however, there almost certainly is enough talent available and eager to accept the challenge. Thus we await the new campus daily with keen anticipation and the realization that the more sedate public press must sharpen its own procedures to keep pace with our new neighbors.

Friday, May 5, 1967

Celebrating 25 Years of Daily Publication • 1967 – 1992

Tuesday February 16, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 78

Snow beginning early and continuing throughout the day.

Arts & Living:
Even though Groundhog Day passed two weeks ago, the movie premiered last weekend. Read the Collegian's review of Bill Murray's new movie. Page 9.

Sports:
The men's basketball team continued its march toward the NCAA tournament with a 68-65 win over George Washington. Page 16.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England • Founded in 1890

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

WHAT, ME WORRY? – This unidentified snowsperson seems to be enjoying the long weekend.

Groups decry rape of Bosnian women

By KRISTEN LANS
Collegian Correspondent

SOUTH HADLEY — Valentine's Day brought six speakers to Mount Holyoke College to plead for an end to the mass rape in Bosnia.

Volunteers handed out flyers stating ways people can help end the rapes of an estimated 50,000 Bosnian women and girls as part of a systematic policy of ethnic cleansing taking place by Serbians.

"We stand here in shame because American and European leaders stand with their hands in their pockets and fail to stop the carnage," said speaker Penny Gill, a professor of humanities and politics at Mount Holyoke.

"Women's bodies have become the territory of war. Women's womb's are to be conquered and occupied," Gill said.

Listeners were asked to sign petitions, write to representatives and donate money. The money raised will go to the World Church Services located within Croatia to purchase medicine, blankets and food and create housing for refugees displaced by the war.

The petitions aim to force Congress to work towards two goals: to enforce the no-fly zone over Bosnia and to lift the 1991 arms embargo that prohibits Bosnians in Sarajevo from getting weapons to defend themselves.

According to Alma Musanovic, a native of Sarajevo who is now a student at Mount Holyoke, Bosnians want the arms embargo lifted.

"Bosnians do not ask for anyone to die

Turn to BOSNIA, page 4

Serbian war crimes protested in vigil

By STACY MALONE
Collegian Staff

Brothers are murdering their sisters in Bosnia because many women and girls are being raped and impregnated by the Serbs, according to a speaker at a vigil Sunday afternoon on the Amherst Town Common.

Donna Bartell, a peace activist since the Vietnam War, organized and spoke at the "Women for Human Rights Vigil," where approximately 35 people gathered to raise public consciousness of what Bosnian women and girls are enduring

"Women are being murdered because

Turn to VIGIL, page 4

Clinton trumpets 'call to arms'

Economic plan to combine tax hikes, spending cuts

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press

President Clinton revved up his sales pitch last night for a painful package of of tax increases and spending cuts, saying he's trying to steer "a new course" for the nation's economy that will quickly pay off with 500,000 jobs.

Clinton's economic "call to arms" was broadcast on national television last night as a warmup for his address to a joint session of Congress Wednesday night.

Clinton's plan envisions roughly $500 billion in tax increases and spending reductions on many popular programs over four years to cut the deficit. Big corporations and wealthy Americans face significant boosts in their income tax rates.

"We're trying to change a direction of 12 years and take a new course," he said. "I'm going to offer a program that will create half a million or more jobs in the short run, and that is highly progressive, that is very well-balanced, that is faithful to the great middle-class of this country and good for the things we care about."

One part of the plan that will affect all Americans is a broad-based energy tax including electricity, coal, oil, natural gas and gasoline. Clinton said the approach would be more progressive than a tax based strictly on sales.

The other side of the coin calls for spending increases — $15 billion for an investment tax credit to help small companies buy new machinery, and $16 billion for job-intensive projects like highway and bridge construction.

Americans who watched Clinton's speech last night agreed with him on the need to revive the economy, but some wondered where the spefics were.

"I agree with him that change has to take place," said Vee Hays, part-owner of a weekly newspaper group in suburban Nashville. "But how can I support something I don't know about."

Joel Nadon, 36, an industrial automation systems designer from Ashland City, Tenn., said the charts Clinton used to illustrate his speech were deceptive.

"I find it hard to believe the man," Nadon said. "I don't know what he's trying to say or accomplish by this. . . I don't feel that he's going to do anything."

Julia Hennessey, a 34-year-old waitress from Fort Lee, N.J., agreed the speech was short on detail, but said she voted for Clinton and still supports him.

"I really think his plan will work," she said. "I have faith in him."

Panel analyzes effects of AIDS

By KELLY SPANG
Collegian Staff

The nation's resources for combatting the HIV/AIDS virus are often not made available to minorities and people living in poverty, according to several panelists who spoke at Amherst College Sunday as part of the school's AIDS Awareness Weekend.

The two main speakers on the panel were Kwame Holman, a Congressional correspondent for the "MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour," and Marsha, a Black HIV-positive woman from Springfield who works for a public health clinic. Marsha's last name was not given.

Holman, a documentary journalist, offered his perspective on the AIDS issue in American society by relating experiences he has had while covering stories about people with the virus.

Holman said he believed he has seen some changes in the way the AIDS issue is thought about over the past several years.

"As little as five years ago people were not sure about being in the same room as someone who is HIV positive" because people were not sure how AIDS was spread or who could contract the disease, Holman said.

In the late 1980s, Holman followed the Ryan White case, a story about a young hemophiliac boy who tried to attend public school even though he had AIDS.

Parents of the school rejected White's attempt to enroll in school because they said did not want their children exposed to AIDS.

Today, Holman said, "there are plenty of Ryan Whites going to school."

In other ways, Holman said he does not see a change in the way society thinks about AIDS. "Fear and discrimination of the disease are not changing rapidly," he said.

Especially in the case of minorities and low income families living in poverty who have the "politics of money" working against them, discrimination is very real.

"There is competition for resources," Holman explained. "White gay men have the best facilities."

Marsha, however, gave personal input on the issue by discussing being HIV positive and also being a member of the Black community. She shared experiences her family has had as well as experiences she has seen with the people she works with at the hospital.

"Black people with AIDS do not receive support,"

Turn to AIDS, page 6

Navy, Marines await report on Tailhook

By SUSANNE M. SCAFER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As it braces for the release of the Pentagon inspector general's report on the Tailhook sex abuse scandal, the Navy and Marine Corps have quietly laid the groundwork for dealing with the report's complex legal fallout.

The report is expected to be so explosive in nature — and detailed in its findings of sexual misbehavior and other misconduct — that scores of officers are likely to be referred to courts martial or recommended for a series of lesser disciplinary proceedings.

The report, written by Pentagon Inspector General Dereck Vander Schaaf, will deal with the Tailhook convention in Las Vegas in 1991, where several dozen women complained they were groped and fondled by Navy and Marine Corps aviators. The report, expected to be released by the end of this month, is also supposed to take up any attempts to cover up misconduct that might have taken place.

The charges could prove devastating to the highest ranks of the service if senior admirals are accused of failing to halt the tawdry activity that has been known to have taken place for years at the convention.

"It's going to be ugly, no doubt about it," said one senior officer whose own boss could be among those targeted.

The Navy and Marine Corps have each chosen a high-ranking officer to decide whether the cases against individuals named in the report should be sent through an administrative process convened by an individual commander — known as a "captain's mast."

A court martial is called to try the most serious charges — and is automatically required in the case of felonies. A captain's mast deals with noncrimianl acts that usually involve disciplinary matters.

The establishment of the so-called "central convening authority" for each service is to ensure a fair and equitable treatment for each of the accused, Navy officials said.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday dunng the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Bluck, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual FORUM

The GLB Forum runs each Tuesday and consists of event listings of interest to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual community. The GLB Forum is compiled by the GLB Issues Editor who can be contacted c/o the Collegian.

Friday, Feb. 19

Brown Bag Lunch Discussion — The weekly discussion series continues with "Who is We? Race, Sexuality and Culture," a talk by Djola Bernerd Branner, Brian Freeman and Eric Gupton, also known as the Pomo Afro Homos. The talk will be held from 12 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. in Campus Center 917.

Performance — "Fierce Love," a performance by the Pomo Afro Homos, will be held at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Saturday, Feb. 20

Symposium — "Intersection: Confronting Racism and Homophobia," with panelists Tim Blake, Esther Terry, Shymala Ivatury, Brian Freeman, Helaine Page and Donna Goodleaf will be held at 3 p.m. in Campus Center 174-176.

Performance — "Dark Fruit," a performance by the Pomo Afro Homos, will be held at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Researchers look to Stone Age for cures

By PAUL RAEBURN
Associated Press

BOSTON — Breast cancer is 100 times as common now as it was in the Stone Age, a finding that suggests ways to dramatically reduce the frequency of the disease, a researcher said Monday.

Studies of Stone Age child-rearing also suggest that babies who sleep with their mothers may be at lower risk of sudden infant death syndrome, a researcher said.

The studies, presented at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, are products of the new field of evolutionary medicine. Its central tenet is that human society has changed drastically since the Stone Age but human biology hasn't.

Humans evolved to function under Stone Age conditions, which persisted for millions of years, and they are now out of sync with their environment in ways that lead to disease, researchers said.

"From the standpoint of our biology and chemistry, we're still Stone-Agers," said one author of the breast cancer study, Dr. S. Boyd Eaton of Emory University in Atlanta. "But our biology operates under different circumstances from those for which it was designed."

The determinations of Stone Age lifestyles come partly from fossil evidence but mostly from studies of present-day tribes of nomadic hunter-gatherers, who are the closest modern equivalents of Stone Age humans, Eaton said.

American women currently face a one-in-eight or one-in-nine lifetime risk of developing breast cancer, according to the National Cancer Institute in Washington, D.C. The risk in Stone Age women was about one in 800 or one in 900, Eaton said.

He found that women in hunter-gatherer tribes begin menstruating earlier than women in Western societies, have their first child earlier, have more children, nurse more frequently and have earlier menopause.

All of those lower breast cancer risk by reducing the rate of the out-of-control cell reproduction characteristic of cancer tumors, he said.

While he would not recommend that American women begin having children at age 13, as Stone Age women did, he said that hormonal injections could be used to mimic Stone Age conditions, possibly producing dramatic declines in breast cancer rates.

"We by no means advocate doing this willy-nilly for all women now," he said. But studies should be done to determine the value of mimicking the hormonal changes associated with Stone Age child-rearing, he said.

Such treatment could also lower the risk of endometrial cancer and ovarian cancer, he said.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

The Chancellor's Commission on Civility in Human Relations is soliciting innovative proposals for educational and program activities which have the following goals:

- enhance understanding of multicultural issues
- encourage collaboration between different campus communities and constituencies
- promote mutual respect

Eligibility: Undergraduates, graduate students, staff and faculty, as individuals or groups

Award Criteria: Proposed activities

- must bring together persons from two or more communities or constituencies in a joint activity
- must demonstrate collaboration of communities or constituencies in the proposal planning process
- should demonstrate impact on multicultural understanding and mutual respect on the campus or larger community
- should not replace activities which ordinarily should be funded through existing sources of funds
- should begin in the spring 1993 semester

Examples of Activities Which Could be Funded: Forums, speakers, film/video series, seminars, workshops, public education programs about hate crimes and incidents, outreach activities to secondary schools and home communities, community public service programs, faculty/student collaboration to develop new courses, performance events, printed materials, posters.

Proposal Components:

- a clear description of how the proposed activities will meet both the goals and award criteria
- a list of groups involved and the person or persons responsible for the activity
- a mechanism for evaluating impact and effectiveness of the activities
- a timeline indicating when the activities would start and conclude
- a budget

Award Ranges: $250 to $1500, with total awards not to exceed $10,000

Submission Date and Location: Chancellor's Commission on Civility in Human Relations (545-0851), 206 Middlesex House, by 5:00 p.m., Friday, March 5, 1993.

Proposal Reviewers: A joint committee of the Chancellor's Commission on Civility in Human Relations and the Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board

Award Announcements: Awards will be announced by Friday, March 12, 1993

Correction

The article on the Board of Governors meeting in the Friday, Feb. 12 issue of the Collegian contained several errors. A statement by Ben Preston, BOG chairperson, should have read that boarding hall charges are marked for increase in next year's budget.

The article should have read that the Auxiliary Services task force is considering closing one line at Hampshire Dining Commons, but that the task force is not cutting back hours at either the Worcester or Hampshire Dining Commons.

The article should have read that a motion was made to change voting so that voting for the Board's officers would be held two weeks after new Student Government and Board members are elected.

The Collegian regrets the errors.

ONE WAY SCREEN DESIGN
T-Shirts • Sweats • Boxers
Posters • Bumper Stickers
WE DO IT ALL!
Full Art Department, Free Delivery
584-0091
47 East Street, Hadley
5% OFF all orders with this coupon

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Boxercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

Local News

Professor seeks to comprehend world history

By JENNIFER BARROWS
Collegian Correspondent

"We must understand better the processes that undermine human society," said William H. McNeill, retired professor of history from the University of Chicago.

Faculty members and students alike managed to trek through the sleet and snow last Friday to Herter Hall to hear McNeill's lecture titled, "Conceptualizing World History."

McNeill, who is the author of several highly-acclaimed accounts of world history, said his conception of world history has adjusted.

"The notion of a world system is something I did not give enough weight to when I wrote The Rise of the West," McNeill said.

McNeill went on to say he believed there is no such thing as the United States because there are millions of different people all of whom have different purposes. The factor that people have in common is that history gives us an idea of where we come from and how we got there, according to McNeill.

McNeill spoke of the two models of world history — the cyclical and the linear. The cyclical patterns that history takes come in the form of the two world wars, for example. McNeill said after the World War I, the second war became inevitable. Conversely, the linear model of history is that once something happens, it cannot happen again.

Two of McNeill's accounts of world history are entitled The Rise of the West and Plagues and Peoples. The Rise of the West deals with cultural diffusion.

McNeill said he realized during the course of his writing that he was dealing with the history of power. The book Plagues and Peoples deals with the history of disease.

McNeill said ships from the times of the European exploration of the Americas carried not only people with their new hopes, but also many diseases which managed to wipe out many of the native peoples of these new lands.

McNeill gave some positive advice to those hoping to publish their own accounts of world history — "You have a lot to do to write a good history book, but it can be done."

One member of the audience asked McNeill if it was possible for a historian to look into the past and predict the future.

"I try not to look at the future because I have been wrong before," McNeill said. "I predicted the future to my contemporaries and I was plain wrong."

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

LIGHTS, CAMERA, ACTION – This ever-present searchlight serves as a beacon to guide spectators to all Mullins Center events.

UMass program supports gays

GLB Concerns fills campus need for education

By MELANIE DESILVA
Collegian Staff

On the outer edge of Southwest, nestled within the East end of Crampton residence hall, stands the pink door that directs visitors towards one of the most important resources for gay, lesbian and bisexual individuals on the University of Massachusetts campus.

The Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, a branch of the University's Student Affairs Division, was created in 1985 in response to a series of homophobic incidents, student protests, and the release of a report issued by the gay campus community.

"The GLB Concerns Program fulfills a vital need. We not only support and celebrate the diverse GLB community on campus, but we also educate the entire community on GLB issues," said Felice Yeskel, program director.

The Program for GLB Concerns is unique, existing as one of the only substantially funded University programs in the nation which attempts to fully address the needs of gay students and faculty.

"It's unique. Only a handful of other colleges and universities have similar programs," Wendy Mataya, the program's media coordinator, said.

One educational resource offered by the Program, the Speaker's Bureau, is designed to break stereotypes and reduce homophobia by letting students talk to a panel of positive gay, lesbian and bisexual people.

Listening to other GLB individuals share their experiences may also help gay audience members in their own coming out process, according to Dvora Zipkin, the Speaker's Bureau coordinator.

"I think an effective way to break down stereotypes is to meet someone face to face, hear their story, and realize that they are just thinking, feeling people who want to live their lives," Zipkin said.

With an extensive library of books and videos, and a 24- hour GLB telephone information service called LAMDA, the program offers public access to gay literature and knowledge of events and organizations.

"We have a library of over 900 books, and LAMDA gets over a hundred calls a month," Mataya said.

The Program helps facilitate Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Awareness Week in April, publishes a monthly newsletter called The Blatent, and coordinates or sponsors most GLB campus events.

From folksingers and comedians to lectures and films, the program attempts to offer a myriad of educational and entertainment options.

Turn to PROGRAM, page 6

DC's offer study halls

Provide coffee and food for thought

By ANDREW LUMB
Collegian Correspondent

An estimated 250 students trek to the dining commons each night, not for a meal, but for a place to study.

Study sessions, with free tea and coffee, are available in Southwest's Berkshire and Northeast's Worcester dining commons Sunday through Wednesday from 8 to 11 p.m.

The goals of the study sessions, according to organizing leader Carol-Anne Hickey, are to provide a safe and convenient locale where, because dorms are too noisy and the library is too dangerous to walk to late at night, academics are the top priority.

"We want people to come on their own [who are] serious about studying," Hickey explained. She said the coffee and tea are provided so students won't have to walk to stores when it's dark.

Funding for the study halls, according to Ann Miller, the director of Residential life, requires applying for a grant from the University's Cultural Enrichment Fund, which gets its money from the pinball machines on campus.

The money is given to Dick Rossi, the director of University Food Services, who has the authority to allow the dining commons to be used, to get the

Turn to STUDY, page 8

Parachute Club members to descend from new heights

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Sport Parachute Club is rising to new heights.

For the first time ever, four of the club's most qualified members will travel to the National Collegiate Skydiving Championships in December of 1993.

The trip was made possible when the Student Senate's finance committee unanimously awarded last Wednesday, grant money to aid the club in travel expenses.

"We've never partitioned for money before," said senior Christine Wadel, secretary of the club. "We're a nonprofit registered student organization and we don't charge dues to members new or old."

When the club sponsors a first-time jumper course they make only five dollars off of a beginner jumper. The remainder goes to the airport for cover expenses.

Because the club doesn't charge dues, it relies on the five dollar increments to help defray advertising expenses.

"Without the SGA's help it would have been close to impossible to attend the collegiates," Wadel said.

Junior Rob Desilets, president of the club, said the collegiate nationals will offer the team an opportunity to learn new skydiving techniques as well as gain rec-

Turn to SKYDIVING, page 12

Housing Cable Network adds academic channel

By BILL ROGERS
Collegian Staff

The Housing Services Cable Network (HSCN) now has an academic channel that will allow people from different countries and language programs to listen to newscasts in their respective languages.

University of Massachusetts Academic Channel (UMAC), channel 14, will be playing programs that are to be beamed down from satellites owned by the Satellite Communications For Learning (SCOLA) Network of International News. The news programs originate from countries all around the world, including the recent headliners Russia, Croatia, Latvia, Lithuania and Slovenia.

Ed Phinney, faculty director of the University Foreign Language Resource Center, said he is thrilled with the University's free acquisition of the SCOLA Network, because there are students here at the University representing every country within the network.

A schedule of the exact times when each specific country's news will air may be obtained from the front desk in the Foreign Language Resource Center or by calling 545-0950. Watchers are warned that the network sometimes changes programs without advance notice.

The channel will also be broadcasting delayed programs from the Massachusetts Corporation For Educational Television (MCET) starting today. Some programs that will be shown are, "Boston by Foot," a survey of Boston's most historic places, and "Contemporary Great Minds," an interview on "Measuring Intelligence" with Harvard Education Professor Howard Gardner.

Other programs will be "Order in Chaos," part of a series explaining Chaos theory in Mathematics, and a special program on Hokkaido, Japan.

Another special program, "Malcolm X: His Life And Work," will be broadcast twice on Channel 14, and will feature his biography, literature about him, and music from the era. It will also look at the recent Spike Lee movie on him and its social impact.

Northeastern University's Ron Bailey will join members of the UMass faculty to answer questions during the last 40 minutes of the broadcast, which will be designated for call-in questions and comments on Malcolm X.

The program will be broadcast live on Wednesday, Feb. 24 at 11:20 a.m.-12:50 p.m. and on Thursday, Feb. 25 at 4-5:30 p.m. Non-residential students and faculty may view the Wednesday broadcast in the Academic Lounge of the University Foreign Language Resource Center by reserving a seat. Professors have been encouraged to make information available to students.

The entire University community is invited to see the replayed program on Feb. 25 at 4 p.m. in the Cance Lounge in Southwest. A discussion will follow the taped program and refreshments will be served.

New site proposed for tribe

Fort Devens may be home for Nipmuc reservation

AYER (AP) — As part of their quest for federal recognition, the Nipmuc Indians of central Massachusetts want to establish a reservation at Fort Devens when the Army base is mothballed in 1995.

The 2,500-member tribe has proposed using the site for a hotel, casino, housing, medical facilities and American Indian museum.

"A reservation would bind us together as a people," said the tribe's chief, Edward "Wise Owl" Moss of Grafton.

"Our language is dying. There are only a few that still speak it. If we don't educate our kids, it will be gone."

– Chief Edward "Wise Owl" Moss

Peter Silva of Berlin said using the former Army base as a reservation would provide opportunities for other area residents as well.

"The reservation would provide economic stability for the area," he told the Telegram & Gazette of Worcester.

Key to that idea is gaining formal recognition as an American Indian tribe. The Nipmucs, whose name means "people of the freshwater fishing places," have been petitioning the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs for years to obtain that status.

Bureau spokesman Carl Shaw said the process can take up to a decade.

"There are many requirements, and it can be very difficult to prove," Shaw said.

Requirements include a link to American Indian descendants, proof that a tribe lives like American Indians and recognition from area cities and towns that the Indians live as a tribe.

In the late 1600s, the Nipmuc Indians joined the Wampanoags, Narragansetts and Mohegans in a series of battles to expel white settlers from their land.

But the tribe's population diminished. The colonial militia slaughtered 300 Nipmucs at Turners Falls in May 1676, Nipmuc historians say, and later many died of disease, were imprisoned on Deer Island in Boston Harbor or were sold into slavery. Some fled to Canada.

"There are probably no full-blooded Nipmucs left," Moss said. "Most of the Nipmucs married into other Indian tribes or with whites."

Nipmuc descendants say establishing a reservation will help them preserve what remains of their culture.

"Our language is dying. There are only a few that still speak it," Moss said. "If we don't educate our kids, it will be gone. We've got to let others know that the Nipmucs are still here and we aren't going anywhere."

With Visa® you'll be accepted at more than 10 million places, nearly three times more than American Express. And that's not a misprint.

Visa. It's Everywhere You Want To Be.®

© Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1993

■ Bosnia

continued from page 1

on their behalf," Musanovic said. "All they ask is that the United Nations lift the arms embargo. The U.S. stance on the embargo is viewed as an act of aggression, not passivity."

Musanovic said that the no-fly zone over Serbia is violated by Serbian aggressors. If enforced, she said it would prevent the soldiers from getting reinforcements.

"In Bosnia the no-fly zone is violated every day and no one gives a damn. Saddam Hussein blinks and there is action taken against him," Musanovic said.

"I have such an extensive knowledge of weapons it makes me more of a student for West Point than liberal arts at Mount Holyoke," Musanovic said, as she was recently in Sarajevo and forced to listen to constant gunfire and bombings.

Kathy Wells, a member of the Arkansas Commission on Child Abuse, Rape and Domestic Violence, recently returned to the United States after nine days in Bosnia, where she assessed conditions in the refugee camps.

"We found all of these women deathly afraid of telling of their rapes," Wells said. "There has been the betrayal of women by former good friends and neighbors."

Wells said the women she interviewed spoke of all types of torture they received while in captivity.

"One woman's 18-month-old daughter was dangled out a window by a soldier and told that if she did not stop crying then he would drop her," Wells said. "She was crying because she just saw her parents killed."

Wells said her anger began when the stories of mass assaults and deliberate impregnations in Bosnia began appearing in news accounts in December, then they disappeared and no one said, "We need to do something."

■ vigil

continued from page 1

they have been raped," Bartell said. "Their only faults are being women and they are being punished for that by their own brothers."

Bartell said after World War II the Geneva Convention put limits on what could be done to civilians. She said the raping and killing of Bosnian women are war crimes and should be treated as war crimes.

Bartell said there are some members of the medical profession from the European Community who are performing abortions for the Bosnian women up to the first and second trimesters.

"Although it is against the religious beliefs of many of these women, they are allowing abortions," Bartell said, "because they do not want to give birth to the children conceived out of rape and once those children are born they want nothing to do with them."

Emily Gould, a participant of the vigil, said she was upset to hear what they were doing to the Bosnian women from Alma Musanovic, a woman who escaped from Bosnia a couple of months ago.

"Many Bosnian women who are being raped are being forced into camps after their sixth month of pregnancy," Gould said. "These women are kept in these camps so they will give birth to the Serbian children."

Gould said Musanovic's story was just one example of what women experience in Bosnia that is not shown on the news. She said she believed the public must be made aware of what is really happening there.

Bartell said the vigil was held on Valentine's Day because it is a day that celebrates love. She said that other vigils were being held at the same time in Northampton, Mt. Holyoke College, Greenfield and all across the United States.

She said the vigil was providing an open forum for people to gather on periodic Sundays in the future "to give [them] an opportunity to talk, teach and do something about the situation of women and girls in Bosnia."

There's A New Way to Get to Mt. Tom.

Here's a hint:

Now it's even easier to ski closer to home! And purchasing a combination bus/lift ticket saves you money, too! Take the Peter Pan bus, any day of the week, from any one of these locations and enjoy great skiing day and night at nearby Mt. Tom:

AMHERST/UMASS
NORTHAMPTON
SPRINGFIELD
BRIDGEPORT
HARTFORD
MIDDLETOWN
MERIDEN
NEW HAVEN

Mt. TOM SKI AREA

Peter Pan Trailways

Route 5, Holyoke, MA • Call Peter Pan for Info: 781-2900

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Allowing gays in the military is not an issue, it's an order

David RIVERA

It was a normal intersession, as intersessions go. I, like everyone of you, sat and watched hundreds of television hours. I worried about the Amy Fisher/Joey Butterfinger (whatever his name is) scandal. But most of the time I wondered how our new president would do in his first few weeks in office.

I was hoping to grade him month by month. But after the last few weeks I wish he had taken his job pass/fail.

I'm always amazed how narrow-minded and scared people can be when it comes to changing the status quo. The recent hoopla over officially allowing homosexuals into the military has proven that most Americans still live and breed in caves.

Fade into Rivera's imaginary T.V. world.

Welcome to "Hard Copy," today's show: UNFROZEN CAVEMAN SOLDIER.

Scene 1: Caveman soldier discovers that he is sharing living quarters with a gay soldier.

Caveman soldier: "Ugh, you gay, ugh, me no be soldier no more, ugh."

Gay soldier: "But Caveman soldier, we were good friends until I told you I was gay."

Caveman soldier: "Ugh, me no like you. Ugh, you make funny look at me, ugh."

Gay soldier: "I saved your life in combat, but all you care about is how you think I'll look at you. You're not my type."

Fade out of Rivera's imaginary T.V. world.

What amazes me is President Clinton's gutless stance on this issue. He waited and waited and waited, trying to feel the mood of Capitol Hill. Of course by then Jerry Falwell and the rest of the Bible-thumping Puritans flooded the Washington phone lines condemning his plan.

Our Constitution states that the President is Commander-in-Chief — period. Apparently a few dinosaurs from the Reagan/Bush era still have enough influence and power to avert presidential executive orders. President Clinton should have lifted the ban as soon as he walked into the Oval Office. Instead he allowed himself to be bullied around by his underlings, the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Soldiers are just that — soldiers — and if their Commander-in-Chief orders them to kill, they kill. If their Commander-in-Chief orders them to feed the hungry and protect the helpless, they do just that. If their Commander-in-Chief orders them to coexist with other human beings (Blacks, females or homosexuals), they will and if they don't then early retirement or court marshals are always an alternative.

President Truman came under similar pressure when he integrated the armed services in the 1940s. As was his style, he did what he thought was best and ignored the military opposition.

Their arguments of 50 years ago are very similar to the arguments used against lifting the ban. They said it would be "disruptive, bad for morale, divisive. . ." Sounds familiar.

There have been homosexual soldiers ever since there have been soldiers — SURPRISE!!!

The armed services will not change once the ban is lifted, and surprisingly enough the numbers of homosexuals in the military will remain the same. What will change is the fear of extortion, blackmail and violence that gay soldiers have had to live with for years.

If President Clinton cannot convince the Joint Chiefs to obey orders, then the traditional military means of mediation should be used against them: a military firing squad.

David Rivera is a Collegian columnist

Needs of children ignored

Peter J. ORVETTI

A travesty befell the American educational system last Wednesday in the nation's largest city. By a majority of one sole vote, education reformer Joseph A. Fernandez was ousted from the post of schools commissioner — for trying to make the next generation of New Yorkers a little wiser and a little less prejudiced.

Fernandez came to New York from Miami, where he had turned around that city's faltering educational system. Less than three months into his three-year tenure as chancellor, Fernandez won the right to remove school principals who were not living up to his high expectations. That same year, he fought Mayor David Dinkins' proposed budget cuts. Dinkins later became one of Fernandez's strongest supporters.

Eighteen months into the Fernandez chancellorship, math scores were up by a considerable 4.9 percent. By 1992, dropout rates had fallen from 20.8 percent to 17.2 percent. That same year, Fernandez proposed adding 25 extra days to the school year. The chancellor also pushed through his controversial plan to distribute condoms in the schools, making New York the first city to adopt such a policy. New York's failing public school system seemed finally to be getting back on track. Then came Fernandez's boldest initiative, which would cost him his job.

Joseph A. Fernandez's Rainbow Curriculum challenged the prejudices of the past, by educating tolerance of all sorts of people, regardless of race, gender, religion or sexual preference. It was this last that caused the most controversy, characterized by a book titled Heather has Two Mommies, a children's book about a lesbian couple and their daughter. Coupled with the new education against homophobia, Fernandez introduced a massive AIDS education program. The chancellor weathered the storm of criticism, but irrational fears began to well up in the populace, and the school board, ever wary of political realities, responded.

Fernandez fell quickly from last month when he was briefly considered by President Clinton to head the Department of Education to the vote not to renew his contract last week. Fernandez will leave his post on June 30.

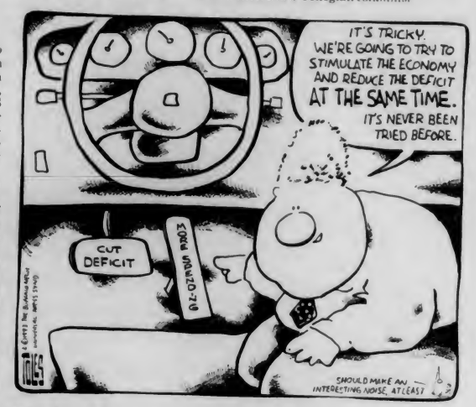
So Joseph A. Fernandez, the schools chancellor of New York City who raised test scores, lowered dropout rates, helped prevent AIDS and teen pregnancy, and taught simple human decency, has been thrown out of office because he dared to fight small-minded bigotry. If Fernandez is a failure as an educator or an affront to morality and values, then New York and all the cities and towns of America could use a lot more failures just like him.

"We can't teach young people to read and write if we can't save their lives," said Luis Garden Acosta, head of youth development group El Puente in the New York Times. "The issue is not about condoms, but about character and courage."

"I feel immensely proud of what I have accomplished for our children," said the fallen chancellor. "Yes, I have made mistakes, but I have fought for children. I will always put their welfare ahead of political and special interests."

Maybe the New York School Board should try doing the same thing.

Peter J. Orvetti is a Hampshire student.



Women find no safety in numbers

Two and a half years ago when I began my four years at UMass, my parents told me to eat well, get enough sleep and never walk alone on campus at night. Take the bus, walk with a friend, call for an escort. Don't walk alone. Of course, more than once I found myself doing so and luckily I've never had a problem, and neither have any of my friends. Until last Friday night.

It was about 9:45 p.m. when three of us left our dorm to catch a bus. We had only gone about 50 feet from the door when we were accosted by 6 or 7 males. One of my friends was grabbed from behind by one, while the rest laughed and cheered him. As they began to pass us, we saw our bus go by and questioned what to do now. We waited to see where they were going, and then decided to continue to our destination but now we would have to walk.

As the group got further from us, we thought we would be all right — until they changed course and began to follow us. We tried hiding in the Campus Center bathroom, but they were there when we came out again. We tried going a different way, but only met up with them again. As a last resort, we jumped on a bus going in the opposite direction we originally were heading. And who do you think ran to get on the same bus? It was no coincidence — we heard one yelling to another that they didn't even know where the bus was going. We got off at a stop where there was a help phone and fortunately they stayed on the bus. We called the escort service and anxiously waited for their arrival.

You may wonder why we didn't call for help sooner, which would have been the rational thing to do. But we were in a situation we never thought we would find ourselves in, and were not thinking very clearly. We felt scared, intimidated and very angry. This wasn't done to just one person, or even two. There were three of us together, and we still weren't safe.

We realize worse things have happened and do happen every day. We were always aware of the possibility of danger, but this weekend's frightening experience really hit home. It has become very clear that women are not safe anywhere on this campus.

My parents' advice was good: it's important to take the bus or use the escort service. But when walking with a friend or friends, you should be aware that you may not be completely safe.

This letter was signed by three undergraduate students whose names were withheld at their request.

Ridiculous policies, insensitivity sicken Health Services patient

This is not an editorial. This is a warning, a warning to inform you of the unprofessional and unorganized operations that occur at the University Health Services.

Not too long ago, I was playing basketball and I jammed my finger. It started to swell and bruise almost immediately, and I couldn't move it at all. I instantly went to Health Services, assuming it was broken.

Before I could even sit down, I had to fill out a form with my name, ID number, nature of injury, etc. Writing is not an easy task when you have injured a finger on your writing hand.

Next, I gave my name to a receptionist, who told me to wait. I looked around the waiting room and saw one other person. I sat for about 15 minutes until I was finally called. Upon walking to the "treatment area" the receptionist halted me, and said, "They aren't ready for you yet. I have to take your temperature and blood pressure." Was she serious? All I needed was an X-ray and a splint. I am a certified emergency medical technician, and I know for a fact that it is not necessary to take temperature and/or blood pressure in the case of an injured finger.

The receptionist then told me to wait again. I sat for another 15 minutes, until she said, "you can go to the X-ray department now." Why did I have to wait a total of 30 minutes just to be told to go to the X-ray department? Couldn't someone have just told me when I said I had an injured finger that I should go directly to the X-ray department?

When I got down to the X-ray department, there was no one even there. I took a seat, and 10 minutes later, a technician aimlessly wandered in and asked me if I needed help. She then took X-rays of my finger — discolored and swollen unbelievably at this point.

I returned to the waiting room once again with my X-rays. After a while, I was called and put in an examination room. Here I sat, while nurses and doctors casually socialized and snacked on Cheetos outside. I finally approached them, and asked when I would be seen. One of them replied, "As soon as someone is available."

I returned to the examination room and 10 minutes later, one doctor, who was socializing, came in and looked at my finger. The moment I had waited almost 2 hours for had finally come. The doctor looked at the X-rays, and looked at my finger, and informed me that it had been broken in two places.

He left, and had some attendant try to splint my finger. I say "try" because she had no clue what to do — so with my medical training, I told her step by step how to do it.

All students pay a mandatory Health Coverage fee, and for what? So you can sit for hours in pain while insensitive technicians and doctors will administer first aid at their convenience? There's not even a certified doctor on the premises 24-hours a day, no X-rays on the weekend, additional surcharges for certain visits and you are charged if you cancel an appointment. All of these policies are absolutely ridiculous.

If you have a medical emergency that requires attention, I suggest going to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton. Sure, its a little farther, but you'll be seen immediately, and given the care, treatment and first aid that a human being should deserve when one needs it.

Eric Bachenheimer
Amherst

■ AIDS

continued from page 1

Marsha said. "They are being dumped in municipal hospitals."

"Hopelessness" and "despair" are two of the chief contributors Marsha associated to the spread of AIDS.

"Despair causes more drug abuse and then AIDS," she said.

Living conditions for the low income in Springfield is very poor, according to Marsha. Housing is scarce and the poverty level is low.

"Many women with children on welfare are living 40 percent below the poverty level," Marsha explained. "We are working to bring them up to just the poverty level."

Marsha condemned the present system that is supposed to help low income people. "They throw us away, send our young men to prison," she said.

The AIDS epidemic is about money and numbers in minority and impoverished people, Marsha said.

The care of AIDS patients is "really about the dollar, it ain't about us," Marsha explained. "We're a business right now. AIDS services is the next economic boom."

Marsha said people often ask how she got the virus, but said said she believes it does not matter how someone got the disease. "The end is the same — death."

While Marsha did acknowledge that she knew how she received the HIV virus, she did not disclose the source that infected her. Instead she labeled the cause as part of a more general, social term.

"I got this condition because I was less than," she said.

Violence erupts in courtrooms

Lawyers want tighter security in Massachusetts courts

BOSTON (AP) — Prompted by a string of violent incidents in courtrooms, judges, prosecutors and attorneys are calling for tighter security in the state's courts.

"Given the lack of security, it's a miracle that more has not happened in Massachusetts," said Elaine Epstein, a family law lawyer and president of the Massachusetts Bar Association.

"In eastern Massachusetts, other than in the Superior Court in Boston and the Superior Court in Cambridge, security is a joke," Superior Court Judge Robert A. Barton told The Boston Globe.

"Attila the Hun could walk in with hand grenades," he said.

Angry outbursts are described as particularly likely in the state's probate and family courts, often the scene of highly emotional cases.

Last spring, a husband was accused of stabbing his estranged wife with a kitchen knife at the end of a divorce settlement conference in Bristol Probate and Family Court.

"No one saw the knife until it was in her," said Christopher Long, the Fall River lawyer who represented the woman. She survived the attack.

Two judges in Norfolk County — one in Norfolk Probate and Family Court in Dedham, and the other in Wrentham District Court — received death threats from the same man within the last month.

Last week, a loaded gun was taken from a woman spectator in Dedham District Court.

"This has become a very dangerous business," said Norfolk County District Attorney William D. Delahunt.

■ Program

continued from page 3

"I try to keep a balance of popular events that many people come to and as wide a range of events as possible," Ben Zeman, the programming and entertainment manager said.

Zeman underlined the significance of programming as a support system for open and closeted members of the gay community.

"Part of what makes programming so valuable is that people will come up to me afterwards and this will be the first queer thing they've gone to," Zeman said. "People come out in different ways and some people come out by going to events."

Yet support for gay students is not simply available through educational and entertainment options. The Program for GLB Concerns also records incidents of harassment and refers victims to the appropriate counseling and legal services.

Darrin Shaffer, organizer of the Program's discrimination response, said it is crucial that all homophobic harassment be reported to the program office.

"It's useful to the program office and the GLB community when organizing around issues of harassment to have an accurate account and description of homophobic incidents on campus," Shaffer said.

"Prejudice against gay people, like all forms of prejudice, can be reduced through education. That's part of what we do here," Yeskel said.

Edward Koren
Cartoonist and Illustrator
Pratt '64

Pratt distinguishes you.

1992 Art work courtesy of Edward Koren

For over a century, Pratt Institute has helped people distinguish themselves in virtually every creative field.

From fine arts to architecture, from photography to computer graphics, Pratt nurtures and motivates students to take their talents as far as they will go.

That's why Pratt students don't just draw it or build it. They also make it.

Inquire now about Pratt's summer travel/study abroad programs to Cyprus, Denmark, Greece, Italy, Japan, and Korea. Summer sessions begin in May, June and July. Undergraduate and graduate programs in art, design, architecture, facilities management, planning, and information & library science.

Pratt
Draw it. Build it. Make it.

Pratt Institute • School of Professional Studies • 200 Willoughby Avenue • Brooklyn, New York 11205
(718) 636-3453 or 1-800-331-0834 ext. 788

❑ Please send me your summer catalog ❑ I am interested in attending Pratt in the Fall.
Please send me your: ❑ Undergraduate catalog ❑ Graduate catalog

Name _____ SS # _____
Address _____ Phone # _____
City _____ HS/Coll. _____
State _____ Zip _____ Grad. Yr. _____ Interest _____

'88

Work for the Collegian
The Collegian is currently accepting applications for the position of Associate Business Manager.
113 Campus Center. E/O/E

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton / Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888
SAME DAY DELIVERY

BANANARAMA
Fabulous frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

What's the Daily Collegian got for you. . . ?

Complete coverage of all campus sports by one of the nation's best college sports staffs . . .

Coverage of important events on campus . . .

Music, theater and art coverage and reviews . . .

State, national, and international news from the wires of the Associated Press . . .

. . . as well as a daily crossword puzzle . . . and CALVIN AND HOBBES.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Celebrating 25 Years as a Daily Paper • 1967 – 1992

Lawyer cites mistakes in Tyson appeal case

By THOMAS P. WYMAN
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The judge in the Mike Tyson rape case last year made several technical mistakes and the former heavyweight boxing champion should get a new trial, his lawyer argued today.

Defense lawyer Alan Dershowitz told the Indiana Court of Appeals today that jurors in the Tyson case should have been allowed to hear a tape recording of a telephone call that Desiree Washington made to report the alleged assault.

"It is unfair to punish Mike Tyson because his lawyers acted in good faith."

– Alan Dershowitz

Testimony from three witnesses the defense claims can contradict part of Washington's testimony should also have been allowed, he said.

Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia J. Gifford barred the three from testifying, ruling in part that they came forward too late. Dershowitz told the appeals court that his defense team was delayed by spending extra time with the witnesses to make sure they were truthful.

"It is unfair to punish Mike Tyson because his lawyers acted in good faith," Dershowitz said.

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Ex-Heavyweight Champion Mike Tyson

Tyson, 26, was convicted Feb. 10, 1992, after Washington told jurors he raped her the previous summer in his Indianapolis hotel room. She met the prizefighter while participating in a beauty contest.

Dershowitz also argued that the judge erred by not letting jurors consider whether or not Tyson mistakenly believed Washington consented to sex.

And the appeals questions the judge's selection, charging prosecutors manipulated court assignments to place the case before a sympathetic judge.

■ study

continued from page 3

tea and coffee. He said he is very supportive because the dining commons are used as a "study hall — not a social event."

The study sessions were first attempted six years ago by Adam Goldstein, a recent graduate, but they didn't catch on because no one knew about them, including Miller, who started her position last January.

However, study sessions have been very popular with the football and baseball teams, whose members are required to study on a half of the dining common opposite the student study sessions.

The future for these study sessions, according to Miller, will "focus on increased hours, increased visibility and matching up students with resources."

As midterms approach, dining common studying may be available on Friday and Saturday, when the library isn't open. "Getting the word out" is tough, according Ann Miller, who said that fliers have been their only aid.

"Like Taps and Dead Poets Society— only better! School Ties is a haunting, hard-hitting '10.' A forceful, touching, distinctive drama, expertly performed by a high-spirited cast of young actors."
SUSAN GRANGER, WKC/AMERICAN MOVIE CLASSICS

"One of the year's most powerful films! Deeply moving and wonderfully acted."
JEFFREY LYONS, SNEAK PREVIEWS/WCBS RADIO

STARRING: BRENDAN FRASER • CHRIS O'DONNELL • ANDREW LOWERY • RANDALL BARINKOFF • COLE HAUSER • AMY LOCANE
DIRECTOR: Robert Mandel SCREENPLAY: Dick Wolf and Darryl Ponicsan
109 min. • 1992 • Rated PG-13 • Paramount

TONIGHT
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
7, 9, 11 PM
$3.00
Sponsored by SAFA
Students Advocating Financial Aid

CAN'T AFFORD TO VOLUNTEER?

Consider This:

Overseas Travel PAID

Language Training PAID

Living Expenses PAID

Medical and Dental Care PAID

Student Loans DEFERRED

$5400 CASH TO YOU

All this, and a better world to show for it.
Maybe you can't afford not to volunteer.

PEACE CORPS

Peace Corps Information Meeting

Wednesday, February 17
7:00 PM
Campus Center Room 804

Call the UMASS Peace Corps Office
at 545-2105 for more information
or stop by 12 Draper Hall

An Equal Opportunity Employer

LONDON • PARIS • WASHINGTON • PADOVA • GRENOBLE • HAIFA • OXFORD • NIAMEY • MADRID • BEIJING • SYDNEY • MOSCOW •

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS
BOSTON UNIVERSITY

LEARN HOW THE WORLD WORKS

Global Internships and Language/Liberal Arts Programs

Name: _____
Address: _____
City/State/Zip: _____
Phone( ) _____ University: _____
Fall ☐ Spring ☐ Summer ☐ 19___

Internship Programs: ☐London ☐Paris ☐Moscow ☐Sydney ☐Washington, DC ☐Beijing
Language Programs: ☐Grenoble ☐Oxford ☐Haifa ☐Madrid ☐Padova ☐Oxford ☐Niamey
Summer Programs: ☐London ☐Madrid ☐Padova ☐Paris ☐Sydney ☐Moscow ☐Beijing ☐Washington, DC

return to:
Boston University, Division of International Programs
232 Bay State Road, Box G, Boston, MA 02215 or call (617) 353-9888

Arts & Living

Groundhog Day: high-concept fun wears thin

Bill Murray and his biting wit almost save comedy

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

No one will ever accuse Groundhog Day, the new Bill Murray comedy, of being sidesplittingly hilarious, but Murray's acerbic wit and some clever sight gags make Groundhog Day amusing at best.

Murray plays self-centered TV execu—, er weatherman who travels to Punxsutawaney, Pennsylvania to cover the annual Groundhog Day festival with his perky producer (Andie MacDowell) and overworked cameraman (Chris Elliot). He hates his job, his co-workers, his assignment and his life.

After a terrible February 2nd, he wakes up to. . .another February 2nd. Murray gets some mileage out of the fact that there's no tomorrow to worry about and that he's got plenty of time on his hands. He eats whatever he wants, gets lucky with the local girls, commits suicide a dozen or so times — yet no matter how much he plans the 'perfect day' with MacDowell — he continually strikes out.

Groundhog Day unfolds with the timing of an erratic "Saturday Night Live" skit. It's an interesting premise and Murray works it well — until the humor starts wearing thin. Groundhog Day tries to make the switch midway to a schmaltzy romantic comedy — replete with a gooey ending — but the romance is unbelievable and the humor comes in fits and starts.

One of Murray's strengths is that he can always rise above trifling material and come out like a winner (his paranoid mental patient in What About Bob? was one of the most underrated performances of 1991). From his early work in Meatballs and Ghostbusters up to Scrooged!, Murray's on-target verbal volleys always work.

In Groundhog Day, that wit becomes standard Murray schtick, and even if it does carry you through the movie, it never seems particularly inspired. Besides, he doesn't look like he's having a particularly good time. Like the film as a whole, Murray's good, but not great.

Andie MacDowell, plays the type of character that deserves Murray's biting barbs. She's a chirpy, always positive saint; so perfect and wonderful that when Murray starts getting soft and falling for her, it comes off something like a betrayal.

Chris Elliot is unfortunately wasted in a part that could've been hilarious. But as in all Murray movies, no

Turn to GROUNDHOG, page 10

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES
Bill Murray and friend in "Groundhog Day"

SETH KAYE/COLLEGIAN
Murphy's Law fans were spun from the nucleus of the mosh pit.

Murphy's Law delivers hardcore rock in Noho

By ADAM RATTINER
Collegian Correspondent

Murphy's Law
Pearl Street
Feb. 11, 1993

If you happened to drive past Pearl Street late last Thursday night and noticed the walls bulging and sagging outward, you were looking at a Murphy's Law hardcore show. Jimmy Drescher and the band had more of a party than a concert. Drescher is a fountain of energy with enough motivation and influence to really get a crowd jamming, moshing and swinging.

Murphy's Law is currently the big kahunna of New York hardcore, where they have been playing at clubs such as CBGB (where the Sex Pistols got started in the United States) since 1983. They are known for their constant high, nonstop level of energy and fast beats. Many feel the only shows comparable to a 'Law show include Fishbone, the Bosstones, and now maybe Primus.

After Drescher and the band opened up with a few songs such as "America Rules" and "Killer Beers" he told the crowd, "We just got back from our European Tour. They are really politically correct over there. We had to teach

Turn to MURPHY, page 10

Brand Nubian to kick knowledge at the SUB

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Knowledge is one thing there can never be enough of. The rap group Brand Nubian believes that is true and will attempt to spread some of their knowledge when they play a concert at the Student Union Ballroom on Wednesday night at 8 p.m.

Brand Nubian recently released their new album, In God We Trust, on Feb. 2, and the album, which features a new lineup, is just as strong as their debut release, One For All.

One For All was a critically acclaimed album which brought success home for group members, Lord Jamar, Derek X (now known as Sadat X), and Grand Puba Maxwell (now embarking on a solo career). Right from the beginning, the groups' beliefs in the Five Percent Nation of Islam was very noticeable in One for All. Jamar said that their religion is often misunderstood.

"A big misconception is that it's a jail religion," said Jamar. "It's a way of life of the black man."

"It [the religion] answered questions I'd always had in my mind," he said. "These things were presented to me and I saw them as truth, and have built on them since. And I saw that it would be good to incorporate the knowledge in the music."

On their new release, Brand Nubian continues to sprinkle their knowledge throughout their songs. On the album, Grand Puba Maxwell is replaced by long time confidant Sincere.

Jamar said that their new album is one which is about real life.

"Everything is a balance," Jamar said. "That is what we try to show with our music — the balance between the seriousness of trying to spread knowledge and showing that we're real people who enjoy life."

The first single off of In God We Trust, "Punks Jump Up to Get Beat Down," is a rugged, tough single which went to #2 on Billboard's rap singles chart. Jamar said that the song definitely has a purpose.

"The track is about not being taken advantage of in life," said Jamar. "The feelings you have when someone tries to take advantage of you and what we would do if that happens.

"It's also beating them down with the sound," he said. "We're beating them down with the lyrics, the vocals, the mentality — and physically if it has to be."

"Pass the Gat," "Black Starline," and "Love Me or Leave Me Alone," are songs on In God We Trust which demonstrate the versatility, both musical and lyrical, of Brand Nubian.

If you want to see a good live show and perhaps learn a thing or two, check out Brand Nubian.

Brand Nubian will be playing with special guests Positive K, Diamond D & The Psychotic Neurotics, Onyx and Double XX Posse at the Student Union Ballroom Wednesday night at 8 p.m. Tickets are $10 for UMass students with a valid ID, and $13 for general public.. Tickets can be purchased at Tix Unlimited in the S.U.B. at UMass or at For the Record in Amherst.

Do you know your LEGAL Protections ??

The LEGAL SERVICES CENTER at UMass offers free, professional legal help to fee-paying students!

We can advise in most matters affecting students, including consumer, criminal, housing, family, employment, military, civil rights, and other matters.

922 Campus Center • 545-1995

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖

The Best Chinese Buffet

MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE

WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15

NEW
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

■ Groundhog

continued from page 9

scene-stealing is allowed — he never lets the control of the film leave his grasp.

Groundhog Day is pleasant and efficient high-concept amusement. It never crosses the line into knee-slapping hysterics (the kidnapping of the Groundhog comes very close), but it's far from boring. B-

■ Murphy

continued from page 9

them the American way of having fun! I stayed in the Hotel Deutchland in Germany. Every kid brought a huge bag of confetti to our show and just threw it while they danced!"

The pit was nuts and reverberated through people to all the corners of Pearl Street. Only the real mosh veterans could make it in the nucleus. At one point, Drescher was hanging by his legs on the chandalier for his song "Crucial Bar-B-Q" as the Pearl Street bouncers slowly closed in on him. During "Skinhead Rebel" some skinheads jumped in the pit in celebration and at the end of the song Drescher said, "[Expletive] racism and nazzis."

One of the highlights of the show was the "Ren and Stimpy Song" which Drescher and the band made up that evening. It mutated from his original song "Rage" and became, "Rage, gonna' rage. Rage, Rage, Ren, Stimpy. Happy, Happy, Joy, Joy, Happy, Happy, Joy, Happy, Happy. . ."

Drescher could be a comedian. Before his European tour he said he was in Disneyworld. "I did a double elephant acid trip on Space Mountain. Then we went on this 3-D ride!" Throughout the show he threw beer at the audience. He said, "I would pour it in your mouths but this is an all ages show."

WE DON'T WANT YOU
TO JOIN
OUR SORORITY
WE WANT YOU TO HELP BUILD IT.

ΣK

RUSH SIGMA KAPPA!!
Tues 7-9, Wed 7:30-9, & Thurs 7-9
19 Allen St.
Questions? Call 256-6887

Dusk's tunes are sunshine for your ears

By CALEB COCHRAN
Collegian Staff

Dusk
the The Epic

When I think of dusk, I think of darkness, sadness and gloom. That's why I was so surprised with the content of the latest release from the The, Dusk.

Although the album includes a few tracks which could certainly be categorized as gloomy, the rest of the album is a collection of upbeat, uplifting and inspirational rock n' roll music.

After a slow and powerless opening tune called "True Happiness This Way Lies," the album moves quickly into a much more pleasant mood with "Love is Stronger Than Death." The vocals of Matt Johnson are very powerful here in a song which brings to mind the styles of David Bowie, Tears for Fears and Morrissey all rolled into one. The chorus is especially well done on this lyrical standout.

The third song on the album is another feel-good ditty entitled "Dogs of Lust." The tune opens with a raging harmonica jam which soon gives way to the versatile voice of Johnson. The use of distorted vocals (see Check Your Head) as well as vocal style changes throughout add a sense of intrigue to the tune.

My favorite song on the album is "Slow Emotion Replay," the most happy and motivational tune of any on the album. The use of the harmonica again adds greatly to the song. Johnson is a fantastic songwriter as well as a powerful and versatile singer, and this track embodies the best of both of these skills. The song's lyrics are interesting and intelligent without taking away from the feeling of the music.

Other songs worthy of mention are "This is the Night," a piano-oriented tune reminiscent of Queen, and "Lonely Planet," an inspiring and self-motivating song with a nice piece of wisdom in the chorus: "If you can't change the world, change yourself."

Although there are a few duds here, including "Helpline Operator" and "Lung Shadows," the majority of Dusk is very good. Instrumentally inspiring and lyrically thought provoking, Dusk is sunshine for your ears.

★★SHAPE★★★★ COMMUNITY
SHARE VISION
BE a
VISTA
It will change your life...for the rest of your life
VOLUNTEER

VISTA VOLUNTEERS...
• serve full-time for one year in low-income communities.
• help people mobilize to overcome poverty in their neighborhoods.
• are assigned to local projects in the 50 states, Puerto Rico and Washington, D.C.
• set up projects to reduce hunger and homelessness, organize people to rebuild urban housing, create employment and literacy projects...and much more.
• are U.S. citizens or permanent residents, age 18 or older

VISTA VOLUNTEERS RECEIVE...
• a modest living allowance plus a $95 monthly stipend paid upon completion of service.
• training before and during service.
• unique experience and new skills which enhance career development.
• possible deferment or partial cancellation of student loans.
• easier access to federal employment after service.

FOR ALL THE FACTS, CALL VISTA TOLL-FREE
1-800-424-8867
TDD: 1-202-606-5256
VISTA Volunteers in Service to America is part of ACTION, the federal domestic volunteer agency

Recruiter on Campus
FEBRUARY 22
CAMPUS CTR CONCOURSE
FEBRUARY 22, 7-8:30PM
INFO SESSION
CAMPUS CENTER, RM 803
FEBRUARY 23
INTERVIEWS
MATHER CAREER CENTER

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
SHARK NIGHT
➢ RETURNS ➣
Single Elimination
Pool Tournament
• Free Pizza for Players
• $2.00 Entrance Fee
Sign-Up: 7:30–8:00
WINNER TAKE ALL!!!
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

Kenny Garrett dazzles

Quartet soars with jazz-funk

JESSICA TAVERNA/COLLEGIAN
Kenny Garrett and his quartet.

By JESSICA TAVERNA
Collegian Staff

Kenny Garrett
Iron Horse
Feb. 9, 1993

They started in with a steady roll on the bongos, followed by a swish-swish of a high hat and the groove of an up-beat drummer. Subtly the bass fell on top of this solid beat and the piano and keys blended in. Last, but not least, Kenny Garrett came out screaming on the saxophone. What a perfect balance!

This is all in reference to Kenny Garrett and his quartet's phenomenal performance. He and his line-up played together like a well-tuned machine.

The group covered all kinds of territory. They began with an exotic sound, which could be partially attributed to the keys and the bongos. Then they slid easily into a basic jazz groove. They merged into a slower lane on the jazz scene by the second hour, but rejuvenated towards the finale. By the end they were pumping out a jam that seemed borderline jazz/funk.

No matter what it was that they were trying to pull off, all attempts were successful! In such a small club with such a rich atmosphere, one could've easily felt as if they'd been displaced and were actually in New Orleans in the 1920's.

Though their sound was similar to that of previous jazz heroes, I felt that they really managed to take it to a higher level. With appreciation for traditional jazz, they reached new lengths on a contemporary scale and were able to create something fresh, new and exciting that released a certain kind of energy that only youth could bring about.

The highlight of the performance was the encore set. The drummer wailed out a funk beat simultaneous with a simple slap bass line, that hummed along with the keyboard in a perfect harmony.

They would build their audience up to a climax and, just when things were mellowing down, they built up to yet another climax. It was never-ending musical ecstasy.

Watching Garrett bend and extend his knees to the rhythm, it looked as if he was going down deep and digging the notes up from below. "Digging it" is exactly what he was doing, and so was the crowd!

Kenny Garrett and his quartet are good-humored, talented musicians who put on a stupendous performance. I would recommend all to go see them if they ever get the chance.

MANDATORY
GOLDEN KEY
Honor Society Meeting
ALL MEMBERS!!!
TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 16
7:00pm
Campus Center Room 163
For More Information Call...
Dean of Students Office
Gladys Rodriguez at 545-2684

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
PAWSS
presents:
"TIANAMEN PLUS 4: PROSPECTS FOR DEMOCRACY IN CHINA TODAY"
A lecture by:
SHEN TONG
Leading China Activist, one of the Student Leaders who spearheaded the Tianamen Square protest
Tuesday, February 16th
8:00 PM
School of Business Administration, Rm. 120
the University of Massachusetts
This event is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For more information, please call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.

HATCH BAR ENTERTAINMENT
Tues. Feb. 16 9PM
2 BANDS
THE WOMBATS
&
DIESELMEAT
Wed. Feb. 17 9PM
Amandas Dirty Secret
Alternate Rock & Covers
Thurs. Feb. 18 9PM
Come Listen & Dance to
SYNAESTHEISA
Full Bar
Bud Natural Lite Pitcher, Pizzas & Grinders
Drink Specials
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

■ skydiving

continued from page 3

ognition in the national skydiving circuit.

"Attending will also give us a chance to see how other clubs operate. It may give us insight on new ideas that will help us cut costs," Desilets said.

The collegiates are the only competition of its kind offered in the country and are held once a year only. For 1993, the 35-year-old competition will be held in Florida, California or Arizona.

Desilets, Wadel, vice president Scott Gorman and a newcomer, senior Chris Klaus, will be competing in the four-person formation event. They will be expected to execute certain formations and shape changes during freefall. The event is judged on the smoothness and skill level of the formations.

The club will be training all Spring, Summer and Fall for the one event.

"Training for the event is where I'll learn a lot," said Gorman, a junior. "We have to learn how each other flies. Some people fall faster than others."

"In skydiving formations, everyone is a link in the chain and the chain is only as strong as its weakest link," Desilets said. "The sport aspect is so much more than just jumping out of a plane. It is a very precise, technical sport that requires skill and quick thinking."

The UMass parachute club is the oldest collegiate parachute club in the country. It has been in operation for 36 years.

"Our objective is to teach university students the sport of skydiving," Desilets said, adding that the group is also open to all five-college students and faculty.

Ground Hog
79 So. Pleasant Street
Amherst
256-1261

SPRINGBREAK!

JAMAICA $469
CANCUN 439

7 Nights, incl. Airfare from Boston, Hotel & transfers
Taxes not included. Rates subject to change

CALL NOW!!

SPRING BREAK
PANAMA CITY BEACH
FLORIDA

- High quality beachfront accommodations for 7 exciting nights
- Round trip chartered motor coach
- Free pool deck parties, activities, & promotions
- Inter Campus Programs I.D./Discount card
- On location staff for complete assistance
- All taxes, tips, & service charges included

$119 $209

For information and reservations

Call Jon or Matt
549-3749

Ever wondered how a newspaper is made?

photo by matt kahn

When this group of WEBELOS Boy Scouts visited the Collegian production office last week, they didn't know much about newspapers. Within ten minutes, they had put together an ad on our computers, printed it and pasted it up.

If you're interested in newspapers and would like to join our staff – or would just like to see how the Collegian gets put together – drop by our offices at 113 Campus Center. We couldn't give the scouts a position on our staff, but if you're an undergraduate you can start getting experience – today!

STUDENT AFFAIRS SPECIAL SERVICES
236 WHITMORE

Is there something you would like to say before graduating?

You are invited to submit proposals for consideration as the

STUDENT COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Eligibility:	Graduating UMass-Amherst senior.
Format:	Submit not more than three word-processed or typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time.
Subject Matter:	Text should concern higher education, and be relevant to the University and your experience(s) here.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Director, Disability Services, (non-voting Committee Chair), 231 Whitmore, 545-0892.
Selection Process:	A committee of students (majority), faculty, and staff, will review proposals. Authors' names will have been deleted to ensure objectivity. Ratings will be assigned. Selected authors will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March). A final selection will then be made by the committee.
Deadline:	Wednesday, February 19, 1992, 4:30pm.
For additional information:	Paul Appleby, Selection Committee Chair, 5-0892 or the office of Student Affairs Special Services, 5-3480.

CAREER OPPORTUNITY

Experience is a MUST to be successful in gaining the competitive edge in today's Business World...

The Collegian is looking for dedicated, responsible, organized sophomores for the positions of Associate Business Manager and Assistant Finance Manager

Applications are available at
The Collegian
113 Campus Center
For more information call
545–3500
Deadline: February 17, 1993

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

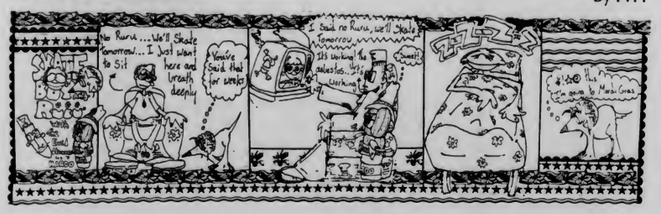
JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

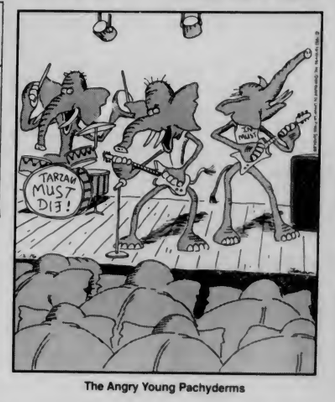
PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT



THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON



The Angry Young Pachyderms

Quote of the Day

"Everywhere is walking distance if you have the time."

– Steven Wright

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Scattering your energies will slow you down. Know your priorities and stick to them. Hit the relationship trail with greater understanding. Your can make real headway.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is easier to understand at love match now. Candid communication is the key. Do not be afraid to discuss serious issues. All business signals are "go." Move forward at top speed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are acquiring widespread prestige by doing skillfully what only you can do. Younger people look up to you. Keep an open mind in key conversations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Troubleshooting for a VIP or family member boosts your credibility and image. It may be necessary to go to the full distance for this person. Pace yourself to get everything done.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A financial or property agreement is feasible, even if authorities do not immediately agree. Do not let an overly long meeting or talk throw your schedule out of whack.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You sense the importance of improving home or work via new methods. Build rapport with your customers or clients by offering top-notch service. Seek legal or vocational advice for a young person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Compromise on practical matters but do not sell yourself or your standards short. Escapist thinking should be avoided in favor of direct action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Favorable aspects influence contacts, trips and business transactions both today and tomorrow. You may be getting clearer signals of gains to come. Go forward on all cylinders.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Meet your obligations promptly despite distractions. Those with interest in writing or speaking must choose their words carefully. Romance rumbles, tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cooperation and compromise would be your motto now. Changing priorities can produce surprises and altered plans. Go with the flow instead of insisting on having your own way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your efforts are fruitful, producing results. A new cycle or action begins now. Clever, original speculation ventures involving members or groups are in the spotlight.

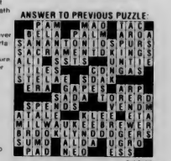
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You reach an important agreement with someone in a position of authority or with a large company or institution. Money is involved. There may be minor delays, however. Keep your energies.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

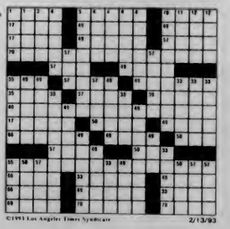
ACROSS
1 They appear in both "Cats" acts?
5 Composer of "Parade"
10 Capital of Manche
14 Tall, of old
15 Last word in many letters
16 Walked on
17 Part of SAL
18 "— Hall"
19 Word in a Mozart title
20 BIG BEER FOR THE KING
23 Opp. of NNE
24 Per —: daily
25 Much used article
28 Treaty
31 Metrolner stops
35 Partner of Zeus
37 Kind of avis
39 Turf excision
40 WYATT'S EXTRA LANCE
43 Figure of speech
44 Rotate
45 Wagner's earth goddess
46 Fry's "— of Prisoners"
48 Glut
50 Child's mess
51 Botanist Gray and others
53 Scottish explorer
55 FINEST STORIES
63 Teen's bane
64 Shira of films
65 Locus
66 Norse god
67 Upright
68 Green land
69 Long periods
70 Office furniture
71 Mardi Gras follower

DOWN
1 Pick out
2 Buffalo's cousin
3 Head the bill
4 Iceman's tool
5 Film with Vader
6 "Rule Britannia" composer
7 Chinese tree
8 Homeric epic
9 Ocular cover
10 Radiator part
11 Branch of math
12 Like Texas's otter
13 Frankfurt's river
21 Psychic's forte
Abby
22 City on the Ava
25 Fla.'s follower
26 Harkens
27 Leon of old movies
29 Berets
30 Snares
32 In the open
33 Nattierjacks
34 Sandal part
36 Packers
38 La Scala solo
41 "What thou — writs, in a book"
42 Implores
47 Walloped
49 Dine or sup
52 Gaze
54 Canvas support
55 Like George Apley
56 Resound
57 Soon or later
58 Stout and porter
59 French —, Indiana
60 Pisa's pesos
61 "— Arcadia ego"
62 Dispatched

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE



2/13/93



©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/13/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jason "Newsted" George
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Curtis
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor .... Mike "Lars" Carvalho
Production ..... Sandy "Kirk" Bogage, Michele Bakis and James Hetfield

Menu

LUNCH
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Hamburger
BASICS LUNCH
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Oatburger

DINNER
Turkey Divan
Beef Fajitas
BASICS DINNER
Turkey Divan
Greek Style Skillet

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

gymnastics

continued from page 16

hit their low point of the meet on the balance beam.

For the season, UMass has been inconsistent as a team on the beam, trying to find its best performers in the event. Last night, however, mistakes took over, and the Minutewomen suffered from the inconsistency that has plagued them all season long.

"Beam has been a problem this year, off and on, on and off. This time we were off. Hopefully next time we will be on," UMass head coach Alfie Mitchell said.

The one bright spot on the beam for the Minutewomen was senior Abby May, who continued her tremendous performances in the event by posting a 9.50.

UMass trailed by 1.15 entering the final event, the floor exercise, which is usually a very strong event for the Minutewomen. However, this night would belong to Northern Illinois, as UMass made two crucial breaks in its floor routine, allowing the Huskies to squeak away with the victory.

"Endurance is the key when it comes to floor. Tonight, we had a couple gymnasts fighting illness giving it the best they had. We fell a little short," Mitchell said.

Notes from the Mat: Despite having a subpar night, senior Tammy Marshall came away with her fifth All-Around title.

"I always focus one event at a time. It didn't go exactly how I had planned tonight, but it worked out," Marshall said.

Last night's meet was held in the Cage, not Boyden Gymnastics Center, and Mitchell said he saw an effect on his gymnasts.

"They were not used to being in here [the Cage], but they will get used to being in here," Mitchell said.

Some of the gymnasts had their opinions on how the change from their normal gym affected them.

"I like Boyden because it is more close-knit and a lot warmer. When we're in Boyden, we have an advantage," Marshall said.

"The Cage is more spaced out. I like it that way, but I just wish that more people [like in Boyden] were here," said freshman Shaheda Keels.

Be An RA

RESIDENT ASSISTANT SELECTION PROCESS for the 1993-94 Academic Year

Resident Assistants (RAs) are live-in, part-time, student-staff members. Duties include facilitation of community development, programming, referral counseling, administrative functions, enforcing University policies, and assisting with house management.

Applications are available in all Cluster Offices.

Applications are due February 22, 1993. Apply today!

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, creed, sex, sexual orientation, age, marital status, national origin, mental or physical handicap, political belief or affiliation, membership or non-membership in any organization, or veteran status, in any respect of admission or treatment of students in employment.

Associated Press College Basketball Top 25

1. Indiana	(22-2)	14. Purdue	(15-5)
2. Kentucky	(18-2)	15. UNLV	(16-3)
3. North Carolina	(20-3)	16. Seton Hall	(18-6)
4. Arizona	(17-2)	17. Pittsburgh	(15-5)
5. Michigan	(19-4)	18. Tulane	(17-4)
6. Kansas	(20-3)	19. Massachusetts	(17-4)
7. Duke	(19-4)	20. Iowa	(14-6)
8. Cincinnati	(19-2)	21. New Orleans	(17-2)
9. Florida State	(19-6)	22. Louisville	(14-6)
10. Wake Forest	(16-4)	23. Virginia	(15-5)
11. Vanderbilt	(19-4)	24. Marquette	(17-4)
12. Utah	(19-3)	25. St. John's	(14-6)
13. Arkansas	(16-5)

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT

ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS

THE BROOK AT AMHERST GIRLS

QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE

253-3834

We are together by choice.

Find out how your degree in math, science, health, agriculture, education, or engineering can be put to work overseas as a Peace Corps Volunteer by attending our next information meeting

Information Meeting

Wednesday, February 17
7:00 pm
Campus Center Room 804

Call the UMASS Peace Corps office for details 545-2105

Peace Corps
A WORLD OF OPPORTUNITY

RUSH ZETA PSI
AND LEARN ABOUT

SEX

HOSTED BY UNIVERSITY SEX EXPERT, DR. ABEL
FEBRUARY 16TH, 6:30 @ NEWMAN CENTER

OTHER EVENTS INCLUDE:

ZONE FEST WITH DP DOUGH®
FEBRUARY 17TH, 7:00 @ NEWMAN CENTER

CHIPS N' DIP NIGHT
FEBRUARY 18TH, 6:30 @ NEWMAN CENTER

FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL
549-4897
ZΨ FRATERNITY, ESTABLISHED JUNE 1,1847

women's hoop

continued from page 16

a 57 percent clip.

"That's as well as I've seen Octavia play all season," said O'Brien. "She's a special player — she works hard out there every day. But we still need someone else to step up offensively."

UMass whittled the WRam lead to 10 with 10:37 remaining in the game after Kim Gregory (11 pts, 4 rebs) canned a three-pointer, but URI responded with a Rebecca Bright (seven points) layup and some key points by Marcie Byrd and Dayna Smith to quell the UMass run.

UMass made another mini-run of their own started by two Octavia Thomas free throws. After a UMass steal, point guard Trish Hopson (seven pts) promptly banked in a three-pointer and the partisan UMass crowd was going nuts. Gregory, not to be outdone, knocked down another three and the RI lead was down to 11.

After a timeout, URI increased the lead to 12 but UMass, with some scrappy defense and clutch shooting, brought the lead down to 9 with 2:59 left in the game. But the WRams would not let the Minutewomen get any closer, as Kelsen hit some key buckets down the stretch to seal the win.

"Kelsen's a tough player," O'Brien said. "She knows how to play so she makes it easier for her teammates to score."

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

UMass freshmen Octavia Thomas (4) and Melissa Gurile (31) battle for a rebound against Rutgers earlier this year. The Minutewomen fell to URI, 76-60, on Saturday.

Sports Notice: Workshop to be held

Jim Degnim of the Daily Hampshire Gazette will be conducting a workshop for all inspired sports writers Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the offices of the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

All current Collegian sports staff writers should consider this a mandatory meeting. Correspondents and other interested writers are encouraged to attend.

Collegian Advertising Pays Big Dividends 545-3500

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 Days
8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
One Free Tanning Visit with a Haircut
(just mention this ad)
expires 2/27/93

Estudiantes de Habla Hispana
Centro de Salud Mental
Universidad de Massachusetts en Amherst

Esta ofreciendo la oportunidad de unirte a un grupo donde exploraremos nuestras relaciones con miembros de nuestras familias. Muchas veces esas relaciones no fueron funcionales y hemos desarrollado sentimientos hacia ellas.

Ven, unete a nosotros, y en un ambiente sano y confidencial convercemos.

Llama al 545-2337 y pide una cita para conocer de ti y para tu conocer la lider del grupo y lo que ella puede ofrecerte.

SKI

SPRINGBREAK 3RD ANNUAL INTERCOLLEGIATE SKI WEEKS
MT. SUTTON, CANADA
(Just across the Vermont border)
ONLY $209
Party in the Snow!
Includes:
5 Day Lift Ticket
5 Nights Lodging (Mountainside Condo)
5 Days Intercollegiate Activities
Sponsors include: Labatt's, Evian, and Molson.
Legal Age for Alcohol is 18! Group Leader Discounts
SPRINGBREAK '93
CALL SKI TRAVEL UNLIMITED
1-800-999-SKI-9

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE

CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center

PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Leadership, Friendship, Service
Rush Alpha Phi Omega
Information Meetings:
TONIGHT- 7pm Patterson TV Lounge
TOMORROW-7pm Gorman 2nd floor lounge

Sigma Delta Tau
Open Rush
Tues, Wed, Thurs, 7-9 pm
For more info call Kim 549-5388

Unitarian Universalist Young Adult Group meeting this Sunday. Contact Sean at 546-3935 for more info.

We're Back!!
Attention Wildlifers -
The Wildlife society will be holding its first meeting of '93. Job info, projects, field trips and food! Speaker to be announced date Tuesday Feb. 16 7pm room 203 Holdsworth Hall see ya there!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Chi Omega Open Rush
The fun begins Tues Feb. 16
Call Amy at 549-6219 for more details! Bring a friend!

Europe this summer? Only $189!! Jet there anytime for $189! Reported In Let's Go! And NY Times. Caribbean -- $189 rt air to somewhere sunny. California $129 one way, either way. AIRHITCH @ 212-864-2000

Mortar Board Week 2/16 - 19 on the concourse - Get write on it and help to author a UMass book to raise $ for the literacy project, raffle for $100 and other prizes, information about this senior honor society.

Open Rush
Meet the Sisters of
Alpha Chi Omega
Feb 16, 17, 18
5:30 pm
38 Nutting Ave.
Any Questions call 549-1680

Tri-Sigma Open Rush
Feb. 17 7-8 pm Campus Center 9th floor
Feb 18 & 19 Dinner at our home
5-6 pm.
Feb 22nd 7-8pm Sail away w/the Sigmas of our home.
For more info call 549-3811
387 N. Pleasant St.

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-8099
549-6073

FOR RENT

Cape Cod– Group Summer Rentals -- Waterfront Houses Falmouth area 508-477-8000

For rent
Two bed apt/$460 at 44 Mill Hollow
549-7757 (rental office)

Fridge Rental 253-9742 delivered free

1 bdrm in large apt. $350/ heat incl. 665-3615

FOR SALE

GNR tix 4 fourth row seats
Also 2 Bon Jovi Hartford
253-0813

Hard Rock Cafe T-Shirt in RUSSIAN! Made and printed in Moscow. Call LJ 585-7320

MAC 512K Computer $400 B/O
Panasonic 52 Watt Boombox Cd& Double Cassette mint Nicole 256-8311

1992 Subaru Loyale 12K like new $7500 call 256-0966 or 718-852-0774

Printer for sale 413-245-9542 after 7 ask for Don

Tanning Bed
Compact, strong bulbs
$150 call 256-4575

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action. $100/wk +. On Bus line 584-9830.

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT

Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000 - $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Postal jobs available! Many positions, great benefits. Call 1-800-436-4365 ext. p-3906

Summer jobs and internships University Directories, the nations largest publisher of campus telephone directories (including UMass at Amherst), is interviewing goal oriented students for a challenging, full-time summer position. Gain valuable experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings $3900. Expense paid training program in Chapel Hill, NC. College credit may be available. Interviews on UMass at Amherst campus February 24th. Information and interview sign up available today at the Visitors Center or call 1-800-743-5556

INSTRUCTION

Learn to Scuba dive earn two credits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday at Curry Hicks 7-10 pm 1-800-282-0977

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

Lost Ring – Reward
Totman -- Feb 1st
Friendship "LTM"
Call collect 508-827-4555

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair
Home, Auto, Pro
ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave
W. Springfield 1-781-2327

PERSONALS

Beautiful Girl with the pink shirt and brown hair at the party on North Pleasant Street ono 2/5. I had a green and blue striped rugby standing by the keg. I'd REALLY like to meet you. PLEASE REPLY

CAITLIN,
World's youngest senior and 4 year (career) bar rat finally legal.
Happy 21st Birthday!!
Love, K

Chi Omega Pledges!!
Welcome Tania, Wendy, Yarelis, Gina, Deborah, Cambria, and Rachel!!!! Get psyched for an outrageous semester!
Love , All of us in Chi Omega!

Dear Bill,
Remember Valentines Day
2 yrs ago - I do!
Hope this one is
Just as happy
I love you!
Lori

Happy 21st Birthday Denise Sadler
You'll never have to explain why there's no picture again!
Prepare to puke!
Love Hynes

I apologize to all students in section 2 for my absence from Thursday's class please drop by my office (LGRT 143sm) Today at any time (10:00-5:00) to get your homework back and have a copy of new assignments. Thank you
Hua

Jen O'Neill
Welcome to AEPHI
I'm so excited for you and a great semester!
Love,
Your Phi Friend

Jen Picarelli
Get ready for an amazing semester!
PHI love,
Your Phi Friend

Melissa L.
Get ready for you best semester ever! We'll have so much fun!!
LML
Your Phi Friend

Melissa Holloran
Welcome to Alpha Epsilon Phi!
Start looking forward to an amazing semester!
Love,
Your Phi Friend
Keep Guessing

Nicole,
Get psyched for a Phi-tastic semester!
LML
Your Phi-friend

Tiffani S.
No one could be happier
We all love you, welcome to AEPHI
Congratulations and good luck
PHI luv
Your Phi Friend

To Marisa–
Welcome to AEPHI
Get Psyched!
PHI love
Your Phi Friend

SERVICES

Resume Preparation assistance with complete resume development. Keith Anderson, Ph.D. 582-4037

Tarot Readings
Call Chris at 253-7524

SEX WITH DR. ABEL

Come down to rush at Zeta Psi
Ask any sex questions!!
Tonight at 6:30 at Newman Center

SPORTS CARDS

Sportstop cards
Mt. Farms Mall

STD STUDY

Students diagnosed with genital warts (HPV) or a curable STD wanted for a research study. $55 stipend provided for 15 minutes of your time. Confidentiality guaranteed. Call Debbie at 549-2671 ext. 181

TRAVEL

Language/Cultural programs University of Granada, Spain $2300 all inclusive one month. Airfare, tuition, diploma, room/board with family, excursions June July August September. Contact
Seven Continents
26 Clauss Ave
Paramus, NJ 07652
201-670-7047

Scuba Dive Key Largo
Spring Break, Call Project Deep
1-800-282-0977

SKI Springbreak Intercollegiate Ski Weeks, only $209. Includes: 5 DAY LIFT TICKET/5 NIGHTS LODGING (MOUNTAINSIDE CONDO) 5 DAYS INTERCOLLEGIATE ACTIVITIES (Drinking age – 18). Sponsored by Labatt's, Evian, Molsen, and Mt. SUTTON, CANADA (Just across the Vermont border). Group leader discounts. Springbreak '93. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800-999-SKI-9

Spring Break
CANCUN, NASSAU
from $299
Organize a small group for FREE trip
Call 1(800)Get Sun 1

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group/travel free! 1-800-426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

Trip for 2 to the Bahamas $222 for a couple. For details call Sarah 549-1609

Want to Travel!!
Great rates for
Cancun Jamaica
and others
Great rates
Call Jason 549-3525

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Resumes, papers, theses.
Laser printing, on campus
Pick up and delivery
Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton
Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

The WHMP-FM Game Summary

Massachusetts	29 - 39	68
G. Washington	40 - 25	65

MASSACHUSETTS (17-4, 9-1): Barbee 6-12 2-3 19, H. Williams 5-14 5-8 15, Roe 2-7 4-6 8, Kellogg 2-2 0-0 5, Malloy 2-10 0-0 4, Dingle 2-2 1-2 5, M. Williams 3-8 3-4 10, C. Robinson 1-1 0-1 2. Totals: 23-56 15-24 68.

GEORGE WASHINGTON (15-5, 5-4): Brigham 4-9 4-5 12, Holland 5-12 5-6 15, 1-4 1-3 3, Surles 7-15 0-0 17, Pearsall 1-5 2-2 4, Ford 1-4 0-0 2, Jones 3-6 0-1 6, Hammons 1-3 0-1 3, Moses 1-1 0-0 3. Totals: 24-59 12-18 65.

Three-point goals: Massachusetts 7-16 (Barbee 5-8, Kellogg 1-1, Malloy 0-5, M. Williams 1-2), George Washington 5-17 (Brigham 0-1, Surles 3-9, Pearsall 0-2, Ford 0-2, Hammons 1-2, Moses 1-1). Rebounds: Massachusetts 43 (Roe 12), George Washington 34 (Brigham 7). Assists: Massachusetts 11 (Kellogg 5), George Washington 9 (Three tied with 2). Fouled out: H. Williams. Attendance: 5,020.

Player of the Game

Mike Williams, 6-2 So. Guard

Sophomore guard Mike Williams came through with his second buzzer-beating three-pointer of the year to finish an amazing comeback and give the Minutemen the 68-65 win. Williams had only 10 points, but his improbable shot over two Colonials with :00.4 left sealed up UMass' hold on the conference regular season title.

Why UMass won

The Minutemen refused to lose. Down 16 in the first half, the team collectively picked itself up and fought back. Tony Barbee stepped up once again in the clutch, hitting two consecutive threes to cut a seven-point GW lead down to one. The Minutemen had the ball last, and they put it in Mike Williams' hands.

Atlantic 10 Standings

1. Massachusetts	9-1	17-4
2. Rhode Island	6-4	15-7
3. St. Joseph's	5-4	14-6
George Washington	5-4	16-5
Temple	5-4	10-9
6. West Virginia	5-6	12-9
7. Rutgers	4-6	11-12
8. St. Bonaventure	0-9	10-11

Catch all the Minutemen Basketball Games – Home and Away – on the New 99.3 WHMP-FM!

the New 99.3 WHMP-FM

Join us live from Rafters each Wednesday from 6-7 p.m. for the John Calipari Radio Show.

Minutemen rally stuns GW, 68-65

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The University of Massachusetts basketball team has finally come full circle, winning, or "refusing to lose," rather, in the same fashion Saturday against George Washington to extend their winning streak as they did to start it — with a Mike Williams game-winning three-point shot.

The Minutemen (17-4, 9-1 in the A-10) climbed back from a 16-point first half hole and a seven-point deficit with 2:16 remaining to defeat the Colonials 68-65 and solidify their first-place position in the A-10. UMass outscored George Washington 13-2 in the last two minutes, capped by Mike Williams 180-degree turnaround three-pointer with :00.4 seconds left to give the Minutemen the win, their 11th victory in a row.

"This is the biggest comeback I've ever had in my career here," said UMass coach John Calipari. "I wanted Mike to take the shot, he looked at me, and I said shoot it... Those are tough shots, sometimes you make them and sometimes you miss them, but Mike Williams just happens to make them."

"I've made buzzer shots my whole career, it's my favorite shot. At the end of the game, I want to take the shot," Williams said. "You have to have courage to think you can make it."

The Minutemen were down 63-55 after Dirkk Surles (17 points) drained a three-pointer with 4:35 left. It was the last shot the Colonials (15-5, 5-3 in the A-10) would hit from the field.

Harper Williams fouled out of the game after Yinka Dare faked him down low, and with the Nigerian freshman at the line looking to put GW up by 10, the game seemed to be over. Until Tony Barbee stepped up.

Barbee grabbed the rebound when Dare missed the front end of a 1-and-1, and nailed a trifecta from the top of the key while being fouled by Nimbo Hammons.

Barbee missed the free throw, but Jerome Malloy grabbed the ball from Dare and kicked the ball back to Barbee, who completed the six-point play by drilling his second trey. Suddenly, it was a 63-62 game.

"It was just a time where I had the opportunity to take those shots," Barbee, who had a game-high 19 points, said. "I had to step up with Harper out, I wanted the shot and they gave me the ball."

With 1:42 left, the sophomore Williams hit the second of two free throws to tie the game at 63, and after Vaughn Jones missed the front of a 1-and-1, and GW grabbed the rebound but turned the ball over without a shot, UMass had a chance to go ahead for the first time since they led 6-4.

Louis Roe grabbed a clutch rebound and put in a one-footer to give UMass a 65-63 lead with 23 seconds remaining, but George Washington answered when Sonni Holland nailed two foul shots to tie it 65-65 with 9.7 left in the game.

UMass didn't call a timeout, instead choosing to put the ball in Williams' hands. The guard hit a game-winner on the road against Rutgers earlier in the season, and this was the same shot, only more difficult.

"To beat UMass, you have to kill UMass, and we didn't kill them today," said GW head coach Mike Jarvis. "They made huge plays down the stretch, they deserve their notoriety and ranking.

"I'm disappointed we didn't win, but with the three-pointer, there are no safe leads in college basketball. It was a hell of a game."

A sellout of 5,200 greeted Massachusetts by screaming "overrated" from 30 minutes before through the game. The Colonials responded to the crowd by jumping ahead 10-6 and controlling the first half, even with Dare on the bench due to foul trouble. GW's biggest lead was 38-22, and the Colonials led 40-29 at the half.

"We let them back in the game, putting them in a position to make big plays," Jarvis said. "We have a mission to go to the NCAAs, and it would've been nice to beat UMass, but right now, we're not as good as they are.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Mike Williams hit a buzzer-beating three pointer to lead UMass past A-10 foe George Washington on Saturday, 68-65.

Buzzer beater puts Williams on top

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In front of a delirious and deafening Smith Center crowd, University of Massachusetts guard Mike Williams calmly brought the ball across midcourt. Nine seconds remained in regulation. George Washington had just tied the score at 65.

With Colonial guard Alvin Pearsall draped all over him, Williams faked left at the top of the 3-point arc, spun right and delivered the jump shot. A second later it hit nothing but the bottom of the net and the Smith Center crowd stood quietly in disbelief.

Williams skipped down the court taunting the crowd, which had spent the previous two hours abusing his teammates.

"Who's overrated?" he shouted, waving his arms in air. "Who's overrated?"

Not Williams and not UMass.

"No team in the country wants to give me that shot, because I'll hit it," Williams said. "I've done it so many times in high school and prep school. I've made a living off of that shot."

Williams certainly does not lack confidence, something imperative to hitting game-winning shots.

"I knew in my mind I was going to take the shot the whole time," said Williams, a Hartford, Conn. resident. "I want to take that shot. I want the ball when the game is on the line."

And UMass coach John Calipari has no problem giving the ball to Williams. Although Calipari starts each game with the steadier Derek Kellogg at point guard, in the clutch he prefers to go with the more creative Williams.

"We want Mike to take that shot," Calipari said. "We told him to shoot it during the timeout (before Sonni Holland's two free throws tied the game). Sometimes you make that shot, sometimes you don't. Mike Williams makes it."

And thus Williams hit yet another peak in his up and down career at UMass.

Last season Williams, after showing up late for a practice, found himself so deep in Calipari's doghouse, he considered transferring.

UMass, certain Williams would not return, went looking for a new point guard and offered a scholarship to Michael Lloyd, a McDonald's All-American from Baltimore's Dunbar High School. Lloyd previously wanted to come to Amherst but was not offered a scholarship because Calipari would not recruit over Williams.

By the time Calipari was ready to offer the scholarship, Lloyd, a former teammate of UMass freshman Donta Bright, had already committed to Arkansas. Williams and Calipari eventually worked out their differences behind closed doors and the sophomore returned to the program.

"Mike had a difficult freshman year but we are happy he is back with the team," Calipari said.

Which does not mean Williams does not find himself back in Calipari's doghouse from time to time. Last Thursday, in UMass' 81-69 victory over St. Joseph's, Williams was benched for poor focus and lackadaisical defensive play.

"If he's not ready to play, he won't play," Calipari said. "That's why he doesn't start. You don't know what you'll get from Mike game-to-game."

Williams said of Calipari, "He's a good coach. I wasn't ready to play on Thursday, so he didn't play me and that woke me up for today."

UMass assistant coach James "Bruiser" Flint, who sprinted the length of the court to hug Williams following his shot, said, "It hasn't always been smooth with Mike, but I tell him all the time that, if he comes to play, he can be the best guard in the league. He's a tough kid. He doesn't like to lose."

And, at least for today, the UMass coaching staff is more than happy he stuck around.

Hoop team gets dunked

Kelsen proves too much for Minutewomen

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

Going into last Saturday's game against the University of Rhode Island, University of Massachusetts women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien said her team had a very good chance to win as long as her players executed defensively and stepped up offensively.

For most of the game, UMass's defensive pressure was high, but thanks to 25 points from URI's top gun, Anne Kelsen, and three others in double figures, coupled with poor shooting by UMass, the WRams pulled out a 76-60 win front of a small but rowdy crowd in the Curry Hicks Cage.

"We really didn't play with a whole lot of guts today," O'Brien said. "We let them take it to us all day."

UMass trailed for most of the first half, getting as close as 10 points, but still trailed at the half by 12. Octavia Thomas' Herculean effort of 14 points and nine rebounds (23 pts, 14 rebs for the game) went for naught as Kelsen, with 16 points and six rebounds in the first 20 minutes, controlled the tempo of the game. The Minutewomen didn't help their cause either by shooting 30 percent (32 percent for the game) while URI scorched the nets at

Turn to WOMEN'S HOOP, page 15

Women's gym streak halted

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

In sports, all good things must come to an end. For the University of Massachusetts' women's gymnastics team, its four-meet winning streak came to a halt last night at the Curry Hicks Cage in a loss to Northern Illinois University, 185.45-184.95.

After strong performances in the first two rotations (vault and uneven bars), the Minutewomen (4-3),

Turn to GYMNASTICS, page 14

Wednesday February 17, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 79

Flurries this morning, lows in the 40s. Tonight clear and cold.

Local News:
The co-founder of the Black Panther Party details his experiences with the controversial Black power group and discusses his plans for the future. Page 3.

Sports:
Yinka Dare, George Washington's basketball superstar, threatens to give the UMass Minutemen a run for their money. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

LET IT SNOW, LET IT SNOW, LET IT SNOW — Apparently not everyone was bothered by yesterday's weather. Hannah Van Osten of Amherst plods through the snow on the UMass campus.

New economic plan to bring higher taxes

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — On the eve of addressing Congress, President Clinton tried to smooth the way Tuesday for an economic austerity plan that would impose higher taxes on families making more than $30,000 but reserve the biggest blow for Americans earning $100,000 or above.

"I think that when you see the whole program, it won't be raw pain," Clinton said. "I think most middle-class Americans, when they look at the costs plus the benefits, they're going to be much, much better off."

The stock market tumbled nearly 83 points on fear that higher taxes would short-circuit an economic revival and would not be accompanied by deep cuts in government spending.

Clinton shrugged off the drop, saying, "The people in the stock market have known in general all along what was going to be in the program and the stock market's gone up markedly since the election."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said the market was reacting to Clinton's speech Monday night. "Dropping like a rock," Dole said. "Hold on to your wallets."

The president will go before a joint session of Congress with a nationally televised speech at 9 p.m. Wednesday to explain details of his $500 billion plan of tax increases and spending cuts over four years.

The broadest impact of Clinton's tax program would be from a new tax on energy. Details of the energy tax were being withheld until Clinton's speech, but it is supposed to be based on the heat content of fuels.

There also will be an increase in the percentage of Social Security benefits subject to taxation for couples earning over $32,000 or individuals earning more than $25,000.

The plan calls for a $15 billion investment tax credit, and for $16 billion in short-term spending for job-intensive projects such as highway and bridge construction.

White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers confirmed that the administration is considering another round of increases to pay for universal health care.

Among the options are taxes on premiums collected by insurance companies, new corporate taxes and increased taxes on such items as tobacco, alcohol, guns and pollutants. White House communications director George Stephanopoulos said Clinton has not made any decisions on the proposal.

Campus drowns in dirty tissues

Virus, rumors of impending shutdown infect UMass

By CUTTER GARCIA
Collegian Staff

During the last two weeks classrooms across campus have shared one common trait — they are filled with the sounds of students and their professors coughing, wheezing, blowing and sneezing their way through classes.

Every winter the University's student population experiences some form of a cold or virus attack, but it seems that this semester's outbreak is the worst in years. So bad, in fact, that rumors of closing the University for a week due to a large proportion of the student body being affected have started to surface and circulate.

Many students seem to be complaining about this flu which is attacking the students and faculty of UMass.

A triage nurse from University Health Services, who asked not to be identified, reported that most of the students being seen in the urgent care area of Health services were flu-related cases. She said there had not been any specific lab work done, but that the symptoms being complained about pointed towards a Type B Virus.

She said the Type B Virus was "the least virulent General symptoms are, high fever, general achiness, dry cough and it usually lasts seven to 10 days. It is an upper respiratory virus which is spread by droplets. Coughing, sneezing, sharing glasses, dishes and cigarettes. These are all methods of transmission for the virus."

The nurse recommended that students whoare stricken with the virus need to stay in bed for 24 hours after your fever is down. Take between six and eight glasses of water or any kind of fluid each day along with two Tylenol tablets every four hours.

She also reported that most of the people she has seen suffer from general achiness, with symptoms like cramps and muscular discomfort. She said Advil is usually better than Tylenol for getting rid of muscle aches.

She said the most important thing was to not expose others to the virus.

"You need to stay home and in bed, it's very contagious," she said. "So I guess that would be number one on your list, not exposing other people to it."

Turn to VIRUS, page 4

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

Susan O'Connor, a senior consumer studies major, checks out the university store's selection of cold remedies to battle the current outbreak of student illness.

Gay residents find support in each other

By MELANIE DESILVA
Collegian Staff

When John lived in the Southwest Residential Area last year, he was forced out of the closet. His room was broken into. His bicycle was destroyed. Notes bearing threats and slurs littered the entrance to his room, while graffiti covered his door.

When Deven arrived on campus last fall, away from his small, conservative Connecticut town, he was anxious to begin telling people he was gay. But he did not want to do it alone. He wanted support. He wanted to feel safe.

Growing up, Elizabeth was surrounded by a network of close gay friends who shared her experiences, and offered support, acceptance, and hope. She wanted to rebuild that support system at UMass.

Differentiated by unique life experiences, yet eternally linked through struggle, the answers to the question, "Why did you decide to live on the University's only gay, lesbian, bisexual, and heterosexual ally corridor?" rang with harmony.

"It was part of my process of coming out." "It's a safe space." "For the community."

Last Sunday afternoon, seven members of the GLB corridor, called the Two in Twenty, sat together on the carpeted floor of their residential assistant's room to share stories and dispel the myths and misinformation about where they live.

Within days of the corridor's official announcement last semester, many students expressed their irritation at what they saw as the administrative sanctioning of same-sex, same-room romantic relationships.

Yet, clearly, according to residents, the corridor is not about sex. It is about living one's life in safety, encircled by mutual support.

"Being around other overt GLB students reaffirms that there is nothing wrong with being the way you are," Deven Demarco said.

"It's easier to have a bunch of people with a common interest watching out for each other, rather than having people dispersed, defenseless, and alone," Valerie Brown said.

Turn to SUPPORT, page 2

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

This space for rent.
Collegian advertising.
545-3500
It works.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, February 17

Photography Contest — LSSE is holding an amateur Winter Photography Contest. Photos must be unmatted, black and white, and 8 x 10. The theme is winter. Pictures may be submitted now through March 5th. For more info, contact Debbie or Laura at 256-4065.

Thursday, February 18

Comedy — Auditions for a new comedy improv troupe. UMass Fine Arts Center Room 201 at 8 p.m. For more info, call Ross at 584-7278.

Saturday, February 20

Volleyball — The Pioneer Valley Habitat for Humanity presents the third annual benefit volleyball day from 10 a.m. - 5:30 p.m. at Ainsworth Gym, Smith College. The entry fee is $150 per team. For more info, call Nancy at 584-4974 or Sharon at 585-0079.

Snow, ice shuts down campus

Snow, freezing rain, and generally nasty weather caused the University of Massachusetts campus to be shut down completely last night, with all evening classes being cancelled, academic buildings being locked up, and the library closing at 9 p.m.

The Division of Continuing Education had cancelled its night courses earlier in the day, and various campus activities had also been postponed, but reports from highway department officials in surrounding towns finally caused Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page to make the call to close everything down.

"The situation on campus wasn't all that bad, but highway crews in other towns said they were having a really tough time keeping up with the road conditions. We decided it would be safer for everyone just to close the campus at 5 o'clock," Page said.

The last time the University's schedule was affected by bad weather was two years ago, when a snowstorm caused a two-hour delay in opening.

— MICHAEL WEBBER

■ support

continued from page 1

"There are so many issues that we deal with that people in the heterosexual world can't identify with," Elizabeth Waller added.

Members think it is absurd that the corridor would be perceived as a haven for flourishing sexual relationships, instead of what it really is — a base of support and friendship. As the corridor's resident assistant said about such misunderstanding, "Obviously, that is not the case."

Roommates Chris and Deven said they decided to live together because they "got along so well. We're just friends."

Yet, in defending the corridor, members of the community were not reluctant to talk about the only romantically involved couple on the hall.

The majority sentiment was clear — the existence of one couple should not define the floor and should not seem shocking at a university where gay and straight couples often circumvent the intentions of the system by occupying the same room.

"There were two heterosexual couples on the floor I lived on in Orchard Hill," Deven said, explaining a situation in which two women requested a room across the hall from their boyfriends and made a switch.

"If Deven and I were a couple, which we are not, we could have gone any where on campus to be roommates, but that's not what this floor is about," Chris Savastano said.

Last fall, Rebecca Tate, a heterosexual ally, arrived at UMass with an open mind and a strong, secure personality. As a freshman she was excited to have been assigned a room adjacent to the short hall where the GLB students and their allies lived.

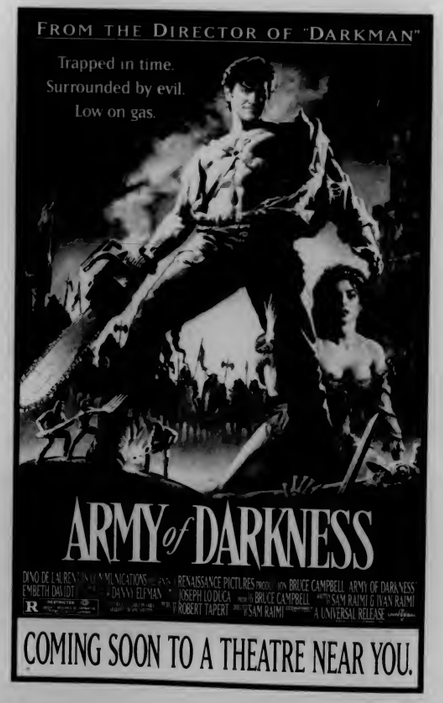
Soon, however, her excitement was compounded by a need to dispel misunderstandings and homophobia among floor members who were not involved in the GLB corridor.

"I was excited because I thought maybe I could help some of the women on the long side of the floor understand and not be afraid. I serve an educational role," Rebecca said.

Questions arose, which needed to be answered by any heterosexual ally willing to be patient — "Is it OK to shake hands with them?" "Is it OK to drink out of the same water fountain?" "Is it safe to sit on the same toilet seat?"

"I'm stressing the importance of allies as liasons for people who are too afraid," the resident assistant said.

"I just want to live my life," Valerie concluded.



Local News

New program aids students with judiciary

By JOHN WINCHELL
Collegian Staff

A new Judicial Advisors Program designed by Student Attorney General Dina Raimo and the Dean of Students Office to educate students about the UMass judicial procedure may help students through the often confusing University judicial system.

"People aren't aware of their rights and become overwhelmed by the system. We try to provide information about the process to make it less stressful," Raimo said.

Student advisors, thoroughly trained in all aspects of the judicial procedure, can answer questions or help you prepare the strongest case possible.

"Our advisors know the UMass judicial system inside and out. They are also trained in both questioning and listening skills," says Raimo.

They can also act as silent advisors during actual proceedings, helping individuals do everything; from asking pertinent questions to formulating effective arguments and closing statements, all under pressure.

Raimo concedes that the system is intimidating to some people.

"It's a lot easier to get advice from someone more familiar with the system," she said.

Raimo stressed the importance of contacting the Student Attorney General Office as soon as possible with your case.

"The more time we have to help you, the better prepared you will be," she said.

The Student Attorney General's Office is located on the third floor of the Student Union in Room 432, and is open Monday through Friday. If you have any questions, stop in and talk to an advisor, you'll be glad you did.

Co-founder of Black Panthers praises '60s as a profound era

By MARTIN JONES
Collegian Staff

"The 1960s was a profound era," Bobby Seale, co-Founder of the Black Panther Party, told a Mount Holyoke College audience Monday night.

More than 350 students filled the Abbey Memorial Chapel to see Seale, who was invited to speak during Black History Month along with Elridge Cleaver, another member of the Black Panthers. Cleaver was unable to appear due to illness.

Bobby Seale, along with the late Huey P. Newton, co-founded the Black Panther Party in 1965 following the assassination of Malcolm X. The organization, based in Oakland, Calif., functioned as a grassroots organization and engaged in numerous activities, ranging from community breakfast programs to armed patrols of police activities.

"People today think we were hoodlums," said Seale. "We were not hoodlums. We believed in self-defense."

The Black Panthers became widely known for publicly arming themselves and patrolling the community to monitor the police. Seale said this was intended to "capture the imagination of the of the Black people."

"We were so legal, it was a crying shame," said Seale, referring to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling which allowed the armed patrols.

A central goal of the Black Panther Party was to create a Black political electorate that would build coalitions with local Chicano communities and White leftists in order to gain control of the Oakland city government. In 1973, Bobby Seale ran a strong, yet unsuccessful, bid for mayor.

Seale said he first became politically active as a college student at Mary College. It was upon reading about Black history and learning the truth about his own heritage that old stereotypes began to break down.

"We were told that Africa was dark, that Africans were savage," said Seale.

Seale was also pushed in the direction of activism by the words of social activist Dick Gregory who talked about the The Civil Rights Movement in the South.

Seale described himself as a "humanist," advocating for the liberation of all of humanity.

"There's nothing wrong with being a people's kind of revolutionary humanist," said Seale. "We have to change the political activity that perpetuates racism."

Today, Seale is the director of Advocates Scene Inc., a non-profit, community organizing network in Washington, D.C.

Seale has also written a documentary book on the history of the Black Panther Party, titled, Seize the Time. During the lecture, he stated his intention to eventually write a screenplay of the book for a film production.

"I'm still a political revolutionary," Seale said. "You've got your work cut out for you, and I've got my work cut out for me too, because I'm going to keep on going."

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Bobby Seale, co-founder of the Black Panther Party, spoke at Mount Holyoke College Monday night.

AIDS lecturer to speak on 'dangerous' safe sex

By DIANA DAVANZO
Collegian Staff

Students need to have access to available information about AIDS to make informed choices, according to a professional lecturer scheduled to speak at the University next week.

John Harris has traveled and lectured on the AIDS epidemic to junior high, high school and college students part-time for the past 19 years and full-time for the past six years.

Harris explained in an interview that he speaks about AIDS because he feels "students need to have accurate and updated information to make the best choices in life."

Harris went on to say, "I don't think students are getting the full picture on the whole epidemic."

Harris said he feels the safe-sex message the media is presenting is not reliable and there is much information that points to condoms as a dangerously unreliable means of protection.

Harris pointed to Malaya as an example of how dangerous condom use can be. Harris pointed to statistics showing that in 1990 3 percent of the nation's young people were infected. A massive condom campaign was launched. A year later, Harris said, "infection rose from 3 percent to 42 percent."

Harris said the sources of his information range from the Center for Disease Control to the Military Research Institute to various other medical journals and researchers.

When asked why he felt students were being shortchanged, Harris responded that "AIDS is the most political disease in all of history."

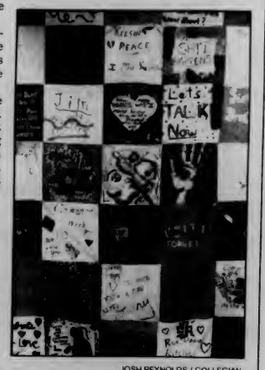
Another factor, he said is, when it comes to AIDS, "the belief is, you can't change behavior" and that society contradicts itself because "it doesn't take that attitude with racism and bigotry. Instead of calling students to the highest moral good, they are called to the lowest common denominator."

Harris said he has had to attend over 133 funerals as the result of AIDS. The last funeral was for a 17-year-old girl in California. This past week, Harris said he lost another friend to the disease.

The response to Harris' lectures range anywhere from standing ovations to "intense questions," he said.

Harris said he feels that a general myth concerning the disease is that students feel "it won't happen to me — it's someone else's problem."

Harris will be speaking in the Student Union Ballroom on Tuesday, Feb. 23 and Wednesday, Feb. 24, at 7 p.m. The Campus Crusade for Christ and Alliance Christian Fellowship are sponsoring the event.



JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
A section from a local quilt project titled "Beyond the Names," designed to promote awareness about the AIDS crisis.

Candidates put on spot

Group grills Amherst office seekers

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

A weekly questionnaire from an Amherst citizens' group has pressured candidates for town offices into answering some sticky questions, but at the same time has drawn mixed responses about its value to the campaign.

The group, calling itself Amherst Citizen's Enquiry, has been sending out a set of questions to candidates for Select Board and School Committee each week prior to the upcoming town election. The candidates are asked to respond in 100 words or less, and their answers are distributed in flyers and sent to the local media.

Harry Brooks, one of the organizers, said the questionnaire has been useful in making the campaign more "issue-oriented."

"I think this has been very successful. We were hoping this would be a good way to get [the candidates'] viewpoints out, and it has been," he said.

Some candidates, however, feel the questions lack objectivity, have an "accusatory" tone and do not make a serious contribution to the campaign.

"[The questionnaire] serves a purpose, but I don't think an ad-hoc citizens' group is the correct medium to do the questioning," said Hill Boss, a candidate for Select Board. "The group has a narrow agenda, and the questions reflect that."

Past questions have included, "Should the town challenge the state Department of Education findings that there is discrimination in the schools in grouping and discipline practices?," "Should town government employees making over $45,000 a year be asked to take a 10 percent pay cut?," and "Do you support a Proposition 2 1/2 override?"

Carolyn Holstein, also a candidate for Select Board, said of the group, "One needs to give them the courtesy of participating, but it would be nice if they gave back the courtesy of asking more objective questions. It's a lot of work for everyone, and with these questions I'm not sure it's necessary."

All of the candidates contacted also said they felt "pressured" to respond to the questions so their names did not appear in the flyers next to an accusatory "did not respond."

"We're trapped. We've got to go along with it," said Boss.

Other candidates, however, said they felt the group was making a positive contribution to the campaign by giving voters specific information about the candidates' positions on a number of important issues.

"The questions have been extremely fair," said Edith Lewark, who is running for Select Board. "They're questions that needed to be asked. It's a good way to separate those who are really serious about town government from those who just have a loud voice and the backing of the machine."

Larry Kelley, another Select Board candidate, said "I think it's great. With those questions as pointed as they are it puts everyone on the spot. . . people are entitled to know [the candidates' positions]."

Brooks said candidates' responses are printed verbatim, with no corrections for spelling or grammar. Answers are cut off at 100 words. He said the group does not endorse any candidate.

Questions are chosen by consensus of the members of the group, who volunteer their services. Expenses for printing the approximately 2,500 weekly flyers are covered by private contributions, Brooks said.

The town election is scheduled for Feb. 23.

■ virus

continued from page 1

The unnamed source also reported that there seemed to be a lot of staff members out with the virus.

Along with the virus, there has been the outbreak of a rumor that the University might be shutting down because of its effects on the student population. One of the most popular rumors is that 48 percent of the student population has reported to Health Services complaining of the Flu and that if the level reaches 50 percent, the University will be classified as "Epidemic" and will be shut down for a week.

According to the rumor Fitchburg State College suffered the same fate and closed for a week.

A clerk at FSC Health Services reported that no such activity had taken place.

UMass public health nurse A.J. Lardner told the Collegian that these rumors were absolutely false. When asked if there was a policy which would call for the closing down of the school she said, "There is no standard policy for that. If it were a problem concerning public safety then it would be dealt with specifically. But there is no truth to that rumor."

Regardless of the fact that there seems to be no imminent public danger, students everywhere are feeling the wrath of the virus. Matthew Griffing, a senior philosophy major, said he had been sick about a week.

"Every day it was something different. First I couldn't breath. Then it was a cough. Then a sore throat, stuffy head. Runny eyes, sneezing — the whole shebang," Griffing said.

Matt Vautour, a freshman journalism major, said "I've been very congested. I've had a fever on and off and it's been giving me a stomach ache."

Mike Nelson, a senior marketing major said he had been sick about a week now.

"Sore throat, sinus condition. I've taken everything and still haven't gotten better," Nelson said. "Sudafed, cough syrup. I've been sleeping a lot and still I haven't gotten better."

Many more students interviewed said they all shared the same common traits of misery, discomfort and wretchedness. The one factor that most commonly united all those interviewed was that they had all been sick approximately one week and were beginning to recover — slowly.

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Boxercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

ALL BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
QUARTER POUNDERS
BURGERS • HOT DOGS
FRIES • ONION RINGS
PHILLY CHEESE STKS
SHAKES • FLOATS
VICTORY GRILL
ROUTE 9 HADLEY 585-0241
ONE MILE WEST OF THE HAMPSHIRE MALL

haircuts always $10
Bucci
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256 0733

University of Massachusetts – Housing Services
1993 Women's Conference:

EmPOWERing WOMEN
Prospects & Challenges for the 21st Century

Keynote Speaker: ANGELA DAVIS, author, activist, academic

Topics for the afternoon session: Women as Activists & Leaders, Women and AIDS, The Economy and Women, Women from Developing Nations, Women of Color: a Cross-Cultural Perspective, Media and Women, Violence Against Women, Women in Traditionally Male Dominated Professions, and Women and Their Relationships

Register Today!!! Space is limited, so registration is required – $3.00 donation is requested. Register Right Now!!! You can call 545-0917 or register in person at our table in the Campus Center concourse. REGISTRATION ENDS ON FRIDAY!!!

Sponsored by: NOMMO News, Black Student Union, African Student Union, African Students Association, ALAANA R.A. Matters, Anti-Racism Coalition, Forum on Developing Nations, AHORA, Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Alliance, Korean Students Association, Cape Verdean Student Alliance, Office of Third World Affairs, Graduate Student Senate, Black Mass Communication Project, Graduate Employees Organization, Valley Women's Voice, Southwest Area Government, Student Government Services/Residential Education, Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board, Office of the Chancellor, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs - Dean of Students Office, Office of Human Relations, Society of Women Engineers.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Hostility, name-calling won't slow the spread of AIDS

"Instead of spreading out to the broad American population . . . HIV is concentrating in pools of persons who are also caught in the 'synergism of plagues': poverty, poor health and lack of health care, inadequate education, joblessness, hopelessness and social disintegration converged to ravage personal and social life." — National Research Council, in a report for the National Academy of Science, released earlier this month.

To date, 5,200 people in Massachusetts have been diagnosed as HIV-positive. Many are still alive; some of them have already died of AIDS. Twenty percent, or 1,040, of these people — or were — just in their 20s when diagnosed.

The state Department of Public Health doesn't know how many teenagers could be infected with the virus. An incubation period as long as 8-10 years and a population relatively untested for the virus result in a big question mark. The increasing incidence of AIDS in this group demands a response. Enter the conservatives.

Focus on the Family, a Colorado-based organization whose pamphlets appeared on campus' last week, know how to eliminate the problem of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases among young adults: abstinence. They're right. But they have a twisted view of reality.

They wholly condemn educating teens about condoms: it sends the message that "safe sex is achievable," that sex is "a good thing" and that "responsible adults expect them to do it."

Darienne HOSLEY

They're out of touch: very few educators claim that "safe sex" exists. Rather, they teach "safer sex" while emphasizing that the only way to be free of risk is to not have sex.

Focus on the Family believes teens will heed the call to abstinence when sounded by parents and TV specials, at the same time citing data from Planned Parenthood that shows "the number one reason teenagers engage in intercourse is peer pressure."

Young adults won't use condoms because "the nature of human beings and the passion of the act simply don't lend themselves to a disciplined response in young romantics." If you don't believe a young couple will be in enough control to use protection, do you really think they'll refrain from sex altogether? Come on.

The group also contends that many organization who offer counseling "reflect the homosexual agenda, which includes recruitment of the young and vigorous promotion of a teen's right to sexual expression." Sounds a bit paranoid. Right now, I think the homosexual community is more interested in gaining respect and tolerance and fighting AIDS than "recruitment."

Newspapers occasionally run letters from people who believe AIDS is God's revenge on the great unwashed: it's their fault for sharing needles, for not being monogamous, for sleeping with someone whose sexual past they didn't know about, for being gay.

What about those infected through tainted blood transfusions, HIV-positive mothers, accidental contact with contaminated blood?

The city of Edinburgh, Scotland, reported 120 new cases a year of HIV infection through contaminated needles. Last year, only eight were recorded. They've begun a program of "harm reduction" by giving, on demand, oral prescriptions for pharmaceuticals to reduce needles use and consequently the spread of AIDS.

It's a controversial tactic, true, but it is working. The city may be gaining a few drug addicts, but it has sharply decreased the magnitude of AIDS among part of the population. It's step one of a long, long program.

Fighting AIDS demands that we change our thinking; if we continue to keep sexuality taboo and label AIDS sufferers deserving victims, we can't win.

Darienne Hosley is a Collegian columnist.

The allure of escapism

". . . then it is an adiabatic change. A rapid expansion. ."

Twenty minutes to go. I do this every class, just sit here for the last half hour looking up at the clock. It seems so incredibly routine that it's scary, three days a week for 16 weeks looking at the clock and waiting anxiously so I can get out of class. It's scary because each of those days it feels like I've got something important I should be doing after class, and then I end up hanging around at the Campus Center for an hour, watching people go by. I wonder if students at Amherst feel like this.

Nathan CRICK

I wish I could just get out of here sometimes. Take a few friends and drive up to Montreal for a week and spend my time in crowded taverns drinking Irish coffee with people who can speak French. That would be so cool, a dark smoky bar with a folk band playing and people singing drinking songs with complete strangers. Maybe I could just ask the girl in my poli-sci class and we'd run off together. To hell with the guys.

". . . graph of temperature versus volume demonstrates. . ."

I hate these chairs, they kill my back. They're almost as bad as the chairs in Morrill. You can really tell sometimes that this University is scraping the barrel. I can hardly find a class where you can get into discussions anymore. What's the good of a course when all you do is sit and listen to some pretentious professor spout their opinion on every subject? I might as well rent a videotape. Cindy Crawford's anthropology workout.

Then again, I kind of like this campus. There's something unique about being able to sit and read the paper in the Cape Cod lounge next to people sleeping peacefully on the couches while a group of students across from you talk about the future with Bill Clinton. When I leave here I think it'll be things like that which I'll miss. You can keep the keg parties and the lecture halls, just give me a place to relax and shoot the breeze with random college students on cheap couches.

". . . not to be mislead as to the definition of heat."

I went up to buy a pumpkin in the tiny hill town next to mine. It seemed way up in the middle of nowhere, but when I told him I went to UMass he jokingly asked if we were "giving the campus over to the Blacks." I didn't know whether to yell at him or defend the students or what. Everywhere I go that's all people seem to say when I tell them I go here, and it really gets on my nerves after a while. It is as if this is the only place on earth where there are racial tensions. I just want to shake them violently to get them to break into reality.

It's weird though. Sometimes I feel like I should be educating people who have been living here 20 years longer than I have even existed. I remember being here as a freshman and being swamped with all the rallies and protests and intellectual speakers, and thinking I have been enlightened beyond the bounds of the ignorant population of the whole United States. Like I was now superior in moral and political thought than the poor souls who worked in the treadmill of that Real World. I was just a high school kid one year older, what did I know except the great truths that people revealed to me from the protester's podium. Now I don't know who should be educating who, if at all.

". . .the ideal gas law does not apply to all. . ."

Two more minutes. I can already hear people putting all their stuff away. Everybody's in a hurry to get away. Maybe today I'll just sit here and relax for a couple of minutes and wait for the crowd to scramble out the exit door. Maybe I'll draw out a plan to go to Montreal, up through Maine with a stop over at Concord. Oh yeah, I have to go home this weekend and see my grandmother. Eighty-two years old. And we think we know it all. Well, Montreal will have to wait. Now I gotta go kill time for another hour.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Keg licensing is discriminatory

Like many of you, I had no idea that when I came to UMass I would have to forfeit many of the rights I would have possessed as a "normal" citizen. It begins with the dormitory with regulations on what we can drink, what we can eat, and who can visit us.

When I chose to move off campus my senior year, I assumed that many of these restrictions would no longer affect my life — but I was wrong. It is no longer the University that is regulating my life, but rather it is the Amherst Police Department.

As responsible members of our community, my housemates and I chose to obey the law and apply for a keg license. We were not planning one of those huge bashes to make money for our rent. We simply wanted to invite a few friends over to our house.

We were met with blatant discrimination, based on the previous residents of our house, who we are not acquainted with at all. In fact, if we have brought anything to this neighborhood, it has been a welcome relief to the constant noise and partying of its former residents. We can have a license, but with the condition that if we have one noise complaint, we are all arrested on the spot, without warning. Sounds fair.

This law is being enforced arbitrarily, with no specific guidelines. It is left to the discretion, or discrimination, of a single person, and that is not right. Do you think a parent who applies for a keg permit for, say, a family reunion is met with the same attitude as the student planning a party? I doubt it.

At UMass, we pride ourselves on taking up causes, fighting discrimination and promoting equal rights. Why have we abandoned the fight for our collective rights not only as students but as American citizens? Amherst is not a "police state," although it is gradually becoming such, while our attention is diverted to other issues. A keg law may not seem important to many but the point is that it is a symptom of a more pervasive problem. It has become legalized discrimination, and that is a dangerous precedent to set. It seems to me to be an unconstitutional restriction on the citizens.

As college students, we do not forfeit our rights as adult American citizens. Let's reclaim our collective voice and stand up for our rights!

Jennifer Springer
Amherst

A very narrow view of the world

I am a graduate student, getting my Ph.D. in resource economics. It's not easy. I have to work hard, writing my dissertation, being a wife and mother, and working weekends at Hunan Garden Chinese Restaurant. Until recently, that is.

While waitressing last Sunday night, I served four of you. You are UMass undergraduates, getting a larger view of the world, learning how to manage your time, your studies and your money. You ordered about $30 worth of food. I treated you well, did not delay, poured extra water, brought your order promptly. When you got your check, you arranged your money carefully on the table with the bill, and walked past me, saying all the money was left on the table. Trained to smile for customers, I smiled and nodded.

My doubt froze into certainty when, seconds later, I checked the table to find four dollar bills over the edge of a $20 coupon, made to look like counterfeit money, from a local hardware store. I ran out to find you, but you had vanished.

According to the restaurant policy, I then bought your supper by working the rest of the night for $1 or $2 tips on $15-30 tabs. The evening I had planned to spend helping my daughter with her homework went in on your meal. The income from that evening's work was meant for my daughter's swimming and ballet lessons. I didn't get home 'til late and my daughter cried because she didn't know what to do by herself. You probably did not realize that somebody would have personal consequences for your deception.

I often realize that I am not being treated as a full person when working as a waitress. You see my Oriental features and say things like, "You can leave really low tips at this place!" You never hear me talk back to you, but you see me as "one of those Chinese girls" you can look at any way you like, who will always be polite, even if you are rude.

You remind me of the saying "he's like a frog sitting at the bottom of a well, looking at the sky." You imagine that what you have seen of the world is all that matters. The world is so much larger! Get out of your well, and see the real extent of the sky! People who are here from other countries, who are working to get an education and a broadening life experience, are watching you. Can you imagine what you are saying by walking out on a restaurant bill or leaving a miniscule tip or bragging within earshot of your waitress about the lowest tip you ever left?

You are showing me how American undergraduates act and think. I am showing you how Chinese graduates act and think. I am a real person, treating you as well I as I know how to. You are treating me as if you are not a real person at all.

I paid for your meal. I pay for your discrimination. You pay in loss of education and loss of respect, leaving a wake of hurt that may spill over onto others who come after you year after year. I quit the job. No little frog with a small view is worth the tears of my daughter and the long nights for pennies. Get out of the well,. the view isn't that good, anyway.

Fang Du
Dept. of Resource Economics

Debate over gays misses the point

Should open gays and lesbians be allowed into the military? So far we've heard arguments centering on "discipline," "cohesion" and "trust." Does anyone else see people, including the Clinton administration, missing the point?

Gays and lesbians should be allowed into military service, but behind their made-up problems are true, practical problems no one wants to address.

If soldiers have a problem with sharing close quarters, which could include sleeping and bathing facilities, with people who may find them sexually attractive, that is a valid complaint.

Let's take the political issue of gay rights out of the picture for a minute and picture an all-female troop. If a man were accidentally assigned to their troop, there is no doubt that at least some of the women would object to his presence. Even the most accepting, man in the world might feel the same with an openly gay man in his troop.

The military has historically been a breeding ground for homophobia, as the "discipline" and "trust" arguments have shown. Those who mistrust and would create a disciplinary problem in this case are probably the homophobes, not their gay comrades. They should be punished and educated, two things the military claims to excel in. Discrimination should not be an excuse to exclude an entire group.

In this way, gays wanting to serve is the same as Blacks wanting that right in 1948. In both cases, ignorance and fear stood in the way of acceptance. But today's struggle runs deeper and many are ignoring that.

Julia Richardson
Amherst

Arts & Living

Metallica roars into the Mullins Center

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Staff

Metallica
Mullins Center
Feb. 15, 1993

With all the subtlety and all the aural and visual impact of two gasoline tanker trucks colliding at 70 MPH and exploding, Metallica slammed through a three-hour show of new and old material before a Mullins Center full of appreciative, black T-shirt and leather-clad fans Monday night.

Metallica balanced newer material with some real gems from the mid-'80s, when they sold millions of copies of titles like Ride the Lightning and Master of Puppets with zero mainstream airplay. This illustrated Metallica's evolution from high-speed thrash and Gothic-sounding metal to its current incarnation, which features slower time signatures with no loss of power.

A heavy metal band is judged on three levels: how well they play, how well they utilize the sheer sonic power at their disposal and how well they work with the crowd. Metallica racked up high scores on all three counts.

The "heavy" in heavy metal comes from the rhythm section and drummer Lars Ulrich and bassist Jason Newsted did not disappoint. Ulrich essentially attacked his drums, accenting snare hits with cymbal crashes and rumbling through thunderous fills. He stood out as an instrumentalist the way the late Keith Moon of The Who once did.

Ulrich kept thrash numbers such as

Turn to METALLICA, page 8

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

James Hetfield of Metallica

Rockin' crowd was ready for anything

The line to see Metalica and the crowd inside was not a University of Massachusetts breed but consisted mostly of Metallica fans from another place.

I asked the person in front of me why they would not want aerosol cans in a Metallica concert. He said "Welp. If you happen to have an m-80 and a flame thrower with an aerosol can it can be pretty dangerous."

Most of the people on line didn't seem to be admiring the incredible Mullins center which looks like it belongs in Disney World's latest resort. Instead they were doing a customary scream, and cursing at anything and everything.

The voice message also said, "This evening's performance, Metallica..." with a Masterpiece Theatre accent. Someone replied, "This Evening's performance? More like a F!@#$& crash in!"

An interesting observation about the show may be the surprising amount of male voice participation. When the singer asked the crowd to sing I looked to the left and the right and noticed that most everyone was singing almost in key and in unity.

A person who did body searches at the door said "I found a knife, a bong, and some alcohol on some of the entrants." The body search was done by women for women and men for men.

The Mullins Center staff did an excellent job keeping security and calm. From where I was sitting I saw three or four people escorted out by police officers.

— ADAM RATTINER

TONIGHT
Now Playing
SETTIE
Every Wednesday
9:30 PM til 1 AM
• First 100 People - No Cover •
THE 25 YEARS PUB
CELEBRATES 1968 • 1993 IN·AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

Je n'ai pas de goût, je crois, pour l'héroïsme et la sainteté. Ce qui m'intéresse, c'est d'être un homme.

I have no taste, I think, for heroism and sainthood. What interests me is to be a man.
Albert Camus (1913-1960)

SEMESTER OR YEAR ABROAD
The American University of Paris is a four-year liberal arts college in Paris welcoming visiting students.
Majors in: Art History, Comparative Literature, Computer Science, European Studies, French Studies, International Affairs, International Business Administration, International Economics, and Fine Arts at Parsons School of Design.
Two programs especially designed for visiting students:
The Institute for French Studies in Paris (IFSP) offers students with strong French language proficiency the chance to combine their studies at AUP with courses at the Institut d'Etudes Sociales, Institut National des Langues et Civilisations Orientales, Université de Paris IV–Sorbonne, and Institut d'Etudes Politiques ('Sciences-Po').

The Program in European Affairs (PEA) allows students to select Europe-focused courses from three of our majors and to integrate them through an on-going seminar. Year-long students may qualify for international affairs internships in their second semester.
• 1000 students from 70 different countries.
• 40% U.S. citizens, 14% French.
• In 1991-92, 12% visiting students.
• Housing is guaranteed.
Full college credit summer courses:
• Three-week French immersion.
• Six-week regular summer session.

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF PARIS
établissement d'enseignement supérieur privé
31, avenue Bosquet 75007 Paris, France
Accredited by the Middle States Association of Schools and Colleges

Please send me more information on study abroad opportunities at The American University of Paris
Name Mr./Ms. _____ please print in ink
Mailing address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____ Telephone ( ) _____
Name of college/university you currently attend _____
I may be interested in applying for entry in Fall 19__ Spring 19__ Summer 19__
I am a: ☐Freshman ☐Sophomore ☐Junior ☐Senior
My primary academic interest/program: _____
Please send to: United States Office, The American University of Paris
80 East 11th Street, Suite 434 New York, NY 10003-6000
Tel. (212) 677-4870 Fax. (212) 475-5205

Vision Showcase
★ EYEGLASSES ★
★ CONTACT LENSES ★
★ EYE EXAMINATION ★
584-8324
Hampshire Mall, Hadley

Eye Examination performed by
Dr. Robert E. Delaney
Independent Doctor of Optometry
Eyeglass & Exam $99.00 Complete
Price Includes
Frames from our special selection, 1st & 2nd division clear single vision uncoated plastic lenses, and, a standard Eye Examination.
Please present this coupon at time of purchase.
Offer expires 3/31/93 & precludes previous offers. College I.D. required.

Multicultural Affairs

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Agents of repression — the FBI COINTELPRO

Editors Note: This is the first of a two-part series about counter-intelligence programs against the Black Panther Party and the American Indian Movement. This series is dedicated to all those who fought and continue to fight for the liberation of people of color. For those of you who do not fight at all, hopefully this will encourage you to re-examine your history and interpret it as more than just a footnote.

Most history texts in the United States give some information regarding the Civil Rights Movement, but they often fail to mention the role of alternative ideologies and parties espousing Black liberation.

During the 1960s, revolutionary upsurges erupted all over the world. In France, Japan and elsewhere, there were demonstrations in the streets by students and workers. The Cultural Revolution was started in China in 1966. It inspired people world-over. Though flawed, it represented the greatest effort yet, in history, to transform the superstructure of a society, for it demonstrated that class struggle continues even under socialism. The text of the first stage of the Cultural Revolution was the Red Book. This book contained the thoughts of Mao Tse Tung — substituting his quotes in place of full texts of Marxist theory. The book was read worldwide.

In the United States, the Red Book was taken up by militant Black activists, some of whom later formed the Black Panther Party in northern California. In 1966, Mao reiterated his earlier recognition of the importance of the Black liberation movement in the worldwide struggle against imperialism and lent his support:

Shyamala
IVATURY

"The African-American struggle is not only a struggle waged by the exploited and the oppressed Black people for freedom and emancipation, it is also a new clarion call to all the exploited and oppressed people of the United States to fight against the barbarous rule of the monopoly capitalist class. It is a tremendous support and inspiration to the struggle of the people throughout the world against U.S. imperialism and to the struggle of the Vietnamese people against U.S. imperialism. On behalf of the Chinese people, I hereby express resolute support for the just struggle of the Black people in the United States."

In 1966, an organization of militant young Blacks appeared on the West Coast. Borrowing the emblem of a Black political party in Lowandes County, Ala., they called themselves the Black Panther Party for "self-defense." They choose the symbol of the "panther" because they thought it was not an aggressive animal, but one that fiercely defended itself when cornered.

The initial purpose of the Black Panthers was to defend the Black people in the Oakland, Calif. ghetto area. They started as an armed group of Blacks, exercising their constitutional right to witness police arrests, in Black neighborhoods. They were trying to prevent police brutality against Black people.

Huey Newton and Bobby Seale were the co-founders of the Black Panther Party and architects of its 10-point program. The party attracted a large number of young Blacks because of its uncompromising stance on racial liberation and its affirmation of Black strength and Black pride. Within a few years, the Black Panther Party grew to over 5,000 members. They successfully made coalitions with Black and White groups all over the country, despite differing ideologies.

The following is the platform program of the BPP drawn up on October of 1966. It is based upon the theory of self-determination, typical of the nationalists, and contain specific criticisms of policies that have led to the oppression of Black people.

• We want freedom. We want the power to determine the destiny of our Black Community.

• We want full employment for our people. (They felt that the federal government was responsible and obliged to give every individual employment or a guaranteed income. They felt that if the White American businesses would not give them employment, then the means of production should be taken from the businessman and placed in the community so that the community could organize and employ all of its people — providing a better standard of living.)

• We want an end to the robbery by the White man of our Black Community. (They believed that the U.S. government had robbed Black people and now they were demanding the overdue debt of 40 acres and a mule. Forty acres and a mule was promised over 100 years ago as restitution for slave labor and mass murder of Black people. The BPP said it would accept the payment in currency which would be distributed within the Black community; just as the German state aided Israel for its part in the genocide of over 6 million Jews. The BPP felt that since racist America had slaughtered over 50 million Black people, their demand was modest.)

• We want decent housing, fit for the shelter of human beings.

• We want education for our people that espouses the true nature of decadent American society. We want education that teaches us our true history and our role in the present day society. (The BPP believed in an educational system that would give Black people a knowledge of self. They felt that unless individuals had a knowledge of him/herself and his/her position in society and the world, they would not be able to relate to society.)

• We want all Black men to be exempt from military service. (They believed that Black people should not be forced to fight in the United States military to defend a racist government that did not protect them. The BPP did not believe in fighting and killing other people of color in the world who like Black people were being victimized by the U.S. government.)

• We want an immediate end to POLICE BRUTALITY and MURDER of Black people.

• We want freedom for all Black men held in federal, state, county, and city prisons and jails.

• We want all Black people when brought to trial to be tried in court by a jury of their peer group or people from their Black communities, as defined by the Constitution of the United States. (The 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution gives individuals the right to be tried by a peer group. The BPP felt that a peer group comprised of persons from similar economic, social, religious, geographical, environmental, historical, and racial background. To do this, the court would be forced to select a jury from the Black community from which the Black defendant came. They felt that Black people were being tried by "all-White juries" that had no understanding of the material conditions of Black people.)

• We want land, bread, housing, education, clothing, justice, and peace. And as our political objective, a United Nations supervised plebiscite to be held throughout the Black colony in which only Black colonial subjects will be allowed to participate, for the purpose of determining the will of Black people as to their national destiny.

Naturally, the BPP attracted the hostility of the law-enforement authorities, in particular the FBI. These authorities tried to systematically suppress the party since its inception and put most of the Panther leaders in jail on one charge or another.

The focus of the FBI's counter-intelligence functions are "legally" restricted to "hostile foreign governments, foreign organizations and individuals connected with them." The fact is these restrictions have never been observed. President Franklin Roosevelt authorized the Bureau's return to investigation of subversives. In the past, counter-intelligence programs (COINTELPROs) were directed against the Socialist Workers Party, the Communist Party, U.S.A. and other Marxist organizations.

In FBI parlance a COINTELPRO refers to a specific secret and typically illegal operation of political repression. In the 1960s there were more than 2,370 separate COINTELPROs.

On April 27, 1971, an FBI memorandum titled COINTELPRO Black Extremists-Racial Matters was written by C.D. Brennan to W.C. Sullivan, former head of the Counter Intelligence Division. The objective of this program was the "neutralization of Black extremist groups, the prevention of violence by these organizations and the prevention of coalitions among Black extremist organizations." Thus the FBI, in collaboration with local police units (often specifically created for this purpose with the assistance of the FBI), and reactionary "private" groups (many of which were spawned or expanded with Bureau support) began a systematic program to destroy organizations fighting for Black liberation. William C. Sullivan, an architect of the COINTERLPRO, was later charged with orchestrating the FBI campaign to destroy Martin Luther King, Jr. and the Civil Rights Movement in the South.

One of the tactics used by the FBI was the "Black Propaganda" operations. Black Propaganda refers to the fabrication and distribution of publications on behalf of targeted organizations/individuals designed to misrepresent their positions, goals or objectives. This publically discredits the parties and fosters intra/inter group tension. The FBI's covert action to destroy the BPP can be found in congressional publications under the heading "The Effort to Promote Violence Between the BPP and other well-armed, potentially, violent organizations." J. Edgar Hoover, ex-FBI head, wrote in a memorandum dated Nov 25, 1968, to 13 field officers, that the aim was to "exploit all avenues of creating further dissension within the ranks of the Black Panther Party." He further notes that, "recipient officers are instructed to submit imaginative and hard-hitting counter-intelligence measures aimed at crippling the BPP."

Some of the other tactics used against the BPP were the release of misinformation to the press and electronic media concerning the party, repeated arrests of the leaders of the BPP, the use of infiltrators and agent provocateurs, the fabrication of evidence for the criminal prosecution of key individuals, and assassinations. Fred Hampton, one of the most promising leaders of the BPP was assassinated by the FBI's COINTELPRO in 1969.

Organizations like the FBI are vital for the survival of a nation based on monopoly capital, where power rests in the hands of a few. The various branches of the security apparatus, namely the CIA, FBI and NSF, are paid for and sustain the interests of the ruling elite. The security apparatus of the United States is responsible for the destruction of various groups espousing the right to self-determination both nationally and internationally.

Shyamala Ivatury is a UMass graduate student.

Students should demand reason for program cuts

It's the time for the administration to stop playing games and it's time the students demand answers to the mismanagement of the Upward Bound Program funds. We should not let this scandal pass.

Malkes
GOMES

Those of you who attended the Chancellor's meeting on Oct. 9, 1992 in the Campus Center and the meeting afterwards at the Malcom X Center, you may remember me questioning Chancellor O'Brien and his staff about the mismanagement of federal money. The questions I asked included inquiry about the 3 to 5 percent pay increase the Department of Education issued for Upward Bound employees, which the University retained; money for the positions of director, secretary, and one case worker, which were vacant for over a year, and have yet to be accounted for; purchase orders used in the Faculty Club and the Campus Center Hotel for non-Upward Bound business. Checks for people who did not work for the office showed up mysteriously, the $14,000 worth of computer equipment donated by the University's psychology department never arrived to the Upward Bound Program, but was signed for. I also asked why the University denied the Upward Bound employees the right to take part in writing the grant proposal that was denied. What about the withholding of United States mail dated May 8, 1992 which the University did not promulgate until May 25, 1992, after school had closed? I have also heard from several sources that the Chancellor has only been able to raise $100,000, which is far below the $750,000 budget that is suppose to cover the substitue program for the next three years. The so-called review the Chancellor is having now eschews all the questions which he promised to investigate.

I think that the more than 200 people who witnessed this part of the meeting should make an appointment with the Chancellor to remind him that we want answers. Maybe ABC, NBC or CBS still have the taped footage of the events that transpired on this campus last semester. If the Chancellor does not respond accordingly, we, the students, must take the elevator straight to the top. Since the University will not keep their word then we must wash, hang and dry our dirty laundry out.

I encourage students to write the Department of Education: Upward Bound Offices, Washington D.C., 20202 or call them and report that the letter dated May 8, 1992, terminating the Upward Bound Program, was withheld. Maybe we should organize a group of students to personally go to Washington and meet with the head of the Department of Education. The administration had its chance, but when you back a dog into a corner, he will bite. It's time we open the corrals and let the bulls out. All those who have safe-deposit bags full of golden information, it's time to withdraw your gold. I guarantee those who have been involved with such sordid dealings will think twice before tampering with federal money and the United States mail again. The next time around, the Department of Education will keep a close eye on those who are handling certain funds.

When you are overseeing a group of people who are running a program you cannot use the excuse that you didn't know. A person should damn-well-better-know their job, everyone else's around them and below them — it's called checks and balances.

I condemn those in the system who pretend to be allies but take part in such unscrupulous dealings. Shame on you. To all the Uncle Toms who took part in this scandal, double shame on you because you sold out your own people. We in the African-American, Latino, Asian, andNative American community know who you are, so I will refrain from publicizing your names.

I could think of much harsher things to express to certain individuals who were involved with what I call sabotage, but because I was raised to respect my elders, I will refrain from lowering myself to the level of certain people. I was also taught to respect those who respect you, but others don't always respect you. I am also glad that some people agree with me that "stupidity is forever, but ignorance can be fixed." Stupidity is eschewing the issues, but when you tear down the smoke screen, it is a step in cleaning up the ignorance which got you into the fiasco in the first place.

Malkes Gomes is a Collegian columnist.

■ Metallica

continued from page 6

"Seek and Destroy," "Whiplash" and "Through the Never" moving and set the tone for heavier assaults, i.e. "Harvester of Sorrow" and a deliberately slow and hence more throttling version of "Sad But True."

His aggressive drumming defines much of what Metallica is about musically; indeed, one can't imagine Metallica without him.

Newsted, for his part, has grown and evolved in the role thrust upon him nearly five years ago by the untimely death of late bassist Cliff Burton. Newsted demonstrated versatility, proving himself equally able at keeping with the rapid pace of metal basslines or adding melodic flavor. His own bass solo, halfway through the show, showcased his ability to build variations off of more basic basslines.

Lead guitarist Kirk Hammett also showed off some virtuosity through his soloing, blitzing through fast lines on the high side of the fretboard. However, Hammett's extensive use of distortion and the sometimes painful volume level made appreciating his work difficult at times.

It all depends what you're looking for: metal is often judged not on how it sounds, but on how it feels. Slabs of crunched chords and waves of pure distortion and feedback are part of the genre, and on that scale Hammett succeeded. A Hammett solo after "Of Wolf and Man" included snippets of Jimi Hendrix's ground-breaking "Third Stone from the Sun."

The heart and soul of Metallica, however, is frontman and rhythm guitarist James Hetfield. His trademark vocals range from tender ("Nothing Else Matters," "Unforgiven") to barely-controlled rage and pain ("And Justice For All," "One"), defiance ("Wherever I May Roam") and mercilessness ("Master of Puppets," "Sad But True," "For Whom the Bell Tolls.") How's that for dynamic range?

Hetfield is also a heck of a stage personality. He rubbed his hands together and chuckled like an evil genius, challenging the audience. "Come on, hit me right here!" he said during the audience participation segment of "Seek and Destroy," pointing to his chest. Some of Hetfield's one-liners were hilarious, albeit they can't appear here since they're more or less unprintable.

Although Metallica has the distinction of being the heavy metal band with the most mainstream popularity — sorry, Guns 'n Roses doesn't count as real heavy metal — they remain a fan's band in the sense that they cater to their most ardent supporters. While most of the audience knew the words to the band's recent material, many also were able to sing along with older, more obscure songs such as "Whiplash" and "Creeping Death." If any bandwagon or casual fans were in attendance, they pretended to be Metallica die-hards pretty well.

While the crowd ate up everything they played like cake at a wedding, the loudest response was for the band's less-played, older material. The haunting "Fade to Black" and horrors of war chronicle "For Whom The Bell Tolls," both from Ride the Lightning, were among the best-played and best-received songs of the evening. "Wherever I May Roam" and "Welcome Home (Sanitarium)" were other highlights, as was "Sad But True."

Metallica has always prided itself on a strong rapport with it's constituency, and this show was no exception. A live camera set-up backstage before the show, shown on a large screen, allowed the band to "talk" to the audience before taking the stage. One notable funny exchange went like this: Newsted — "I feel like 100 bucks." Ulrich — "You look like 10."

Also shown was a 20-minute film, including clips of local sights which evoked predictable reactions as well as documentary material from the band's video release A Year and a Half in the Life of Metallica. Included in that footage was a downright scary clip of the August 1992 fireworks accident in Montreal which nearly killed Hetfield. Talk about being unafraid of the truth.

So does Metallica still deserve the title of being the undisputed supreme overlords of heavy metal? You'd better believe it. They promised to "come out there and kick your ass" before the show, and three hours of "ass-kicking" later, they had delivered.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Kirk Hammett of Metallica

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL
584-4112 • 535-1888
SAME DAY DELIVERY

BANANARAMA
Fabulous Frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

CEDAR TREE
BUSINESS SERVICES
11 Garage Rd • Sunderland, MA 01375
Word Processing
Resumes - Personal Taxes
Laser Jet Printing
Copies - 10 Free per visit
ON BUS ROUTE
M-F 8am-5pm • Sat. 8am-5pm
CALL 665-8499

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 Days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

DELTA UPSILON
INVITES YOU TO OPEN RUSH
FOR
D.P DOUGH NITE
Tues. Feb. 9 — Radz Pizza Nite — 8 - 9 PM
Thurs. Feb 11 — ☆ Hypnotist ☆ John Sacco — 8 - 9 PM
Mon. Feb 15 — Come Play Nagleschlaügen — 8 - 9 PM
Wed. Feb 17 — D. P. Dough Nite — 8 - 9 PM
RUSH THE DUCKS
For More Info: 549-3831
★ Call for a Ride ★
RUSH DELTA UPSILON

Accounting Association
First General Meeting
When: Wednesday, February 17th
Where: School of Management Building Room #116
Time: 7:00PM
New members welcome!

RESIDENT ASSISTANT SELECTION PROCESS
for the 1993-94 Academic Year
Be An RA
Resident Assistants (RAs) are live-in, part-time, student-staff members. Duties include facilitation of community development, programming, referral counseling, administrative functions, enforcing University policies, and assisting with house management.
Applications are available in all Cluster Offices.
Applications are due February 22, 1993. Apply today!
The University of Massachusetts at Amherst prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, creed, sex, sexual orientation, age, marital status, national origin, mental or physical handicap, political belief or affiliation, membership or non-membership in any organization, or veteran status, in any respect of admission or treatment of students in employment.

CALVIN AND HOBBES — By BILL WATTERSON

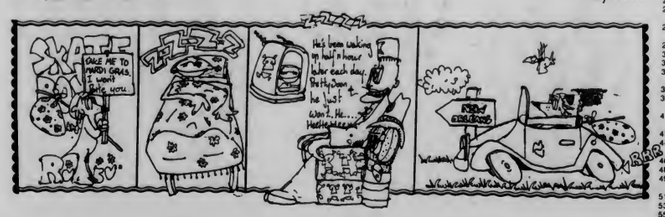
JIM'S JOURNAL — By JIM

DOONESBURY — By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE — By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED — By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU — By PITT



SKATE
SKATE
SKATE

■ women's swimming

continued from page 12

Newcomb said several New England coaches personally complimented the team on their performances. "That to me is impressive," Newcomb said.

Several team members were successful in landing spots in the finals and three more swimmers qualified for ECACs.

Griffith was a championship finalist in three events and claimed two UMass freshman records in the 200-yard individual medley (2:14.27) and the 100-yard breaststroke (1:08.91). Both were career bests.

Edwardsen swam a solid meet hitting two career bests and placing fifth in the 100-yard backstroke with a 1:01.91. Veremey was the highest swim finisher for the team this weekend, landing a second place spot in the 200-yard fly.

Freshman Heather Saunders swam a UMass freshman record in the 100-yard backstroke with a 1:02.23. Sheehan had a tremendous meet, scoring in all of her events.

Junior diver Allison White claimed an impressive second in the three-meter diving and landed third in the one-meter event.

■ Yinka

continued from page 12

But how good can Dare get? Jarvis coached NBA star Patrick Ewing at Cambridge Rindge & Latin high school, so he knows about developing the games of talented big men.

"Physically Yinka is where Patrick was as a junior in college," Jarvis said. "Skillwise, he is where Patrick was as a junior in high school.

"I think Mourning and Mutombo were a little better off skillwise but physically equal as freshman. By the time Yinka leaves here we want him to better along than two of those three."

If Jarvis is correct, than Yinkamania is just starting to rage.

Eating Disorder Programs • Spring 1993

Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671 x233 or 234, Clinic IV.

• • •

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671 x233 or 234, Clinic IV.

• • •

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, chronic dieting, or compulsive overeating. Mondays (except holidays) 4:30-6:00 p.m. Campus Center Room Number posted by elevator. No registration necessary. Confidentiality Assured.

For more information on these programs or other eating disorder concerns, call 549-2671 x233 or 234. Confidentiality Assured.

INTERVIEWING?

ZANNA

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

There's A New Way to Get to Mt. Tom.

Here's a hint:

Now it's even easier to ski closer to home! And purchasing a combination bus/lift ticket saves you money, too! Take the Peter Pan bus, any day of the week, from any one of these locations and enjoy great skiing day and night at nearby Mt. Tom:

AMHERST/UMASS HARTFORD
NORTHAMPTON MIDDLETOWN
SPRINGFIELD MERIDEN
BRIDGEPORT NEW HAVEN

Mt. TOM SKI AREA Peter Pan Trailways

Route 5, Holyoke, MA • Call Peter Pan for Info: 781-2900

Make the Right Career Connections . . . Early!

COME TO THE CO-OP JOB FAIR
Thursday, February 18

Campus Center Auditorium

Paid Work Experience in Your Major — Summer and Semester Positions

Field Experience Information Sessions:
11 am, 12 noon, 1 & 2 pm
Employer Booths: 10 am - 3:30 pm

ALL Majors - ALL Day
Undergraduate and Graduate Students

Employer Workshops:
Co-Op: What to Expect
Employer Information Sessions: Chubb, TASC

Sponsored by the Mather Career Center, 545-6265

■ Lindros

continued from page 12

ing that time. Barring divine intervention, the Broad Street Bunch will be playing more golf than hockey in April. It hasn't been the absence of Lindros' offensive skills that has buried Philadelphia though.

While Lindros was sidelined, Mark Recchi, and Rod Brind'Amour have put up solid offensive numbers. The loss of their strongest defenseman (Duchesne) and a top notch goalie (Hextall) in the trade is what has kept the Flyers from being competitive. The Quebec Nordiques, on the other hand, are reaping the benefits of the trade.

At 30-18-9, the Nordiques have gone from the cellar last season, to second place in the Adams division. Ron Hextall's 24 wins for Quebec is third among NHL goalies, while the Philly tandem of Tommy Sanderson and Dominic Roussel have 16 wins between them.

When an injured player is still making headlines while they're on the sideline, it often spells bad news. This held true for Lindros as well. Lindros has been in the headlines due to accusations that he spilled beer on a woman in a New Jersey bar. Although Lindros was acquitted, the incident has been an embarrassment to Lindros and the Flyers.

Lindros returned to the Philadelphia lineup following the All-Star break. With Mario Lemieux out with Hodgkin's disease and Gretzky fading from stardom, there may never be a better oppurtunity for Lindros to emerge to stardom. Philadelpnia is a weak team and despite the arrival of a potential superstar, it will be a long road before the Flyers contend again.

Around the League: It must be tough to be an Oiler fan these days. The team of the '80s has become a sad story in the '90s. After their Stanley Cup championship in 1988, the Oilers have become the flea market of the NHL, trading or unloading their top talent

Happy birthday to my colleague Art Stapleton. May his birthday be better than his Valentine's Day.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian correspondent.

Mike's Westview

Drink Special
BEST PITCHERS
$3.50

Wednesday Night is Guest Bartender's Night
This week's bartenders are:
Courtney Harold & Lizzy Hagan

Thursday Night is Jagermeister night
Come drink with the Jagermeister girls
Shots of Jagermeister - $1.75

Join us for our Friday Happy Hour,
All You Can Eat Buffet,
and our Sunday Brunch.

Drink Special
MICHELOB BOTTLES
$1.50

Always Something For Everyone!

Drink Special
VODKA TONIC
$1.50

WE DON'T WANT YOU TO JOIN OUR SORORITY WE WANT YOU TO HELP BUILD IT.

ΣK

RUSH SIGMA KAPPA!!
Tues 7-9, Wed 7:30-9, & Thurs 7-9
19 Allen St.
Questions? Call 256-6887

HATCH BAR ENTERTAINMENT

Wed. Feb. 17 9PM

Amandas Dirty Secret

Alternative Rock and Covers

Thurs. Feb. 18 9PM

Come Listen & Dance to
SYNAESTHEISA

One of the Best New Bands in the Valley

Full Bar
Bud Natural Lite Pitchers,
Pizzas & Grinders
Drink Specials

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Leadership, Friendship, Service Rush Alpha Phi Omega Information Meetings: TONIGHT:7pm Gorman 2nd floor lounge TOMORROW: 7:30 Campus Center 917

Sigma Delta Tau Open Rush Tues, Wed, Thurs, 7-9 pm For more info call Kim 549-5388

Unitarian Universalist Young Adult Group meeting this Sunday. Contact Sean at 546-3935 for more info.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Chi Omega Open Rush The fun begins Tues Feb. 16 Call Amy at 549-6219 for more details! Bring a friend!

UMASS Blood Drive Today 11:00-4:00 Campus Center Rm 165

COLLEGE PIZZA

Spring Special Small Cheese $3.50 Large Cheese $6.99 1 or 2 toppings add $1 549-6098 549-8073

FOR RENT

Cape Cod– Group Summer Rentals Waterfront Houses Falmouth area 508-477-8000

Fridge Rental 253-9742 delivered free

1 bdrm in large apt. $350/ heat incl. 665-3815

FOR SALE

GNR tix 4 fourth row seats Also 2 Bon Jovi Hartford 253-0813

1992 Subaru Loyale 12K like new $7500 call 256-0966 or 718-852-0774

Printer for sale 413-245-9542 after 7 ask for Don

RT Ticket to New Orleans During Spring Break $250 256-8696

Tanning Bed Compact, strong bulbs $150 call 256-4575

GREEKS AND CLUBS

$1000 an Hour! Each member of your frat, sorority, team, club, etc., pitches in just one hour and your group can raise $1000 in just a few days! Plus a chance to earn $1000 for yourself! No cost. No obligation. 1-800-932-0528 ext 65

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

Evening jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action. $100/wk. + . On Bus line 584-9830.

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT – Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000 -$4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Summer jobs and internships – University Directories, the nations largest publisher of campus telephone directories (including UMass at Amherst), is interviewing goal oriented students for a challenging, full-time summer position. Gain valuable experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings $3900. Expense paid training program in Chapel Hill, NC. College credit may be available. Interviews on UMass at Amherst campus February 24th. Information and interview sign up available today at the Visitors Center or call 1-800-743-5556

INSTRUCTION

Learn to Scuba dive earn two credits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday at Curry Hicks 7-10 pm 1-800-282-0977

Physics and Math Tutor M.A. in Physics Experienced teaching assistant Call 256-0260

LOST

Lost Ring – Reward Totman – Feb 1st Friendship "LTM" Call collect 508-827-4555

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair Home, Auto, Pro ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave W. Springfield 1-781-2327

PERSONALS

Amy you're the love of my life and my best friend, thanks so much. Love my Lady John

Now fingering these veins of hemp, their hair upon my skin 3/2/93!

RUSH ZETA PSI

Calzone Night Come down to rush and eat as many calzones as you can sponsored by DP Dough Tonight at 7:00 at Newman Center

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Legal Services Center offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Resume Preparation assistance with complete resume development. Keith Anderson, Ph.D. 582-4037

Scholarships Guaranteed 1-800-666-2137

Tarot Readings Call Chris at 253-7524

SPORTS CARDS

Sportstop cards Mt. Farms Mall

STD STUDY

Students diagnosed with genital warts (HPV) or a curable STD wanted for a research study. $$$ stipend provided for 15 minutes of your time. Confidentiality guaranteed. Call Debbie at 549-2671 ext. 181

TRAVEL

Scuba Dive Key Largo Spring Break, Call Project Deep 1-800-282-0977

Spring Break: CANCUN, NASSAU from $299 Organize a small group for FREE trip Call 1-800-Get-Sun-1

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $458! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!! Spring Break '93 Best Deals Going Fast Jesse 549-7472

Trip for 2 to the Bahamas $222 for a couple . For details call Sarah 549-1609

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Resumes, papers, theses. Laser printing, on-campus Pick up and delivery Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women Need housing for spring semester Desire place near UMass Call Young Mi 546-0580 or Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease/ 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

Scott's shots

To think that for all these years the Garden faithful were actually screaming "Spleef" not "Chief," when number 00 was introduced.

• So what if Robert Parish admits to inhaling, he's still one of the best centers, though underrated, in the NBA. Players used to drink after a game, now the evolution of things has led to other vices.

Parish can commisserate with teammate Alaa Abdelnaby, who still has his own pot case pending in Milwaukee. When it comes down to it, there are a lot worse things these guys could be doing.

David
SCOTT

By the way, could the package from San Fran had been sent by a big redhead?

• It would be been a huge injustice if George Washington had scored with 4/10ths of a second left. Touching the ball takes at least 5/10ths of a second. The NBA has the 3/10ths rule that admits the impossibility of hitting a shot in that span, but it might even need to be extended to 6/10ths.

We must discover what the framers intended when they introduced tenths of a second into Naismith's creation.

• The Bird and Jordan commercial with the two legends playing Horse is one for the books. "... Off the freeway, nothing but net." Bird could have hit in his prime.

• The University of Hawaii hoop team has flourescent, lime green uniforms. It's more repulsive than it sounds.

(Once again this space spans the globe . . .)

• The Shirl brings up a poignant reminder as the season winds down towards March Madness. "Tell everyone to appreciate what they've got with Lou and Harper up front. If they had just one more year together, or imagine Camby, Harper and Lou."

The Shirl, living for today — praying for tomorrow.

• It would be nice to avoid GW in the A-10 Tournament. I get this queasy feeling that Yinka is always on the verge of scoring 800 points and ripping down 497 rebounds to go along with 232 blocks.

• Ditto for Shaquille.

• Coach, emcee and all-around funny guy Jim Rudy hosted the women's soccer banquet Sunday and the highlight was a season video re-cap narrated by WHMP's George Miller (see below). Somehow Rudy thought because he was playing the role of Fantasy Island's Mr. Rourke, he had a license to criticize the ties of two very formidable sports writers.

Rudy, you may be a fine coach, but the cravat you hung around your neck wouldn't even accompany me to take out the garbage. What do you have to say, Tattoo?

"Zee plain tie Boss. Zee plain tie is very boring."

• George "Thriller" Miller has had some fine calls in recent memory of UMass games, but the best line by far was in reference to a player who was unguarded and ready for a pass.

"He's more open than Denny's." And how about that grand slam breakfast, George?

• St. Bonaventure should never, ever be abbreviated St. Bona. Think about it.

• How about Coach Calipari keeping composed amidst the bedlem and yelling to Jeff Meyer to check in as a means of pressuring the inbounds pass.

Say what you will about the slick hairdo, the Italian suits and soundbite quotes, Calipari is a coach's coach first and foremost. The ties are another story.

• Stay tuned next week for "Scott's Shots Swimsuit Edition." Hey, its Sweeps Weeks and we're desperate for ratings.

• Keep your feet in bounds and your eyes on Billy Bulger.

David Scott is a Collegian columnist.

Freshman has GW on the map

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "Dare is the Lord," she shouted to me, inside of the small club, spitting distance from Georgetown University.

No sooner were the words out of her mouth, then a man, wearing a George Washington hat, grabbed her shoulder, leaned in and asked, "Are you guys talking about Yinka?" Before receiving a confirmation, he offered his opinion, "He is awesome, just incredible. He's going to be the greatest."

Welcome to Yinkamania, the hottest thing to hit the nation's capital since Bill and Hillary.

The mania centers around George Washington's Yinka Dare, a 7-foot-1, 265 pound, mammal, who has sparked unprecedented excitement in the Colonial program.

And for good reason. Dare (pronounced dah-RAY) has the physical skills to be the most dominant player in college basketball by his senior year. Dare is both huge and extremely athletic. A rare combination.

"Yinka has the physical skills to be the best," said Chris Wallace, a highly respected expert of college basketball and the editor of Blue Ribbon Basketball. "You just don't see that type of physical ability everyday. He needs work, but his potential is unlimited."

Despite being skillfully rough, Dare is already being compared to NBA stars such as Shaquille O'Neal and former Georgetown standouts Patrick Ewing, Alonzo Mourning and fellow Nigerian Dikembe Motumbo.

"He looks more like Shaquille O'Neal than Shaquille O'Neal looked in high school," said Bob Gibbons, USA Today's basketball analyst.

In a city dominated by politics, the Redskins and Georgetown, in that order, generating enthusiasm has been an uphill battle for George Washington, but the presence of Dare has made that hill easier to climb. The Colonials are 16-5 overall.

"When I was here, GW was like high school basketball," Dan Shea, a 1987 alumnus from Annadale, Va, said. "Now it is on its way to the big time. We're sold out, TV is here, we're getting votes in national polls, and Yinka is only a freshman. I wish I was a student again."

Dare, the son of an engineer, speaks four languages, including English. But he will not speak any of them to the press. Dare prefers to allow his game to do the talking and so far, it has been fluent.

Dare is averaging 13.7 points, 10.6 rebounds and three blocks a game. He has been named Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week six times this season and Player of the Week once. The only other freshman to ever achieve that honor is former Temple guard Mark Macon.

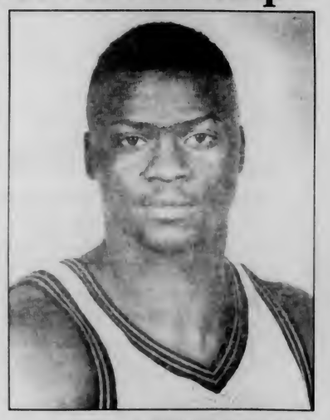

PHOTO COURTESY OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

Freshman Yinka Dare is tearing up the Atlantic 10, having won the A-10's Freshman of the Week six times.

Getting him there was not easy. George Washington assistant coach Ed Meyers first saw Dare in February of 1991, while on a scouting trip in Lagos, Nigeria. Dare was trying out for the Nigerian national team and for Meyers, it was love at first sight.

Meyers was unable to speak with Dare because of NCAA rules but he befriended an airforce lieutenant, who knew Dare's family. The following fall Dare enrolled at Millford (Conn.) Academy, where he spent one season before journeying to Washington.

"The good Lord brought Yinka to us," Jarvis said. "With his size, his potential is unlimited."

Turn to YINKA, page 10

UM track finishes last in A-10s

Struggling men's team ready to rebound Saturday

By SEAN P. HAYDEN
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's indoor track team competed in the inaugural Atlantic-10 Championships this past Saturday and Coach Ken O'Brien's squad did not fare so well. They placed sixth out of six teams.

Call it a learning experience, call it a building block, call it a motivator, or call it a small step in the maturation process of this young team. Just don't call the team's performance this weekend a failure. They were overmatched from the gun and had to fight for every point they scored.

"We're not top-heavy enough as a team," commented O'Brien, "It's really difficult to bang heads with teams who have top-level performers in every event."

West Virginia was one of the teams O'Brien labeled as a favorite going in to the meet and they lived up to their billing. They won the first ever A-10 track championships with 162 total points.

West Virginia was followed by Rutgers (141), St. Joseph's (95), Temple (63), URI (59), and finally UMass (34).

Individually, the Minutemen had two runners grab third place. They were Matt Simon in the mile and Kevin Greenhalgh in the 5,000 meters. The 4x800 relay team of Jim Avery, Brian King, Rick Copley, and Scott Sykes also took third in their event.

Also, shot putter Mark Lefebvre placed fourth in that event, while the trio of Bart Soare (35 pound weight), Paul Doyle (high hurdles), and Craig Cormier (3,000 meters) all took fifth for the Minutemen.

The Minutemen also had seven sixth-place finishers and seven seventh-place finishers. The depth O'Brien had been talking about is obviously there. Runners who finish sixth and seventh must be able to bump up a couple of spots and score more points, O'Brien said.

According to O'Brien, the meet was a pretty accurate reflection of the team's talent.

"It's not like we flopped. We ran to our potential. We just need some time to build it back up again," O'Brien said.

The Minutemen don't have much time to lick their wounds or ponder the happenings of the past weekend as they get right back into it when they face Ivy League champ Dartmouth this Saturday. Dartmouth is a powerhouse team and represents an enormous challenge for the Minutemen.

"We don't get a break in the action," O'Brien said, "We'll have to maintain that championship level enthusiasm if we hope to be successful against Dartmouth."

Women place fourth in N.E.s

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Staff

After much anticipation, the women's New England swimming and diving championships proved this weekend to be a worthwhile battle for the Minutewomen.

UMass was ranked fifth, was shooting for third and landed fourth in what head coach Bob Newcomb described as, "an extremely competitive meet with point battles everywhere."

The Minutewomen succeeded again in defeating fifth place finisher Boston College. Seeing that the Minutewomen had defeated the University of Rhode Island twice this season already, the only disappointment was when URI slipped past UMass to clench the targeted third place spot.

"URI had to swim perfectly to beat us," Newcomb said. "It just adds fuel to the fire when we'll meet them again at the Eastern College Athletic Conference in two weeks."

As predicted, Providence College dominated the meet to become the 1993 champions, followed by the University of Connecticut in second.

The Minutewomen claimed a new UMass record when they sprinted a 4:06.91 in the 400-yard medley relay, courtesy of senior co-captain Kari Edwardsen, freshman Jessica Griffith, junior Julie Veremey and senior Lori Sheehan, respectively.

"I'm very pleased with the team's performance," Newcomb said. "They swam their hearts out. They can't take anything from themselves from the effort they put into this meet."

Turn to WOMEN'S SWIMMING, page 10

Trials of a Teenage Superstar

Despite what the title implies, this isn't a made for TV movie. It's a summary of the rocky rookie season of Eric Lindros. There had been tremendous hype surrounding the talents of Eric

Matt
VAUTOUR

Lindros for years, even before he was eligible to enter last year's NHL draft. He had been dubbed "The Next One," combining the the size and toughness of Mark Messier, with the skill and finesse of Wayne Gretzky.

Lindros was drafted first overall by Quebec, but like no other player before him, Lindros refused to play for the Nordiques. He spent the 1991-92 season playing for a junior team, and helped the Canadian Olympic team earn a silver medal in the 1992 Olympics at Albertville.

On the eve of the 1992 draft, Quebec traded the rights to Lindros to the Philadelphia Flyers for a large sum of cash and several players including Mike Ricci, Steve Duchesne and goalie Ron Hextall.

Well, what many predicted would be a guaranteed Calder Trophy (NHL rookie of the year) season for Lindros, just hasn't happened. Lindros started slowly, and has spent most of the 1992-93 campaign hindered by injuries, playing in only 33 of Philly's 56 games.

The Flyers have gone 19-28-9 dur-

Turn to LINDROS, page 11

Thursday February 18, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 80

Sunny and cold in the 20s today. Tommorrow still cold in 20s.

Local News:
Two years after Gregory Levey committed suicide by burning himself on the Amherst Common to protest the Gulf War, a service will honor him today. Page 3.

This Weekend:
Pomo Afro Homos have a whole weekend of plays planned to entertain and educate people on issues of race and sexuality.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Tax hike necessary, Clinton tells nation

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton asked Americans Wednesday night to accept one of the biggest tax increases in history, part of a tough $499 billion plan to curb massive budget deficits and stimulate the economy. "We must do this together," he said in a pointed overture to Congress.

"This economic plan cannot please everyone," Clinton said in a 60-minute address to address to a joint session of Congress. "If this package is picked apart, there will be something that will anger each of us. But if it is taken as whole, it will help all of us."

The plan is a mixture of $246 billion in tax increases and $253 billion in spending cuts over four years. "Our budget will by 1997 cut $140 billion from the deficit — one of the greatest real spending cuts by an American president," he said.

"If we do not act now," Clinton said, "we will not recognize this country 10 years from now." He said the deficit would have grown to $635 billion a year and the national debt would consume almost 80 percent of the gross domestic product.

"Americans have called for change," the president said, "and now it is up to those of us in this room to deliver." He warned that lobbyists would try to block the program.

Clinton's prime-time speech was delivered in the House chamber, where majority Democrats have a thunderous welcome to the first Democrat to hold the White House in 12 years.

Turn to CLINTON, page 8

Students optimistic after State of Union

By TAMI MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

Despite calls for spending cuts and tax increases, students who gathered in Lewis Residence Hall to hear Bill Clinton's first State of the Union address said they felt optimistic that the president was truly working toward a change for the better.

Neil Carpenter, former president of the University Democrats, said he was impressed that Clinton articulated specific cuts that will upset some special-interest groups.

Turn to STUDENTS, page 8

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

TAKE A FLYING LEAP — Sophmore communications major Stephan Cafferky frolics in the snow.

Food Services reduces staff due to deficit

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Food Services was forced to lay off six workers due to an increase in the budget deficit and a decrease in the student population, said University officials.

Last Friday, five unionized employees and one campus center supervisor were handed their pink slips due to a decrease in the number of students on the meal plan, according to Ashoke Ganguli, director of Auxiliary Services.

"We don't have the customer demand and the number of students on campus is down," Ganguli said.

There were five workers laid off from the dining commons and one from the campus center restaurant, said Ganguli, and they were all given two weeks notice.

Auxiliary Services oversees the operation of the campus center store, the hotel, food services and the Munchy Stores. Conference services and building services are also run by the department of Auxiliary Services.

In the fall of 1989, 11,300 students participated in the meal plan program, which costs about $1,600 per year. This semester only 8,200 students are on the meal plan.

Auxiliary Services developed a deficit reduction task force to recommend ways to help reduce revenue losses. Food services has been losing money consistently through the Top of the Campus restaurant, which saw a $104,571 loss, and the snack bars located across campus, which lost $93,667 in the last year, officials said.

"These are hard, difficult economic times and we just don't have the customers anymore," Ganguli said.

The cuts were made by seniority, and proceeded with all necessary protocol, according to Ganguli. He said job functions were analyzed before changes were made, and the layoffs are necessary. He also said that Human Resources Management and the administration were contacted and the cuts were made well within union contracts.

Other suggestions, like closing the Coffee Shop and consolidating other businesses were mentioned in the task force report, but Ganguli said that the layoffs will be the only changes that will be made this semester.

Student Senate denies funding

Refuses to help bankroll 1993 Women's Conference

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

The Undergraduate Student Senate turned down Housing Service's request for $750 to help fund the 1993 Women's Conference which features famed activist Angela Davis during their meeting yesterday.

Former Finance Committee Chair Dorothy Bennett said, "Housing Services is not a Registered Student Organization and is not entitled to Student Activity Trust Funds."

The Student Activities Trust Fund, which each student contributes $98 per year, is used to finance RSOs at UMass.

Senator David Nunez said the Senate should reconsider their decision and provide Housing's request for funding. He said about 30 RSOs, including the Black Student Union, are also sponsoring the event.

Bennett said the Housing Service's request for funding is just one of several recent requests made by non-RSO organizations.

"We've had an onslaught of petitions for funding from non-RSOs, like Housing Services and the Fine Arts Center," said Bennett.

The 1993 Women's Conference is scheduled for Feb. 29 in the Campus Center.

The Senate also voted to request that all RSOs patronize Campus Design & Copy, instead of other local copy centers.

"They're students, they're non-profit; so let's keep it on campus," said Treasurer Emily Rose, who submitted the proposal. "Campus Design and Copy needs the business and their the cheapest place to do copying," said Rose. She said many other RSOs have gone off-campus to Kinko's and Collective Copies.

Rose said she is helping seek alternatives to a proposed Student Activity Trust Fund increase of $7.50 per student each year. "That $7.50 won't go to RSOs. It will go to fringe benefits," she said. Rose suggested that administrative jobs be cut instead.

The Senate voted in three new senators. Public Policy Chair Matt Pavesi of Patterson, Amanda White of Knowlton and Jeff Turko of Greek Affairs.

Diego Figueroa of McNamara was voted in as Finance Committee Chairperson.

U.N. officials halt aid to Bosnia

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Serb tanks bore down on a key western suburb Wednesday as U.N. officials halted aid operations and accused Bosnia's warring factions of using food as a political weapon.

The Serb offensive on the last defensive lines was an apparent attempt to capture more of the capital before peace talks resume Friday in New York between Serbs, Croats and Muslims.

The Muslim-led government has blocked U.N. food aid from besieged Muslims in eastern Bosnia. Convoys to the region have been halted by ethnic Serbs.

"I really regret that I have to take this decision because we have been trying to help the victims, the ordinary people, and we cannot do that," Sadako Ogata, the U.N. high commissioner for refugees, said in Nairobi, Kenya, in announcing the aid cutoff in Sarajevo and eastern Bosnia.

The action could increase pressure on officials in Sarajevo. If the city began handing out food again, warehouses would be emptied in eight to 10 days.

In eastern Bosnia, an estimated 100,000 Muslims are trapped by Serb sieges. The aid cutoff also will hit some Serb-dominated towns.

Bosnian radio reported battles throughout the republic and claimed 20 people were killed and 60 wounded in an air raid on Muslim-held Cerska, an eastern town. In Kamenica, near Cerska, Bosnian Serb authorities said they unearthed 23 bodies from what they called a mass grave of massacred Serbs.

Spokesmen for the Serbs and Muslims blamed each other for the disruption of U.N. efforts

Ogata said aid shipments would not resume without guarantees from all parties to safeguard and allow passage of food convoys.

"We want to get the parties to cooperate. We want the international community to realize how serious the situation is," said Peter Kessler, a U.N. aid official in Zareb, Croatia.

U.N. officials already had suspended aid flights to Sarajevo because the government's boycott caused U.N. warehouses to fill up with supplies.

"We've gotten to a point now where we have almost a 100,000 people who are starving to death n besieged Muslim villages in eastern Bosnia. And we can no longer in good conscience feed teh Serb-held villages next door, and feed Serb failies, while Muslim families just a couple of feet down the road are dying of starvation," said Sylvan Foa, a U.N. spokeswoman in Geneva.

The United Nation said it had delivered an average of 20,000 tons of food, medicine, blankets and other supplies to Bosnia each month since July. The suspension will affect about half that amount, spokeswomean Sylvie Girard said in Geneva.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

How's your First Aid?
American Red Cross

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Brian Gormley
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

Friday, February 12

• An individual smashed a car window on Commonwealth Ave. in an attempt to steal the car's stereo Friday afternoon. The stereo system received $510 of damage.

• Two students in Orchard Hill were found to be minors in possession of alcohol Friday night. The alcohol was confiscated.

• A bike worth $550 was stolen from the rack outside of Coolidge Friday night.

Sunday, February 14

• A windshield, passenger window and antenna were smashed on a car parked in Lot 32 Sunday afternoon. Police estimated over $680 of damage.

• A window was smashed and a stereo was stolen from a car parked in Lot 50 Sunday evening. There was over $300 of damage.

Tuesday, February 16

• A stereo valued at over $200 was stolen from a car parked in Sylvan Drive Tuesday afternoon.

• A vehicle on Massachusetts Avenue slid into the rear of a PVTA bus Tuesday afternoon. There were no injuries or citations given out, but $2000 worth of damage was done.

• Racist graffiti was written on a dorm door poster in Patterson Tuesday night.

Rape victim backs privacy bill

By ROBERT W. TROTT
Associated Press

BOSTON — Maggie Lant, who has charged her former boss with rape, doesn't see what her 1989 mammography has to do with the case. The defense lawyer, though, asked for the records, and he got them.

That wasn't enough background for the lawyer, Lant's attorney, Wendy Murphy said Tuesday. The defense asked for Lant's counseling records — medical, mental health, alcoholic counseling, everything.

"My privacy is no more. I'll never have it again," said Lant, 43. "One of the reasons I'm doing this is to protect everybody else's privacy."

Lant appeared at a news conference in which lawmakers announced the filing of legislation to strengthen confidentially for rape victims.

Murphy, a former Middlesex County prosecutor, helped legislators draft the bill. She said recent Supreme Judicial Court decisions made it easier for defense lawyers to obtain past records.

Because of that, victims either do not file charges at all, or they are effectively put on trial themselves at the suspect's trial, Murphy said.

"Victims are choosing not to get counseling," she said. "If they choose to get counseling which they desperately need. . . they may choose counseling, but they're not going to report the crime. The obvious results is; we are not going to be effective in deterring violence, particularly violence against women."

The legislation — sponsored by House Minority Leader Peter Forman, R-Plymouth, and Sen. Cheryl Jacques, D-Needham — would cover three areas:

• Require parties seeking records to tell the victims before they get the victim's records, and grant the victim "a reasonable opportunity to be heard in court.

• Make all levels of therapy equal under confidentiality laws. Now, records from psychotherapists, social workers, hospitals and the Department of Mental Retardation are not given the same high confidentiality status as rape crisis centers and domestic violence counseling centers.

• Establish rules for records, including a ban on photocopying and releasing records to media or others not directly involved in the case; allowing review of the records only in court, under supervision of a court clerk; and notification of any other parties mentioned in the records.

Murphy attempted last week to prevent Christopher Allen's attorney, Larry Tipton, from obtaining Lant's medical records dating back 23 years. The defense already has received other records, including the 1989 mammography.

Lant said she felt the criminal justice system had received other records on the victims.

"There would have been some justice if the criminal justice system understood my need to regain control," Lant said.

Middlesex County District Attorney Thomas Reilly urged swift passage of the bill, and said his office would voluntarily comply with the regulations.

Thomas Hoopes, cofounder of the Massachusetts Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, said the 1991 SJC case said attorneys must show some "reasonable" justification that the records would be useful in court.

"There's a lot more going on than meets the eye, not in all of them but in a lot of them," Hoopes said of rape cases. "In a bunch, there are certain things going on other than what's been said was going on."

As an example, Hoopes said he once defended a rape suspect and obtained medical records that indicated the accuser suffered a lithium imbalance, which clouded her judgement.

Murphy said she first realized how ravaging public release of past records could be when, while a Middlesex County prosecutor, she tried to prosecute a man for raping a 16-year-old girl who had received counseling for an eating disorder.

ALL NEW Thursday Night Wheel of SAVED FORTUNES
8:30p.m. - Midnight

After Bowling, Spin the Wheel for your rate... YOU COULD WIN $50

Red Dot.....25¢ Off Each Game
Blue Dot.....50¢ Off Each Game
Green Dot.....1 FREE Game
Yellow Dot.....3 FREE Games
Orange Dot.....$5.00 Off Bowling
White Dot.....Pick up 5-7-10 and your bowling on us!
Black Dot.....$50.00 - Strike on the Headless Rack and WIN!

NORTHAMPTON BOWL
525 Pleasant Street • Northampton, MA • 584-4830

Summer!
Make it the Best

Work with us at the Wychmere Harbor Beach Club on Cape Cod. We currently have outstanding opportunities for talented individuals to join our team. Candidates should call Cheryl at (508) 432-1000 to arrange an interview.

LIFEGUARDS
All positions are seasonal.

Snow Inn Road
Harwich Port, MA 02646
508-432-1000

Wychmere Harbor Beach Club

ATTENTION!! STUDENTS OF COLOR*
FIND YOUR JOB AT CAREER EXPO '93

February 24 & 25
The 57 Park Plaza Hotel
200 Stuart Street
Boston, Massachusetts

Schedule of Events:

Wednesday, February 24
Resource & Information Day
1:00 p.m. - 4:00 p.m.
--Interviewing Skills
--Job Search and Career Development Seminars
--Resume Consultation

Thursday, February 25
Career Fair Day
9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.
--Meet informally with Representatives from over 50 companies.

ADMISSION IS FREE!!!

For More Information, Contact:
Your Career Placement Office
or
Career Expo (617)426-6667

*African-American,Asian,Hispanic, Native American, Pacific Islander

Local News

Student decries Bosnian plight

By JESSIE DAVENPORT
Collegian Correspondent

Genocide has infected Bosnia and the whole world is watching it happen, said a Mount Holyoke student who fled from the country last year.

Alma Musanovic, who has lived in Sarajevo all her life until she came to Mount Holyoke College on a scholarship in November 1992, said she watched Bosnia deteriorate.

Musanovic said that Serbs invading Bosnia have set up concentration camps and that the Bosnians have suffered mass killings and rapes.

"Bosnian women and girls are impregnated so they give birth to Serbian children," she said. "They are not freed from the camps until they are at least six months pregnant so abortion is impossible."

Musanovic said that the Bosnian women have great hatred for the Serbian children they give birth to and that there are reports that the women would often strangle their newborns once they were born.

She said that Bosnia was a country made of various nationalities and religious groups living together for centuries without friction until the Serbs wanted to dominate Bosnia and invaded the country.

Musanovic said that Sarajevo was once a city of beauty and now "there isn't a single building left in Sarajevo that is left untouched."

She said that after a few months of war the Serbs cut off the Bosnian's electricity, water and food supply.

"Once you believe you are in the middle of the war you become resourceful — to keep your sanity," Musanovic said.

She said that because Sarajevo is in a valley surrounded by mountains it was an ideal area for the Serbian militia to station themselves around the Bosnian people.

Musanovic said, "This gave you the feeling like you are in a game, like you are a running target."

ANDREA MIGLIASSI / COLLEGIAN
Bosian native and Mount Holyoke student Alma Musanovic, left, poses with member of Friends of Bosnia.

Musanovic said she wants the U.S. Congress to lift the international arms embargo, the United Nations to gain access to all camps and prisons as they apply to Bosnia and to make rape a war crime.

"I believed the world would intervene, but very slowly I became disillusioned, there is still nothing being done," she said. "The whole world knows who the bad guys are but they aren't doing anything."

"The U.S. really needs to learn what it is to have to defend your home," Musanovic said.

"Anybody can be a target just for being different, what bothers me is who will it happen to next."

Two years later, Levey mourned

Service to honor protest-inspired death by burning

By SAMUEL KENNEDY
Collegian Correspondent

Today marks the two-year anniversary of Gregory D. Levey's grisly suicide by incineration on the Amherst Town Common which apparently was done to protest U.S. involvement in the Persian Gulf.

Levey, who was 30 years old, placed a sign which read "peace" on the ground next to him, doused himself with paint thinner and struck a match. The first match's flame blew out, but Levey's second match successfully ignited the paint thinner and his body was engulfed in a fireball.

A service to commemorate Levey's death is planned for 1:30 p.m. today on the Amherst Town Common.

Witnesses said they were too far away to stop Levey from setting himself on fire. Some tried to extinguish the flames with their coats while others watched in horror. A police officer who arrived on the seen soon after put out the flames with a fire extinguisher.

The site of Levey's death became the scene of a spontaneous peace demonstration directly following the incident and an estimated 100 people participated in a candle light vigil on the common the next day.

Levey, who graduated from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst in 1984 with a bachelor's degree in English, was an Amherst resident and worked as a substitute teacher.

He was the son of Boston Globe restaurant reviewer Robert Levey, and the step-son of Pulitzer Prize winning columnist Ellen Goodman, both of Brookline.

Charles F. Carroll, a friend who attended college with Levey, said in an interview several days after the suicide, "I remember talking with him about the value of life and really discussing the pros and cons of the act [self immolation]. He knew all about the implications of this type of act. The Vietnam monks made a profound impression on him for their integrity."

During the Vietnam war, several Buddhists gained notoriety after setting themselves on fire to protest U.S. involvement there.

Carroll said that both he and Levey were practicing

Turn to LEVEY, page 6

MELINDA LESTER / COLLEGIAN
FLIP FLOPS IN FEBRUARY — Philosophy major Sang C. Nam braves the snowy weather.

'Mess around with nature' at Hitchcock

By FRANCIS ZERA
Collegian Correspondent

Driving into Amherst's Hitchcock Center for the Environment at the Larch Hill Conservation Area off Route 116, one is first struck by the drastic change of atmosphere from the busy downtown area.

A former estate, the Hitchcock Center now provides the public with 27 acres of conservation land and an opportunity to become environmentally aware. A pastoral place, the Center's building (the former estate carriage house) blends well with the surroundings.

One of the Center's goals, according to Manager Ted Watt, is to allow people to "mess about with nature."

He went on to say that some people are "freaked out about nature — they're afraid to even sit on the grass because they don't come from a rural background" and that he'd like to "open their eyes to it."

Watt said the Center does this in a variety of ways. The staff works closely with the Amherst Elementary School, providing students with environmental education lessons, live animals for classroom study, and field trips to both the Center and other local points of interest.

They also provide similar services to other public school districts through their outreach program. The Center also does teacher workshops to assist school teachers in setting up an environmental curriculum, even providing for the use of course materials from their Resource Center.

Turn to Hitchcock Page 7

Dean Under the Influence

At the University of Arizona, the school's dean has brought new meaning to the acronym DUI, after being arrested for drunk driving, according to the Arizona Daily Wildcat, the student newspaper on campus.

LuAnn Kragger, the university's disciplinarian, was arrested in late January after police found an open beer in her car, during a routine traffic stop.

"It was not something you exactly expect from the dean of students," Associate Student Sen. Wendy Anderson said. "Although she hasn't been found guilty, even to be charged with that is pretty unreal."

While most students on the Tucson campus were disappointed in Kragger, one junior found humor in the situation.

"I think its great," Eric Zucker, and ecology and evolutionary biology major said. "I think they should fire her."

State of sobriety

The Washington state House of Representatives drafted a bill last week in response to the rash of alcohol related violence, which has recently plagued the University of Washington Fraternity system.

The bill would require the state's five public universities to draw up "comprehensive plans" for combating student alcohol abuse and underage drinking, according to The Daily, the student newspaper at the University of Washington.

The state would urge universities to inform a national Greek organization it refuses to be associated with its campus chapter after the first disturbance at the fraternity or sorority. This would effectively force the national organization to revoke the local chapter's charter.

The uproar concerning Greek life on the Olympia campus occurred following an incident last October where a female student lost her eye to a thrown beer bottle at a fraternity party.

As with all important campus information, "News from other 'U's'" dutifully reported the incident to its readers last fall.

Rep. Mike Heavy (D-Seattle) said the law is necessary to ensure the state's universities remain safe. Heavy said a simple campus policy is not sufficient.

Rocket Man

On the University of Texas baseball team, the No. 21 has proven to be a winner. So big of a winner, some are arguing that current Boston Red Sox hurler Roger Clemens, may not deserve having it retired in his name.

The Daily Texan reports about a controversy brewing between supporters of Clemens, who lead the Longhorns to a national championship in 1983, and current Houston Astro pitcher Greg Swindell, a three-time All-American at UT.

Both men wore No. 21 during their stay in Austin but the athletic department recently approved the number be retired in Clemens' name.

"It was really shocking at the time," Swindell said. "I always thought that awards like this were given out based on what you had done for the University and the program."

While Clemens has proven to be professional baseball's most dominate pitcher in recent years, no pitcher, in his career at UT, accomplished more than Swindell, who hold Longhorn records for strikeouts, shutouts and appearances. Clemens only pitched for two season's at UT.

Texas coach Cliff Gustafson, nominated Clemens for the honor, despite Swindell's better numbers. He said the decision came down to Clemens' combined achievements both at Texas and with the Red Sox.

"He pitched in a national championship game and has won three Cy Youngs," Gustafson said. "How many people can say they've done that. He's probably the most well known athlete to ever come out of Texas."

Good choice coach.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Creative tips to help Auxiliary Services make some cash

So Auxiliary Services wants to know how to fix the Campus Center and balance its budget. They should ask me — I've practically lived in this building the last four years. Unlike some who actually do live here.

Of course, I'm going to offer my opinion anyway. The following are all good ideas that make fiscal sense. Not all of them will be popular, but remember what Lt. Frank Drebin says about the truth in Naked Gun 2 1/2: The Smell of Fear: "Oh, it hurts. Not like jumping on a bicycle with the seat missing, but it hurts."

One of Auxiliary Services' ideas is closing the Coffee Shop. This makes sense, since the products served at the Coffee Shop overlap much of what the Hatch and Bluewall already offer.

But here's the irony: no one goes to the Coffee Shop for coffee. Serious joe drinkers head for the Bluewall, a bar disguised as a coffee house and ice cream parlor. Meanwhile the Hatch, a bar disguised as a bar, is usually empty. So why not use a little creativity and make the following three-way shift:

Greg
SUKIENNIK

• Take the Bluewall's coffee and ice cream operation and move it to the Coffee Shop, where coffee belongs.

• Move all concourse-level food operations to the Hatch, a big enough facility in need of increased business.

• Restore a lost piece of UMass folklore to its former glory by moving the Hatch Bar to the Bluewall, once again giving the school the longest bar in Western New England.

Bringing back the Bluewall is the only speculative move of the three, but it could work. The Bluewall is a nicer, bigger, better-lit room than the Hatch. The Bluewall's reputation still precedes itself to this day, even though it closed as a bar years ago. Jay Leno once mentioned it on the Tonight Show during an interview of UMass alumna Natalie Cole. That kind of tradition should live on. The coffee and ice cream they serve there is good now; dollar drafts and no cover charge will be better later.

If marketed correctly, the Bluewall could compete with overcrowded uptown bars, hence taking students off North Pleasant Street and satisfying the grumpy people uptown. Why stagger all that way to stand in line when you can stagger to the Campus Center and walk right in? Think about it.

Moving upstairs, let's look at the Top of the Campus. The TOC Lounge does pretty good business from what I've seen, and I like it. The TOC Restaurant, however, might think about going more upscale. The food's okay, but it just needs a couple of gimmicks to attract more business.

Like skeet shooting. Imagine the thrill of holding a high-powered rifle in your hand after three or four Scotch and sodas, shouting "pull!" and blasting a moving piece of clay out the sky from 11 stories up. Pretty cool, eh? Ducks and library windows would be out of bounds, but there would be no bag limit and no size restrictions on administrators, PVTA buses and Amherst College students. Sounds like a plan to me.

What about cigarettes? I don't smoke — well, at least I don't inhale — but let's face it: tobacco sales could be a major windfall for the University. It should be easy to convince the state to let UMass keep all state sales tax revenue from the sale of cigarettes.

Students who have to order out for food just to get a pack of Emphysema Lights could merely come to the Campus Center for smokes. Okay, smoking is bad for you and fast becoming socially unacceptable. But think of the money.

Bureaucracies usually stifle creativity, so I can see how Auxiliary Services might not have thought of these ideas before.

Greg Sukiennik spends way too much time in the Campus Center.

Letter Policy

A brief reminder:

Letters from readers make us happy, and we print as many as possible. If you'd like to see your letter in print, just keep the following in mind:

• Letters must be typed, double-spaced, and are limited to 50 lines.

• All letters must bear the author's name, address and phone number in order to be considered for publication. This information is subject to verification.

• Unsigned letters will not be printed. We can withhold an author's name, but we need to be able to contact the author. The author's name will be kept confidential.

• Letters may be edited for grammar, clarity and length.

• The Collegian is not required to print all submitted material.

Mail your letter to the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, or drop it off in person. We're in the basement, at the opposite end from the ATMs.

Common sense for common good

I read with interest Greg Sukiennik's provocative column (Collegian, Feb. 11) and I'd like to respond.

The only thing is that I don't know whether to respond as a "Select Board type" — for I am a candidate for the Amherst Select Board — or as an "everyday Amherst resident" — for indeed I am one of those also.

The truth is that whether I act the role of a Select Board wannabee or as the nice man with the golden retriever Greg met, it would be counterproductive for me to escalate bad blood between the town and the University, because the two need each other. Students need a pleasant, friendly town to flee to when they seek rest and relaxation, and the town certainly needs the influx of capital from students seeking off-campus diversions.

So the question really becomes, "How can we co-exist?" As a first step, I suggest that both students and town folk realize that both have real grievances along with mythical ones, and begin to separate the facts from the myths.

For example, students should know that Twisters is not penalized because "Mark Forsyth sneezes" but because he continually breaks the law be exceeding the legal capacity of his bar and by serving underaged patrons.

On the other hand, townspeople should know that the great majority of students are respectful and courteous. As the owner of Grist Mill Antiques, I have had hundreds of students in my shop and have not experienced a single unpleasant moment with them.

Another myth Greg helps to perpetuate is that we politicians "have to respond [to constituent complaints] in order to get re-elected."

Certainly, we ignore constituent issues at our own risk, but some of us are willing to take that risk. Besides, there is really little risk in a select board member taking an open-minded, even-handed approach to town-gown relations.

Most Amherst voters are far too intelligent to expect anything else from their elected officials. Oops — there goes another myth.

Hill Boss
Amherst

GM deserves our support

It seems none of my cohorts are willing or perhaps able to comment on the recent exchange of fire between General Motors and NBC, and so the task falls to me like all the other things no one wants, like Old Smuggler scotch and Ayn Rand's books.

Chris J.
PETROPOULOS

The valley, it seems, thinks GM is bad, NBC is good, and GM ought be soaked for every penny that can be wrung from its weary, shriveled corporate heart. This is wrong for two reasons. NBC got off too easy, and the American corporation in general is not appreciated.

What NBC did in placing incendiary devices under a GM truck in a "demonstration" to show that these trucks are dangerous was more than fraudulent, more than dishonest and much more deserving of some kind of reprimand. NBC had Jane Pauley, who is popular and trusted, make a public apology to GM. This for manufacturing a news item that cost the already faltering car maker millions.

The populace wants companies like GM to never fire anyone, to retool quickly and painlessly and turn a profit, make better cars, and never close a plant. And yet they cheer and protest and carry signs that read "stop burning our children" when a case comes around of possible negligence.

The populace, it seems, wants to have its cake and devour it. American corporations are powerful, and have come to be regarded as endless cash cows that do not have the right to make decisions to preserve their own fiscal health. They are expected to give everyone a job, clean the environment, pay stunningly high taxes and smile. They are cast as villains as soon as anything goes wrong anywhere in our society.

This is an outrage. Without the huge conglomerates and companies, this nation would be unable to provide any of the wonderful comforts that it does. They have made the nation what it is; a place that people still flock to to improve their life, or get medical treatment, or live without the fear of armed thugs roving the streets at night.

The problem lies once again with the spoiled, soulless generation that has been choking in it's own afterbirth for the last 20 years or so. We now think that employers and manufactures exist as some kind of public utility, and we ignore their right to make a profit and control their own business affairs.

We have grown soft. We think the world owes us. We think that corporations like GM should be made to pay for everything and still turn out a marketable product.

The American businessmen and women are the unsung heroes, the fuel that keeps this country moving and able to open doors of opportunity. Not the environmentalists, not Ralph Nader, not the protesters of all kinds who, with sugary rhetoric dripping from their faces, insist that they only want to help everyone.

One should be suspect of anyone who claims to only care about others, because that can be no genuine achievement or useful human endeavor without the the condition that each participant in that action stands to gain, is serving themselves.

And so GM takes another big hit, and tries to close some plants so it can remain in business, and the vultures of compassion and liberal altruism gather to pick the bones clean.

How long until there is nothing left to gnaw? How long until we are trying to survive on a tiny trickle of commerce, regulated and taxed and hounded and misrepresented in the media as murdering fiends?

Keep your own counsel, I always say. Don't believe half of what you see and any of the rumors you hear. And serve yourself, you won't feel used in the morning.

Chris J. Petropoulos is a Collegian columnist.

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

There was a job fair last week. It was a pretty depressing affair really. I found the only organizations that really wanted me were the Peace Corps or the Air Force or Marines. Both involve travel to distant lands. I guess I've just got to decide what it is I want to do once I get to those distant lands.

Seen in the Feb. 8 Collegian: "I realized about halfway down that I had fallen out the window." Hmm.

Things to do in a crowded elevator:

• Hold your head in your hands and scream "Make it stop! Make it stop!"

• Ask everyone what brand of deodorant they use.

• Ask everyone to jump up and down in unison.

• Check for shaved pits and split ends.

• Push all the buttons and jump out at the next floor.

• Describe to your friend exactly how contagious the disease you picked up in Nepal is.

• Compare the faces of all those present to the wanted poster you stole from the post office.

• Discuss the agonizing reality of labor, even if you're not female (when males do it, it's 10 times as annoying).

Sea of white, sea of maroon, it all translates into big bucks for Calipari and his honchos. Don't be sheep.

Marc
ELLIOTT

I spend much too much time shopping in Stop & Shop's "packaged foods" aisle. I'm much too familiar with the various helpers (Tuna Helper, Hamburger Helper). 'Course I only really know how to make omelettes. Contact the Collegian offices if you feel you'd like to donate a meal.

Gov. Weld made the journey out to UMass last week. After playing musical rooms to try and shake the Western Mass. Hospital protesters, he talked to them in a room separate from the computer forum he was visiting. In that room were a handful of students holding Ted Kennedy campaign placards, probably playing on rumors a Kennedy might run for governor in '94. But then the real reason for their presence is best put by one of them, student government-type guy Matt Pavesi. "Just to be annoying," he said.

Lots of people like to speculate on what they would do if they were granted political power. My friend, I'll call him Larry, said, "If I were president, I would create a task force that would go around — hey, you're not quoting me on this are you?" 'Course he owes me money.

Well, tie me up and call me an oppressor! That good old standby rally time and place (Student Union at noon today, rally to rid the world of all its problems and problematic people) may not be the standby for long. Many of the social thought and political economy department's classes have been scheduled to run through the noon hour. Guess they'll just have to save the world at 1, eh? Someone please write in and remind me why STPEC warrants a department of its own. I've forgotten already. Doesn't the Amherst community provide UMass with enough protester sheep?

Something I think I heard at an Amherst rally: "Remember, we are the people, they're not."

Eh.

Marc Elliott is a Collegian Joe Bob columnist.

That wacky little thing called 'sex'

Sex is a goofy thing in this society.

Every new generation thinks they've re-invented it. Meanwhile, the generations before them gradually try to suppress it. If you're not having any now but have before, it takes on an inflated significance, like money to a college student. If you've never had it, it takes on a mythical appeal like the unicorn — you've heard a lot about it but have yet to encounter it in person.

If you are sexually active, depending what gender you are, your personal character can be summarized by how, where, why, who and how often you have sex.

Depending on what you read, who you listen to, what religion you are and how much TV you watch, you could be in the same state of affairs and classified anywhere from a pervert to a prude. Hey, it's sex — American style!

Brooke C.
WHEELER

Sex can be the start of some relationships, the evolution of some, and the destruction of some. The lack of it can be grounds for divorce, and the surplus of it — well, if it can be argued there is such a thing — is just like any other surplus. It drops in value.

If you have sex with the lights off, you're "shy." lights on and you're an "exhibitionist" — where's the middle ground? A candle? And then you knock it over and you're an "arsonist." If you like it in front of the fire on a furry rug, you've been watching too many cheesy soap operas, and if you prefer it on the kitchen counter you probably don't regularly chop up your own fresh veggies.

If you're having sex while reading this, you display a knack for doing two things at once, like playing the guitar while skiing. If you're thinking about sex while reading this, then at least you're paying attention to the spirit of this piece.

Everyone knows everyone thinks about sex and (nearly) everyone has at at some point(s) in their lives. Right now people are having sex! Yes, right now, people are having sex.

Look around you. I'm sure you don't go through a day without at least thinking about it once, and neither do those schmucks over there in line for food/coffee/walking by/sitting near you.

At any given moment day or night, someone somewhere will always be having sex. Always. We're talking constantly. So, why is our society so participant in and simultaneously so afraid of the most natural, common, prevalent, culture-neutral thing there is?

I tell you, it just don't make sense.

Why is the workplace sterilized and relegated to skirts below the knee, high necklines, tight collars, lots of fasteners and buttons?

Why was a woman's ankle a scandalous piece of flesh to flash in the Victorian age? Why did bathing suits use to be more like jumpsuits? Why did the rise of the hemline create such public outcry over the decades?

Someone wants us to think sex isn't there when it is. Someone wants us to believe it's evil, icky, wrong and messy and allows you the privilege of social outcast/mockery or one-way trip to that hot, fiery place that ain't the Carribean. Of course that someone is probably holed up in a hotel somewhere "preaching" to one of his flock in a very special way, or wearing out patches of their carpeting in their office, or relaxing in the sun with a giggly parcel on their lap.

Who made up the rules?

Lemme say, tweren't me.

Brooke C. Wheeler is a Collegian columnist.

Mullins creates a traffic nightmare

Let me tell you about downtown Amherst. It's a nice place, with many shops, bars, restaurants and other businesses. It's about a 40-minute drive from campus, but it's worth the trip.

"A 40-minute drive?" is what I'm sure a lot of you are thinking right now. It's true you can see the lights of the downtown Dairy Mart from the edge of campus, but you just can't get there from here. The reason? The William D. Mullins Center.

Lisa
JEZOWSKI

This beautiful arena has just opened, but it has caused me nothing but headaches so far. There have, to date, been eight events held at the arena. I have had, to date, eight instances in which I haven't been allowed easy access to the Campus Center garage, so I could go to work at the Collegian. It seems like I need to arrange my work schedule around the convenience of Ogden Entertainment, the group managing the Mullins Center.

Anyway, let me tell you about my journey from the far away place known as downtown. It is late Monday night on a long weekend. The concert at Mullins crosses my mind, but as it is 11:15 p.m. I figure it must have ended. I was wrong. Driving from downtown to Southwest was no problem, but as I turned onto Commonwealth Avenue by the Boyden Gymnasium my nightmare began.

Ahead was a strange mass of black leather. With a closer look I realized this river flowing toward me was made up of people, all fans leaving the Metallica concert. Since my destination was the Campus Center I gulped and kept driving — or at least tried to.

People were everywhere. Cars going in the opposite direction occupied my lane, and where the cars weren't fans were. Just in case the people walking five feet in front of my car couldn't see me I flashed the high beams at them. I guess it was some strange misunderstanding, but apparently one of the people thought my signal meant, "When you pass my car be sure to flick cigarette ashes on the hood." I'm sure he meant well, though.

As I neared the center itself I realized some of the masses swarming around me were actually UMass's finest, keeping control as usual. These cops somehow thought it would be a good idea to bar the entrance to the garage even though the concert was over, and people were only going in the opposite direction. Because of the barriers and the resulting detour, my nightmare continued.

As I dodged pedestrians, swerved to miss the "Mullins Shuttle," and squeezed between cars driving in the wrong lanes of traffic I encountered my second friend of the evening, one of the UMass police. He and I met when I almost took his leg off with the front of my car. This man was very busy yelling and waving at me frantically to drive, but he wasn't concerned with the limousine in front of me. The limo was pulling out of a driveway, and was occupying one and a half of the two lanes I had to choose from. I had no choice but to drive or face the wrath of Officer Friendly, so I drove, trying to squeeze between the limo and the policeman. Let's just say that the officer ought to be thankful he does not have knobby knees, or they would have been gone.

By now I was just passing the many parking lots utilized by the arena. In a driving manner not unlike the arcade game Pole Position I swerved, passed and honked my way to the entrance of the "Campus Garage Detour." Lo and behold I had to get in line behind the many people I had recently been swearing at so I could access the section of the garage that I needed to. After 10 more minutes of stop-and-go traffic I finally reached my destination, jittery and annoyed, at the ripe hour of midnight — right on schedule if you're driving in the Mullins Standard Time Zone (Or should I say the Cal-Zone? No, nevermind.).

Lisa Jezowski is a Collegian staff member.

Condoms don't always stop AIDS

AIDS. The media's reply is to practice "safe sex," advocating condoms as protection with the reasoning that the virus must not be transferred from one person to another.

At first glance, the "safe sex" campaign appears to be the way to go. Well, take another look. The belief that condoms will protect against HIV infection is, for the most part, a myth.

Skeptical? Just read the following quote taken from C.M. Roland, Ph.D., editor of Rubber Chemistry and Technology and head of Polymer Properties Section, Naval Research Laboratory:

Diana
D'AVANZO

"There are facts which suggest that rubber contraceptives are inherently unable to make sex safe. There exists direct evidence of voids in the rubber comprising condoms. Electron micrographs reveal voids five microns in size (50 times larger than the virus), while fracture mechanics analyses. . . suggest flaws as large as 50 microns. . . "

Then there is the University of Miami's study under the direction of Margaret Fischel, MD. The study included one HIV-positive and one HIV-negative spouse. Each couple engaged in vaginal sexual intercourse, using a condom as protection. The results? "In the initial study there was a 10 percent rate of transmission of HIV. After 18 months it was 17 percent."

However, the condom-maniacs claim that spermicides, when used with the condom, do the trick. The saying goes, if it sounds too good to be true it usually is. Here, the saying stands. Why? The AIDS virus is extremely PH sensitive. One part bleach to 10 parts water will kill the virus.

Writes the New England Journal of Medicine, "Spermicides are designed to be acidic in order to work. A woman may use a sponge loaded with spermicide, but after about 20 minutes the spermicide undergoes phase conversion, commingling with bodily fluids it becomes the same PH as the other fluids in the body and actually ends up protecting the virus instead of killing it!"

Furthermore, the Federal Drug Administration will not allow the claim that spermicides stop AIDS to be made.

Speaking of the FDA, did you know that, when testing condoms, the FDA uses water to test for leakage? In 1990 the Journal of Testing and Evaluation stated, "The use of a surfactant solution (similar to bodily fluid) instead of water in the current test may make it far more effective in determining the presence of very small holes in the condoms."

So, a group of researchers took a bunch of condoms and punctured all of them. This means that each condom they used contained microscopic holes. The researchers already knew that all the condoms they were using were defective. Some of the condoms were filled with fluid similar to bodily fluid. Some of the condoms were filled with water. The results?

All of the condoms filled with fluid similar to bodily fluid leaked. Not surprising — after all, we already know the condoms were defective. The surprising part is that only 25 percent of the condoms filled with water leaked, yet 100 percent were defective. Most of you guys are pretty smart. These test results should tell you that most, if not all, testing that is done on condoms using water is misleading. The actual condom failure rate is much higher than we are being told.

One more interesting tidbit of information: the National Institute of Health and Georgetown University Hospital researchers examined latex gloves as "a sufficient barrier for protection against HIV infection." One: a sperm is 3-5 microns wide — 40 times larger in width and 400 times larger in volume than the HIV virus. Two: a latex glove is 3-4 times thicker than a condom.

The results? "All gloves showed cavities throughout the matrix and tortuous channels of 5 microns penetrated the entire thickness of the glove." Hmmm. . . 5 micron channels in latex 3-4 times thicker than a condom. Do condoms protect against the 3-5 micron wide AIDS virus? I don't think so.

People need to be told the truth about condom failure.

Diana D'Avanzo is a Collegian columnist.

'Bible-thumper' takes exception

I was very reassured to read David Rivera's editorial (Collegian, Feb. 16).

I have been worried that if anything should happen to Michael Morrissey, the quality of the editorial page might actually improve.

Thanks to Mr. Rivera, I can be assured that half-baked, blind, moronic generalizations would continue. It's good to know that any yahoo with a soap box will continue to have a special place on the page.

Nestled among the many bizarre statements in his columns rests, ". . . Jerry Falwell and the rest of the Bible-thumping Puritans. . . [condemened Clinton's] plans" to end the ban against gays in the military. Despite the fact that Falwell is hardly a Puritan, I, as a "Bible-thumper," take great exception to this bigoted remark.

I assume "Bible-thumper" refers to anyone who gives the Bible any authority. How unpopular. Those darn Bible-thumpers, who, among other issues, interfered with an individual's "right" to own slaves, and continue to speak out against an individual's "right" to kill a pre-born child, must surely annoy bigots such as Mr. Rivera.

As a Christian, I must strive to, as Jesus commands, love God with all my heart, soul and mind. After much thought and prayer, I have come to a position in favor of lifting the ban on homosexuals in the military.

The Bible (thump, thump) clearly teaches that everyone has a problem with sin, not just homosexuals. Yet the military excludes homosexuals in particular.

To say that one particular sin is such that those trapped by it should be second-class citizens, in the military or elsewhere, it totally incompatible with the New Testament. We've all messed up; we're all "second-class citizens."

The good news is that each of us can be set free from the guilt and the power of sin to enjoy relationships with God and with others which we were made for. For the [illegible] to single out homosexuals is only adding fuel to the fire.

As a Christian, I cannot condone a homosexual lifestyle, but neither can I condone a self-righteous stance that leaves homosexuals out in the cold.

Alan Willcox
Amherst

Gay pride group sues to participate in parade

By TONY ROGERS
Associated Press

BOSTON — Rekindling a year-old confrontation, an Irish gay pride group was in court Tuesday seeking the right to march in South Boston's St. Patrick's Day Parade, after being denied permission by the event's sponsors.

In a repeat of events leading to last year's parade, the Irish American Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Pride Group of Boston argued that it was unconstitutional for the parade's sponsors to deny them permission to march.

"We're Irish American, we're part of the community, and we just want to take our rightful place in the parade," said Cathleen Finn, a spokeswoman for the group.

And, like last year, the South Boston Allied War Veterans Council, the parade organizer, says letting gays march would violate the spirit of the 92-year-old procession through the Irish enclave of Boston known as "Southie."

"It's old-fashion, it's traditional," Chester Darling, Attorney for the parade sponsors, told Suffolk Superior Court Judge Hiller Zobel.

Of the gay organization, Darling said; "They're a crazy, outrageous group. If they don't like this, tough — they can have their own parade."

Last year, Zobel, ruling that the parade was a public event, said the gay pride group had a constitutional right to take part. The parade typically draws more than 500,000 spectators.

But Zobel limited the group to 25 marchers and one banner, and prohibited them from distributing flyers.

It marked the first time in the parade's history that an openly gay group marched under its own banner, despite heavy police protection, some spectators threw beer cans and hurled obscenities.

The gays, wearing pink triangles and green carnations, responded to the jeers with shouts of "Happy St. Patrick's Day."

Zobel's ruling applied only to the 1992 parade, and when the gay group asked permission from the group to march this year, they were once again turned down.

The parade's sponsors charge that some members of the gay group have ties to more radical organizations like Queer Nation and could be disruptive.

"This is a family parade," said John Hurley, a parade organizer. "We don't need this radical group coming in."

But Finn denied such claims, pointing out that the group had abided by Zobel's restrictions last year.

"What did we do last year that was offensive?" Finn said.

"We were held to the most strict standards."

Zobel took the arguments under advisement. Both sides have vowed to appeal the ruling if they lose. The parade is scheduled for March 14.

Philp Cronin, an attorney for the gay group, said he would also seek a permanent injunction enabling the group to march in future parades.

In New York, a federal judge last year blocked efforts to let gays march in that city's St. Patrick's Day parade. Gay groups there have vowed to raise the issue again this year.

a blast from the past...

Test Results to Be Released on Whitmore 'Bomb'

A black box containing batteries, wires, a timing device and liquid center were found Friday in the Whitmore Hall Administration Building. The State Fire Marshall's office is conducting tests on the box with the results to be announced later today.

The box was found Friday morning after an anonymous caller to university police and the UMass switchboard warned that a "bomb" is in the ladies' room of the Whitmore building."

No arrests were made Friday.

...reprinted from the files of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian 25 years ago (Monday, March 11, 1968)

■ Levey

continued from page 1

Buddhists.

"He was just horrified, I know he used the word 'heinous' to describe the whole war theater. He had some of the deepest anti-war feelings I've ever seen. But I had no idea he was considering this," Carroll said.

"He was very well pronounced in his arguments, especially about the complacency of America allowing an anti-democratic war to go on... Greg was a very quiet person, but he was very deep," Carroll said.

According to Levey's English professor, Jules Chametzky, Levey had difficulty speaking in class, although he could be "quite eloquent," especially when discussing injustice and suffering.

Ever wondered how a newspaper is made?

When this group of WEBELOS Boy Scouts visited the Collegian production office last week they didn't know much about newspapers. Within ten minutes, they had put together an ad on our computers, printed it and pasted it up.

If you're interested in newspapers and would like to join our staff – or would just like to see how the Collegian gets put together – drop by our offices at 113 Campus Center. We couldn't give the scouts a position on our staff, but if you're an undergraduate you can start getting experience – today!

University of Massachusetts – Housing Services

1993 Women's Conference:

EmPOWERing WOMEN
Prospects & Challenges for the 21st Century

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27

Keynote Speaker: ANGELA DAVIS
author, activist, academic

Topics for the afternoon session: Women as Activists & Leaders, Women and AIDS, The Economy and Women, Women from Developing Nations, Women of Color: a Cross-Cultural Perspective, Media and Women, Violence Against Women, Women in Traditionally Male Dominated Professions, and Women and Their Relationships

Register Today!!! Space is limited, so registration is required – $3.00 donation is requested. Register Right Now!!! You can call 545-0917 or register in person at our table in the Campus Center concourse. REGISTRATION ENDS ON FRIDAY!!!

Sponsored by: NOMMO News, Black Student Union, African Student Union, African Students Association, ALAANA R.A. Matters, Anti-Racism Coalition, Forum on Developing Nations, AHORA, Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Alliance, Korean Students Association, Cape Verdean Student Alliance, Office of Third World Affairs, Graduate Student Senate, Black Mass Communication Project, Graduate Employees Organization, Valley Women's Voice, Southwest Area Government, Student Government Association, Women's Studies Department, Program for Gay/Lesbian/Bisexual Concerns, Pan-Hellenic Council, Allied Students Against Prejudice, Housing Services/Residential Education, Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board, Office of the Chancellor, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs - Dean of Students Office, Office of Human Relations

Montague Mini Mart
12 to 6 in Montague Ctr
from Amherst: 10 miles North on Rte 63 to Rte. 47N
from Northampton: 14 miles 91 North to 116 to 47N
• Follow signs to Montague Center •

Beer & Wine Sold On SUNDAYS

Bud case cans	$13.99 + dep.
Bud 12 pack bottles / warm	$13.99 + dep.
Keystone 12-pack cans	$5.90 + dep.
Busch suitcase	$11.75 + dep.
Natural light 12 pack cans	$5.59 + dep.
Rolling Rock case, bottles	$15.60 + dep.
Rolling Rock 12-pack, bottles	$8.39 + dep.
Olympia 12-pack	$4.99 + dep.
Black Label 15-pack	$5.99 + dep.

• Reasonable cigarette prices •
A wonderful selection of Australian & Chilean wines as well as the French & domestic classics 367-9551
Proper I.D. Required
And many other specials!

THE EXPERIENCE OF YOUR LIFETIME.

The elegant HarborWatch Room, serving gourmet New England and Continental Cuisine, is currently seeking experienced individuals to join our team.

HARBORWATCH ROOM

Waitstaff
Formal Dining Room training a must Bartender
Bus Persons

Interested candidates should call Cheryl at (508) 432-1000 to arrange an interview. All positions are seasonal.

23 Snow Inn Road • Harwich Port, MA • (508) 432-1000

Shoes recalled after kid puts label in mouth

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press

BOSTON — Stride Rite Corp. said Wednesday it recalled 20,000 pairs of Keds shoes for young children after one Pennsylvania infant apparently pulled the blue rubber label from a heel and put it in his mouth.

The Cambridge-based company said there have been no reports of injuries, but the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission said the labels are detached more easily than intended and present a choking hazard.

"It seems as if the cement that was originally used was not strong enough," said Stride Rite spokeswoman Karen Crider. "We have since changed both the cement and the manufacturer."

She said two mothers the one in Pennsylvania and a second who was not identified called the company a month ago to report the problem.

Keds "Flexibles" shoes, which sell for $30 a pair, are made for children up to about age 5.

Officials said the shoes affected were sizes 2-10 with blue Keds label on the heel.

Keds said parents could return the shoes to the store where they were purchased for a replacement pair or refund.

Crider said the cost of the recall had not been estimated. About 12,000 pairs of the shoes had been sold, and the shoes that were still on shelves had been removed, the company said.

Keds sold 26 million pairs of shoes last year.

"This is just a tiny number," Crider said. She said it was the first recall in the company's 77-year history.

It's more like egg on your face, because this is the first recall they've ever had to do," said Josephine Esquivel, an analyst at Lehman Bros. who follows Stride Rite. "It is voluntary. No one forced them to do this. There was no harm to any of the kids."

The shoes with the loose labels were made in Korea. Keds switched manufacturers a year ago, before the problem was reported, Crider said. Keds "Flexibles" now are made in the United States.

The shoes come with high-lace, mid-lace or velcro fasteners. The design features jumbled triangles, squares and circles in six different colors.

The models that were recalled are numbers TH2120, 2121, 2122, 2130, 2131, 2140 and 2141, followed by the designation TW-206 or CH-206. The code can be found beneath the shoe tongue.

Crider said shoes labeled "U.S." are unaffected.

Chinese activists freed

Gov't releases two leaders of '89 revolt

By DAN BIERS
Associated Press

BEIJING — Two prominent students activists from the 1989 pro-democracy movement, including the most wanted student leader, were released today on parole, the government said.

The parole of Wang Dan, No. 1 on the most-wanted list police issued after the pro-democracy movement was crushed, and Guo Haifeng means all students "who violated the criminal law" during the protest have been freed, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

Xinhua said the two had "observed prison regulations."

Wang, 23, was released about four months before his term was to have ended and Guo, 27, was releases about three months early. Both were serving four-year terms.

The releases could be a good will gesture to the new Clinton administration, which has vowed to focus on human rights in foreign policy, or part of China's bid to sway the International Olympic Committee to award the 2000 Summer Olympics to Beijing.

Robin Munro, researcher for the human rights group Asia Watch, said the government was merely "making a few token releases."

"The student never really were the issue for the government. Workers and intellectuals got much heavier sentences, far more than the students," he said. "We want to see a major dent in those cases before we will think there's any kind of freeing up."

The government also announced the release of Zhu Hongsheng, a 76-year-old Catholic priest from Shanghai, before the exoneration of his 15-year sentence. The Xinhua report did not say when the term was to have ended.

Earlier this month, the government released one of the country's longest-held political prisoners, Wang Xizhe, two years before the end of his 14-year term.

Several political prisoners from the 1989 protests remain in jail.

■ Hitchcock

continued from page 3

This library, containing several thousand volumes of environmentally-oriented materials, from trail maps to biodiversity studies. The Resource Center is open to the public, but the Center asks that people become members ($7 annually for students) to check materials out of the Center. The membership also provides a 10 percent discount on the merchandise that the Center sells, as well as a discount on the numerous educational programs offered.

Watt said since the main goal is education, a variety of programs are offered. These are aimed at many interests and age groups. A hands-on theme applies to all programs, which run from nature hikes and "Dinosaur Days" for children to an evening course on "Planning your Long Distance Hike." Director David Ziomek's pet project is the "owl prowl" — a 3:00 a.m. to dawn excursion into local woodlands to try to call in and spot local owl species.

Research also plays a part in the Center's activities. The Center has been entrusted with the care of the world's first "salamander tunnels," located on (actually under) Henry Street in Amherst, which provide safe passage for the salamanders to their breeding sites.

Similar tunnels are in place for different species in Britain and Germany, so research here can have widespread effects.

Watt said he believes that "more people could use the facility but just don't know about it." He said he would like anyone interested in the Center to call at 256-6006. The Center also actively seeks volunteers to assist in their programs and in the maintenance of their facilities. "I would love to hear from people interested in volunteering, like students, faculty, or staff" from the University community, Watt said.

The center is located at 525 South Pleasant Street (Route 116 South) in Amherst.

How's your First Aid? American Red Cross

Are you interested in writing for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Issues?
If so, contact
Melanie DiSilva at the Collegian
113 Campus Center • 545-3500

THIS SATURDAY!

HOST OF HIT TV SHOW "STUDS"

All Ages All Shows

MARK DeCARLO

COMING SOON

MICHAEL WINSLOW "Police Academy" Feb 27
JAMIE FOX "IN LIVING COLOR" Mar 6
JUDY TENUTA "The Love Goddess" Mar 27
TOMMY CHONG CHEECH & CHONG Apr 3
DAVID ALAN GRIER "IN LIVING COLOR" Apr 10

COMEDY CONNECTION AT THE HU KE LAU CHICOPEE

Just a few short minutes from the U. MASS campus!

CALL 413•593•5222

Pearl Street

DANCE CLUB

Wednesday -
DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R.

Thursday -
EIGHTEEN & OVER DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R.
WHMP's Ann Spenner Broacasting Live

Friday -
DANCING WITH DJ PETE
Playing the Best Dance Music
• Free Admission Before 10pm•
••Free All Night With College ID••

Saturday -
THE AREAS BIGGEST & BEST SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY WITH DJ DAVE
Featuring The Best Dance Hits From The 70's, 80's & 90's
Mt. Tom Ski Pass Giveaways

LIVE MUSIC

Thurs., Feb. 18-9:00pm/18+/
SHOCKRA
Jiggle The Handle

Fri., Feb. 19-7:00pm
Male Dance Revue
CALIFORNIA PLAYGIRL CENTERFOLDS
Tickets Only $5 in Advance
Downstairs-9:00pm/Rock It2-
Free Rock Friday
TEXAS FLOOD
Stevie Ray Vaughn Tribute!
Diamond Back
•Free Admission Before 10:00pm•
••Free All Night With College ID••

Sat., Feb. 20-9:00pm
R&B / Swing Dance Party
EIGHT TO THE BAR
Andrea & The Mortones

Tues., Feb. 23-9:00pm/18+/
WAMH Presents,
TECHNO/ RAVE DANCE PARTY

Thurs., Feb. 25-9:00pm/18+/
BIM SKALA BIM

Duck Duck

Fri., Feb. 26-7:00pm
Virgin/Charisma Recording Artists
THE SIGHS
Ray Mason
Downstairs-9:00pm
Free Rock Friday
JOAN OSBORNE
Borderland
(Free Before 10:00pm, or Free After Sighs Concert)

Sat., Feb. 27-9:00pm
WHO'S KIDDIN' WHO

Thurs., Mar. 4-9:00pm/18+
Pink Floyd Tribute,
THE MACHINE

Fri., Mar. 5-9:00pm
THE EQUALITIES

Sat., Mar. 6-9:00pm
JOHN CAFFERTY & THE BEAVER BROWN BAND
Barry Kingston

Tues., Mar. 9-9:00pm/18+
TOO MUCH JOY

Sat., Mar 13-9:00pm
THE FOOLS

Mon., Mar. 22-8:00pm/18+
KING MISSILE
Monks Of Doom

Tues., Mar. 30-8:00pm
BLACK UHURU
Andrew Tosh/Louie Rankin

Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Box Office, For The Record in Amherst: Ticket Pro (800) 828-7080 10 Pearl Street Northampton 584-7571

■ students

continued from page 1

Republicans denounced Clinton's plan as a massive round of tax hikes. GOP lawmakers wore buttons that said "Tax and Spend, Again" and "It's Spending Stupid."

GOP Leader Bob Michel said, "The American people would do well to remember: when you a hear a Democrat call for taxes, do not ask for whom the tax rises — it will rise for you."

"Tonight the president mentioned a number of new programs that inevitably will cost considerable sums of money," Michel said. "Laudable as they may be, how do we pay for them? The president's answer is: more taxes on everyone."

Clinton's plan would spread pain almost universally, although well-to-do people would be hit hardest. The administration braced for stiff opposition following a negative reaction from Wall Street.

The program would impose higher energy taxes on every household with income of more than $30,000. The administration calculated that would raise $71.4 billion by 1998.

Income tax rates would jump significantly — from 31 percent now to 36 percent next year — for families with taxable income over $140,000 and for individuals over $115,000. A 10 percent surtax which Clinton had promised to impose on millionaires would be applied to taxable income over $250,000.

■ students

continued from page 1

"The cuts are in farm subsidies, outdated programs and social security for upper-income recipients," Carpenter said. "The question is not whether or not you're going to have taxes but what government do you need?"

State Sen. Stan Rosenberg also participated and said he felt very optimistic about the president's address.

"He's laid a course for change similar to what we did here in this state five years ago," Rosenberg said.

Rosenberg said he is glad Clinton stressed the health care crisis. Rosenberg said the cost of our current health care system is bankrupting both the public and private sector.

Carpenter agreed that health care is an important issue because of the baby-boom generation which is heading towards retirement. He said we must find an efficient way to fund health care.

But not everyone in attendance was optimistic about the president's proposals. Keith Czerwiec, president of the Republican Club, said he thinks Clinton is trying do too many things at once.

"He's trying to be a miracle worker," Czerwiec said. He said an alternative plan would be to turn investment into capital because capital will get the economy going again.

Czerwiec also said he questions the kind of socialist health care reform he thinks the president will propose.

"Health care is going to be a gaping wound," Czerwiec said. "It didn't work in Canada, Sweden, the Netherlands or Britain." Each of those countries has some kind of nationalized health care program.

King jurors think first verdict wrong

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Many of the prospective jurors questioned so far in the Rodney King case didn't like the verdict in the first trial, but all insisted they could do the right thing without fear in the second one.

"I'm not going to worry about what my friends and family say," a Black woman said adamantly Tuesday. "I'm going to do what I need to do and what I think is right on the evidence."

Her comments contradicted a defense attorney's prediction that Blacks would disqualify themselves from the federal case for fear of being ostracized if they acquitted the four policemen charged in King's beating.

In the first day of jury questioning Tuesday, a multiracial group of 12 prospective jurors selected at random and referred to by number to protect their identities were interviewed. By day's end, the opposing attorneys had not asked that any be dismissed.

Lawyers said the process was moving more slowly than expected and it was unlikely a jury could be seated by today, as the judge had hopes.

More candidates will be called from among the 284 who filled out questionnaires and agreed to be sequestered for at least two months if selected.

All 12 members of the first group had seen the videotape of King's beating,. But U.S. District Judge John Davies said the test was whether they could be impartial.

Nick & Dick's

The finest family style restaurant on Cape Cod serving breakfast, lunch and dinner is currently seeking experienced individuals to join our team.

Dining Room Supervisor
Waitstaff
Ice Cream Counter Help
Bus Persons
Cashiers/Hostess

Nick & Dick's RESTAURANT & ICE CREAM

All positions are seasonal. Interested candidates should call Cheryl at (508) 432-1000 to arrange an interview.

Route 28 • Harwich Port, MA • (508) 432-1000

Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586 5726
213 MAIN ST

SON OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586 1707
21 STATE ST

NORTHAMPTON

BANANARAMA
Fabulous Frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

New From Apple

Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller: the perfect Macintosh system to fit your budget.

Two inexpensive combinations that will help you survive even the most grueling semester.

Pepperoni and Mushroom.

The affordable, new Apple StyleWriter II and Apple Macintosh Color Classic.

Introducing the most affordable color Macintosh system ever. The new Macintosh Color Classic computer gives you a sharp, bright Sony Trinitron display, built-in audio, file sharing, networking and more. And the new, compact Apple StyleWriter II printer delivers stunning, laser-quality output while still fitting within your budget. See this new system today at your Apple Campus Reseller. Where you'll get special student pricing, as well as service during college.* And discover the power of Macintosh. The power more college students choose. The power to be your best.

UNIVERSITY STORE

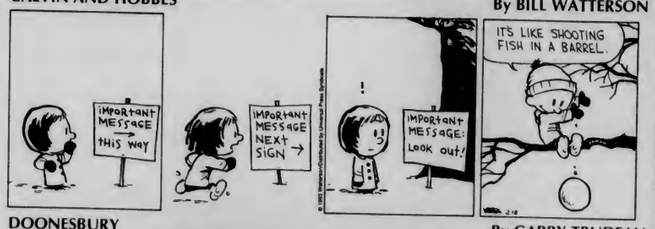
Stop in for more information - or call 545-2619

Campus Center 545-2619

Hours: Monday-Friday 9am-5pm Saturday 11am-3pm

*Offer is available only from Apple Campus Resellers which are Apple Authorized Service Providers. © 1993 Apple Computer Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, StyleWriter and The Power to be your best are registered trademarks of Apple Computer Inc. Classic is a registered trademark licensed to Apple Computer Inc. Trinitron is a registered trademark of Sony Corporation.

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON



THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Oh, man. There you go again with another one of those hiss-and-tell books."

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

Quote of the Day

"A pessimist is someone who, faced with the choice of two evils, chooses both."
– G.B. Shaw

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The emphasis is on financial matters. The direct approach works best now. Stick to the truth and you will come out on top. Romantic possibilities abound this evening.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Try not to worry so much about your job. You will meet any new challenges one step at a time. A friend may act very emotional.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It may be hard to get moving at work this morning. A seemingly lost love could return later on. Reinforce existing partnership bonds. Replace worn-out behavior patterns with positive new moves.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A gold head for business guides you. Find out the facts and act on them. Be open to suggestions from powerful people. Love finds you when you get out and socialize.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are attuned to the psychic realm. You may be able to help someone by appealing to the proper authorities. An affair or romance is a distinct possibility.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your personal relationships would benefit from a lighter, more sensitive touch. You may be worrying too much about your funds or shared resources. Unity means greater strength.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A working partnership can be a big plus. A built partners strive to be considerate. Probing behind the scenes helps you find ways to boost profits. Salvage a love relationship headed for the rocks.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A quiet chat brings you closer to someone important to you. The pain of a lost love or a separation has given you wisdom. Friends are supportive and generous.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your work is enhanced by a new sense of playfulness. Sharing ideas helps you decide what to do next. Spruce up your home. Buy brightly colored pillows or apply a coat of paint.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pouring yourself into your work distracts you from certain problems in a relationship. Friends are a source of love and support. Laughter keeps your spirits high.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Discard outdated procedures and promote teamwork. Discuss educational matters, purchase books and read professional papers. A letter from an old friend will provide valuable business insights.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Financial trends are working in your favor. A positive, optimistic attitude will help you over any rough spots. Communicate honestly with young people. Do not exaggerate.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

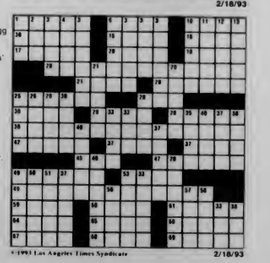
ACROSS
1 "It's a Wonderful Life" director
6 Small amount
10 Speck
14 Shun
15 Political policy
16 Victor's words
17 Marina location
18 Taj Mahal city
19 Pocket residue
20 Words to the cab driver
23 Take five
24 Closet item
25 Lords' mates
29 Actress/dancer Charisse
30 "Heaven, — heaven..."
31 Crosby, Bills and Nash, e.g.
34 Prevention dosage
39 Words from Emily Post?
42 "I can see with half —" Cervantes
43 Call call
44 Odds maker
45 Snake
47 Football's Amos — Stagg
49 Finally!
53 Lhasa —
55 Isley Brothers' command
58 Containers
60 Dalai —
61 Bad-mouth
64 "Picnic" playwright
65 Phony: Abbr.
66 Murphy or Fisher
67 Boardroom bigwigs: Abbr.
68 Realizes after taxes
69 Singer from Melbourne

DOWN
1 ABC rearranged
2 St.
3 Beans' companion
4 Ceremony
5 Stick
6 Thin boards
7 Day's follower
8 Concerning
9 Swell!
10 Italy's second largest city
11 Obligated
12 Hint of color
13 Join the race
21 Basil-based sauce
22 Wore
25 Capital or bean
26 Former Uganda tyrant
27 Eat well
28 — 500
29 Singer Perry
32 Cut of beef
33 Anger
35 "Do — others..."
36 Atlanta's "— Deion Sanders
37 Vera or Santa
38 This, in Toledo
40 Dough raiser
41 Under water
48 One of the "Big Three"
48 Beauty
49 Room at the top
50 Cord
51 Jargon
52 Foolish people
53 Own up to
54 Tests for H.S. grs.
56 Nominate
57 Wavy, in heraldry
58 Lincoln's beloved Mary
62 Spanish hero
El —
63 Opener

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	S	S	S	C	A	P	A		T	S	A	R
W	E	L	T		C	A	D	D	I		A	C	N	E
I	N	A	E		E	N	E	R	O		P	A	T	I
D	O	V	S		N	N		I	M	P	E	D	E	D
			P	E	A	S	A	N	T
C	O	N	S	O	R	T	S		C	L	O	T	H	E
O	P	A		S	T	I	R	E	S		A	F	R	O
M	E	S	S	O	P	O	T	A	M	I	A		F	A	S
E	R	A	S	E		P	A	T	E	R			C	E	E
S	A	L	S	A		S	H	O	M	E	L	E	S	S
			I	S	T	S		B	O	N	E
P	I	L	F	E	R	E	D		D	E	A	D	L	Y
A	L	A	I		D	O	P	I	N	E		D	A	I	S
F	I	R	E		P	A	N	E	L		E	L	S	E
H	E	A	D		S	L	O	B	S		R	E	A	R

2/18/93



©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/18/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Copy Editor ..... Michelle Robbins
PhotoTechnician ..... Aram Comjean
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Jim Ganley, Sean Ramsey, Mike Carvalho

Menu

LUNCH
Chicken Burritto
Fish Munchies

BASICS LUNCH
Bean Burritto
Fish Munchies

DINNER
Roast Beef
Baked Ziti

BASICS DINNER
Rice/Veggie Pilaf
Baked Ziti

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

A friendly visit to Mr. Nash's neighborhood

"It's a beautiful day in the neighborhood, a beautiful day in the neighborhood." Hi, neighbor and welcome to Mr. Nash's neighborhood, a column for everyone to learn.

It seems Bobby Sura got a good taste of the pine this week as Florida State coaches benched he and Doug Edwards for skipping classes. This writer remembers the clothesline (a-la "Nikita Koloff") executed on Mike Williams back in December. Can you say "Punk"? I knew you could.

Jason
NASH

However, watch out for Sura and the Seminoles. With five potential NBA picks it's possible they had too much talent and it's taken them a season to get it together. Can you say "Final Four"?

Who ever didn't see the Phoenix-Boston game the other night missed the greatest team in the NBA along with its greatest player, in Charles Barkley. Yeah, yeah Chi-town I can hear you cries of Mikey all the way here, but the truth is Michael's bored with this game and whines when B.J. Armstrong takes a jumper. Hard to believe Bobby Knight cut "Sir Charles" from the Olympic team. Can you say "MVP"? I knew you could.

With the sight of of Yinka Dare a second time and with the knowledge of Marcus Camby signed and delivered to the Student Union, one must consider the battle of the Goliaths that we're in for over the next three years. Can you say "Sampson-Ewing and Virginia versus Georgetown"? I knew you could.

Looking down the starting lineup of the Boston Red Sox and comparing it with the Colorado Rockies makes any Fenway Faithful sick as a dog. Comparing the two teams starter for starter makes me like the Rockies so much more, especially in the high-altitude park their playing in. Decide for yourself? Andres Galarraga or Mo Vaughn? Charlie Hayes or Scott Cooper? Dante Bichette or Bob Zupcic? Benito Santiago or Tony Pena? Not to throw in the towel early or anything but, can you say "Lou Gorman will be out of a job by July"? I knew you could.

Seeing the Michael Dokes and Riddock Bowe fight and the way Dokes had his life saved by the referee makes me wonder if pro football could do the same. After seeing the Buffalo-Dallas Super Bowl, can you say "deja vu"? I knew you could.

Parrish and Mchale for Joe Barry Carroll? Dennis Johnson for Rick Robey? How about Craig "don't make me go on the ice again" Janney and Stephaine Quintal for Adam Oates. Oates is second in the league in scoring and with Cam Neely back; can you say "heist"? I knew you could.

Hey, great win and all over George Washington on Saturday and sure Mike Williams was the hero. But let's not forget a certain member of the Unsung Hall of Fame who hit two three pointers in a row bringing the game back into reach. Can you say "number 22"? I knew you could.

With Harry Sinden ready to check into a state hospital at any time the Bruins could have a very different looking line up come playoff time. The latest rumor has he and Ranger GM Phil Esposito dealing Ray Bourque and Andy Moog to New York for Mike Gartner, Darren Turcotte and James Patrick. With Bourque on the decline and Moog seeming as shaky as ever; can you say "hey "'Espo', yes, yes, yes!!!".

Thinking about picking an NCAA Hoop Champion? Well, forget about Michigan. Yeah, they made it there last year, yeah they got the talent and yeah Rob Pelinka is actually decent. As Johnny Most would say "they're hotdogs, put some mustard on 'em". Can you say "no one wins if everyone wants to play point guard?" I knew you could.

WCVB-Channel 5 cashed in on the ratings last week with their celebrity sportscasters featured on the 11 O'clock news. Such athletes as Rick Fox, Dee Brown, Hugh Millen and Nancy Kerrigan were featured each night. I pray you saw Hugh Millen on Thursday as he looked like he'd seen a ghost. Maybe he did; can you say "Bledsoe"? I knew you could.

Want a laugh? Check out Kareem Abdul-Jabbar commenting on ESPN. Jabbar knows what he's talking about, but says some of the stupidest things. As bad as Jeff Crofts? Can you say "Well, at least he doesn't sing during the game". I knew you could.

And finally, oh Celtic god above, send someone fast. The green seem far away from number 17 and need help in the big man department. A solution seems to be Hartford's Vin Baker who is 6'11 and averaging 26 points per game in the North Atlantic Conference. "The Shag of the NAC" as he's called has already said he wants to play for the Celts. Can you say, "Please, Red work some magic"?

Jason Nash is a Collegian staff member.

UMass finishes 2nd

Four runners pace the team in A-10s

By JASON NASH
Collegian Staff

The UMass Women's track team continued their late season surge last weekend by tying for second in the Atlantic 10 Championships on the campus of the University of Rhode Island.

West Virginia won the six team meet with 109 points while UMass tied URI with 91 points placing ahead of Rutgers, Temple and St. Josephs.

Faced with the handicapp of having the fewest athletes there, UMass got 55 of their 91 points in bulk from four women, in Kelly Liljeblad, Janey Meeks, Becky Johnson and Kerry Acre.

Liljeblad demonsrated her strength in distance by placing second in the mile and third in the 3000 meter, posting her best times all season in the those events and picking up 15 1/2 points in the process.

"Kelly has done it all year for us and today she really poured it on," said head coach Julie LaFreniere. "Scoring that many points in distance is rare because it takes so long for a runner to recover."

Meeks added 17 points finishing second in the long and triple jump. Her feat in either jumps is quite amazing due to her consistent fouling that made her attempt each jump six times apiece.

"Janey might have gotten first if she didn't have to jump more than once," said LaFreniere. "The triple jump was right after the long jump and she was pretty tired going into it."

UMass got more help from Aker and Johnson, who pitched in eleven points a piece. Aker finished first in the 800 meter while Johnson finished first in the 1000 meter qualifying her for the ECAC's.

Other stars of note included Diane Ozzolek and Natalie Hart who excelled in their respected throwing events. Ozzolek finished second overall in the 20-pound weight, while Hart broke a school record in the shot put.

"This was the first time Natalie had thrown all season," said LaFreniere. "But, I knew she was capable of breaking all of our records."

Overall, LaFreniere was excited about her teams performance and how smoothly the meet went. However, she realizes the lack of bodies and the toll it has taken on her team.

"This was a tremendous team effort," she said. "But, we're going to take it easy this week. For the entire season the women have been doubling and tripling on events and it's beaten them up leaving them susceptible to injuries.

UMass travels to Providence, Rhode Island Friday for the Brown Invitational.

If you see news in the making, call the MDC HOTLINE at 545-0719

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
TONIGHT
CHARTREUSE SKI PARTY
Special Drink ~ Swampwater
Register to win a $1000.00 Ski Package to be drawn Feb. 25
Boots by Raichle
Bindings From Look
Sponsored By
COMPETITIVE EDGE SKI & BIKE
HOLYOKE & HADLEY
"GET THE EDGE AT COMPETITIVE EDGE"
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

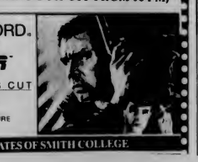
安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOMESTYLE COOKING
• FRESH VEGETABLES FROM OUR FARM
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS • NEWLY REMODELED
MASTERCARD & VISA ACCEPTED
253-7835 253-2813
62 MAIN STREET, AMHERST

COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING
It really works!
Call today! 545-3500

Rich's Continues With Great Prices!
Heavyweight Dickies
Flannel Shirts $10
Pea Coats $45
Bajas $12.99
RICH'S
RICH'S ARMY/NAVY & CASUAL CLOTHES
24 Center St., Northampton
586-0275
(Next to the Iron Horse)

ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435
6th Week! - Curtain Daily - 6:45 & 9:00
"One pick-your-jaw-off-the-floor stunner of a plot twist." -Entertainment Weekly

LATE SHOW THIS FRI. & SAT. AT 11:00PM
(ONLY AREA SHOWING-BOX-OFF FROM 10 PM)



AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

There's A New Way to Get to Mt. Tom.
Here's a hint:
Now it's even easier to ski closer to home! And purchasing a combination bus/lift ticket saves you money, too! Take the Peter Pan bus, any day of the week, from any one of these locations and enjoy great skiing day and night at nearby Mt. Tom:
AMHERST/UMASS NORTHAMPTON SPRINGFIELD BRIDGEPORT
HARTFORD MIDDLETOWN MERIDEN NEW HAVEN
Mt. TOM SKI AREA
Peter Pan Trailways
Route 5, Holyoke, MA • Call Peter Pan for info: 781-2900

■ Tyson

continued from page 12

each curve, where sorrow was conjured up in different ways at each stop.

Tyson was brought into the world in a way no child should. He was poverty stricken, lacked a father-figure and looked at crime as the way out. Sorrow.

Well, Tyson finally got the guidance he needed from the eccentric boxing trainer Cus D'Amato. D'Amato brought up Tyson as if Tyson were his own kid. The thing is D'Amato died before he got the chance to see his kid grow up. Sorrow.

Even D'Amato exploited Tyson a little bit, as he put Tyson ahead of everyone else when it came to rules. Because D'Amato saw the explosive potential in Tyson, he allowed Tyson leeway where he would punish the other kids/boxers. In the long run, that leeway would come back to haunt Tyson. Sorrow.

Jim Jacobs, one of Tyson's original managers, was another source of guidance for Tyson. Jacobs' knowledge of boxing history and his collection of old fight films astounded and enthralled Tyson. However, Jacobs and his influence died a couple of title-defenses into his own heavyweights' reign. Sorrow.

Robin Givens and Ruth Roper. Sorrow.

Don King, who kicked a man to death in '60s, staged a phony boxing tournament in the '70s and reportedly stole from his stable of heavyweights in the '80s, took over Team Tyson after a power struggle with Bill Cayton, one of Tyson's original managers. King proceeded to surround Tyson with his people, lavished Tyson with gifts, all the while not caring about Tyson the person. Sorrow.

Most of all, though, the ignorance of Tyson and his followers was and is the biggest cause for concern. Tyson and his backers continue to say he is not guilty of raping Desiree Washington. In their eyes, Tyson did no wrong. Well, their eyes are in serious need of some glasses. Sorrow.

Inside the ring, Tyson was a joy to watch. In his prime, Tyson was a complete fighter. He had it all, defense, a jab, speed and, of course, power. Electrifying knockouts were commonplace with Tyson. But, he got careless and let his skills slip until he got beat.

Now, I hear people around me talk about how Tyson will become the heavyweight champ in the ring once he gets out of jail.

Well before people start worrying about his in-the-ring career I just hope he gets the guidance and support he needs outside the ring so he does not give himself the chance to be a heavyweight champ in jail.

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian columnist.

SPORTS NOTICE
UMass Sports Schedule Today:
Men's Basketball: UMass at Buffalo
Women's Basketball: GW at UMass
Men's Swimming: UMass in New Englands at Storrs, Conn.

Write for the Collegian
Arts — News
Black Affairs — Multicultural Affairs
Ed/Op — Sports
GLB Issues — Third World Affairs
Jewish Affairs — Women's Issues
Come to 113 Campus Center to find out how.

WOULD YOU LIKE 19,000 PEOPLE TO SEE YOUR PHOTOS ?
BECOME A COLLEGIAN PHOTOGRAPHER

Estudiantes de Habla Hispana
Centro de Salud Mental
Universidad de Massachusetts en Amherst
Esta ofreciendo la oportunidad de unirte a un grupo donde exploraremos nuestras relaciones con miembros de nuestras familias. Muchas veces esas relaciones no fueron funcionales y hemos desarrollado sentimientos hacia ellas.
Ven, unete a nosotros, y en un ambiente sano y confidencial convercemos.
Llama al 545-2337 y pide una cita para conocer de ti y para tu conocer la lider del grupo y lo que ella puede ofrecerte.

COME CLEAN WITH US
Open 7 days a week 7am - 10pm
SOUTH TOWNE COMMONS LAUNDROMAT
479 West St., South Amherst

Speedwash
Open 24 Hours
11 Pray St., Amherst

INTRODUCE YOUR BUSINESS TO OVER 19,000 STUDENTS!
ADVERTISE IN THE COLLEGIAN
CALL 545-3500 FOR RATES AND INFO
IT WORKS.

Students - Start the Job Hunt Early
Explore Career Opportunities in the Non-Profit Sector
"Organize and Implement Non-Profit Job Campaigns"
Saturday, February 20 Workshop (rescheduled) 1:30 - 5:00pm with Dennis T. Baylor
Director, Career Development Services
ACCESS, Publisher of Community Jobs
REGISTER NOW!!!
Sponsored by Avanti Career Management
Sullivan Square • 17 New South Street
Northampton, MA 01060
AVANTI Career Management
(413) 584-8409
Discounts for Students, Advance Registration

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students – Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30 Fri. 8:30-2:30 113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

A Freebie! Learn to play bridge – FREE! SOM 101 Wed. 2/24/93 5:30 pm-7:30 pm FREE T-shirt & book.

Leadership, Friendship, Service Rush Alpha Phi Omega Information Meetings: TONIGHT-7:30 pm Campus Center 917

Sigma Delta Tau Open Rush Tues, Wed, Thurs, 7-9 pm For more info call Kim 549-5388

Unitarian Universalist Young Adult Group meeting this Sunday. Contact Sean at 546-3935 for more info.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Europe this summer? Only 189! Jet there anytime for $169!! Reported in Let's Go! and NY Times. CARRIBEAN $189 r/t air to somewhere sunny. California -- $129 one way, either way AIRHITCH @ 212-864-2000

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Escort 87 Nor.st runs great must sell $2600/b.o. Call 665-2350

Hyundai Excel '87 only 5975 Changed: Catalyst, battery, tires Recent complete tune-up Evangelos 549-8579

Purchasing a car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center 545-1995

ENTERTAINMENT

SYNAESTHESIA "Groovy music that you can dance to!" Tonight at the Hatch 9 pm

FOR RENT

Cape Cod-- Group Summer Rentals -- Waterfront Houses Falmouth area 508 477-6000

Cape Cod -- Group rentals in all areas for summer season. Reasonably Priced! Honey Sperco, Broker, 394-2857 days, 398-9367 evenings

Fridge Rental 253-9742 delivered free

1 bdrm in large apt. $350/ heat incl. 665-3815

112 Town House Apartment available for rent $267.50 available immediately to be shared with male graduate student 545 8744 or 665-2810 E

Room downtown. Quiet, private; lease through Aug.; $350/mo inclusive 253-4236 9am - 9pm

FOR SALE

GNR tix 4 fourth row seats Also 2 Bon Jovi Hartford 253-9813

1992 Subaru Loyale 12K like new $7500 call 256-0966 or 718-852-0774

1950's Coke Machine Bottle type vending Adj. Pricing Keep 60 bottles very cold! Great for Beer/parties $400 b.o. 253-5196

Printer for sale 413-245-9542 after 7 ask for Don

RT Ticket to New Orleans During Spring Break $250 256-8696

FOUND

Two pairs of glasses found 1 tan with grey case 1 gold-metal with blue case call 549-5120

GREEKS AND CLUBS

$1000 an Hour! Each member of your frat, sorority, team, club, etc., pitches in just one hour and your group can raise $1000 in just a few days! Plus a chance to earn $1000 for yourself! No cost. No obligation. 1-800-932-0528 ext 65

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action. $100/wk. + On Bus line 584-9830.

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT -- Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000- $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Jobs! Telefund is hiring! Qualified students needed to help raise funds for UMass. Flexible hours, competitive pay, and great experience. Call 545-3509 or stop down to our office in the basement of Memorial Hall for an application

Postal Jobs Available! Many positions, Great Benefits. Call 1-800-436-4365 ext. p-3306

Summer jobs and Internships University Directories, the nations largest publisher of campus telephone directories (including UMass at Amherst), is interviewing goal oriented students for a challenging, full-time summer position. Gain valuable experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings $3900. Expense paid training program in Chapel Hill, NC. College credit may be available. Interviews on UMass at Amherst campus February 24th. Information and interview sign up available today at the Visitors Center or call 1-800-743-5556

Telemerketers -- great money Relaxed rural office. Evenings. Experienced only. Call Cheryl 9 4 548-9688

INSTRUCTION

Learn to Scuba dive earn two credits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday at Curry Hicks 7-10 pm 1-800-282-0977

Physics and Meth Tutor M.A. in Physics Experienced teaching assistant Call 256-0260

LOST

LOST! Brand new glasses grey and black plastic with silver frame. Lost in CC or Basics. Call April 6-4574

Lost -- Grazn Caribou backpack. Probably near Boyden Gym last week call Jason @ 549-0485

Lost Ring -- Reward Totman -- Feb 1st Friendship "LTM" Call collect 508-827-4555

1989 UMass Class Ring Campus Center Brett 256-8801 REWARD

MUSIC

Speakers, Reconing + Repair Home, Auto, Pro ATC Audio 244 Memorial Ave W. Springfield 1-781-2327

MUSICIANS

Bassist seeks versatile musicians to compose new music (Firehouse, Phish, Parliament, Crimson) Dan 6-5173

PERSONALS

Kim Guertin Happy 21st Birthday Love, Kel

Tim, Thanks! Your message was sweet Sorry about my boyfriend. Girl in Pink Sweater Lleni

RUSH ZETA PSI

Last chance to meet the brothers of Zeta Psi Don't miss this opportunity We're meeting at Newman Center at 6:30 from there we're going to Cosby Street.

SERVICES

Psychic Tarot Readings Jim 665-1190

Resume Preparation assistance with complete resume development. Keith Anderson, Ph.D. 582-4037

Tarot Readings Call Chris at 253-7524

SPORTS CARDS

Sportstop cards Mt. Farms Mall

TRAVEL

Language/cultural programs University of Granada, Spain. $2300 all inclusive one month. airfare, tuition, diploma r/b with family excursions June, August September. Contact Seven Continents 26 Clauss Ave Paramus, NJ 07652 201-607-7047

Scuba Dive Key Largo Spring Break, Call Project Deep 1-800-282-0977

Spring Break: CANCUN, NASSAU from $299 Organize a small group for FREE trip Call 1(800)Get-Sun 1

SPRINGBREAK!! Panama and Daytona $139 and up 7 nights Beachfront deadline SOON! Call Erica 546-0223

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamarca, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149 Organize group/travel free! 1 800 426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!! Spring Break '93 Best Deals Going Fast Jesse 549-7472

Trip for 2 to the Bahamas $222 for a couple . For details call Sarah 549-1609

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Resumes, papers, theses. Laser printing, on-campus Pick up and delivery Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED

Tutor Coins 105 1-2 hrs/wk 7.50/hr Call 549-3516 ask for Amanda

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women Need housing for spring semester Desire place near UMass Call Young Mi 546-0580 or Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

Barbee, the unsung hero of the court

Senior shirks spotlight, plays large role for Minutemen

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

If you look at the University of Massachusetts basketball team for any period of time, chances are you will marvel at Harper Williams, Lou Roe or even the recent exploits of Mike Williams. If you're like most fans, chances are you will overlook the contributions of Tony Barbee.

Barbee should be nicknamed the "Silent Assassin," because the 6-foot-6 forward does most of his talking with his skills, unlike many of today's superstars. He isn't as flashy as Roe, or as fiery as either Williams, but he is exactly what head coach John Calipari needs: he is a steady, reliable leader.

"It's up to me and Harper to step up, and that's what I try to do. The reason why I don't score a lot in games is because other people are hot. My role is to step up when I'm needed."

In fact, Barbee played the role of hired gun when Williams went out with a broken hand before the Abdow's tournament in Springfield. What resulted was a career-high 31 points and two easy wins for the Minutemen. Barbee was a near-unanimous choice for MVP, a trophy that had been Harper's the previous two years.

Credit the senior with holding the team together for the nine game stretch without Williams, averaging nearly 20 points in that time. Even after Williams came back, it was Barbee who hit the winning shot against Temple to give UMass the rare victory.

Barbee has been as vital to the program as almost any other player John Calipari has coached. Two years ago, Barbee silently waited in the shadows for his chance in the spotlight.

He logged 30 games and averaged 15.3 points, but he was underappreciated until his shot in the NIT against Siena lifted the Minutemen into an overtime and, eventually, victory. When everyone else was covered, it was Barbee who stepped up with the clutch turnaround three-pointer. That shot signifies his career.

Last year, he was overshadowed by Will Herndon and Jim McCoy, two stars of the 30-5, Sweet Sixteen squad. Yet it was Barbee's versatility on both offense or defense which was a big factor in the Minutemen's success.

Problems which could have erupted this year have not. While Williams is being touted as an All-American candidate, Barbee will be lucky if he gets all-conference consideration. Yet he naturally allows his flashier teammates the hype and hysteria.

But when the other Minutemen foul out or don't play up to their abilities, Barbee is the one who steps up his play. When the other players take a breather, Barbee is the one out on the floor, playing an average of 31 minutes per game.

And when the media is groping after the latest Minuteman of the week, Barbee is the one sitting in the corner, listening to his Walkman. It's just the way he is.

Game Notes: The Minutemen have to travel to Buffalo, N.Y tonight at 7:30 p.m. to face off against the University of Buffalo Bulls, one of the worst teams in the country. Earlier in the season, Iowa State defeated the Bulls by 70 points. In this week's Sagarin Ratings, Buffalo is ranked 289 of 300 teams.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Tony Barbee is a big reason why the Minutemen are 17-4. The senior provides gritty leadership in addition to his well-rounded game.

Mike Tyson: Sorrow for you

There he was, "Iron" Mike Tyson as a teenager crying his heart out to trainer Teddy Atlas before a boxing match. This compelling scene, which was part of "Mike Tyson: The Untold Story," spoke volumes about the life of Tyson, which has been both fascinating and disturbing to watch.

Jeff
CROFTS

"The Untold Story," which aired last Friday Night on NBC, was a stirring piece of film, as it chronicled the life of Tyson in gripping fashion. There was no narrator; none was needed. Instead the people and pictures did all the talking. Together, they spoke loud and clear.

I watched this documentary on the road in a hotel room just outside Washington D.C. with three other guys. Throughout the film, there was little movement in our room, as we all found ourselves captivated by the story, the story of Mike Tyson.

The Tyson story itself has been one which has played itself like a long and windy road. "The Untold Story" took one along that road, stopping at

Turn to TYSON, page 11

Minutemen in New Englands

UMass to challenge UConn, Providence, BC and URI

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

How many times must an event or accomplishment repeat itself before it can be called a "tradition"?

The University of Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team have won the last six combined Division One and Two New England Championships, the only six held since those two divisions split from Division Three in 1986.

If six consecutive wins does not qualify as a tradition, then seven should. The pursuit of that seventh title begins today at the University of Connecticut in Storrs, Conn. for the 11-1 34th ranked Minutemen, and they are shaved and ready to do battle.

"This is what we've been playing for all year," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth. "We don't have a choice. We have to be ready."

UMass will do battle for the title with UConn, its fiercest swimming rival. Almost a month ago, the Minutemen registered their biggest win of the season when they beat the Huskies in Storrs, 127.5 to 115.5, when UMass' Aaron Osborne, Chris Barrett, Joe Morris and Adam Reich won the meet's final event, the 400 Freestyle Relay, by slightly more than a second.

Among the teams that will be fighting for third place will be Providence College, Boston College and the University of Rhode Island, all schools UMass has beaten with ease this season. It is clearly a UMass-UConn showdown, with the winner holding bragging rights for another year. With those six plaques adorning the wall of Yarworth's office, it is the Minutemen who have the most to lose.

"Different teams have been taking turns trying to knock us off," said Yarworth, "but no one has been able to do it."

Yarworth feels that while UConn may have slightly better frontline swimmers, his squad holds the edge in depth, which is important in championship-event-scoring.

"They may have two kids in an event that may place," he said. "We have three or four that can place, especially in the freestyles and individual Medleys."

Those coughs and sniffles you hear in class have not escaped the Minutemen. Those who do not have a cold are either coming off one, or just getting one, but as Yarworth said, "Unless you're in a casket, you have to get up on the blocks and swim."

The team has tapered its workouts down over the past two weeks, striving for optimal rest without losing the competitive edge needed for the most important meet of the year.

"We have a history and tradition of being tough — especially mentally tough," Yarworth said, pointing out the big win over the Huskies and a strong finish in the Atlantic 10 Championships to clinch second place, a slim half point ahead of West Virginia.

Colonials to visit Cage

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Tonight (Curry Hicks Cage, 7 p.m.) the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team entertains George Washington University in a game which could have serious implications for the Atlantic 10 tournament.

The Minutewomen (8-12, 4-6 A-10) fell to the Colonials (14-6, 6-2 A-10) 65-51 at GW earlier in the season. The game, as in many cases, was closer than the score indicated.

UMass coach Joannie O'Brien said that the Minutewomen were in the game most of the way.

"What happened in the game was that we did not shoot well," O'Brien said. "We had some open shots, but did not hit them.

"They (GW) had some kids step up, and made a run at the end of the first half," she said, "because of that, we had to play catch-up basketball in the second half."

GW comes into the contest on a high note, as the Colonials polished off West Virginia in their last contest 87-61. The Minutemen, meanwhile, have dropped four in a row.

In their first meeting, George Washington was led by Jennifer Shasky, who pumped in 23 points. O'Brien said that the Colonials possess a couple of weapons.

"We are going to have to keep their main scorers at bay," O'Brien said. "Darlene Saar and Debbie Hemery can both score, even though it was Shasky who hurt us last time."

For the Minutewomen, the key offensive figure could be freshman Melissa Gurile, who struggled a little bit (2-10 from the floor) against Rhode Island in UMass' last contest. O'Brien said that Gurile is a key tonight.

"Melissa is going to have to let the game come to her," O'Brien said. "She will get her shots if she'll take her time."

According to O'Brien, another key for the game will be the battle of freshmen point guards, UMass' Tricia Hopson versus GW's Myriah Lonergan.

"Tricia going to have to keep Lonergan from penetrating," O'Brien said. "Lonergan did a good job in doing that last game."

O'Brien said that the game will be big in terms of the A-10 tourney.

"It is a big game for us in the Atlantic 10," she said. "We want to get a couple of more A-10 wins for the tourney."

Minutemen place 2nd

By ANDREW BRYCE
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team went into the Temple/MIT meet expecting to be defeated by the Owls and to trounce on MIT. They lost to Temple 261.05-243.30 and defeated MIT by over 124 points. Leading Minuteman performer Jason Braud said that there is room for improvement.

"It was a pretty good meet," said Braud. "We are definitely looking for improvement. We are far from scoring as well as we can."

Braud, a junior, and senior captain Steve Christensen were the only Minutemen to score in the Feb. 13 meet. Braud continued to be UMass' best overall performer as garnered two first place finishes, in the floor exercise (9.25) and in the vault (9.15). Braud also came in third place in the rings (8.85).

Despite having a great overall performance considering the opposition, Braud was disappointed. He had set his sights on becoming the UMass record holder in the floor exercise, with the record being 9.70.

"I was not up for it," Braud said, who was under five-tenths of a point off. "It was because of the last move on the floor that I didn't get the record. I was doing very well up until that move."

Christensen continued to excel in the pommel horse as he finished first with a 9.55. As of last week, Christensen was ranked fifth in the nation in this event. Though he felt his effort was just "alright," it was good enough for first place against the Temple powerhouse.

UMass coach Roy Johnson was most impressed with the team's effort in the pommel horse. Jason Fox and Craig Erickson, in addition to Christensen, were responsible for this according to Johnson. Fox scored an 8.05 and Erickson recieved a 7.60.

On Saturday Feb. 20, the Minutemen, 3-1 in E.I.G.L. action face talented Army and Cornell University at 1 p.m. at Boyden Gym.

"We are hoping to break into the 250s (point-wise)," Johnson said. "Army is strong in every event, and just like us, have a weakness in the high bar. In the first five events, we should stay with them."

Feb. 18th – 21st

THIS WEEKEND

the Collegian's weekly arts & entertainment guide for UMass & the Five College area

Pomo Afro Homos

the Post Modern African American Homosexuals

By MARTIN JONES
Collegian Staff

The Pomo Afro Homos (Post Modern African-American Homosexuals) will make their area debut this weekend presenting two tender and humorous shows that confront issues such as homophobia in the Black community, racism in the gay community and the insensitivity of various AIDS activist groups in regard to gay Black men. The San Francisco based acting trio has performed all around the country receiving rave reviews for its "honest, funny look at gay life."

The Pomo Afro Homos are three African-American gay men – Brian Freeman, Djola Bernard Branner, and Eric Gupton – all of whom have performed solo and in other theater ensembles, including the San Francisco Mime Troupe and the Flesh and Spirit Performance Company. The three met in San Francisco and combined their individual skits into their current shows.

Fierce Love is a 70-minute collection of skits, sketches, monologues that captures the unique perspectives of Black gay life. The skits range from a parody of the snap queens frequently seen on In Living Color to a skit about Mr. ACT BLACK who threatens to "out" the Pomo Afro Homos because their behavior is not "Black enough." The Friday evening performance of Fierce Love will be a benefit performance for ARISE, a non-profit community service organization presently working to educate low-income women about AIDS prevention.

Dark Fruit reclaims pages of the memory of a Black gay childhood in sketches that are as much about sexual hunger as they are about sexism, racism, and the absence of a Black gay community. A piece called "Chocolate City U.S.A." uses a series of letters, challenging everyone from AIDS volunteers to Black churches, to Magic Johnson, regarding his overzealous "I'm not gay" statements.

A symposium will also be held in conjunction with these two performances titled "Intersection: Confronting Racism and Homophobia" on Feb. 20 at 3 p.m. in Campus Center room 174-76. In addition, the group will take part in Friday's Brown Bag Lunch discussion, the weekly Lesbian, Gay, and Bisexual studies series titled, "Who is We? Race, Sexuality, Identity and Culture."

The Pomo Afro Homos are sponsored by New World Theater, the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, and the Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance (LBGA) as part of this year's Black History Month program at the University.

On Friday, Feb. 19, the group will perform Fierce Love and on Saturday, Feb. 20, they will perform Dark Fruit. Both performances will take place in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $5, $3 for students and are available in the Fine Arts Center Box Office or by calling 545-2511. Bowker Auditorium is located in Stockbridge Hall off Commonwealth Avenue on the UMass campus. Parking is available in the Campus Center Garage and in Lot 65 next to Stockbridge Hall.

Djola Bernard Branner

The Pomo Afro Homos (clockwise from left) Djola Bernard Branner, Brian Freeman and Eric Gupton courtesy jill posner photographs

Unforgiven & Howards End top Oscar nods

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Surprises abound early Wednesday morning as celebrities, star-watchers and the press collectively held their breath in anticipation of the nominations for the 65th Annual Academy Awards.

Unforgiven, Clint Eastwood's western hit and Howards End, the British art-house favorite, each earned nine nominations; tieing for the most honored.

But the biggest surprises were Neil Jordan's The Crying Game, which garnered six nominations in all, including Best Picture, Director and Actor and the glaring omission of Malcolm X, of whose only nomination was for Best Actor (Denzel Washington).

Here's a rundown of the major nominees — along with some unsolicited commentary.

Best Supporting Actor — The biggest shock came with a nomination for Jaye Davidson for The Crying Game. Whether or not this ruins the film for those who haven't seen it has yet to be known. David Paymer, who played Billy Crystal's brother so well in the flop Mr. Saturday Night, was also a surprise nomination.

Also honored were Gene Hackman for his supporting work in Unforgiven, Jack Nicholson for A Few Good Men and Al Pacino (also nominated for Best Actor) for his portrayal of a sleazy real-estate con man in Glengarry Glen Ross.

This category's pretty much up in the air, as Davidson's nomination kind of throws expectations out of whack. But if I was cornered, I'd have to go with the safe choice of Gene Hackman. The Academy is quite brave with its nominations, but hardly ever follows through. The Academy forgot: Al Freeman, Jr. for Malcolm X and Forrest Whitaker for The Crying Game.

Best Supporting Actress — A rich, across-the-board selection of which all deserve to win. Judy Davis for her complex but oh-so-funny work in Husbands and Wives, Joan Plowright in the overrated but still pleasant Enchanted April, Vanessa Redgrave for her performance in Howards End, the magnificent Miranda Richardson for Damage (she also deserves nods for supporting work in Enchanted April and The Crying Game) and Marisa Tomei for My Cousin Vinny.

Everyone here is worthy. How about a five-way tie? The Academy forgot: Michelle Pfieffer for Batman Returns and Shabana Azmi for the otherwise dismal City of Joy.

Best Actor — Another cross section of great performances; some though are trapped in mediocre or even bad movies. Robert Downey, Jr. for the disappointing Chaplin, Clint Eastwood for his stoic work in Unforgiven (he's never been nominated), Al Pacino for the overlong Scent of A Woman, a textured Stephen Rea for The Crying Game and a perfect Denzel Washington for Malcolm X.

I'd go for Washington in Malcolm X and the Academy probably will as well, if only for the White-liberal guilt factor. Don't discount Eastwood or Pacino either — neither have ever won and they're big-time Hollywood royalty. The Academy forgot: Jack Lemmon for Glengarry Glen Ross, but since he's already won twice; the heck with him. Also Harvey Keitel for Reservoir Dogs and John Malkovich for Of Mice and Men.

Best Actress — Some last-minute campaigning filled the void in the dearth of eligible nominees. Catherine Deneuve for Indochine, Mary McDonnell for Passion Fish, Michelle Pfeiffer for the clunky Love Field, a moving Susan Sarandon for Lorenzo's Oil and Emma Thompson for Howards End.

It's a neck-in-neck race between Sarandon and Thompson, but I'd give the edge to Thompson, who won all the major critics awards plus a Golden Globe. The Academy forgot: Tilda Swinton for Edward II and some more decent roles for women.

Best Director — Mostly great directors doing their best work. Neil Jordan for the mesmerizing The Crying Game, James Ivory for the stately Howards End, Robert Altman for the scathingly funny The Player, Martin Brest (the only nonworthy) for Scent of A Woman and Clint Eastwood for Unforgiven.

My pick would be Jordan or Altman, but Eastwood has the inside track. The Academy forgot: A guy named Spike Lee. Duh. Who has their heads up their butts this time?

TURN TO OSCAR PAGE 8

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

Tom Cruise stars in "A Few Good Men," one of the five nominees for Best Picture. Though Cruise was not chosen, co-star Jack Nicholson was nominated for his work in the film.

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M. Tel: 549-2692

You'll Really Warm Up To These Savings At Scotts!!!

Budweiser & Bud Light 12 pk. bottles $6.99 + dep.
Miller Genuine Draft & G.D. Light 24-12 oz. cans $11.99 + dep.
Natural Light ½ Kegs $32.99
Busch ½ Kegs $38.99
NO PERMIT NEEDED TO PURCHASE KEGS
Stroh's & Stroh's Light 15 pk. cans $5.99 dep.
Corona Extra 6 pk. bottles $4.99 + dep.
Popov Vodka 1.75Ltr $10.99
Gordon's Gin 1.75 Ltr $13.99
LaMarca Merlot, Cab Sauv., Chard, Pinot $6.99 1.5Ltr
Purple Passion 2.0 Ltr. $3.99

WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
Tele-check for your personal check.
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games!
Quantity discount available on Busch, Busch Light, & Miller High Life - mix & match

Beat those Winter Blues! Cheer up & Save!!
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS
Don't Drink and Drive

BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT $9.99 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
SAM ADAMS DOUBLE BOK $4.99 6 PK + DEP.
FALSTAFF & FALSTAFF LIGHT $7.99 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
KILLIAN'S IRISH RED ALE $15.49 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES
ROLLING ROCK $12.99 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES

WINE OF THE MONTH (FRENCH VARIETAL WINE) SAUVIGNON BLANC & CABERNET SAUVIGNON FORTANT $4.49 750 ML
CARLO ROSSI ALL FLAVORS $6.99 4.0L
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL $3.49 750 ML
FOLONARI SOAVE $5.49 1.5L
FREIXENET CORDON NEGRO BRUT $5.99 750 ML

SMIRNOFF VODKA $14.49 1.75L
CHIVAS REGAL $39.99 1.75L
SCHENLEY WHISKEY $12.49 1.75L
JAMESON IRISH WHISKEY $12.49 750 ML
COSSACK GIN $7.49 1.75L AFTER REBATE SALE 9.49 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00

not responsible for typographical errors
OPEN: 9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
• TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS •
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS 2/18/93 THRU WEDS. 2/24/93
Full Redemption Center

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH
Automatic wash/wax
Daily 8-5pm
Self Service
Soap/Rinse/Wax
Bubble Brush/Tire Cleaner
Engine Degreaser
Vacuum Cleaners
381 College Street (Rt.9 East)

Council Travel
79 So. Pleasant Street Amherst
256-1261
SPRINGBREAK!
JAMAICA $469
CANCUN 439
7 Nights, incl. Airfare from Boston, Hotel & transfers. Taxes not included. Rates subject to change.
CALL NOW!!

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

Calendar of events in the 5 College Area

COURTESY DEBORAH FRANCOISE

Deborah Francoise

THURSDAY

COMEDY — Michael Ziegfeld will perform an evening of comedy tonight at 8 in Herter Hall room 227 as part of the 1993 Jewish Arts Festival. He is hailed as one of America's best up-and-coming young talents. Tickets are $4, $2 for students.

GLOBETROTTERS — The world renowned Harlem Globetrotters will take the floor tonight at the Mullins Center at 7:30. Call 545-0505 for tickets.

AUDITIONS — Auditions for Offending the Audience, The Waking Dream, Resurrection and two additional plays TBA. Auditions are open to all Five College students. Scripts will be available weekdays in Fayerweather Room 111A, AC. The auditions are tonight at 7 at Fayerweather, AC.

THEATRE — The Giant Peach Troupe Children's Theater presents an Exploration and a Celebration. Valley college and local middle school students explore creation myths from Australian Aborigine, Japanese and Haida Indian cultures and create an original ensemble piece. Tonight at 7 at HC. Also Feb. 19 at 7 p.m., Feb. 20-21 at 2 p.m. Call 549-4600, ext. 351 for tickets and the HC hall. Tickets are $3, $2.50 for students.

MUSIC — WFCR will be airing Witness: A Celebration of Black History Month, including the world premiere of a new choral work by William Banfield and portions of a Requiem Mass by Jose Mauricio Nunes-Garcia. 88.5 FM, 9 p.m.

CONCERT — Shockra will be performing at Pearl Street in Northampton tonight at 9. 18+.

FRIDAY

CONCERT — The Ciompi String Quartet of Duke University with John Van Buskirk, piano, will perform works of Mozart, Shumann, and the premiere of String Quartet No. 4, by Donald Wheelock at Sweeney Concert Hall, SC, 8 p.m. FREE. Call 585-3150 for details.

CONCERT — Rock band Big Shoulders will perform tonight at 9 at the AC Campus Center Frontroom. Admission is $7, $2 with an Amherst College ID. For more information call 542-5773.

THEATRE — Pomo Afro Homos will deliver a fierce and funny revue of sketches, monologues, and musical routines on every aspect of the post-modern Afro-American homosexual experience tonight at Bowker Auditorium at 8, performing Fierce Love. Call the FAC at 545-0132 for info.

CONCERT — The Low Road and Knots and Krosses will provide a double bill of acoustic rock tonight at the Iron Horse at 7. Tickets are $6. Call the Iron Horse at 584-0610 for details.

CONCERT — Brother-sister vocal duo Peter W. Shea of Amherst and Joanne Low of Brunswick, Maine, accompanied by Priscilla Smith of Amherst will perform a benefit concert entitled "Songs of Wandering and Travel" tonight at 8 in the Unitarian Society's Great Hall, 220 Main Street, Northampton. Donations at the door of $5 ($4 seniors and students) will benefit the Unitarian Society's hymnal fund.

COURTESY JILL POSEMER

The Pomo Afro Homos

LECTURE — The LGBA Brown Bag Series presents the Pomo Afro Homos to discuss "Who is we? Race, sexuality, identity and culture." Campus Center Room 917, noon-1:30 p.m.

CONCERT — Tom Savoy will perform at the Coolidge Park Cafe at the Hotel Northampton tonight from 5-8. At 8:30, Hal Benoit takes over until 12:30. Call the Hotel Northampton at 584-3100 for details.

CONCERT — A night of women in the arts; great Valley songwriters Jaime Morton, Dar Williams, Anne Weiss and Chaia Heller folk out the evening tonight at the Book Mill in Montague at 8:30. Tix are $4. Call 367-9206 for more info.

CONCERT — Peter Miles, an acoustic guitarist and vocalist from Southern Vermont will perform blues, ballads and originals from his debut release, Miles to Go tonight at the Green River Cafe, 24 Federal Street, Greenfeld.

CONCERT — Music at Amherst presents James Buswell on violin. Music by Schubert, Busoni, Bach and Block. $14 orchestra, $12 balcony; $10 & $8 for area students; $5 for AC students, discounts for elders. Call 542-2195 for reservations. AC Buckley Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

SATURDAY

CONCERT — The Five College Choral Festival, featuring choral music by choirs from all 5 Colleges will be performed tonight at John M. Greene Hall, SC, at 7:30. The evening will also include the premiere of Summit House by Mt. Holyoke composer Allen Bonde. FREE.

CONCERT — The Big Waaagh Scratch Band, reigning jugband-stringband-vaudvillians, will come to The Iron Horse tonight at 7. Tickets are $4.

SYMPOSIUM — A symposium entitled "Intersection: Confronting Racism and Homophobia" will take place today at 3 p.m. in the Campus Center. FREE.

THEATRE — Pomo Afro Homos will be performing Dark Fruit, the second of their two plays, tonight at Bowker at 8. Call the FAC at 545-3671 for details.

CONCERT — Charlie Schmidt will be performing at the Coolidge Park Cafe at the Hotel Northampton from 8:30-12:30 this evening.

CONCERT — Chalyce Blair will be performing at Wiggin's Tavern at the Hotel Northampton from 6:30-10:30 this evening. Call 584-3100 for details.

FILM — My Beautiful Laundrette, with Daniel Day-Lewis will be shown at Gamble Auditorium, MHC, at 7 & 9 p.m. $2.50.

CONCERT — "Ragas for Peace," classical music of India by Ms. Ranganayaki Rajagolopalan and Ensemble, will be performed tonight at AC. Rajagopalan is a virtuoso veena player, leading exponent of the traditional Karaikudi style, and Copeland Fellow at AC. The performance is part of the "Imaging Peace" Lamont Arts Project. Buckley Recital Hall, AC, 8 p.m.

COMMUNITY — The UM Pan-Hellenic Association presents a Step Show: Celebration of Black History tonight at the Campus Center Auditorium from 10 p.m.-2 a.m.

SUNDAY

POETRY READING — Timothy Liu, a highly respected gay, Asian-American poet, will read from his recently published collection Vox Angelica today at the Book Mill in Montague at 4.

GALLERY RECEPTION — A gallery reception to welcome Stella Bernstein's exhibit "The Beauty Project" will be held at the Amherst Community Arts Center today from 3-5 p.m. The exhibit will run through March 9. Gallery hours are Monday-Thursday, 5-8 p.m. ACAC is located at the corner of North Pleasant and Meadow streets in North Amherst.

EXHIBIT — Sharon Harper's "Life's Scenarios" will be on display at the Pizzeria Paradiso in Northampton beginning today and running through April 3. Gallery hours are: Sunday 4-10 p.m., Monday-Thursday 5-10:30 p.m., and Friday & Saturday 5-11:30 p.m. Call 586-1468 for details. Pizzeria Paradiso is located on 12 Crafts Ave. in Northampton.

COMMUNITY — Spirit Rhythm Council presents an open community drum and dance jam today from 1-5 p.m. For all ages and levels of experience. East Street Studios, Hadley. $5 donation at door.

THEATRE — The Northampton Arts Council presents "Child's Play: A Children's Performance Showcase," today at the Academy of Music Theater in Northampton. Admission is $5. 2 p.m. Call Bob Cilman or Mary Kasper at 586-6950, ext. 269 for details.

CONCERT — The internationally acclaimed Zamir Chorale of Boston will serenade Pioneer Valley audiences today at 3 in Sweeney Concert Hall at Sage Hall, SC. Tickets are $8, $6 for students, senior citizens and children.

Composer Deborah Franciose to play NoHo

By RACHEL D. MEDANIC
Collegian Staff

Perhaps one of the freshest creative breaths of this generation, pianist/composer Deborah Franciose will be appearing for her second time at the Iron Horse tonight at 8.

While doing her graduate work at New England Conservatory eight years ago, Franciose got turned onto jazz while working on George Gershwin's "Rhapsody In Blue."

Beginning at age 5, Franciose started her training as a classical pianist. But exposure to Gershwin started her composing her own work against a backdrop of jazz.

The diversity of her material has caused her work to be simultaneously termed jazz, classical, new age and instrumental.

But what the media have missed until now is that her work is its own musical classification in the making. Franciose herself is reluctant and anxious about acknowledging the uniqueness of her work, indeed it is a tremendous responsibility.

Franciose's musical creativity is fed by her empathic, intuitive grasp of the underlying principles of situations.

After getting her masters at the Conservatory she studied with Lyle Mays (keyboardist for the Pat Metheny Group) and played in a regular "jazz gig" at the Charles Hotel Regattabar in Cambridge, Mass. She appeared all over the New England area at major jazz festivals and at the openings of well known jazz houses such as El Morocco in Worcester and Scullers in Boston.

So if Franciose is her own classification, what does her music sound like? Of course, the best way to find out is to go see her in person or to buy her newest album Gypsy Heart or her first solo release which she put out in June last year called Almost Home.

She released Gypsy Heart in November of 1992 and since then, she says she has found her CD in all different kinds of sections in the stores and in the collections of radio stations. Gypsy Heart consists entirely of her own work and includes her own arrangement of "Summertime" and "Eleanor Rigby."

She is backed up by Ron Murray on bass and Bob Moses, Marty Richards, and Grover Mooney on the drums.

Franciose gets her inspiration from scenes of places she's been or would like to go. One listener described "Serengeti" (Gypsy Heart) as something that "sounds like Schroder [from the Peanuts]." But with Schroder's charisma and more, Franciose's skill is in the uninhibited freedom that each compositionhas running through it.

"Get It Straight," from Gypsy Heart, was inspired by what Franciose perceived to be going on when the Clarence Thomas-Anita Hill hearings were in progress. "I saw two people, both victims," said Franciose. She says that people react with laughter to the song (it wasn't meant to be funny) when they hear the title and what the song is about. When she writes a piece, Franciose says she is trying to get people to "live what I have lived. . . without words."

Franciose, who says she likes "wit and playfulness" in her music, says her biggest fans are those who tell her they really don't like jazz, but really like what she does. She is "totally amazed" at her following. Of her rise in popularity, Franciose said, "This chose

TURN TO FRANCOISE, PAGE 8

STUDENT AFFAIRS SPECIAL SERVICES
236 WHITMORE

Is there something you would like to say before graduating?

You are invited to submit proposals for consideration as the

STUDENT COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

Eligibility:	Graduating UMass-Amherst senior.
Format:	Submit not more than three word-processed or typewritten pages, double spaced, or the equivalent of 3-5 minutes speaking time.
Subject Matter:	Text should concern higher education, and be relevant to the University and your experience(s) here.
Submit Proposals To:	Paul R. Appleby, Director, Disability Services, (non-voting Committee Chair), 231 Whitmore, 545-0892
Selection Process:	A committee of students (majority), faculty, and staff, will review proposals. Authors' names will have been deleted to ensure objectivity. Ratings will be assigned. Selected authors will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March). A final selection will then be made by the committee.
Deadline:	Friday, February 19th, 1993, 4:30 p.m.
For additional information:	Paul R. Appleby, Selection Committee Chair, 231 Whitmore, 5-0892.

COMEDIAN
Michael Ziegfeld
One of America's best new talents will perform at UMASS on Thursday
February 18
8pm
Herter Hall 227
$4-General Public
$2 Student
(Free for Hillel Activity Card Holders)
"Hilarious" -Club Med

Collegian Advertising. It works. 545-3500

PUT US TO THE TEST.
SSAT • PSAT • SAT • ACHIEVEMENTS • ACT • LSAT • GMAT • GRE • MCAT • DAT • GRE PSYCH • GRE BIO • OAT • TOEFL • NMB • NDB • NCLEX-RN • MSKP • FMGEMS • FLEX • CGFNS • CPA • BAR EXAM • NTE
If you have to take one of these tests, take Kaplan first. Our students get the highest scores. We've proven it to over one million students. Let us prove it to you.
KAPLAN
The answer to the test question
New Location: 150 Fearing Street
549-5780

Thursday - Friday - Saturday
DANCING
with
D.J. Pete Free
$2.00 Menu Nachos
9:30 - 10:30
Every Night
THE CELEBRATES 25 YEARS 1968 • 1993 PUB IN·AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

Words and Pictures returns

ARTWORK © STUDIO GHIBLI/TOKUMA SHOTEN

The other world of Nausicaä.

By KIP MANLEY
Collegian Staff

Nausicaä of the Valley of Wind
By Hayao Miyazaki
Viz Select Comics

A small glider drops silently through a sky filled with giant insects and floating spores, landing in a nightmare jungle of molds and fungi the size of trees. The pilot disembarks near the molted shell of an ohmu, a creature much like a June bug the size of the Fine Arts Center, and begins to salvage pieces of it for her village.

This is not the world we know.

The stage of Hayao Miyazaki's epic Nausicaä is set in "the long twilight years" of humanity, hundreds of years from now at the close of "the ceramics era," and from the first panels we never doubt that we are in another world.

Humanity hangs by its collective fingernails, scraping out a meager existence in tiny scattered villages, scavenging ancient machines they don't understand from the ruins of cities that are nothing more than legends and debris. All around is the deadly Sea of Corruption, a terrifyingly alien ecosystem of enormous molds and fungi and insects that engulfs whatever it touches and leaks a poisonous miasma that makes even the air above something to be feared.

And yet humanity is up to its old tricks. The two largest political entities left, the Torumekian Empire and the Dorok Principalities, are lurching towards war with each other, despite internecine struggles in both camps and military hardware that requires a kick and a prayer to work at all.

Nausicaä is a misanthropist's fable with a plot driven by the stupidities of humanity, from the admirable stupidity of pride and honor to the apallingly short-sighted stupidity of greed and intolerance, but despite this bleak outlook there is one ray of hope: Nausicaä herself, who manages to bear the mantle of messiah without being completely insufferable.

She is surrounded by memorable characters on every side — there are no good guys or bad guys here, just people in conflict whose high points of heroism are often matched by moments of fear and hatred just as low.

The true delight in this comic, though, is discovering the carefully delineated world that Miyazaki has created and fully realized in his detailed pen-and-ink drawings that add a luxurious texture to the standard Japanese manga style. Everything has been carefully thought out, from the art and technology of the various cultures we encounter down to the belt buckles. Politics, tactics, motivations, the economy and ecology of this fantasy world — each builds logically upon the other, forming a seamless whole that rivals the world of Dave Sim's Cerebus for believability and reality.

Nausicaä is still a work in progress. Over 500 pages have been translated from the original Japanese, leaving at least a third of the story yet to be told, and leaving unanswered the question of whether or not a young woman alone can save a world seemingly bent on its own destruction. The first two volumes are available in the original installments and in somewhat smaller bound collections; the third is even now being published monthly from Viz comics and should be on the shelves of your friendly neighborhood comics shop.

Though it may be difficult to find, and though the story is dense at points and difficult to follow, Hayao Miyazaki's epic ecological fantasy is well worth your time and trouble. Nausicaä of the Valley of Wind is a story you won't soon forget, and a world you'll want to visit again and again — even if it isn't a nice place to live.

Untamed Heart will grab you

Adam Scott Roberts reviews tender new love story

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

Don't deny it. We've all said it. You know, the time when you're at the movie theatre trying to get comfortable into those uncomfortable theatre seats and you say to your friends, "I can't wait to see that movie when it comes out," after viewing those action-packed coming attractions. Well, finally the movie you've anxiously waited for has come out, and it won't disappoint you like all the others before that came before it.

Instead, Untamed Heart will grab a hold of you as your eyes are uncontrollably locked into a voyeuristic stare at three young familiar faces and a storyline that works its best at telling a story. At last, someone has done their homework in Hollywood!

The film's cast includes two of Hollywood's latest rising female stars, Marisa Tomei (My Cousin Vinny) and Rosie Perez (White Men Can't Jump). The producers then throw in teen heart-throb Christian Slater, as if he was a piece of meat being fed to the tigers (young female audiences) and whammo — you've got a film that's got the edge to be bringing 'em into the theatres.

Tomei plays a Minnesota waitress that is constantly getting herself involved with all the wrong men. So, after her boyfriend breaks her heart she stops wishing for Mr. Right and goes on living her life at the diner where she works.

At work, Tomei and Perez are the chic waitresses that the regulars love to shmooze with over a cup of coffee. Tomei's character, Caroline takes a mother-like role over her quiet and very weird co-worker Adam played stunningly by Slater when he cuts himself at work.

Adam is very shy and doesn't communicate well with people, except for Caroline. He has a mysterious yet comforting aura. He is so hard to figure out due to his excessive quietness, yet his long smile makes him seem like a little puppy — small and innocent.

After work one evening, Caroline is followed by two drunken men that had been her obnoxious customers earlier

TURN TO UNTAMED PAGE 8

Jesus Christ Superstar is a heavenly gift

By SHAWN McDONNELL
Collegian Staff

If Robert Johanson's acclaimed 1989 production of Jesus Christ Superstar was a stirring revival of a musical classic, then Tony Christopher's current production (Feb. 8 and 9 at the Mullins Center) is the theatrical equivalent of a heavenly visitation. Blessed with a near-perfect cast, a production design of simple brilliance, and stunning new orchestrations, this Superstar is an evening of sheer joy, and one of the finest touring musicals I have seen. Two hours after the rapturous standing ovation which greeted the final curtain, my hands are still red and raw from constant applause.

Telling the story of Christ's final days, this Tim Rice/Andrew Lloyd Webber rock opera seems every bit as new and exciting as it must have 25 years ago — thanks in no small part to Michael Rapp's sensational new orchestrations. From the first note of the rock-flavored overture, it was clear that this production would not be a museum piece. Rapp's outstanding musical accomplishment is typical of the genuine inspiration behind every aspect of this production.

Utilizing a movable system of stairs and an enormous raked platform (designed by Bill Stabile), director/choreographer Tony Christopher creates a production of simple but powerful appeal. Assisted by Christopher's wonderful eye for images, Rick Belzer's lighting transforms the simple playing area into everything from the seamy underworld of the temple to the carnival side show of Herod's house.

The score is one of the finest produced by Rice and Webber, and every number is staged like a showstopper. Christopher even turns the constantly underrated "Herod's Song" into a hilarious sideshow vamp by an androgynous, caped King.

Heading a wonderful cast, Carl Anderson (as Judas) proves he still has what it takes, a quarter-century after joining Superstar on the Broadway stage. Though he is perhaps best remembered as the mustachioed, bell-bottomed Judas of Norman Jewison's film version, Anderson's performance here marks a definite departure from this image of the Great Betrayer. Clean shaven, and dressed in a vaguely military jacket, this Judas is less an innocent dupe of the priest Caiaphas, and more a spiteful, disllusioned Jesus-freak.

In the title role, both Ted Neeley and Danny Zolli (on different nights) turned in fine performances. Neeley, of course, is Jesus — he played him on the stage, on the screen, and the third of four recordings. Now in his 40s, Neeley was not unaware of the potential irony in his most famous lines: "Once I was inspired/ Now I'm sad and tired." But any doubts about his staying power were firmly dispelled by the wailing vocals of his second-act signature song.

Understudy and UMass grad Danny Zolli overcame significant resistance Wednesday night (the collective groan of disappointment at the announcement of

TURN TO SUPERSTAR PAGE 8

Going somewhere HOT for Spring Break?
Then go there looking HOT!!
Get a base tan at
Hairworks PLUS
HAIR, NAILS, TANNING AND SO MUCH MORE!
Campus Plaza
454 Russell St.
Hadley, MA 01035
413-253-3334

HUNAN GOURMET
CHINESE RESTAURANT
The aroma, sound & taste of authentic Chinese cuisine prepared Hunan, Szechuan, Manderine or Cantonese style - especially for you!
ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY REGISTER 1992
★ FULL LIQUOR LICENSE ★
261 King St., Northampton • 585-0202 • Ample Parking
Open 7 Days A Week
TAKE OUT SERVICE AVAILABLE

Alley Oops Presents
Live!
THE CHOICE
Appearing
RED HOT ROCK 'N' BLUES
Alley Oops
525 Pleasant St., Northampton • 584-2491

Thank you for your Patronage - The Krupczak Family
4 Seasons
Rte. 9 • Hadley • 584-8174
Between Burger King & Dunkin Donuts
NO KEG PITCHER REQUIRED!
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE
KEGS AND ICE
LARGEST KEG INVENTORY IN WESTERN MASS!
FREE BEER BANNER W/ KEG PURCHASE

DOS EQUIS 24-12 oz. btls. $16.99 + dep.	½ BBL. NATURAL LT OR MILW. BEST $32.90 + dep.
ROLLING ROCK 24 bar bott. $12.49 + dep.	½ BBL BUSCH $38.99 + dep.
BUD DRY 24 bar bott. $10.99 + dep.	½ BBL M.G.D., LITE $38.99 + dep.
KEYSTONE /LT/DRY 24-12 oz. cans $9.99 + dep.	BOONES FARM ALL FLAVORS $1.99 750 ml
MILLER 24-12 oz. cans $9.99 + dep.	M/D 20-20 ALL FLAVORS $1.99 750 ml
AMERICAN, GOLDEN ANNIV, NARAGANSETT 24-12 oz. cans $7.29 + dep.	NEW!! ABSOLUTE BLACK KURANT $12.99 750 ml
ARTIC BAY 12 pk. bott. $5.99 + dep.	JOSE CUERVO GOLD "WITH SHOT GLASSES" $10.29 750 ml
MILWAUKEE'S BEST 12 pk. cans $4.49 + dep.	4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L
GATOR 6 pak bott. $4.29 + dep.	4 SEASONS RUM $10.49 1.75L
TIRED OF STORES WITH BAD ATTITUDES? At 4 Seasons You'll Be Treated With GRATITUDE!! AND... WE DELIVER	HADLEY ICE 10 lbs.-50 lbs. ..... 10¢ lb. 50 lbs.-100 lbs. ..... 9¢ lb. 100+ lbs. ..... 8¢ lb. CHEAPEST ICE PRICES IN W.MASS!!!

SALE 2/18/93 - 2/24/93
Not responsible for typographical errors
HOURS MONDAY-SATURDAY 9:00-11:00 • Delivery Mon-Sat Low Minimums & Fast Service
KEG DEPOSITS HELD UP TO 30 DAYS • VISA • MASTERCARD • CHECK • CASH

Low-rent cheapie thrills with the evil Temp

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Once upon a time way back in 1987, director Adrian Lyne and actors Michael Douglas and Glenn Close came together and made a little movie called Fatal Attraction. It was a critical and box office smash, mainly because it tapped into a primal fear — what seems ordinary (an affair, a nanny, a roommate, etc.) could end up going psycho and killing your kid's rabbit/taking your asthma medication/murdering your puppy and boyfriend, etc.

The mistress 'from hell' became a pop culture phenomenon ("I won't be ignored"), sporting a handful of copycat films designed to capitalize on this 'from hell' concept. Not only did 'from hell' become the most overused film phrase since 'coming of age' (and in this article as well), it became a genre virtually unto it self.

There was the nanny from hell in Hand that Rocks the Cradle (a hilariously campy film, if anyone cares), the policeman from hell in Unlawful Entry and the roommate from hell in Single White Female. What's next. . . the postman from hell? ("He came to deliver the mail. . . and never left!").

This roundabout introduction brings us to The Temp, a secretary from hell movie about a woman who schemes her way up the corporate ladder in. . . a food company. It's a movie that revels in its absurd situations while trying to play it straight.

The Temp also serves as a showcase for Academy Award-winning has-been actors who try to go with the flow (Timothy Hutton and Faye Dunaway) and an up and coming Lara Flynn Boyle (Wayne's World), all of whom attempt to have their camp and eat it too. Unfortunately, the material is strictly B-grade, and the actors trip over the plot trying to gain some respectability.

Hutton plays a food company exec who is seperated from his wife and child because of his paranoid nature (?!). When his secretary Lance (yes, Lance) takes a leave of absence, super secretary Boyle takes his place. She rescues Hutton from a missed deadline, organizes his office and becomes a general barracuda in the secretarial pool.

Boyle clearly wants more and works to get in the good graces with the company's head honcho (Dunaway), undermining her superiors, all while remaining creepily loyal to Hutton. Soon, though, bodies start piling up. Hutton, becoming seemingly paranoid again, suspects Boyle and of course, no one believes him.

Meanwhile, the company is being taken over by a huge food conglomerate and a new plan to market oatmeal-raisin cookies is unveiled in hopes of impressing the new parent company. So, basically, Boyle is supposedly killing people and backstabbing so she can gain power over oatmeal-raisin cookies.

One of the better things about The Temp is that it doesn't follow many of the conventions of this new genre. Though the twists are equally silly, they're at least surprising. Also credit the film for never letting Hutton submit to Boyle's frequent amorous proposals.

But alas, The Temp is riddled with continuity and believability problems. Hutton discovers all the bodies by sheer chance, whether it be on a bridge on his way to work or late at night in the deserted office building. And the fact that Boyle's did-she-or-didn't-she guilty status is undone by a cheap K-Mart photo frame strains any credibility the film was trying to strive for.

Then there are the actors. Timothy Hutton won a Best Supporting Actor Oscar for his sterling work in Ordinary People. Here, with a career to resuscitate, Hutton turns out to be pretty darn good. It's a credible performance trapped in a bad movie. Considering the material though, Hutton makes the best out of a three-emotion hero with stale emotional baggage.

The other Academy Award winner in The Temp is Faye Dunaway, who won for Network, but is probably best remembered for her underrated turn in the campy film bio of Joan Crawford, Mommie Dearest. Dunaway is more Crawford than Dunaway in The Temp, and the high profile part allows her to chew scenery and still remain her "special guest star" aura.

Lara Flynn Boyle, an obvious graduate of the Sharon Stone-ice princess school of movie acting, is too goofy to take seriously. One moment she's a tough-as-nails junior exec, another she's a stumbling sex pot, out to seduce the world (with her overacting, it seems). This doesn't, however, explain why she has a different 'do in every scene. Boyle is more like a walking advertisement for some hair product tie-in than an actress in this film.

Not credible enough to be taken seriously, but not outlandish enough to be low-rent camp, The Temp is like one of those USA cable thriller with better cinematography. A cinema oddity that tries to defy formula while reveling in it, The Temp never fully realizes what fun it could've had. C-

New release from Nag Nag Nag is a winner

By BROOKE C. WHEELER
Collegian Staff

7 Too Many
Nag Nag Nag
Humbert Records

The same daily thing can really wear down your will to live. The winter gray of every waking breath, the same brand of peanut butter, the same "L.A. Law" reruns — the same grinding, shapeless music whining out of your speakers. Before you cash out, I've gotta little prescription for your yawning stereo. It's a little chunky, a little spicy, a little poppy, with a touch of schmaltz, a whiff of thrash and quite palatable. . .

7 Too Many is the first label-release compilation from local band Nag Nag Nag. The album is like all the stuff that falls out of a pinata — a jumble of different sized things, lumpy and bumpy, with a hundred different colors and everything tasting different but all good to eat.

Strange semi-maniacal balladeers and dual guitar virtuosos Tony Westcott and Ari Vais put their songwriting and singing talents into the permanent form along with fellow UMass alumni (or soon to be) Western Mass. natives Brian Osley (bass) and Paul Pelis (drums) in an experimental, eclectic dark pop mix of wistful, witty, discontented cynicism and schizophrenic guitars. The semi-raw end result is a glorious reprieve from the heavy, droning guitars and canned singing/moaning too available of late.

The album packs in a full 18 songs, including the local cult favorites "Mosquitos" and "Sex With My TV" It opens and ends with a dreamy, lustful fade-in/out cover of the theme song from 1980's French film Betty Blue. The original music

TURN TO NAG NAG NAG PAGE 7

COURTESY NAG NAG NAG

Those wild and crazy guys of Nag Nag Nag

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Bud, Bud Light & Dry
$11.99 case cans

Harpoon Stout
$4.99 6 pk bottles
(Spring Brew)

ROLLING ROCK BOTTLES
$6.99 12 pack

Foster's Lager
$7.99
12 pk bottles

Hudy Gold Lager cans
& Hudepohl Premium cans
Reg. $10.99 case Now! $7.79 case
$6.99 case (10 cases or more)
American Beer
Still Only $7.29 case cans

Was $12.99
Finlandia
Vodka
Now $7.99
750 mls

Becks Regular
$8.49
12 pk bottles

(Quanity Discounts Available)
Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) Delivery Available

Summer!
Make it the Best
Work with us at Thompson's Clam Bar, the finest seaside restaurant on Cape Cod. We currently have outstanding opportunities for talented individuals to join our team. Candidates should call Cheryl at (508) 432-1000 to arrange an interview.
• Dining Room/Cocktail Waitstaff
• Porters
• Bus Persons
• Dining Room Supervisors
• Cashiers
• Hostesses
• Bar Staff
All positions are seasonal.
Thompson's CLAM BAR
Snow Inn Road • Harwichport, MA 02646 • 508-432-1000

The Zamir Chorale of Boston
February 21, 3:00 p.m
Sweeney Concert Hall, Smith College
Presenting the Beauty of Jewish Heritage through Song
Tickets available:
Temple Beth El, Springfield
Broadside Bookstore, Northampton
Jewish Community of Amherst or at the door
Co-Sponsored by Jewish Weekly News of W. Mass
To Benefit the Smith/Amherst Hillel and the Jewish Community of Amherst

Stir up a harmonious brew with Shockra tonight

By GINA LARSON
Collegian Correspondent

Few bands have mixed the intricate melodic sounds from jazz to funk as gracefully as Shockra has done. This Boston-based band will be stirring up their harmonious brew tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton.

Shockra's main concern lies in the individuality of their sound. The audience can expect to find themselves whirling in a cloud of euphoric frenzy.

The unique sound is harnessed through the combination of the diverse instruments used by the band. Dan Coutu, the band's keyboardist, has painstakingly collected an impressive set of original-sampled sound effects that add the edge to Shokra's rythm section. The saxaphone, played by the soul-filled singer, Jeff Grove, adds the element of blues to the already complex harmonies.

Shockra is a band that leaves you at the end of a show spinning in a dizzy haze of delight as you hum along to their lyrics that sometimes take a political tone.

The band is anxiously looking forward to their debut album, Garunda's Groove, due to be out in April on Apogee Records. The rapidly increasing fans along with college radio stations, who have already begun requesting copies, are eagerly awaiting the arrival as well.

Prepare to step into a spiral of psychedelic music that is reminiscent of the tie-dye generation when you drag yourself out of your dorm room and head down to Pearl Street to capture the frenzied sound and spirit.

Experience for yourself the energized intensity that Shockra delivers in every song. Tickets for the show are available through Tix Unlimited and at the door. Bring Friends, dance around like your toes were just cut off by spoons, and enjoy the show!

Shockra will play at Pearl Street, Northampton. Doors will open at 9 p.m. Call 584-7771 for ticket info.

Shockra

COURTESY FAMILY TREE PRODUCTIONS

■ Nag Nag Nag

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6

is introduced with Westcott in melodramatic anguish singing "My Voodoo Doll of You," coupled with a gleefully schmaltzy wedding reception guitar.

The wistfully poppy "Winona Westcott" pleads Winona Ryder to "please wait for meee" and kicks in with a mini-Glenn Close-Fatal Attraction-come-back ending. "Sophia's Song" (pronounced "so-fye-a") is reminiscent of aimless European travel by train — "the dawn is cracked/it shows the things the night has lacked/a place to stay/another train, another day."

"We like doing 'hooks,'" said Westcott. "Catchy, recognizable stuff you can sing along to halfway through hearing the song for the first time.

"We're very into The Songs themselves. We're not into guitar solos and that kind of thing," he added.

The ballad-ish "Chara" is another favorite with its vigorous, catchy guitars and energetic drums. The pensive "Mr. Lee" is a slower, enigmatic song with a little of Vais' native Russian thrown in for several verses. "Get Well Party" is an addictive tune, with chameleon guitars and strange lyrics about a mob love-triangle, and "Autumn Leaves" is a swingy cover of the true wedding-reception staple.

"Sex With My TV" chronicles a TV addict's one-handed sex life. "Bad Mood," "Mr. Happy" and "Pus" are more pensive tunes, "Mr. Happy" being the most swinging and musically addictive.

"Interference" is a showcase for some Smiths-esque guitars, and "Cheerleader" is a tongue-in-cheek ballad of the sordid reality of life on the "top of your pyramid."

Their cover of the bluesy "Trouble in Mind" is an entity unto itself, with Vais singing through a 1920s echo-y microphone and Westcott on a weeping, talking guitar. The whole mess ends with the fabulous "Mosquitos" that begs you to pester the neighbors with a little volume and sing/shriek-a-long of "Mosquitos! Military intervention!"

Westcott said he has been writing original music on the guitar since age eight, and Vais gives credit to UMass Music Department Professor Dr. Horace Boyer for his musical mentoring — a fall/spring offering of jazz vocal techniques and gospel, soul and blues. The two had solo careers for a short while that resulted in a tape from each, but both assert that now they're a band, and what's news is the whole band and where it's going as a unit.

Osley and Pelis grew up in the area together and played in bands all through high school with the hope of something permanent (like this) in mind. The band will soon be relocating to Richmond, Va., to take advantage of a different "scene," so catch their last area performance for awhile next week.

Nag Nag Nag will be playing at the next Cabaret Series at the Baystate Hotel in Northampton on Thursday, Feb. 25. 7 Too Many is available at For The Record and Al Bum's in Amherst, Main Street Records and Dynamite Records in Northampton and Discoveries in Springfield.

The Area's BEST CHINESE FOOD & SUSHI BAR
Enjoy the finest, freshest sushi, sashimi, tempura teriyaki and more at Panda East's new Sushi Bar. Also enjoy the finest Chinese Cuisine — Fresh, local specialties, low-priced luncheon specials and banquet facilties for your group or large party.
PANDA EAST
103 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
256-8923 • 256-8924

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK '93 !!
LAST CHANCE TO SAVE!
FROM ONLY $449.00
WITH ONLY 1 WEEK TO LIVE, WHY BLOW IT?!
WE KNOW JAMAICA LIKE NO OTHER COMPANY.
FROM HOTELS TO VILLAS OUR EXPERIENCED STAFF CAN MEET ANY OF YOUR NEEDS!
JAMAICA'S #1 SPRING BREAK COMPANY!!
Don't miss out on this year's hottest destination! Our packages are proven to be the best! Trips include Roundtrip Airfare, Hotel accommodations for 7 nights, Roundtrip Transfers, Hotel Taxes & Gratuities, many discounts, FREE APPLETON Rum Parties and much more!!
WE ALSO HAVE CANCUN AVAILABLE!!
For The Lowest Prices & The Best Trips, Call
Jill @ 256-3580 or 253-4253
Sun Splash Tours 1-800-426-7710

FROM THE DIRECTOR OF "DARKMAN"
Trapped in time.
Surrounded by evil.
Low on gas.

ARMY of DARKNESS
DINO DE LAURENTIIS COMMUNICATIONS presents A RENAISSANCE PICTURES production BRUCE CAMPBELL ARMY OF DARKNESS EMBETH DAVIDTZ
R
A UNIVERSAL RELEASE
COMING SOON TO A THEATRE NEAR YOU.

■ Untamed

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5

that day. In the dark cold night the two men taunt her. Immediately, Caroline screams as the two men chase her until one belts her and tries to rape her.

Adam comes to her rescue and from this moment on the two have created an instant bond that is so strong that it will take them into a love relationship. Caroline shows Adam that it is OK to touch her as she slowly and beautifully teaches him to get close to her in a sexual way. Caroline becomes Adam's teacher as he becomes her bodyguard, always looking out for her.

The only twist in the plot is that Adam, who is an orphan, wears a red badge of courage, a huge scar across his chest. He tells Caroline in his soft and raspy voice that a king baboon gave him his heart years ago in the heart of the jungle.

Hey, it creates diversity in the story and sets this film apart from the other dozen or so films bombarded at us every week. It may even explain why Adam is so different from any other young attractive men that Caroline has ever loved.

Marisa Tomei's performance is second to none. She brings a feeling of natural charm and spirit to her role and it makes her loveable, the same way audiences adored Julia Roberts in Pretty Woman. One of Tomei's lines that allows her to show her charm is when she says "He doesn't make sense. And I don't make sense. . . together we make sense!"

In addition, Rosie Perez is phenomenal! Her tough cookie attitude is a contrast to Tomei's sweetness. Perez's supporting character shines and is quite similar to Laura San Giacomo's Kit DeLuca in Pretty Woman. Perez and Tomei are matched well and make a funny yet daring friendship!

Untamed Heart is one of the better movies I've seen this year. The film and the vibrant glow that beams from the three notable stars that are in it will take you in and make you laugh, possibly cry (ladies. . .) and most of all it will leave you feeling good — something only an entertaining film can do. A

■ Francoise

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 4

me, I didn't plan on this, ever."

Franciose hopes to do a concept/performance video. She is also working on a number of pieces of children's music with her sister, Jane, who is writing the lyrics. On top of all that she is getting booked internationally for an upcoming tour.

Franciose says she has to learn "not be afraid of who you are," as Dizzy Gillespie, who died recently, said.

Franciose said she will have to be making a lot of decisions in the future about her career. But her choices won't be so hard when she finds that being in demand means she will be able to choose her audience, rather than her audience choosing her. It is clear that her listeners have already made the decision.

■ Superstar

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5

Neeley's absence was almost deafening) to earn a standing ovation for his strong-lunged saviour. While not equal to Neeley's carefully-shaded performance, Zolli (a UMass grad) gave Jesus' songs a startling vocal intensity — holding the last note of "Gethsemane" longer than the orchestra did.

Equally exceptional was the evening's supporting cast, with strong performances by James O'Neil as Pontius Pilate, Laurent Giroux as King Herod, and especially David Bedella, as Caiaphas — whose beautiful booming voice rolled out of the Mullins Center loudspeakers like a small earthquake.

Although Leesa Richards-Humphrey often became mired in overwrought "pop" vocals, her shortcomings could do nothing to damage the ultimate brilliance of this production. Entertainment like this is the reason God invented theatre.

■ Oscar

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 2

Before we get to the big one, here's the other major nominations. For Best Foreign Language Film: Close to Eden (Russia), Daens (Belgium), Indochine (France), A Place in the World (Uruguay) and Schtonk (Germany).

For Best Original Screenplay: The Crying Game, Husbands and Wives, Lorenzo's Oil, Passion Fish and Unforgiven. For Best Adapted Screenplay: Enchanted April, Howards End, The Player, A River Runs Through It and Scent of A Woman.

Best Picture — A mixed bag. You've got the very safe Hollywood product, A Few Good Men, the art-house costume drama in Howards End, a grand Western in Unforgiven, a sentimental weeper in Scent of A Woman and a critically-acclaimed marvel in The Crying Game.

The smart money is on Unforgiven, for some reason, though each has a pretty good chance of winning. It'd be a helluva surprise (a great one at that) if The Crying Game won. The Academy forgot: Malcolm X, Malcolm X, Malcolm X. Also The Player and Glengarry Glen Ross.

Who will win? Stay tuned on Monday, March 29. Until then, I'll be fine-tuning my predictions and offering a week-long look back at the last five years of Academy Award winners to try to figure the whole thing out in late March.

And the winner is. . .

Save a Tree,

Recycle This Collegian

REKINDLE YOUR PASSION For Indian Food at

The Valley's Original INDIA HOUSE Restaurant ON STATE STREET

Where Indian Food is more than Curry!

For Excellent Food and Hospitality Come to Our House...

45 State Street Northampton, MA 586-6344

DON'S AUTO SERVICE 323-7762

91 Chevy Lumina
90 Chevy Corsica 4 cyl
90 Chevy Lumina V6
90 Olds Siera 4 cyl
90 Buick Century 6 cyl
90 Plymouth Sundance 4 cyl 5 speed
89 Chevy Silverado V8 4 wheel drive
89 Dodge Dynasty 4 cyl
89 Mercury Topaz 4 cyl
89 Chevy Cavalier 4 cyl
88 Dodge Caravan SE V6-7 passanger
88 Dodge Shadow 4 cyl
87 Chrysler Labaron 4 cyl Turbo
86 Chevy Capris V6 very low miles
86 Olds Delta Brougham V6
86 Buick Somerset 6 cyl
86 Dodge Caravan LE 7 passanger 4 cyl
86 Toyota Pick up 4 cyl 5 speed
85 Subaru Wagon 4 cyl 5 spped 4 wheel drive
85 Chevy Celebrity 4 cyl
85 Plymouth Turismo 4 cyl 4 speed
85 Chevy Chevette 2 door
85 Olds Siera 6 cyl
84 Chevy Celebrity 6 cyl
84 Buick Century 4 cyl
84 Mercury Lynx 4 cyl 4 speed
82 Ford Crown Victoria Wagon V8
82 Chevy Celebrity 6 cyl
82 Chevy S10 Pick up 4 cyl 4 speed

All cars are automatic with power steering and power brakes unless otherwise specified.

141 Sargeant St., Rt.9 • Belchertown

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL OF AMERICA

If you are over 18, and would like to earn Full Time Income Working Part Time Be a Bartender

- Day/Evening Week
- Local/National Placement
- Limited Openings Remain For March and April Classes
- Make Your Move Today and Receive Additional Savings on Tuition Fees

Call Today! 747-9888 • 1655 Main St., Suite 202 • Springfield MC/VISA/AE

SLEEP IN CLASS While Your Car Is Being Repaired

Use the FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE to Campus plus 10% OFF with Student I.D.

Not Valid with Other Discounts. OFFER EXPIRES 2/28/93.

MIDAS

MUFFLERS BRAKES SHOCKS STRUTS COMPUTERIZED ALIGNMENT

RTE. 9/HADLEY 586-9991 NEAR HAMPSHIRE MALL

South Hadley's TOWER THEATRES

THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY 533-2663

Starts Fri 2/19 at 6:15 & 8:55
Sat and Sun at 3:30, 6:15 & 8:55
Mon. - Thurs at 6:15 & 8:55

Richard Gere Jodie Foster

SOMMERSBY

PG-13

Fri at 4:10, 6:30 & 9:00
Sat and Sun at 1:55, 4:10, 6:30 & 9:00
Mon - Thurs at 6:45 & 8:55

LOONEY TUNES HALL of FAME A Classic Cartoons Feature

Friday at 3:30
Sat and Sun at 1:30

Friday February 19, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 81

Partly sunny.
Highs in the mid 20's.

Local News:
Student leaders demand an on-campus site for Southwest residents to vote in local, state and national elections. Page 3.

Sports:
UMass Minutewomen's basketball defeats the George Washington Colonials 59–57 at the Curry Hicks Cage. Page 8.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

OFF WITH 'IS 'EAD! — Giddy from inhaling varnish fumes while installing the Mullins Center's parquet floor, this anonymous student worker (left) mistook the backboard for a guillotine.

Administrators deny influenza epidemic

By CUTTER GARCIA
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts officials refuted rumors yesterday concerning the outbreak of an influenza epidemic on campus.

In their first public acknowledgment of the existence of rumors that the University was on the verge of being shut down because an extremely large percentage of students were getting sick, University officials denied there being any such problem.

"To dispel various rumors, I would like to make it clear that there is no intention of closing the campus because of the incidence of flu," said Provost Glen Gordon in a one-page memo distributed during yesterday's faculty senate meeting. He did, however, ask faculty to be understanding about students' needs.

Concerning students missing classes due to the illness, Gordon said, "Common sense should be the rule in allowing reasonable opportunity for students to make up what may have been missed because of illness."

Dr. David Kraft, executive director of Health Services, called rumors that the University would be shut down if 50 percent of the student body reported to UHS "ridiculous," rejecting their validity.

"That's absolutely ridiculous. In terms of the visits to the Health Center since Feb. 1, we've been averaging about 100 people a day who have flu-like symptoms," he said.

When measured with enrollment numbers gathered from the University's Research and Evaluation offices, using the numbers of 100 students per day for 15 days, the actual number of those reporting infection would be between eight and 10 percent of the undergraduate population.

Kraft also acknowledged that those hit by the virus had been hit hard. Asked if students truly need to be seeking medical attention for the flu he replied, "The students and the people coming to seek help really are quite sick . . . and we need to check them out to be sure that in addition to the virus they haven't developed some sort of bacterial infection."

In response to the origin of the 50 percent rumor Kraft said, "I don't know where that started. To me it sounds like a pretty good prank. It's just wishful thinking."

Dr. James Abel of Health Services said he wasn't sure if this particular virus was any worse than any other. He did feel, though, that the disease seems to have spread quite rapidly and that it had infected more people at the same time than any other virus the UMass campus has seen.

"I would say [the flu] is almost unavoidable. When you're in a condensed environment like this where people live in close confinement, being in dorms and classrooms with a lot of close contact, it's just a practically unavoidable situation. . .So the University is extremely prone to an epidemic because of the situation we live in," he said.

One theory he offered to explain the rumor is that while only eight to 10 percent of the students have actively sought treatment for the flu at Health Services, a far wider number of students are suffering from it but are refusing to seek treatment.

Students cited long lines at Health Services and busy schedules as reasons for not getting treatment.

Confusion surrounds decision

Committee, SGA disagree why funding was denied

By FELICIA COUSINS
Collegian Correspondent

The Undergraduate Student Government Association's decision to refuse a $1,000 funding request for the 1993 Women's Conference has spurred mixed reactions from many, especially those organizing the conference.

"Everything seemed fishy," said Mike Poster, speaker of the Student Senate.

The confusion surrounds Housing Services' involvement with the conference. All funding proposals for the conference were signed by the Southwest Area Government, on Housing Services' stationery, and all publicity deemed the conference as a Housing Services event.

According to Poster, this made it appear as if Housing Services was using the Southwest Area Government to get money from the SGA.

"The guidelines said we should not sponsor a non-RSO event," Poster said.

Theresa Frecker, a residence director in the Southwest residential area, defined Housing Services' role in organizing the conference.

"I am the only person who is not a student. This is a student-run event," Frecker said. "Housing Services is only at the top of the list [of sponsors] because that's who I work for."

Joy Goldsmith, resource coordinator for the conference said, "The event was initiated by Frecker via Housing Services. Housing Services is the primary sponsor, but is not the sole sponsor. They were the first to contribute funding for the event and provided the use of their services."

Kevin Newnan, student trustee, said he felt the motion was denied "because there was no representation. Obviously [Southwest Area Government] did not feel strongly enough about it because they were not here."

However, members from Southwest Area Government and the women's conference organizing committee were

Turn to SGA, page 3

Coalition seeks pot legalization

By KENDRA WILLETT
Collegian Staff

Although it may be a long time before marijuana use is allowed in the United States, members of the University of Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition are trying to gain support for a petition that will "legalize" the drug here on campus.

According to Aaron Wilson, the acting president of the Coalition, the idea originated from the University of Texas. The vote passed, but the state legislature "went crazy," Wilson said.

"We understand that the vote will be non-binding," Wilson said. "It's more of a political statement."

Coalition members have set up a table in the Campus Center Concourse, and are looking for students to sign their petition in order for it to be put on the ballot for the Student Government Association elections which will take place on March 9 and 10.

The petition needs 1,772 signatures from the student body in order for the question to appear on the ballot — roughly 10 percent of the UMass student body. At least 15 percent of the student body must vote in order for the question to remain valid.

We expect to win," Wilson said. "But we want to win by a whole lot."

Wilson said the information the Coalition has been passing along argues that marijuana is not addictive, does not make people violent, and it is not a gateway to harder and more dangerous drugs.

Also included in the information are statistics on

Turn to POT, page 3

Faculty Senate approves ban on smoking

By MICHAEL R. LINSKEY
Collegian Staff

The Faculty Senate yesterday sent their approval of a policy recommending the establishment of a smoke-free campus to Chancellor Richard O'Brien, who will confer with other constituent groups before deciding whether to implement it.

Professor John Cunningham, Chair of the University Health Council, argued for approval of the policy because of recent medical findings of the adverse health effects of smoking.

"Since we last presented our findings about tobacco smoke, it's been declared a Class A carcinogen by the EPA," he said. "It has now joined the ranks of asbestos, radon, and benzene."

According to the report, environmental tobacco smoke can be linked to such health problems as "eye and throat irritation, headache, rhinitis, and coughing," and it also suggests that allowing smoking indoors infringes on the comfort of non-smokers.

The report also said, "Smoking may overwhelm the effects of building ventilation and inflict significant air pollution burdens on all people in closed spaces. In effect non-smokers, the majority on campus, are increasingly affected negatively by the quality of air within closed spaces where [environmental tobacco smoke] is prevalent."

The policy designates all enclosed areas on campus as "smoke free," except for certain rooms in the Campus Center hotel, and pre-existing smok-

Turn to SMOKING, page 3

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, Feb. 24

Lecture — Catherine R. Stimpson, a prominent feminist scholar and a faculty member at Rutgers University, will lecture on "Pains, Gains, and the Education of Women: Women's Studies Today" at 8 p.m. in Wright Auditorium at Smith College.

Tuesday, March 2

Lecture — Emily S. Rosenberg, professor of history at Macalester College, will lecture on "Crossing Cultural Divides: A Historical Perspective on the Expansion of American Popular Culture in the 20th Century at 8 p.m. in the Nielson Browsing Room at Smith College. Rosenberg's lecture is part of Smith's ongoing series of talks on American Popular Culture Abroad.

Ad

IF ONLY THEY CAME WITH INSTRUCTIONS.
American Red Cross

How would you like to write for the Largest College Daily in New England? Come to 113 Campus Center to find out how.

How's your First Aid? American Red Cross

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE
Michelob 12 pk Bottles ..... $6.99 (+ dep)
Maes Pils One of the finest in Belgium beers, flavorful & light
6 pk ..... $4.69 (+ dep)
The Catamount "Trio" - Plus Post Road
6 pk..... $4.69 (+ dep) Case ..... $17.99 (+ dep)
Sam Smith - Winter Welcome, Taddy Porter, Nut Brown, Pale Ale, Oatmeal Stout ..... 2 for $6.90 (+ dep)
Golden Anniversary Case 12 oz cans .... $7.99 (+ dep)
Miller "High Life" Cans - 6 pk $2.70 (+ dep) Case .. $9.99 (+ dep)
Sam Adams Lager 22 oz Bottle ..... $1.85 (+ dep)
Seagrams "7" 1.75 L $13.99
Seagrams Gin 1.75 L $13.99
Dewars Scotch 750 ml $15.99
LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
Open 9 am - 11 pm
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

University of Massachusetts – Housing Services
1993 Women's Conference:
EmPOWERing WOMEN
Prospects & Challenges for the 21st Century
SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27
Keynote Speaker: ANGELA DAVIS
author, activist, academic
Topics for the afternoon session: Women as Activists & Leaders, Women and AIDS, The Economy and Women, Women from Developing Nations, Women of Color: a Cross-Cultural Perspective, Media and Women, Violence Against Women, Women in Traditionally Male Dominated Professions, and Women and Their Relationships
Register Today!!! Space is limited, so registration is required – $3.00 donation is requested. Register Right Now!!! You can call 545-0917 or register in person at our table in the Campus Center concourse. REGISTRATION ENDS ON FRIDAY!!!
Sponsored by: NOMMO News, Black Student Union, African Student Union, African Students Association, ALAANA R.A. Matters, Anti-Racism Coalition, Forum on Developing Nations, AHORA, Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Alliance, Korean Students Association, Cape Verdean Student Alliance, Office of Third World Affairs, Graduate Student Senate, Black Mass Communication Project, Graduate Employees Organization, Valley Women's Voice, Southwest Area Government, Women's Studies Department, Program for Gay/Lesbian/Bisexual Concerns, Pan-Hellenic Council, Allied Students Against Prejudice, Housing Services/Residential Education, Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board, Office of the Chancellor, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs - Dean of Students Office, Office of Human Relations, Society of Women Engineers, Women in Engineering & Science/Graduate Women's Network, Women in Engineering Program.

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK '93 !!
LAST CHANCE TO SAVE!
FROM ONLY $449.00
WITH ONLY 1 WEEK TO LIVE, WHY BLOW IT?!
WE KNOW JAMAICA LIKE NO OTHER COMPANY.
FROM HOTELS TO VILLAS OUR EXPERIENCED STAFF CAN MEET ANY OF YOUR NEEDS!
JAMAICA'S #1 SPRING BREAK COMPANY!!
Don't miss out on this year's hottest destination! Our packages are proven to be the best! Trips include Roundtrip Airfare, Hotel accommodations for 7 nights, Roundtrip Transfers, Hotel Taxes & Gratuities, many discounts, FREE APPLETON Rum Parties and much more!!
WE ALSO HAVE CANCUN AVAILABLE!!
For The Lowest Prices & The Best Trips, Call
Jill @ 253-4253
Sun Splash Tours 1-800-426-7710

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家滇園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

Local News

Voting booth sought for Southwest

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts students are demanding an on- campus voting site for non-campus elections at the Hampshire Dining Commons.

"We want to enfranchise students in Southwest because they have been disenfranchised for so long," said UMass student Neil Carpenter, who is Amherst redistricting committee chairperson.

Currently if students in Southwest want to vote in a presidential, state or town election they must vote at the Bangs Community Center, located in Amherst center. Southwest students, who are in voting precincts four and 10, are the only group on campus that must go out of their precinct to vote.

Student Government Association President Jen Wood said that because many of the students do not know where the community center is, they are less likely to turn out to vote.

According to a Collegian phone survey conducted yesterday in which participants were randomly selected, 13 out of 15 Southwest residents said they did not know where the Bangs Community Center was. A majority of those who did not vote said that during the survey they would be more likely to vote if a voting booth were opened in the Hampshire Dining Commons.

When Niki Fossella went to vote at the presidential election in the Bangs Community Center, she was told that she was not registered and hence could not vote. But Fossella, a senior majoring in BDIC with a concentration in fashion design, said she registered to vote her freshman year in the Student Union.

Lindsey Samuelsohn, a freshman majoring in English, said that although she voted by absentee ballot in the last presidential election, she would be more likely to vote in Amherst if a voting booth opened in the Hampshire Dining Commons.

"I think it would make it a lot more accessible and more people would vote," Samuelsohn said.

Of students registered in Amherst who live in other dorms, 79 percent voted in the presidential election, while 72 percent of students in Southwest turned out to vote, according to Student Senator Rory Pascar, who said he obtained his figures from the voting lists from the Amherst town clerk.

Pascar said that in the 1990 state gubernatorial election, 56 percent of Southwest turned out while the rest of the campus voted at 67 percent.

But Amherst Assistant Town Clerk Maragaret Nartowicz said there would be a problem with parking if a voting booth were opened in the Hampshire Dining Commons. Not only would the parking lot be too far away, but also there would be a problem with handicap-accessible parking, Nartowicz said.

Wood, however, said the south side room in the Dining Commons is handicap-accessible.

"Every time we work on enfranchising students [the town] comes up with a procedural problem," Carpenter said.

Wood, mentioning the Bangs Community Center also has a parking problem, said she felt the students' plan was being held up to a higher standard. Wood added that she will be presenting a proposal for the opening of a voting booth in the Hampshire Dining Commons to the Amherst Town Clerk in the near future.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

not notified until an hour and a half before the meeting and could not be present, said Shyamala Ivatury, program committee chair.

"For an organization that boasts about a $2 million budget, the SGA's incompetence is amazing. Two weeks ago we went to the finance committee meeting and presented our proposal. Out of six persons only two showed up," Ivantury said.

"Therefore they had no quorum. It is clear that SGA is meshed up in the bureaucratic mumbo-jumbo, similar to that of the administration. They have no concern for either women's issues or issues of people of color," she said.

Goldsmith said the "SGA was more caught up with regulations and is neglecting to think about the value of this conference."

Poster said, "We support this event, but we felt the proposal was coming from housing."

"I supported the motion but we lost," said David Nunez, a senator from the Third World Caucus.

■ pot

continued from page 1

death rates in the United States. Tobacco and alcohol lead the statistics on mortality while marijuana has not one recorded death, according to the Family Council on Drug Awareness.

The Coalition's motto is that "you don't own your body, you rent it from the government," Wilson said.

The Coalition's goal is to take the support of the student body and use it before the judicial hearing board on campus. Members say they want an agreement from the board that students caught smoking the drug will not be penalized within the judicial system on campus.

"Today marijuana is a criminal offense which can ruin someone's life forever," Wilson said, "And we want to change that."

Although approximately 1,000 students signed the petition as of Wednesday night, there are also many students who are against the idea altogether.

Referring to the operation of machinery, Jeff Winn, a political science major said he believes that "marijuana may impair ones ability," and couldn't imagine getting on a PVTA bus with a driver who had just consumed the drug.

The question, if there are enough signatures, will appear on the SGA ballot as: "Do you support the UMass Hemp initiative described below?" The information that follows asks the signer to agree that Hemp is less harmful than tobacco and alcohol and enviromentally beneficial.

"What's next?" asked sophomore Kori Wyshak. "Before you know it they are going to want to legalize more serious drugs."

■ smoking

continued from page 1

ing areas established in the residence halls.

Cunningham said the University should implement the policy to provide itself adequate legal protection.

"Designated [smoking] areas will now be out of doors, in areas that have adequate ventilation," said Cunningham. "This will protect the University in terms of being sued by someone who might be exposed to this carcinogen."

The policy, if implemented, would charge the chancellor with the responsibility of enforcing the ban. It allows individuals to submit written complaints to the heads of departments where smoking occurs.

Department heads would then have 15 days to inform the complainant as to how the problem would be resolved.

Such compliance regulations led English Professor Jerry Allen to question what sanctions would be brought to bear on violators. Cunningham responded only that he had heard "of no other penalty" than those suggested under the policy.

Provost Glen Gordon proposed that existing, well-ventilated areas in campus buildings be transformed into smoking areas.

"I'm not sure there are any spaces, but if someone claims that there is such a space that causes no problems for anybody— directly or indirectly—I don't think we should prohibit [smoking]," he said.

"It's not an amendment that asks that such spaces be created, but only if there are such spaces available that smoking be permitted in those spaces," he said.

Gordon's amendment was defeated, but the motion itself was passed soon thereafter by voice vote.

ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435
6th Week! - Curtain Daily - 6:45 & 9:00
"One pick-your-jaw-off-the-floor stunner of a plot twist."
-Entertainment Weekly

"A RIVETING ROMANTIC THRILLER!" — Kathleen Carroll, NEW YORK DAILY NEWS
THE CRYING GAME play it at your own risk
R MIRAMAX
LATE SHOW THIS FRI. & SAT. AT 11:00PM
(ONLY AREA SHOWING-BOX-OFF FROM 10 PM)
HARRISON FORD. BLADE RUNNER
THE DIRECTOR'S CUT
THE ORIGINAL CUT OF THE FUTURISTIC ADVENTURE

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

IMPORTANT: Please learn American Red Cross Infant/Child CPR
American Red Cross
Ad

Northwestern University
Summer Session '93
Think or swim.
Our intensives in chemistry, physics, and languages draw students from all over the country.
Call 1-800-FINDS NU (in Illinois, call 708/491-4114) or mail this coupon.
I'm thinking. Send me a free copy of the Summer Session '93 catalog with financial aid and registration information (available in March). Please send the catalog to ☐ my home ☐ my school.
Summer Session '93, 2003 Sheridan Road
Evanston, Illinois 60208-2650
Name
School Address
City State Zip
Home Address
City State Zip
Northwestern is an equal opportunity educator and employer.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Whine, whine, whine: let's just get it all out of the way

Eventually spring will hit our humble school, and the influx of letters describing how wonderful the grass and birds and frisbees are will eventually start to flow. But before that annual ritual begins, I don't want to feel left out of the long-standing UMass tradition known historically as "griping and fussing."

Allow me to generously handle the burden of speaking for all UMass students at once, thereby becoming spokesperson for the entire student population, a right previously secured by dolts with megaphones. That way we can all get the sum of our frustrations out in one tight, succinct column, and then go home and rest. I've separated it into clearly labeled sections for ease of digestibility, with summaries for the MTV generation.

1. The Dorms: A virtual prison. First they take away our drugs. Then they seize our alcohol. Then they give us the "Microfridge." In the non-skyscraper dorms, ever notice that all space is used to its maximum potential? Then when you get to the basement, all hell breaks loose. Space everywhere! Scattered about are pool tables, bike rooms, lounges and TV rooms the size of South College. And were they expecting international conventions in the lobby areas? And if the UMass police are "real" police, what do we need R.A.s for?

Most Likely To Hear: Alarms. Door alarms, car alarms, elevator alarms, racial incident alarms, neighbors' (who've left for the weekend) clock alarms. Oh yeah, pesky fire alarms too.

Gary
DEANE

Time Things Are Least Likely To Be On Fire: During fire alarm.

Items Occasionally Hurtling Out A Window: Clothes dryer. Cow.

2. Off-Campus Housing: When you've completed your sentence in the dorms, it's time to fully enjoy poverty. For example, my house has no driveway, no clothes washer or dryer, no dishwasher, no insulation, no food, no oxygen and no cable TV. It features a smooth dirt basement, flatware donated by the D.C. and spicy mushrooms growing under the bathroom sink. The water leaves a yellow scum on the tub so thick we chip it off and feed it to the rats in the kitchen. By the time you're done writing checks for a phone, trash removal, frostbite medicine, electricity and heat, the enormous checks for renting the slum seem like chump change.

Favorite Real Estate Agent Motto: "We must have it in writing."

Favorite Real Estate Agent Blatant Lie: "You have our word on it."

3. The PVTA: Predictably Vague Transport Adventure. They printed, distributed and posted a bezillion schedules. Since only five people actually cared to decipher them, few noticed that the Sunday schedule was printed up all wrong. Oops! Who knew?

Misting?: Add, say, 17 minutes to some scheduled arrival times.

Raining?: Add 25 minutes to the arrival times, and subtract six months from your life as you travel like wet cats in a shoebox.

Fun Fact: The "North Amherst" buses don't stop at or pass North Amherst Center. Really. Instead, they race to North Conway (N.H.).

4. Health Services: Dislocated my pinky. Waited in chair. Did all my homework for the year. Told my temperature is 98.1. Wrote my memoirs, watched the sun set and then rise. Walked stairs, got an X-ray. Had a two-ounce apple juice. Got a 10 cent splint.

Wondering If Bill Clinton Will: Come and see this and rescue us.

Least Likely Place To Be: Moved to the Campus Center and used.

Best Place To Get: A two-ounce apple juice and 10 cent splint.

5. Phone-In Registration: I enjoyed waiting in lines. I relished weaseling my way into closed classes and scoffing at prerequisites. I couldn't even add a gym on the phone. So, for kicks, I added Microbiology 899: "Doctoral Dissertation." Oh boy, I got one!

Fun To Find Housemates' PINs And Drop All Their Classes: Yes.

I got strange looks after saying: "Well um, let's see... I took some biology in high school."

Gary Deane is a Collegian staff member.

Why is hatred so persistent?

It gets so sickening. Time and again, the issue of persecution and hatred of groups or individuals — because of race, religion, sexual orientation or whatever other reason society can conjure up — pops up. And every time it seems to take those with a broader, more accepting scope to once again remind the hatemongers that we're all in this world together and there's nothing that anyone can do to change that.

This is in response to nothing in general, no particular article I've seen, no speech I've heard and no one person's opinion that has nagged at my nerves for so long that I have to speak out against it. Rather, it is an outlook I've had for a long time and one that's been gaining strength with each day on this campus and everywhere else I've gone in my 21 years and perhaps will go with me for however long I live.

Troy
MERRICK

But in what kind of world am I and the huge variety of people — will all their beliefs, ideas, fears, hopes, likes and dislikes — living, if the be-all and end-all is that we have trouble merely accepting each other's differences?

I'm not preaching, at least I realize I'm not perfect. We all have our "maladjusted anti-social tendencies" from time to time. There are things about some people that irk us; no one gets along with everybody else. That would be fairytale-ish, if nothing else.

The problem arises when we use a person we are uncomfortable around or whose company we don't particularly enjoy as an effigy for an entire population of those with that characteristic and, in turn, burn that effigy down in our minds, pretending we are getting rid of it, eliminating so we won't have to deal with it and neither will anybody else.

Blacks may think I am using them as an example of this. Homosexuals may think they are the target. Asians, Hispanics, Whites, the elderly, religious groups. . . the list goes on.

The point is that no individual or group is the object in question. It is rather that what I've seen on campus, in the media, in conversations and in stand-up comedy is the topic of hatred, ridicule, denial of equal rights or anything negative toward someone for a particular trait or characteristic.

We're supposed to be mature and learned, right? We all at least claim to be. Then why is racism even a word needing attention? Why is allowing homosexuals in the armed forces such a difficult thing to decide? Why are women still battling for equal treatment in jobs and other areas? Let's take it a step further: why are there wars? I'm no sociologist and I'm sure even if I were, I wouldn't be able to discern why these plagues exist even after all the "groundwork" that's been covered in handling them.

I honestly don't claim to know. I can only do my part in being my own man, and by continuing to learn from myself and others. We live in a diverse world where people come into our lives and leave just as easily, and how the transition is made depends on our ability to judge people not on the things that don't matter or that they can't change, but on those that they, no matter who they are, have been trying so hard for so long to convey.

Troy Merrick is a Collegian staff member.

Ineffectual SGA needs to change

Last week, I detailed the ways in which the administration screws us students, and this week is a follow-up editorial, focusing on the ineffectual student government.

Do you know who the SGA president is? Chances are, you don't. The invisiblity of the leaders of student government is a poor thing in and of itself. Don't you think you should at least know the names of some of the senators, if not the president?

Michael
MORRISSEY

Here at the University, things have been awry in student government for many years. Part of the problem is the students, but most of the problem lies with the junior politicians. Let me give you an example.

Five short years ago, a man named Jason Rabinowitz ran for the presidency of the student government. Mr. Rabinowitz happened to be a member of the Young Communist League, and was in fact a Communist.

Wait, it gets better.

Mr. Rabinowitz decided to run as a co-presidential candidate, with a young woman. While it can only be asserted that Rabinowitz latched on to a female to make the ticket look more "normal" and to get the female vote, the truth exists that he flew right in the face of the democratic process, as SGA rules stated that there could be no co-presidency.

Never underestimating the gullibility of people, Rabinowitz won by a good 300 votes. The problem was, he and his cohort couldn't serve because they broke the rules by running as co-presidents.

Things haven't gotten much better since.

The administration laughs at the student government process because of SGA's inability to flex its collective muscle. Instead of being an organization that could strike fear into Whitmore and give us students what we deserve, petty jealousies thwart much of the activity.

Another problem with the student government is that they are, for the most part, knee-jerk liberals. Our current senate and president have done nothing to dispel this fact, despite evidence that our university is as conservative as it has ever been. Our representatives are not serving us in the least.

It seems as if these politicians, merely to thumb their noses at us, have proclaimed in voice and in motions their liberalness. How can we get someone to watch Whitmore if our senators are as liberal as the P.C. crew? Answer: we can't. We need a change.

With a new chancellor coming in, there should be a new student government to watch over him or her. We don't need another liberal brigade, patting the vice chancellors on the back at every turn. If ever there was a demographic group simply made for the "ALLY" pin, it is these senators.

Dick O'Brien is unmoved by the weak attempts of our government, and can you blame him? After all, O'Brien gets away with everything from tuition raises to the shutdown of minority programs, with nary a peep from the SGA.

O'Brien is soon to go, but with Affirmative Action firmly in place, expect a minority woman to take his place. It should be the student government who asks, for us students, "Will the next chancellor be hired for his/her skin color or ability?"

Unfortunately, this will never happen. The student government instead will pass a motion proclaiming "a sincere glee in helping you every step of the way." This is precisely the problem with the structure and the liberals who run it, one of the many things that have to change.

With the new SGA elections in March, it is the students' responsibility to elect someone who they feel will serve their needs. By voting, you can make a conscious decision to elect someone who represents you. Or you can go right on, not knowing who the president is.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist.

Life in the military demands conformity

This letter is dedicated to all of you who have written articles or argued your case for gays in the military. First, I would like to ask where you got all your insight. How many years did you serve your country? I mean, I can't say I understand how much a woman goes through during pregnancy, but if I said I did, those of you who have borne a child would only laugh.

So for all of you who haven't served let me sum up a key point of life in the military: there is no individuality. They take that from you day one in basic training. While you serve you're not allowed to express yourself with something as simple as an earring or long hair. Now take something as controversial as homosexuality: bingo, you've got problems.

Right now society's norms don't accept homosexuality as a way of life. Sure you won't be thrown in jail for being gay, but then again, your life doesn't depend on anyone but yourself right now. In the military life, let's say in a special forces unit, everyone plays a critical role. If one person isn't trusted because he's gay (or for any other reason), people are going to start dying. You say there have been gays in the military since its inception, but it was not known throughout your unit for fear of reprisal.

I believe it should stay that way. There is no draft; you choose to join the military. If you're not willing to conform to these rules (no drugs, no long hair, no beard, no homosexuality) then don't join. Stay in school and complain about those damned stiff-necked military people (but boy aren't you glad they protect you so you can complain!).

Todd J. Green
Northampton

Avoiding layoffs

The efforts of the Auxiliary Services Deficit-Reduction Task Force Committee were presented to the campus community with gross inaccuracy in the article, "Board examines layoffs" [Collegian, Feb 12]. The story actually said that the "task force is considering laying off workers." The truth is that one of its main goals is and has always been to avoid layoffs.

The committee has spent a considerable amount of time figuring out ways to avoid laying off employees who have made a commitment to the students through their jobs with Auxiliary Services. It has the task of examining a large deficit to cut costs. The results of the task force will affect anyone who uses the Campus Center/Student Union of the meal plan and therefore will play a part in developing the future quality of life at UMass. In order for the task force committee to formulate the cost saving ideas of all the Auxiliary Services employees, it needs their support.

Perhaps the Collegian might visit with the task force to find out what they are all about so that our newspaper will be able to provide us with accurate information which will affect our community so drastically.

Dan Gordon
At-Large Governor of the CC/SU

Arts & Living

Find out the real Story on folk-pop harmonies

By ADAM GOULSTON
Collegian Correspondent

Amherst College welcomes back two pair of its most musical alumni Sunday night to perform as a part of the Sundays at Eight Coffeehouse Series in an evening of acoustics and waning reality.

The Story is the folk-pop duo of Jonatha Brooke and Jennifer Kimball, a diverse and tremendously talented pair with the capability to perform accompanied by their own guitars or a cappella, accompanied by only their astounding vocalization and playful choreography. The vocal stylings of The Story are of an uncanny range, a vibrato-less display of harmony. This isn't where The Story ends.

The magnetism of The Story lies not only in Brooke and Kimball's melody but also in the appealing and relevant range of topics their songs cover. Everything from the hilarious to the morose is touched upon with songs like "Dog Dreams," a family pooch's fantasy escape and subsequent feline termination, and "Grace in Gravity" telling of a black dancer's paralysis tragically brought about when he's denied treatment at a White hospital after an automobile accident in South Africa.

The tunes can become quite dreamlike, as the pair likes to draw upon their sleepytime adventures for subject matter and inspiration. This fondness for the subconscious is evident in the dreamy sounds and images produced within their songs, especially the moodier ballads.

The duet has the talent to create a song which enlightens its audiences, leading them down a much different route than expected. The end result can be quite surprising.

For a preview of The Story's considerable abilities, pick up a copy of their first CD, Grace in Gravity on Green Linnet Records.

First on stage in Amherst College's Frontroom will be Justina and Joyce, another local product returning to their alma mater. Described as "heart-opening," "thought-provoking" and "comforting," Justina Golden and Joyce Zymeck introduce their lush harmonics to acoustic guitars and dulcimer for a soothing product. Justina and Joyce create a performing environment to make the listeners forget their worries and relax in the ethereal harmony, a perfect prologue to The Story.

Turn to STORY, page 7

The deep-dish on Superior's hot pizza connection

Local pizzaria owners agree that pizza is the students' food of choice. Not only has it become "Primo" on the Amherst food chain, but pizza has also become the local business commodity. With more than 30 listed pizza businesses in the five-college area, students have more than a multitude of selections.

Whether it's good business or just a guess, the four-week owners of Superior Pizza of North Amherst, Joseph Scalora and Tony DiBlasi, have accurately summed up what everyone in the area pizza industry agrees on. They feel the best marketing formula is to provide customers with the freshest ingredients, hospitality and a large delivery area. Superior tries to accommodate business from all over.

"Some people call from Northampton and ask us to deliver," DiBlasi said. "But it takes a half hour to and from so sometimes we can't."

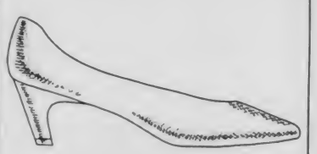
Superior, which continues in the tradition of the "family business," has plans to renovate to help the general business growth of the area created by the Mullins Center influx.

"We get lots of people coming from the Center and that's only going to help," DiBlasi said.

Whether you are a pizza lover or just doing the pizza thing, Amherst is obviously the place to be.

— DAVID RIVERA

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK '93 !!
LAST CHANCE TO SAVE!
FROM ONLY $449.00
WITH ONLY 1 WEEK TO LIVE, WHY BLOW IT?!
WE KNOW JAMAICA LIKE NO OTHER COMPANY.
FROM HOTELS TO VILLAS OUR EXPERIENCED STAFF CAN MEET ANY OF YOUR NEEDS!
JAMAICA'S #1 SPRING BREAK COMPANY!!
Don't miss out on this year's hottest destination! Our packages are proven to be the best! Trips include Roundtrip Airfare, Hotel accommodations for 7 nights, Roundtrip Transfers, Hotel Taxes & Gratuities, many discounts, FREE APPLETON Rum Parties and much more!!
WE ALSO HAVE CANCUN AVAILABLE!!
For The Lowest Prices & The Best Trips, Call
Jill @ 253-4253
Sun Splash Tours 1-800-426-7710

INTERVIEWING?


ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
Open Thursdays 'til 8 p.m.

PUBLIC NOTICE
WANTED MUSICIANS INTERESTED IN QUALITY MERCHANDISE AT LOWEST PRICES!
Come To New England's Largest Musical Sale
SAVE UP TO 70%
3 DAYS ONLY
Friday, February 19, 5 pm to 9 pm
Saturday, February 20, 10 am to 9 pm
Sunday, February 21, 12 noon to 5 pm
Digital Pianos • Guitars & Basses • Amplifiers
Drums • Portable Keyboards • Synthesizers
Recording & MIDI Equipment • Sound Reinforcement
Signal Processers • Effect Pedals • Music • Accessories
$500,00 In-Store Sale - 5th Year! Don't Miss It!
Choose From...
Alesis•Audio Technica•Charvel•DOD•EMU•Ensoniq•Fostex•Ibanez
Peavey•Roland•Sablan•Samick•Shure•TAMA•Washburn•Yamaha•Zildjian
FALCETTI MUSIC
Holyoke Mall at Ingelside
36th Anniversary Celebration
For More Information Call 413-538-7970
No Dealers or Wholesalers!

THIS SATURDAY!
HOST OF HIT TV SHOW "STUDS"

All Ages All Shows
MARK DeCARLO
COMING SOON

MICHAEL WINSLOW "Police Academy" Feb 27

JAMIE FOX "IN LIVING COLOR" Mar 6

JUDY TENUTA "The Love Goddess" Mar 27

TOMMY CHONG CHEECH & CHONG Apr 3

DAVID ALAN GRIER "IN LIVING COLOR" Apr 10
COMEDY CONNECTION AT THE HU KE LAU CHICOPEE
Just a few short minutes from the U. MASS campus!
CALL 413•593•5222

CALVIN AND HOBBES

By BILL WATTERSON

DOONESBURY

By GARRY TRUDEAU

JIM'S JOURNAL

By JIM

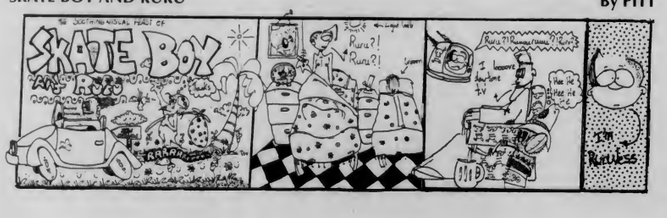
PRICE

By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED

By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU



By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

She was known as Madame D'Gizarde, and, in the early '40s, she used deceit, drugs and her beguiling charms to become the bane of chicken farmers everywhere.

Quote of the Day

"I'm going to put you on the game grid, Flynn."

– The M. C. P. Tron

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A wealth of ideas needs paring down to size. Do not let distractions keep you from handling important responsibilities. Creative ideas abound at work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Original ideas and innovative methods attract favorable notice today. Use your theatrical flair to illustrate concepts. Now is the ideal time to launch a business enterprise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Many errands and telephone calls are indicated today and tomorrow. Handle them promptly. A valuable partnership continues to flourish. A lucky breakthrough could come in an unexpected manner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highly favorable aspects mean speedy progress on an important work project or group effort. Friends can introduce you to business contacts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): After a period of uncertainty, you reach a significant behind the scenes agreement. A job, investment or collaborative enterprise is at stake. Do not let obstacles halt your progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Work should go well today. Be careful not to neglect family life in your preoccupation with getting ahead. Relax at home tonight. Read more about natural foods before altering your diet.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone may let you down today. It is best not to take promises at face value, especially where money or business is involved. Get the full facts from someone in the know.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Business and finance are again emphasized, and in a positive way. Creative ventures launched at this time stand a good chance of success. Do not be afraid to take calculated risks.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Streamline your schedule so that you can concentrate on achieving what is really important. If planning to enjoy a socially active, fun-filled weekend, try to leave work early.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have lots of nervous energy today but may lack staying power. A meeting with the boss should go well. Toot your own horn for a change. Claim credit for your ideas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There is no point in postponing tasks that must be done or decisions that must be made. Roll up your sleeves and dig in. A negotiating session goes smoothly; the results delight you!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good day for getting in touch with your real priorities and deepest needs. Planning ahead is reassuring. New occupational opportunities sound terrific.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Raincover, for short
5 Young whale
9 Northern Spy, for one
14 Extremely
15 Beyond
16 Pitcher Ryan
17 Isinglaas
18 Late night star
19 The thymus, for one
20 Prolong
23 Exactly
24 Candles
25 Fourth in a series
27 Change
30 Dogged
33 Big D institution
36 Certain shells
38 Inlet
39 Bag
41 Needlefish
42 Leg joint
43 M*A*S*H star
44 Misanthropes
47 Certain economic data, for short
48 When, to some
50 Cute Aussie creature
52 Racetrack boundaries
54 Beat
58 Weaken
60 Improvise
63 Symbol of Holland
65 1984 Nobel Peace Prize winner
66 Wash
67 X out
68 U.S.
69 Employs
70 David D. Dinkins, for one
71 Celeb
72 Bolch

DOWN
1 Lure
2 Walled city near Madrid
3 Summarize
4 Slim chance
5 Large statues
6 Depose
7 Pre-Easter season
8 Cold, in Paris
9 Actress Lansbury
10 Office holder, of a sort for short
11 Cooperate
12 Highway part
13 Scraps
21 Gratis
22 1969 World Series winner
26 Instant
28 Like a custard
29 Express gratitude
31 Smooth
32 Profound
33 Pole
34 Algeria's neighbor
35 De-emphasize
37 The Musketeers, for example
40 "Two Years Before the Mast" author
44 Viarl
45 Get
46 Hunk
49 Moppet
51 Refuge
53 Lucifer
55 Harry
56 Overhang
57 Garb
58 Spring
59 Distinctive atmosphere
61 City on the Colorado
62 Detail
64 Equal Comb. form

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

C	A	P	R	A		S	N	I	P		M	O	T	E
A	V	O	I	D		L	I	N	E		I	W	I	N
O	E	R	T	H		A	G	R	A		I	N	T
			K	E	E	P	T	H	E	C	H	A	N	G	E
			R	E	S	T		C	H	A	N	G	E	R
L	A	D	I	E	S		C	V	D
I	M	I	N	E		T	A	I	O		O	U	N	C	E
M	I	N	D	Y	O	U	R	M	A	N	N	E	R	S
A	N	E	Y	E		M	E	O	W		T	O	U	T
			A	S	P			A	S	P
A	T	L	A	S	T		A	P	S	O
T	W	I	S	T	A	N	D	S	H	O	U	T
T	I	N	S		L	A	M	A		K	N	O	C	K
I	N	D	E		L	I	M	I	T		O	D	D	I	E
C	E	O	S		N	E	R	T	S		R	E	D	D	Y

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Mike Webber
Copy Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
PhotoTechnician ..... Josh Reynolds
Production Supervisor ..... Seth Kaye
Production ..... Tony Morse
Todd Elliott

Menu

LUNCH
Tacos
Jalapeño Shrimp & Rice
BASICS LUNCH
Veggie Tacos
Jalapeño Shrimp & Rice

DINNER
Chicken Stir Fry
Pinapple Ham Steak
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Stir Fry
Potato Mushroom Delite

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Story

continued from page 5

The Story and Justina and Joyce are quite probably the answer to an otherwise dull Sunday evening of studying and bumming around, as they promise an engaging and melodic show with a social conscience. The audience is assured of leaving Amherst's campus with an enlightened outlook and a warmed heart.

If your body is ailing, do it a favor. If you feel good, feel better. Head downtown, support your local artists and be dazzled.

The Story and Justina and Joyce will captivate the crowd at Amherst College's Frontroom Sunday at 8 p.m. Admission is $8 general; $2 w/ Amherst College ID. Tickets can be purchased at the Amherst College Campus Center Office, For The Record, or the Northampton Box Office.

a blast from the past...

Test Results to Be Released on Whitmore 'Bomb'

A black box containing batteries, wires, a timing device and liquid coater were found Friday in the Whitmore Hall Administration Building. The State Fire Marshall's office is conducting tests on the box with the results to be announced later today.

The box was found Friday morning after an anonymous call.

No arrests were made Friday.

...reprinted from the files of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian 25 years ago (Monday, March 11, 1968)

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN ARTS & LIVING PAGE
ASK FOR JON OR LISA
113 CAMPUS CENTER

Recycle this paper.
It'll make you feel good.

PREGNANT?
Would you like to talk?
- Free pregnancy testing
- Medical/Housing assistance
- Decision making counseling
- Open adoptions

Call BRIGHTSIDE 1-800-333-3424
2112 Riverdale St.
West Springfield, MA 01089
(413) 788-7366

IMPORTANT: Please learn American Red Cross Infant+Child CPR
Ad

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 6 (Rt. 9 West, No. Hadley) 584-8153
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Loaded Weapon 1 PG13
The Temp R
Untamed Heart PG13
Groundhog Day PG
HAMPSHIRE 8 (Northampton Mall, South Hadley) 586-7550
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Scent of a Woman R
A Few Good Men R
Extreme Justice R
Sommersby PG13
Aladdin PG
Army of Darkness R
Homeward Bound PG

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 Days
8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
FRIDAY HAPPY HOUR
4:30 - 7:30
WHMP and Peter Pan Bus
• LIVE BROADCAST •
Free Pizza Slices
Win Ski Trips to Stratton from Peter Pan
Register for the $1000.00 Chartreuse Ski Package
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

ADVOCATE ★BEST★ THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1992 1st Place
PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3PM
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS FRI. & SAT.
OPEN & 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202 VISA FREE PARKING ON RT. 9 HADLEY MASTER CARD

NORTHAMPTON BOWL
Sunday Night ☆ Special ☆
99¢ Per Game
From 8:30 til close
525 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA 01060 • (413) 584-2491

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

A Freebie! Learn to play bridge - FREE! SOM 101 Wed. 2/24 9:30-pm-7:30 pm FREE T-shirt & book.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Marketing Club is hereby suspended. Please contact the SGA Registrar at 545-0341 for further details

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Escort '87 No rust runs great must sell $2600/b.o. Call 665-2350

Hyundai Excel '87 only 5875 Changed: Catalyst, battery, tires Recent complete tune-up Evangelos 549-6579

FOR RENT

Fridge Rental 253-9742 delivered free

1 bdrm in large apt. $350/ heat incl. 665-3615

112 Town House Apartment available for rent $267.50 available immediately to be shared with male graduate student 545-6744 or 665-2810 E

Room downtown. Quiet, private; lease through Aug.; $360/mo inclusive 253-4236 9am - 9pm

FOR SALE

GNR 11s 4 fourth row seats Also 2 Bon Jovi Hartford 253-0813

1992 Subaru Loyale 12K like new 5,7500 call 256 0966 or 718-852-0774

1950's Coke Machine Bottle type vending Adj. Pricing Keep 60 bottles very cold! Great for Beer/parties $400 b.o. 253-5196

Printer for sale 413-245-9542 after 7 ask for Don

RT Ticket to New Orleans During Spring Break $250 256-8696

FOUND

Found gold anklet after MICBIO 160 Mon, Feb. 1 at 12:05 Mahar Auditorium Claim at Campus Center Info Desk

Sweater found in Tower Library Call 6-1800 to claim

Two pairs of glasses found 1 tan with grey case 1 gold-metal with blue case call 549-6120

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

Animal Science Majors work on Cape Cod Day Camp in North Falmouth area has several openings for camp counselors to teach children about farm animals, pet care, ocean ecology, horse, or environmental education. Prefer college student enrolled in Animal Science or other related program. Room and board possible. Contact Ed Powers, Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 285, Boston, MA 02117 (617)426-9170 or visit table during UMass Camp Day March 2nd

COOK WANTED FOR DAY CAMP Day Camp in North Falmouth area needs a cook to prepare meals for camp staff. Prepare breakfast and dinner for staff of eight and lunch for 25, Monday-Friday. Approximately 30 hours per week. Room and board possible. Contact Ed Powers at (617)426-9170 or write P.O. Box 285 Boston, MA 12117, or visit table during UMass Camp Day March 2nd.

GREAT SUMMER OPPORTUNITY Jewish co-ed residential camp seeks counselors and specialists. Capital Camps located in the beautiful Catoctin Mountains one hour from Washington D.C. offers tennis, water sports, nature, arts, video, gymnastics, radio, drama, photo., etc. If you are interested in the challenges and excitement of working with campers in grades 3-10, we want you on our team. GOOD SALARIES, GREAT FUN! Our director will be at the Camp Fair on March 2. For more information and an appointment, call 1-800-224-7852

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000 - $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Jobs! Telefund is hiring! Qualified students needed to help raise funds for UMass. Flexible hours, competitive pay, and great experience. Call 545-3509 or stop down to our office in the basement of Memorial Hall for an application

Summer Camp on Cape Cod Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids. Beautiful location, excellent program. Competitive Salaries. Call James, at 549-8363 for info and application

Summer jobs and internships University Directories, the nations largest publisher of campus telephone directories (including UMass at Amherst), is interviewing goal oriented students for a challenging, full-time summer position. Gain valuable experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings $3900. Expense paid training program in Chapel Hill, NC. College credit may be available. Interviews on UMass at Amherst campus February 24th. Information and interview sign up available today at the Visitors Center or call 1-800-743-5556

Telemarketers – great money Relaxed rural office. Evenings. Experienced only. Call Cheryl 9-4 548-9688

INSTRUCTION

Learn to Scuba dive earn two credits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday at Curry Hicks 7-10 pm 1-800-282-0977

Physics and Math Tutor M.A. in Physics Experienced teaching assistant Call 256-0280

LOST

LOST! Brand new glasses grey and black plastic with silver frame. Lost in CC or Basics. Call April 6-4574

Lost – Green Caribou backpack. Probably near Boyden Gym last week call Jason @ 549-0465

Lost Ring – Reward Totman - Feb 1st Friendship "LTM" Call collect 508-827-4555

1989 UMass Class Ring Campus Center Brett 256-6801 REWARD

MUSICIANS

Bassist seeks versatile musicians to compose new music (Firehose, Phish, Parliament, Crimson) Dan 6-5173

PERSONALS

Dogs and Demons waltz in my head 3/2/93!

Happy 21st Birthday: Kristin Musto Now you have no worries or excuses Have a great day! I love you – Peter F.

Jill, Bimbo! Have a great 22nd birthday! The 2 sluts

Jody M. Miller Happy 21st Birthday!!! You're definately an old lady now. Try not to get into any "Trouble" Happy Belated Valentine's Day! Love, Vinny

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female needed to share apt with three other females 5 mins from UMass. Exc. decor $195 mth heat incl. Call 25-0617

SERVICES

Psychic Tarot Readings Jim 665-1190

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/signing leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Resume Preparation assistence with complete resume development. Keith Anderson, Ph.D. 582-4037

Tarot Readings Call Chris at 253-7524

SPORTS CARDS

Sportstop cards Mt. Farms Mall

TRAVEL

Scuba Dive Key Largo Spring Break, Call Project Deep 1-800-282-0977

Spring Break: CANCUN, NASSAU from $299 Organize a small group for FREE trip Call 1-800-GET Sun-1

SPRINGBREAK!! Panama and Daytona $139 and up 7 nights Beachfront deadline SOON! Call Erika 546-0223

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!! Spring Break '93 Best Deals Going Fast Jesse 549-7472

Trip for 2 to the Bahamas $222 for a couple. For details call Sarah 549-1809

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Reaumes, papers, theses. Laser printing, on-campus Pick up and delivery Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED

Tutor Coins 105 1-2 hrs/wk 7.50/hr Call 549-3516 ask for Amanda

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women Need housing for spring semester Desire place near UMass Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

All-Star Game has Shaq attack

NOTES FROM THE HARDWOOD
by Art Stapleton

This edition of Notes will be devoted to this weekend's All-Star Game, along with some special surprises, like the Hardwood All-Stars, the squad that would be in the Game if I had the chance to stuff the ballot boxes.

As the first half of the season winds down, the San Antonio Spurs are still riding high over the rest of the league. They are 22-3 under John Lucas, and have won 13 in a row at home. The question is whether they can keep it up on the road against the tough playoff-seasoned competition of the Western Conference.

You are not a power forward, so stop playing like one: Patrick Ewing has had an awesome first half for a forward. Problem is, he's a center. Maybe Patrick is only good when he is part of the Harry and Larry show in Barcelona. The Knickerbockers may have the best record in the East, but what can they do in crunch time with an ineffective Ewing? See last Sunday's game with the Magic.

"I get by with a little help from my friends" (The Beatles): In a serious note, Dennis Rodman of the Pistons was found at 4 a.m. in the empty Palace parking lot, in his car alone with a loaded shotgun. This has little to do with hoops, and it doesn't matter how much I dislike the Pistons; I really want to see the Worm healthy again, both mentally and physically.

Well, it's time to stuff the ballot boxes, and here come the Hardwood All-Stars, some of the best in the NBA:

Shaquille O'Neal, center Shaq: enough said. This man needs no backup, unless he gets in foul trouble of course. Because of some whining, I'll add Hakeem Olajuwon to the team.

Michael Jordan, shooting guard: One note on His Airness: he shares a birthday with yours truly, Feb. 17, the greatest day in modern hoop history, for a number of reasons.

Good, but not great: Do I have to say the name Drazen Petrovic?

John Stockton, floor general: He will go down as one of the best if not the best ever. Stockton has perfected the patented Utah pick-and-roll, and he and the Mailman certainly deliver.

Good, but not great yet: Another point out of Ga. Tech, the Nets' Kenny Anderson. If he didn't come out early, Anderson would be a senior with Coach Cremins instead of posting All-Star numbers on a legitimate playoff contender in just his first full season.

Larry Johnson, power forward: LJ is intensity personified. Would you call this man Grandmama to his face? I don't think so.

Charles Barkley, power forward: My team doesn't need a small forward, but LJ can play there if he has too. Lord Charles makes things happen, and I will sign him at any price.

Did you see that?

- Shaq's performance on Sunday: nine blocks, including one to prevent Ewing from winning the game at the end of the first OT, and one to prevent John Starks from becoming a hero in the final minutes of the second OT.
- A career high 46 points and 21 boards for the Shaq attack on Tuesday night in a loss in Detroit.
- Channel 22's switching away from the third overtime period in the Orlando-New York game for about the first minute to show a paid infomercial about the psychic friends network.
- NBA director of scouting Marty Blake and Rudy Martzke of USA Today at the UMass-GW game last Saturday down in D.C.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

Minutemen win 12th in a row 96-67

By JASON LAHTI
Special to the Collegian

BUFFALO, NEW YORK — The University of Massachusetts basketball team marched into Alumni Arena and took no prisoners as they stormed past the University of Buffalo Bulls 96-67.

UMass ran their winning streak to 12 straight as they improved their overall record to 18-4 on the season. The loss set the Bulls' record back to 5-18.

"We're playing for a seed in the NCAA Tournament. This game is as important as any," said UMass head coach John Calipari.

With that in mind, the Minutemen loaded up their muskets and came out shooting. Harper Williams and Tony Barbee combined for 10 points in a 14-2 UMass run to open the game. The lead would be in double figures the remainder of the night.

The game was out of reach by the half, with UMass leading 55-26. Williams and Barbee sat out most of the second half with the game well in hand. Jerome Malloy had nine points and Jeff Meyer seven to lead UMass in the second stanza. All of the UMass reserves saw action as 13 Minutemen made it to the floor.

The second and third units helped out, as every Minuteman scored except Ted Cottrell. Giddel Padilla missed the game due to the flu.

For the game Barbee led all scorers with 18 points and Lou Roe chipped in with 15 points and nine rebounds, and Harper Williams had 10. Jerome Malloy added 14, Dana Dingle had 10, Derek Kellogg scored three to go along with his four assists and Mike Williams had eight.

Chris Robinson notched five points, Kenard Robinson scored two, Rigoberto Nunez and Craig Berry also scored two. UB was led by Modie Cox with 15.

The Minutemen appear to be marching in full stride as they approach the NCAA tournament. The Bulls, on the other hand, are still taking baby steps as they try to gain respectability in only their second season at the Division I level.

"This is the first time in UB's history that we've had a top 20 team in here," said UB head coach Dan Bazzani. "They deserve to be in the top 20."

The next game for UMass will be on the road at Rhode Island. It is a game that Calipari is not exactly looking forward to. "We're going to have absolutely a war," he said.

Minutewomen rally past GW 59-57

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team stepped up big in the second half last night at the Curry Hicks Cage, beating the George Washington Colonials 59-57. UMass (9-12, 5-6 Atlantic 10) outplayed the Colonials (14-7, 6-3 A-10) down the stretch and came away with a hard-fought win.

Senior Kim Kristofik paved the way for UMass as she poured in 12 of her team-high 14 points in the second half. UMass coach Joannie O'Brien said that Kristofik really stepped up.

"For the first ten minutes [of the second half], Kim really carried us," O'Brien said. "She (Kristofik) hit some good shots."

For most of the first half it was GW who led the way as the threesome of Darlene Saar, Jennifer Shasky and Debbie Hemery had seven points apiece to lead the Colonials.

With 6:32 left in the first half George Washington was up on top by eight and threatening to pull away. However, the Minutewomen held tough and went on their own run to pull within two at the half, 25-23.

Coming out after the break, the two teams traded the lead back and forth like it was a hot potato. With 6:03 left in the game and the Minutewomen up by one, UMass' freshman shooting guard Kim Gregory banked in a desperation, turn-around trey as the shot clock expired. That three put UMass up 52-48.

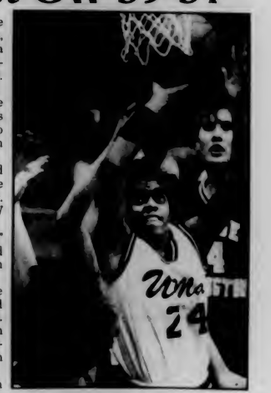
Two Octavia Thomas (10 points, five rebounds) free throws later the UMass lead was up to six at 54-48 with 4:33 to play. It looked as though the Minutewomen had control of the game.

Looks, however, can be deceiving, and the Colonials stormed back to tie the game at 54 on a Darlene Saar three-pointer. O'Brien said that she thought the GW would be tough to put away.

"It is hard to keep a good team down," O'Brien said. "We started to stand around a little bit [when UMass was up six] on offense and GW fought back."

Thomas came up aces for the Minutewomen as she hit a free throw and jumper to put UMass up for good, 57-54. Two free throws by UMass' Tricia Hopson stretched the Minutewomen lead to 59-54. GW rallied again, but fell short when the final buzzer sounded.

Kristofik said that the victory was a good one to get. "It was a big win," Kristofik said. "It was big because we now know that we can play with anyone in the conference."



CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
Kim Gregory and the UMass Minutewomen improved to 9-12 last night with a 59-57 victory against George Washington.

Men's gym aims for elusive number

By ANDREW BRYCE
Collegian Staff

Two hundred fifty — that number is eating away at the mind of coach Roy Johnson. He has set a goal for his University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team: to score 250 points against a favored men's gymnastic team from Army.

"A 250 is a realistic goal," said Johnson. "West Point is favored, but I think if we put it all together, we can beat them."

The majority opinion from the UMass team is that overall, Army (3-2) is the stronger team, since they have had higher point totals so far this season. Senior captain Steve Christensen feels that the difference between the two teams is experience.

"We match up pretty evenly against Army," said Christensen. "They're an older team, more together than we are. We are the younger team. It takes a while to get your routine down and master it. When you have been doing it for three years, it's a lot easier than when you've been doing it for only one."

The sixth and last event of each meet, the high bar, has been a weakness for the Minutemen throughout the season. This puts all the pressure on the UMass competitors for the first five events.

"Our high bar is pretty weak, so all other events are key events," said Christensen. "They're pretty good on the high bar, so we need to have a good lead going into it."

"Most events, we are close to them or have the ability to beat them, except for our weakness, the high bar, which could hurt us," said junior Jason Braud. "If we do well throughout the meet up until the high bar, then I think we can do well."

"I think we are ready to put it all together," said coach Johnson. "I think we can beat them on floor, stay right with them on pommel, stay pretty close on rings, maybe beat them on vaulting, beat them on parallel bars, and go into the high bar with a lead."

Despite the importance of every event, Johnson is looking for strong performances in the pommel horse, not only Christensen, who is nationally ranked in the event, but from the rest of the team.

UMass will also be going up against Cornell University in the tri-meet, tomorrow at 1 p.m. at Boyden Gym.

This week, everybody's been doing their routines well," said sophomore Tim Smith. "We're looking forward to Saturday's meet."

Tennis team's future remains bleak

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The next time you look at the William D. Mullins Memorial Center, you may want to think about how Bill Bochnak feels.

Bochnak, the player/coach of the men's tennis team, has been trying to get his program back, but has had little success. In the wake of a $48 million facility and a new hockey program, Bochnak said he simply wants $20,000 for his teammates to play.

"I think the prioritizing of the hockey team is OK, but that doesn't mean you should cut a men's team that was here first. If the University wants to follow the letter of the law, they should toss other men's teams out, not add a hockey team," he said.

Bochnak was told in the fall of 1991 by former Athletic Director Frank McInerney that the team would have to resurface the courts and pay their own way if they wanted to play. In the past, the men's tennis team has raised the money, but last year, Bochnak was told the varsity sport would be cut nonetheless.

Interim Athletic Director Glenn Wong and Chancellor Richard O'Brien have since told Bochnak that despite the reinstatement of the women's tennis team, and despite the resurfacing of the courts, the men will not be allowed to play as a varsity sport.

"The University is supposedly striving to be a Division I school, both academically and athletically," said Bochnak. "Not having a men's tennis team is absolutely absurd. Every other UMass school has a team."

Marcum, to his defense, has been thrust into the [athletic director's] position in the middle of the year, and may take time to make a decision. Bochnak said he doesn't want to wait much longer.

"I'm trying to work within the system, unlike some other teams," he said. "I've been very professional, and not a lot has been accomplished. I've felt like we're being put on the back burner."

The economic breakdown is like so: Bochnak asks that two tuition waivers be given to the top two players, which is standard. Money would be spent to hire a coach, and travel and equipment make up the rest of the $20,000. Bochnak said he does not think he is asking for much.

"The University is not being very fair. Because we're a small sport, they think they can just push us aside."

Monday February 22, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 82

Cloudy, high in the 40s.
Snow turning to sleet tonight.

Local News:
The UMass administration has designated $10,000 to fund projects between groups traditionally at odds with each other, in hopes of promoting understanding. Page 3.

Sports:
UMass Basketball bows to URI, its first in 13 games, but vows they will "Refuse to Lose." Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

MATTHEW J. SIMONEAU / COLLEGIAN
BIG FEET AND BONGOS — Freshman classics major Jason Tower boogies on the bongos at the Murkwood Coffee House in Orchard Hill Wednesday night.

State postpones increase of tuition

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

The state's Higher Education Coordinating Council postponed its decision to set a limit for a tuition increase for state colleges and universities, which was scheduled for last Thursday.

The increase was recommended by acting Chancellor for Higher Education Peter Mitchell and was endorsed by the Council's Administration and Finance Subcommittee.

The Council tabled its vote for two weeks, after which it will recommend a tuition increase. The increase will be limited to between 2 and 4.5 percent for the University and state colleges.

The University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees will meet the first week in April to vote on the Council's recommended rate of increase.

"The goal is to set the increase at or below inflation," said Student Trustee Kevin Newnan, a voting member of the Board of Trustees.

"The sentiment among students is to not want the raise. I'd like to make the number as low as possible."

Newnan said UMass needs to be financially accessible.

"This should be a place you can expect to attend on your own means, with minimum loans," Newnan said. "That's the group we've been freezing out for the past five years."

Provost Glen Gordon said he expects a modest tuition increase.

"Part of the tuition raise will probably go to financial aid," Gordon said. "It's important to ensure that it doesn't impinge on those otherwise able to come."

The extra funds could be used for campus renovations and to hire workers, Gordon said.

"The University lost a third of its budget between 1989 and 1992. Two hundred employees have been laid off over the last four years," Gordon said. "We hope to get about 60 back."

State Rep. Ellen Story, who represents Amherst and Pelham, said one of the reasons for the tuition raise is that "state appropriations have been disgracefully low."

"From 1988 to 1992 funding for public education was lowered," Story said. "Now the whole attitude of higher education has changed in the legislature. To keep tuition raises as low as possible is the goal that the Board of Trustees should have."

State Sen. Stanley Rosenberg, who represents the Franklin-Hampshire District, is on the Congressional Education Committee and is submitting a bill to help secure state aid for education.

Rosenberg said he has filed legislation requiring the University to set a firm percentage which it will pay to fund itself, with the state to make up the rest.

"Right now it's the other way around. State appropriations are a certain amount and the University makes up for the rest with increased tuition," Rosenberg said.

If the bill were enacted, Rosenberg said, tuition and fees would be frozen for a time, while state tuition appropriations would rise dramatically. After reaching the appropriate levels, state and university funding would increase at the same rate.

Davis to speak at UM

Political activist shares her message

By KIMBERLEY BRODERICK
Special to The Collegian

Editor's Note: This is the first of a five-part series highlighting the Women's Conference this Saturday.

Saturday Feb. 27 marks the first annual Women's Conference at UMass. The keynote speaker is Angela Davis. Ms. Davis is a professor of Philosophy and Women's Studies at University of California, Santa Cruz, however, she is best known for her political activism in the 1960s and 1970s.

News Analysis

Angela Davis first gained national attention in 1969, when Ronald Reagan, then governor of California, sought to get her fired from her teaching position at the University of California, Los Angeles. Davis spoke out against the oppressive racist policies of the U.S. government, and the government's imprisonment of political prisoners. Reagan and the Board of Regents perceived her views and affiliation with the Communist Party as threatening. But it was not until 1970 that they were successful in ousting her.

Davis' involvement with political prisoners led her to befriend Johnathan Jackson, the brother of George Jackson, a political prisoner being held in Soledad prison. George Jackson was shot and killed by prison guards while allegedly attempting to escape. On August 7,1970, Johnathan Jackson entered the Marian County Courthouse, with the intention of freeing two political prisoners. Jackson and the prisoners took the judge presiding over the case and several jurors as hostages while they fled the courthouse. Prison guards

Turn to DAVIS, page 4

Malcolm X remembered

By MARTIN JONES
Collegian Staff

Yesterday marked the 18th anniversary of the assassination of civil rights activist Malcolm X, who was gunned down at a rally in the Audobaun Ballroom in Harlem, New York.

On Sunday afternoon there were two programs aired on Connecticut public television highlighting the life of the slain leader.

Tony Brown's Journal, a weekly forum on African-American issues, featured scenes from the off-broadway production "When the chickens came home to roost," a play on Malcolm X's involment with the Nation of Islam.

Starring Denzel Washington as Malcolm X and Kirk Kirsey as Elijah Muhammad, leader of the Nation of Islam, the two- man act highlighted the inner conflict between the two men that led to Malcolm X's assassination in 1965.

This particular program was the second of a two-part series on Malcolm X. The first program investigated the plot to assassinate Malcolm X, and included an interview with one of the gunmen, a member of the Nation of Islam.

Malcolm X publicly acknowledged that the Nation of Islam would target him. On February 22, the headline of the New York Times read "Malcolm knew he was a marked man."

Malcolm X left the Nation of Islam in 1964 following a dispute over comments he made over the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. His infamous quote,

Turn to MALCOLM X, page 6

Theater confronts homophobia and racism

By ADAM RATTINER
Collegian Staff

The Post Modern African American Homosexuals have two goals. One is to confront homophobia within the black community and the other is to confront racism within the gay community.

Brian Freeman, Eric Gupton and Djola Bernard Branner spoke at Friday's well attended Brown Bag Lunch about their plays Fierce Love and Dark Fruit and other topics.

"We are constantly asking ourselves who are we? The people who come to our performances reflect on who we are," said Freeman.

Freeman said the group exists to encourage GLB people from different walks of life to express themselves in a way which raises society's awareness about GLB issues.

"I hope we are creating a climate where people can say 'I can be an actor and be out,' or people can say 'I can be a writer and be out . . .'" Freeman said.

The group shares similar goals with the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, whose mission states "we want to create a positive environment for the diversity of lesbian, gay and bisexual people at the University of Massachusetts, through increasing community awareness and understanding of the needs of lesbian, gay and bisexual people."

Freeman said his sexual preference and his color are irrelevant.

"People ask are you black or are you gay? I refuse to answer the question," Freeman said. "I think the question speaks for itself."

Freeman said the Pomo Afro Homos have a problem getting publicity within the Black community.

"A lot of people want us to shut up. No Black newspapers have covered us to date," Freeman said. "None in Washington D.C., and there are eight, and none in Chicago."

Turn to POMO AFRO HOMOS, page 3

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
The Pomo Afro Homos performed Friday and Saturday night at Bowker Auditorium.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-3864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

The Collegian's Jewish Affairs Desk is looking for writers. Contact Mimi Fellner Campus Center 113

THIS SPACE FOR RENT

COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING
545-3500

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, Feb. 24

Meeting — The Paradise Coalition will be gathering at 7 p.m. to discuss community substance, safety, spirit with a progressive twist at 76 Pleasant Street in Dickinson Programs's Community Room. All are invited.

Meeting — All are welcome to attend a planning session for EarthDay '93 in the Cape Cod Lounge at 7 p.m.

Lecture — Famous feminist scholar, Catharine R. Stimpson, will speak on "Pains, Gains, and the Education of Women: Women's Studies Today" at 8 p.m. in Smith College's Wright Hall Auditorium. Wright Hall is wheelchair accessible.

Tuesday, March 2

Lecture — Emily S. Rosenberg, a history professor at Macalester College, will speak on "Crossing Cultural Divides: A Historical Perspective on the Expansion of American Popular Culture in the 20th Century" at 8 p.m. in Smith College's Neilson Browsing Room.

Jurors question insanity plea

By TONY ROGERS
Associated Press

BOSTON — Frightened by rising crime and worried that dangerous criminals will get off easy, jurors are increasingly reluctant to find defendants not guilty by reason of insanity, observers say.

Some say the shift - part of a backlash against John Hinckley being found not guilty by reason of insanity in the 1981 shooting of President Reagan is a natural response to troubled times.

Others argue it's a dangerous trend that results in hundreds of mentally ill people languishing in prison.

"Finding someone not guilty because of their mental state is being seen as akin to getting off scot-free," said Abbe Smith, deputy director of the Criminal Justice Institute at Harvard University Law School. "It's tied directly to the fear of crime."

The Baltimore-based American Academy of Psychiatry & Law, that only 26 percent of defendants were acquitted.

And lawyers have taken notice. The study, which examined 8,953 insanity pleas in 49 countries in eight states - California, Georgia, Montana, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Washington and Wisconsin - found that the insanity defense was used in only 1 percent of all felony cases.

"It's a defense of desperation," said William Moffitt, an attorney in Alexandria, Va., who has defended clients using the insanity defense. "It's not the defense of first resort... even if you have a person who you really think is out of their mind."

The insanity defense began to weaken, experts say, in the wake of Hinckley's acquittal in the assassination attempt on Reagan.

Congress responded in 1984 by passing the Insanity Defense Reform Act, which placed the burden of proving insanity on the defense rather than making the prosecution prove sanity.

The act revised the definition of criminal insanity, making an inability to distinguish between right and wrong, rather than the ability to control one's actions.

It also banned expert witnesses, such as psychiatrists, from offering opinions in court, allowing them to only describe a condition and let jurors decide.

The act applied only to federal courts, but many states adopted similar measures.

Now, attorneys say, the insanity defense is less effective than ever. As evidence, they cite the case of Jeffrey Dahmer, who was convicted in Milwaukee of killing and dismembering 15 young men and boys, and even eating their body parts - but found sane by a jury.

"If there ever was a mentally ill person on the planet, Dahmer had to be it," Moffitt said.

But Diane Wiley, president of the Minneapolis-based National Jury Project, said jurors in such cases bear a tremendous burden of sorting out conflicting testimony from medical experts while worrying about the consequences of their verdict.

Inmates set fire to building

By NANCY ROBERTS
Associated Press

NEW BEDFORD — Inmates at the Bristol County House of Corrections went on what officials called a near-riot Sunday, setting fire to the building before the disturbance was brought under control.

Fire officials said the 165-year-old jail was brutally destroyed. Authorities had not determined if it ever would reopen. The 285 inmates were being transferred Sunday to state and local police holding cells.

Bristol County Sheriff David Nelson said there were minor injuries in the disturbance, but he would not say whether those suffering from smoke inhalation.

The disturbance was reported just after 11 a.m. in the jail, a three-story red brick structure on Ash Street in New Bedford.

Nelson said a group on inmates set a recreation room afire.

Kitchen and medical facilities and vocational education areas also were destroyed as fire fighters waited an hour for authorities to bring the situation under control

Fire Chief Harry Openshauer said he thought the jail was a total loss. There were no dollar estimates of damage.

The sheriff said the incident apparently was incited by a shakedown Friday. He said inmates were angered when guards removed inflammable material, including newspapers, from their cells. He said homemade knives and makeshift speakers used to communicate between cells also were discovered.

Inmates could be seen leaning out of broken windows on the building's third floor during the disturbance, chanting "We Want Our Rights" and throwing potatoes, eggs and milk cartons through broken windows.

correction

In last Wednesday's paper, Rebekah Tate was misquoted in the article, "Gay Residents Find Support in Each Other." The quote, "I serve an educational role" should have read, "When I asked if she served an educational role she said 'yes.'"

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
BIG MONDAY
Two For One 12" Pizzas
- One Item - Eat In Only - 7pm - Midnight
$50.00 CASH PRIZE
Highest Score - Full Court Frenzy Basketball
All Major College Basketball Games On The 12 Foot Screen
We're the One to Watch!
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family
Tuesday - March 9
6 p.m.- 8 p.m.
UHS - Room 304

I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?

I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest...Where should she go?

I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid...What can I do to help?

If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

For more information, please call
549-2671, Clinic IV - ext. 233 or 234.

RUSH ΒΘΒ
open rush this week
2/22 - 2/25
UMass Campus Center

Council Travel
79 So. Pleasant Street
Amherst
256-1261
JAMAICA $469
CANCUN 439
7 Nights, incl. Airfare from Boston, Hotel & transfers. Taxes not included. Rates subject to change.
SPRINGBREAK!
CALL NOW!!

Local News

Engineers honored at week-long celebration

By KELLY SPANG
Collegian Staff

The College of Engineering hosted its annual celebration as part of a nationally recognized Engineers Week Feb. 15 through 20 with a variety of events honoring professional engineers, faculty and students.

The National Society of Professional Engineers and the National Science Foundation sponsored the week-long festival, but the planning was a joint effort of the Joint Student Engineering Society and staff and faculty members in the engineering department.

Nancy Hellman, the undergraduate dean of engineering, said Engineer's Week is "a national celebration of what engineers contribute to society and to all of us."

The theme for the celebration was "Engineering Energy," which featured speakers from several different branches of engineering.

Among the keynote speakers was Stephen Remen, Massachusetts Commissioner of Energy Resources, who spoke of the increasing opportunities in the field of energy.

"Twenty years ago," Remen said, "energy was not an exciting field."

Today, Remen said, the field of energy offers exciting possibilities with new issues such as alternative fuel vehicles and energy efficiency and conservation.

Present at the Convocation of Wednesday was State Rep. Ellen Story, who represents the Amherst-Pelham District, who issued the opening proclamation written in a joint effort by other members of the State House.

Story said, "Engineers will be central to improving the economy and enhancing the environment."

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
Senior Dave Desimone, an electrical engineering major, accepts a certificate of appreciation from keynote speaker Joseph M. DeSalvo.

Outstanding Teacher Awards were given to Ian Grosse, a professor of mechanical engineering, and Thomas Lardner, professor of civil engineering, honoring the two for their work with students.

Graduating seniors also received recognition for their service to the community, the college, and professional engineering societies while taking the oath of engineers and receiving their rings as well.

Joan Stoia, director of the Mather Career Center, spoke about the direction and possibilities for engineering jobs in the future.

As parting advice, Stoia said, "Men and women, be inventive," and encouraged graduating seniors to aggressively pursue engineering opportunities.

Engineers Week has several purposes, according to Kathy Rubin, the Director of Marketing and Recruitment for the College of Engineering.

The week "builds community in engineering," said Rubin, "and also encourages interaction between the faculty and students."

Due to inclement weather, the Freshmen majors night was rescheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 23 at 6 p.m. in Marcus Auditorium.

Hellman described the freshmen majors night as a "minifair" intended to introduce freshmen to the many disciplines within engineering.

"It's a student-to-student kind of thing," Hellmen explained. "It's a lot of fun."

Hellman said all new and potential engineering students are encouraged to attend freshman majors night.

Center holds co-op fair

Students offered hands-on experience

By ANDREW LUMB
Collegian Staff

The Mather Career Center's co-op and internship fair last Thursday gave students a window to the world, offering the experience of trying a career without commitment or necessity.

"Our company will not hire someone without co-op experience," said a representative from Harris Corporation in Florida, "it shortens the learning curve."

A representative from Agway Corporation, a firm which sells farm and gardening equipment, said the company has a specific job reserved for co-ops which they cannot spare another employee for. The representative added that students bring the latest knowledge in the field to the company. Between 1200 and 1500 students attended the fair, according to Mather's associate director Jeff Silver, who added that while student response was good, companies hoped more students would go.

"This is just a tiny sample of the companies that offer co-ops," emphasized Silver, and urged students to go to the co-op planning sessions today and Wednesday at 12:20 p.m., and Thursday at 1 p.m., at the Curry Hicks Building.

Silver said there will be "literally thousands" of co-op opportunities.

Different companies look for different qualities in their applicants, and for co-ops it is no different. Some want only one or two majors, while others train on the job and look for compatible personalities.

Qualities that many companies mentioned were motivation and friendliness. A representative from Chubb insurance said he wants people who "think about what they want to do," and are "open about finding a job."

He said that communication skills and "relating (one's) strengths and weaknesses" were also important. The company trains new employees for nine weeks.

"What's the most adventurous thing you've ever done?" was a question that another insurance company puts to their applicants. Another company wants people who have made an "educated decision" and who think employment is "not just a job."

Many companies said they do not want freshman because "they are not mature enough," and graduates because, according to Silver, students not enrolled in the University must be paid full-time wages, not co-op wages.

Students who want to co-op at places not close to home can cheaply rent dorm rooms at nearby colleges, said Silver.

Funds offered to help Community relations

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts administration has designated $10,000 to fund projects emphasizing cooperation among special-interest groups on campus in an attempt to foster communication and understanding, University officials said.

The Chancellor's Commission on Civility in Humar. Relations, established in 1980 to reduce racial tensions on campus, has begun soliciting proposals for projects and programs which "with a few hundred bucks" could improve relations between groups traditionally at odds with each other, Vice Chancellor for Human Relations Grant Ingle said.

"The assumption is there are lots of people with bright ideas out there, and if they had a few hundred bucks they might be able to do something," Ingle said. "The idea was to try and do a little community-building."

According to Ingle, the initiative to solicit proposals and fund them came last semester from the then co-chairpeople of the Commission on Civility David Schimmel and Joyce Berkman.

"The hope is that diverse groups will work together," Schimmel said. "Generally funds are given if a particular group has a project, but there's no mechanism set up to encourage folks with different perspectives and perhaps divergent views to work together."

The Commission sent a flyer asking for proposals to "nearly all" of the Registered Student Organizations on campus, and suggested examples of activities which could be funded including forums, speakers, seminars, outreach activities to secondary schools and public education programs about hate crimes, Schimmel said.

According to Ingle, the money to fund the proposals, which are now "rolling in," came from the Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board, and has only been approved for this year. He said, however, that he expects funding to continue in the future.

According to the flyer, potential funding for individual projects will range from $250 to $1,500. Proposals will be reviewed by a joint committee of the Commission on Civility and the Multicultural Advisory Board.

To be awarded funding, proposals must "bring together persons from two or more communities or constituencies in a joint activity, demonstrate collaboration of communities in the proposal planning process and demonstrate an impact on multicultural understanding and mutual respect on the campus or larger community," the flyer said.

The deadline for submitting proposals is March 5, with award announcements to be made a week later. Projects which receive funding are to begin this semester.

■ Pomo Afro Homos

continued from page 1

Freeman said he is trying to set up a performance at Morehouse, Spike Lee's alma mater. Freeman said a student was suspended from school there for trying to start a program for gay and lesbian students.

Branner said his goal was to get his personal thoughts across as simply as possible.

In response to a question asking why he chose theatre and not writing or another medium, Branner said "We love the theatre. You can get away with stuff in theatre you can't get away with in academia."

"Being a Black, gay man is breaking the rules. Why not break all the rules?" Branner said.

"We have got to take television farther. The images are seductive only because they are familiar," Branner said. "We need to take the images farther."

Eric Gulpton said he believed "there has been a black gay renaissance in the last few years" and "our plays are very much in the oral African-American tradition of storytelling.

Freeman said "postmodern" means "taking something and turning it around and looking at it from different angles." He added "Pomo Afro Homos has such a nice ring to it. Also when people think of the African American Homosexuals they think of just black, gay men but when they think of the Postmodern African American Homosexuals they think of very intelligent black, gay men."

Postmodern is not in Webster's dictionary.

Freeman said "the first show, Fierce Love is basically Homo Afro 101 and the second show, Dark Fruit is the masters degree.

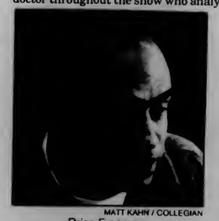
"I saw Spike Lee speak in California. He spoke mostly about his movies. I heard we had a few walkouts during last nights show, Fierce Love. I think some guys brought their girlfriends to the show," Freeman said.

Saturday night Bowker auditorium was packed full for the performance of Dark Fruit. Brian Freeman played a doctor throughout the show who analyzed African American homosexuality with slides of pie charts and nude men. The first skit was about a gay relationship between a White teenager and a Black teenager. "I don't want Raisin Bran, I don't want Fruit and Fibre, I just want the fruit!" said Eric Gupton. On a more serious note Chocolate City, U.S.A. was a series of open letters. They "wrote" to Magic Johnson, the media, gay activist groups, and afrocentrics. A poem was read which said "I regret nothing."

After the play closed one of the Pomo Afro Homos said "Its been really cold up here but we have had a warm reception."



MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Brian Freeman

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Djola Bernard Branner

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Eric Gupton

■ Davis

continued from page 1

were ordered not to fire upon the group. However, the San Quentin guards disobeyed the order and fired upon the van which Jackson used to escape — killing Jackson, the judge and one of the armed prisoners.

It was later discovered that the weapons which Jackson used were registered to Angela Davis. Davis was charged with kidnapping, murder and conspiracy, even though she was not present at the courthouse nor did she have any knowledge of the insurrection. Following this incident, Davis was put on the FBI's Ten Most Wanted list. She was captured in October of 1970. Upon capture, she was officially fired from her position as an Assistant Professor at UCLA.

An international "Free Angela" campaign was started with the support of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Urban League, Betty Shabazz, Coretta Scott King, labor unions, student groups, the National Black Lawyers Association as well as many other people and organizations. This international campaign led to her acquittal in 1972.

Since that time Davis has been active in the Communist Party, U.S.A., as well as an activist for women's rights. In her book Women, Culture and Politics, Davis discusses the fact that violence against women cannot be narrowly viewed as just a domestic problem, but as an outgrowth of government policies. She states "... the anti-rape movement today...must beware of concentrating exclusively on strategies such as crisis centers, which as important as they may be, treat only the effects and leave the cause of the crime unremedied. The very same social conditions that spawn racist violence— the same social conditions that encourage attacks on workers, and the political posture that justifies U.S. intervention in Central America and aid to the apartheid government in South Africa— encourage sexual violence. Thus, sexual violence can never be completely eradicated until we have successfully effected a whole range of radical social transformations in our country."

"We must climb in such a way that all our sisters, regardless of social class and indeed all of our brothers, climb with us. This must be the essential dynamic of our quest for power- a principle that must not only determine our struggles as Afro-American women, but also govern all authentic struggles of dispossessed people."

Davis is currently the co-chairperson of the National Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression and serves as a member on the boards of the National Political Congress of Black Women and the National Black Women's Health Project. She has lectured in Asia, Africa, Europe, South America, and in the United States. She is in the forefront of scholars and activists who link race, class, and gender in her analysis of oppressive systems.

Davis spoke at UMass in 1986 after the World Series riot. It is ironic that she will be speaking here again after the racial incidents that transpired last fall.

Angela Davis' name, in the words of Georg Lukacs, a European intellectual, "has today become a symbol of tremendous willpower and courage for people of integrity throughout the world."

a blast from the past...

Test Results to Be Released on Whitmore 'Bomb'

A black box containing batteries, wires, a timing device and liquid center were found Friday in the Whitmore Hall Administration Building. The State Fire Marshall's office is conducting tests on the box with the results to be announced later today.

The box was found Friday morning after an anonymous call to university police and the UMass switchboard warned that a "bomb" is in the ladies' room of the Whitmore building."

No arrests were made Friday.

...reprinted from the files of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian 25 years ago (Monday, March 11, 1968)

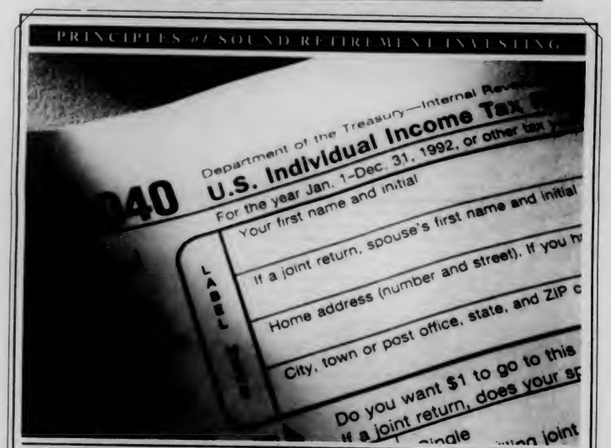
JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

BUBBLE TROUBLE — An empty orange juice bottle captures the passion of a flu-plagued campus.



UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax-bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

TIAA CREF

75 years of ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

© 1993 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association/College Retirement Equities Fund.

COMPLETE COVERAGE OF

UMass

basketball

ONLY IN THE COLLEGIAN

Eating Disorder Programs ● Spring 1993

Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671 x233 or 234, Clinic IV.

• • •

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671 x233 or 234, Clinic IV.

• • •

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, chronic dieting, or compulsive overeating. Mondays (except holidays) 4:30-6:00 p.m. Campus Center Room Number posted by elevator. No registration necessary. Confidentiality Assured.

For more information on these programs or other eating disorder concerns, call 549-2671 x233 or 234. Confidentiality Assured.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Why aren't we in Bosnia?

Last summer while holidaying in Italy it seemed inconceivable that 100 miles across the Adriatic people were murdering each other and the United States, Britain and the United Nations did nothing but denounce the violence.

This week, 11 months after the start of the conflict, we nearly saw a further tragedy in Bosnia. On Wednesday, Sadako Ogata, U.N. High Commissioner for refugees, called a halt to U.N. relief work in the former Yugoslav Republic. Fortunately, by Friday Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali had overruled the high commissioner and ordered a resumption of aid.

Jesse
ARMSTRONG

It is perhaps understandable that Mr. Ogata was frustrated with the actions of the conflicting forces in Bosnia, for all sides have been using the blocking of humanitarian aid as just another military tool towards their political aims.

Indeed just over a week ago President Aliga Izetbegovic, the Muslim leader of the Sarajevo-based Bosnian government, decided to deny aid to his own besieged people of Sarajevo. The reasoning behind this apparently perverse decision was to draw world attention to the U.N. failure to get aid through to the Eastern part of Bosnia, where 200,000 Muslims remain in increasingly dire circumstances isolated in ethnic enclaves.

Although irritating, such wilful disruptions of relief efforts are no reason for the United Nations to sink to the same cynical level of political wrangling as the Bosnian factions. As a humanitarian agency the United Nation's aim should be to always strive to supply the needy with food and shelter, regardless of the schemes of Machiavellian political leaders.

Last summer, as those first pictures of the grim reality of "ethnic cleansing" appeared, one's overwhelming feeling was that something must be done.

But of course the question of large scale military intervention is fraught with difficulties, not the least of which is: in a three-way civil war who do you shoot at?

The existing U.N. Security Council mandate allows U.N. commanders to use "all necessary means" to get their aid convoys through. Naturally enough, though, the current force, numbering only 7,500 lightly armed U.N. troops, is wary of a military stand off. But with no change in the objective of the force a large increase in troop numbers could be used to ensure aid gets through to the needy. However, such a move would be only a stopgap measure and, while it might stop the starvation, it would not address the underlying conflict.

A bolder move would be to send a force to impose a cease-fire under the terms of the Cyrus Vance-Lord Owen plan to divide Bosnia into nine autonomous regions. However, this would certainly require the use of large numbers of U.S. forces, since any further intervention should be on a huge enough scale to deter resistance.

The undercurrent in U.S. foreign policy of blaming Europeans for not sorting out the trouble in "their own backyard" is an unhelpful and disingenuous argument, since the only organizations with the moral and military capability to enforce a settlement (NATO or the United Nations) are ones that, since World War II, the United States has cultivated as puppets of American power.

The road to peace in the Balkans is fraught with apparently insurmountable problems, but the results of doing nothing at this dangerous time could prove far worse than even the terrible human suffering we have seen thus far in the conflict.

Jesse Armstrong is a Collegian columnist.

Blame just passes the buck

When I was in the fifth grade the teacher asked the class if anyone knew why it was important to study history. I raised my hand Pavlonianly and answered, "Those who do not study history are condemned to repeat it." Hey, he had just told us the day before; it was no big deal. We moved on.

Recently, it has occurred to me that despite the obvious truth to this quote, people just ignore it. The examples are endless. The UMass administration has made the same mistakes of on-paper-only commitment and foot-dragging whenever there are racial incidents on campus, including last semester's attack on an RA, the World Series riots of 1986 and the Mills House (now New Africa House) incident of 1970.

Steven L.
COHEN

In 1945 Harry S. Truman took the responsibility of the chief executive by uttering, "The buck stops here." The public admired this. Bosses all over the country bought tacky placards with this on it for their secretaries' desks. Yet in 1992 George Bush blamed Congress and the Democrats for all his woes. Congress blamed him right back and the federal government played, "I'm rubber, you're glue, anything you say bounces off of me and sticks to you!"

For too long, the workhorse they were grinding up to make this glue was the American taxpayer. Like Orwell's horse Boxer, every citizen in the United States of Animal Farm said, "I will work harder. Napolean is always right," questioning only submissively what was really being done by whom, to whom and for whom.

President Clinton's commitment to change brings some hope, but my optimism was offended by a Feb. 18 editorial in the New York Times by none other than Ronald Reagan. He chastised Clinton's tax increases on people making more than $180,000 and more than $250,000. He said, "Do they [Democrats] really believe that those who have worked hard and been successful should somehow be punished for it?" Reagan went on to quote the 14th century Arab historian Ibn Khaldun who said, "At the beginning of the empire, the tax rates were low and the revenues were high. At the end of the empire, the tax rates were high and the revenues were low."

Okay, he was telling Clinton to learn from history, but then he passed the buck by blaming the deficit on "big-spending liberal Democrats in Congress." Come on. I realize this is the same man who referred to the Unites States as "the 48 states;" who, during Iran-Contra, couldn't remember who Colin Powell was even though he had appointed Powell as the first Black chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; and who now sees a mutually exclusive connection between people who make $250,000 a year and people who work hard. But why can't he keep his nose out if all he is doing is blaming people? Does he believe that he is not at all responsible for the deficit? He was president for eight years of its growth!

As for Chancellor Richard O'Brien and George Bush, their mismanagement has negated the respect that age and position should entitle them to. Don't worry though, George got his. He lost his job, right? Sorry, I hear he is laughing his way to the bank. His federal pension, which starts from his service in World War II, entitles him to nearly $400,000 a year, compared to his $200,000 salary as president. I wonder, is our chancellor getting a raise for resigning? I'll chip in if we get someone who can change things around here: just add a $7.50 "responsible and efficient management" fee and bill me after April 15.

Steven L. Cohen is a UMass student.

Discussion ruined by disrespect

The UMass Democrats gathered in the lounge of Lewis dormitory to watch and discuss President Bill Clinton's address on the economy. I was among those in attendance, and I am writing to express my disgust with the lack of respect the UMass Democrats treated the assembled guests who took the time to participate in this event.

During the president's speech, the organizers of this event found it necessary to bring in television crews from a Springfield station.

The crews brought in their cameras and equipment and set up in the lounge as the address was going on. They proceeded to shine bright lights in our faces and conduct distracting interviews right in the room while most of us were trying to concentrate on the president's message.

All this was done without a forewarning or announcement of any kind, and made it extremely difficult to listen to the speech.

As is this wasn't enough, the organizers sat among the participants and began to conduct their own nearly incessant private conversation, providing further difficulty and showing lack of respect for those attempting to get something out of Clinton's address.

Their conversations and side interviews continued during the post-address discussion, led by state Sen. Stanley Rosenberg. I myself prefaced a comment by stating my indignation at having been treated so rudely, and as I did so the interviews in the back of the room continued, not even pausing as the crowd looked on with disbelief.

As human beings, not to mention leaders of a student organization sponsoring this event, I would have expected a simple measure of respect from these people. However, they acted as if our having taken the time to attend it meant nothing to them. They treated us as if we were little more than a nice backdrop for the TV cameras.

Peter H. Nesesian
Northeast

Anti-sex alarmists use twisted misinformation

AIDS. The alarmists' reply is to practice no sex, citing erroneous, irrelevant information. Diana D'Avanzo, in her article [Collegian, Feb. 17] and column [Feb. 18]. She does her readership a great disservice by dispensing this misinformation and opinion as fact in an attempt to cover up her right wing stance. What it comes down to is that D'Avanzo and her ill-defined group of "researchers," along with her organizations, the Campus Crusade for Christ and the Alliance Christian Fellowship, are anti-sex.

D'Avanzo continuously refers to the term "safe sex." Anyone who is involved in the health education field knows that it is inaccurate and irresponsible to claim that any contraceptive or prophylactic is 100 percent user effective. However, not using contraceptives or prophylactics is 100 percent risk, by anyone's standards. It is also not our practice to claim that condoms are the answer to the HIV epidemic.

What we wish to promote is the use of safer sex practices, which can protect a person not only from "TV but a number of other sexually transmitted diseases (STDs). Using condoms and spermicide during intercourse will significantly decrease a person's chances of contracting an STD. Abstaining from forms of sexual expression which exchange bodily fluids and avoiding contact with broken skin, sores or lesions are also ways of reducing one's risk of contracting an STD. Of course, abstinence from any type of sexual expression is a viable option which D'Avanzo is free to exercise.

In our society we are constantly bombarded with studies and statistics which can, if manipulated properly, prove nearly anything — from condom ineffectiveness to the inexistence of God. We should always be skeptical of any study, and personally exercise the right to educate ourselves further on any issue we feel is important.

If you wish, see the program being put on by D'Avanzo's group. Keep an open mind and question things that don't feel right. Ask how things that are said pertain to real life, not just clinical hubbub. There are many other resources in the community and on campus that can give you a better spectrum of health issues than a man who plays with condoms and doesn't deal with people.

Melissa S. Graves
Peer Sexuality Educator
Orchard Hill

This letter was signed by 15 people, including a doctor from UMass Health Services; health educators from UMass, Amherst College and Hampshire College; peer sexuality educatos, Not Ready for Bedtime Players and students.

Complain to UHS, not the newspaper

The University Health Center takes issue with the letter from Eric Bachenheimer [Collegian, Feb. 16] which asserts that Health Services is "unprofessional and unorganized" and discourages patients from using it. Clearly the newspaper is not a place to respond to a specific incident, especially one which occurred close to nine months ago. However, the Health Services staff remain available to review any adverse encounters and has written to Mr. Bachenheimer encouraging him to contact us to review his treatment and to answer any questions.

We encourage feedback and will respond directly to any concerns that are raised.

If you have a complaint and do not feel it is satisfactorily addressed, please contact the appropriate staff person or the executive director to help you resolve your problems or issues.

David P. Kraft, M.D.
Executive Director
University Health Services

Governor grants few pardons

By MARTIN FINUCANE
Associated Press

BOSTON — The little-known power to grant pardons has been little-used by Gov. William F. Weld.

In two years, Weld has pardoned four people, compared with an average of more than 29 per year during the Dukakis administration.

"Pardons and commutations are not things that we are comfortable with and it's taken a while for us to make some internal decisions and get some internal comfort level with those vehicles," said Robert Cordy, Weld's chief legal counsel.

But Cordy says the pace will pick up and as many as a dozen pardons could be granted this year, now that the Weld administration has become more familiar with the process.

Pardons erase the criminal records of people who have typically served punishment for minor crimes far in the past. Pardons differ from sometimes-controversial commutations in which convicts in prison ask to be released early from their sentences.

There are two main reasons why people ask for pardons, said Janet Snyderman, coordinator for the state Advisory Board of Pardons: they need a clean record for job purposes - a number want to be law enforcement officers; or they simply want the emotional relief offered by a pardon.

"They are usually people who committed some stupid mistake along the way and just want this albatross lifted off their necks," said James D. O'Brien Jr., a member of the Governor's Council, which gives its advice and consent to the governor's pardons.

Cordy said one reason for the paucity of pardons has been the background of Weld and some of his top aides. Weld, Cordy and another top aide all once were federal prosecutors.

"People who have committed crimes and been prosecuted and convicted unless we're talking something really minor, it's not our first priority to undo that," Cordy said.

A 29-year-old Boston-area man said he sought a pardon because his criminal record wrongly reflected convictions. The charges against him of transporting alcohol as a minor, assault with a dangerous weapon and open and gross lewdness actually had been dismissed about a decade ago, he said.

■ Malcolm X

continued from page 1

describing Kennedy's assassination as "a case of the chickens coming home to roost," resulted in his being silenced by the Nation of Islam for 90 days.

In addition to the Kennedy incident, Malcolm X also publicly exposed Elijah Muhammad's involvement with certain women within the Nation of Islam who had filed paternity suits against him. Accused of slandering Mr. Muhammmad, Malcolm was targeted for death, according to the gunman.

On a second public affairs program, rare footage of the slain leader was shown, featuring himself and three other civil rights leaders in a table discussion on the state of race relations in America. In the discussion, taped in the summer of 1963, Malcolm consistently stated that integration would not solve the race problem in America. Later in the program, the two surviving panelists acknowledged that Malcolm X was more accurate and that they were too optimistic on the impact of the Civil Rights Movement.

Tonight at 8 pm, there will be a lecture on Malcolm X's life and assassinaton in the Malcolm X Cutural Center given by UMass alum David Moore.

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT
is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS
Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community
for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, Feb 24, 25, 26
Open house at the North Fire Station, Februrary 26, 5:00p.m.
Call 549-5419

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

Of all the things that will cross your path this year, stop and take a look at ΔZ
OPEN RUSH
ΔZ
DELTA ZETA
MONDAY FEB. 22 – 7:00PM
TUESDAY FEB. 23 – 7:00PM
WEDNESDAY FEB. 24 – 7:00PM
ΔZ HAS THE HIGHEST GPA
ΔZ HAS NO REQUIREMENT TO LIVE IN THE HOUSE
ΔZ HAS NO MEAL PLAN OR HOUSE MOTHER
11 Phillips Street
Any ?'s, call Rachel @ 549-8152

Arts & Living

Listen to this!

By KEN MAIURI
Collegian Correspondent

Alternative music isn't anymore. Though Jesus Jones and Peter Gabriel are regularly featured on MTV's 120 Minutes, they're no more "alternative" than Michael Jackson, Guns n'Roses or any other popular, million-record-selling performers. And while such "alternative" bands like Dada and Toad the Wet Sprocket are hyped to stardom by radio and MTV, other more interesting and original groups are never given a chance.

With this new weekly column, I hope to spotlight new releases, as well as some overlooked music that truly deserves to be heard.

The Juliet Letters
Elvis Costello and the Brodsky Quartet
Warner Bros.

With just a string quartet backing him up this time around, Elvis Costello gets to showcase his amazing voice, which can leap from a gentle whisper to a heart-stopping shriek in a single melody line. This 20-song program ranges from Broadway show tune sound-alikes ("This Offer Is Unrepeatable") to unbelievably catchy pop songs ("I Almost Had A Weakness") to jarring, angular shards of melody ("Swine").

The Brodsky Quartet's performance, especially on "Romeo's Seance" with its majestically swirling violins, is breathtaking. As usual Costello has made an intriguing and complex album that takes a few listens before the songs come jumping out. Don't be turned off by the "classical" Elvis; the sarcasm and wit are still intact. A-

Astronauts and Heretics
Thomas Dolby
Giant Records

In 1982, Thomas Dolby had a huge hit with "She Blinded Me With Science." He's been trying to follow it up ever since, but he really misses the mark with his new album. Though that 1982 album The Golden Age of Wireless was flawless (and recommended — buy it now! you must hear "Europa and the Pirate Twins" and "One of Our Submarines") and truly alternative, Dolby's first new album in four years makes him sound like the mutant offspring of Roger Waters and Bruce Hornsby.

"Silk Pyjamas" sounds like Squeeze; "That's Why People Fall In Love" sounds like [expletive]. The closest thing to a really good song is "Eastern Bloc" (a "sequel" to 1982's superior "Europa"), but even that relies heavily on samples from his own previous song and the drumbeat from Bow Wow Wow's "I Want Candy." The album is mixed wrong, too, with too much mid-range and virtually no bass. Back to the drawing board. C

Smeared
Sloan
DGC

From Nova Scotia they came, garbed in flannel and ripped jeans, armed with one unforgettably catchy, intelligent and funny song, "Underwhelmed." Sounding like a mish-mash of Nirvana, Sonic Youth and Cheap Trick, Sloan bashes their way through a tale of a college guy who annoys his dream girl by correcting her grammar and spelling.

Sadly the four guys in Sloan ran out of good ideas after that. "I Am the Cancer," "500 Up" and "Left of Centre" stand out among the rest, but still sound reminscent of better bands with better songs. B-

Savvy Show Stoppers
Shadowy Men On a Shadowy Planet
Cargo Records

If you've watched The Kids In the Hall then you've heard Shadowy Men On a Shadowy Planet. Their second album (actually a collection of all of their singles) includes the Kids' theme song, along with 17 other short, cool, guitar-driven instrumentals.

SMOASP have something in common with everyone from the Ventures to the Pixies. "Bennett Cerf" is 75 seconds of drums, surf guitars and roller coaster sound effects, and "Big Baby" is a hilarious story of a boy, his jerky neighbor Mr. Pinkster, and "monster treasure," all set to a spooky, slithering bass line. Great music for parties, speeding n your car, or just jumping around your room. A-

Forgery
Monks of Doom
I.R.S.

With three albums and an EP of uncompromisingly serious music behind them, the Monks have decided to lighten up (just a tad) and write some accessible songs. "The four other guys from Camper Van Beethoven" (as they're sarcastically billed on the CD jacket) wanted to forge their own identity, and they've finally found their niche on their major label debut.

Sounding like a hybrid of XTC, Rush and the Police,

Turn to REVIEWS, page 8

COURTESY LOOSE CABOOSE

SHAKE YOUR CABOOSE — Members of the band Loose Caboose will perform tonight at 6 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom as part of the Reggae Tribute to Bob Marley, Peter Tosh and Bunny Wailer. From L. to R. are Roger Steffens, Ras John Bullock, Elizabeth Bullock, sound man Mike McLaughlin (sitting), Jona Dorr, Derek Russel, his son Little D, Noriyuki Ikegami, and Joe Glasgow.

Ultra releases Rev, drab tunes

Nothing of note can be heard on UVS's latest album

By CALEB COCHRAN
Collegian Staff

Rev
Ultra Vivid Scene
Chaos Records

Take the Soup Dragons, subtract their enthusiasm and add some bad instrumental performances, and what do you get? Ultra Vivid Scene and their new album, Rev.

Contrary to the band's name, the sound here is more ultra drab than ultra vivid. The music is utterly devoid of feeling and direction. The Soup Dragons are annoying at times, but at least they know how to rip it up once in a while. There is no sense of that here at all.

The first song, "Candida," is instrumentally intriguing although vocally lacking. The song is not very good, but it leads the listener to believe that better sounds are on the way. Unfortunately, this is the best song on the album.

"Mirror to Mirror" is a close second. Again, while not in itself a good song, it shows bits and pieces of potential which make the listener hang on and hope a great song is right around the corner.

There is nothing of note around the corner, however. Rev is the first Ultra Vivid Scene album recorded entirely with a live band, and they seem to have trouble knowing when to kick in a guitar instrumental or a big drum beat and when not to. Some performances, especially on "The Portion of Delight," literally began to hurt my ears, not from volume but from the sheer noise that belched forth from my speakers.

Besides a lack of good musicians, another problem with Rev is the tendency the group has to drift off into long and lifeless instrumentals lifted from the repertoire of Pink Floyd. I'm not a big fan of this style on any level, but let's just say Pink Floyd handles it better than Ultra Vivid Scene.

The songs all begin to run into each other after a while, none with any distinguishing characteristics to speak of. "Thieves Love Song," "How Sweet," and "Meditating Angels" sound like one long medley of dank sound.

"Blood and Thunder," the first single released from the album, is a 10 minute marathon of mediocre guitar riffs and uninspired vocals.

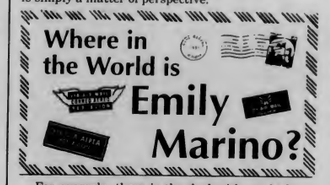
If you're in a dreary mood and want to stay that way, check out Rev. If you're looking for the surprise hit band of the new year, however, you should look elsewhere. As much as I tried to give Rev a chance, it just ran out of gas way too quick.

Experience Siena's art and muffa

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

Time has a funny way of changing the way in which you think of your environment. "Foreign" is a word that has molded my existence for the past month here in Italy, and it feels like my daily complexities are finally subsiding and beginning to fade into some shade of normalcy which constitutes a fairly regular life.

It is not that life has ceased to throw me those little curves that we grin and call "learning experiences," it is simply a matter of perspective.



For example, there is the deal with my bedroom walls. When we first arrived in Siena, my two roommates and I were cheerfully informed that our apartment was not quite ready to be moved into due to a previous plumbing problem, supposedly already fixed. While the place (promised to be a beautiful, cozy apartment) was drying out, Arielle, Sarah and I stayed with four other women from our program who had a quite large place with plenty of beds.

For a week the three of us were practically attached at the hip, having to share keys, limited refrigerator space, one bedroom (hence one bedtime more or less) and of course, one bathroom between seven of us who had to be at the same building at 9 a.m.

When our program director informed us that we could move into our own apartment, the heavens smiled and we were in a taxi before you could say, "Ciao!"

Upon arriving at our new home, I was convinced that the next five months would be filled with enlightenment, joy and peace. With a fantastic patio (complete with a table, chairs and a pigeon proof glass overhang) a breathtaking view of some of Siena's most picturesque hills and valleys and antique furniture in our rooftop hideaway, who wouldn't be inspired?

The fact that I was having trouble asking for bread in stores and got lost almost every time I set foot outside meant nothing. I was sure that having a place to call my own would give me such peace of mind, that everything else would just fall into place.'

Then it happened.

A glance at the bedroom walls revealed what one might subtly refer to as moisture, as well as what we could not deny to be mildew, and a lot of it. Apparently, our little plumbing problem was taking a bit longer to straighten out than any of us had anticipated.

Once the mildew became three-dimensional and multi-colored, we decided to call the landlord, Marco. Somehow, I got on the phone and explained that there was a "muffa schifosa" (disgusting mildew) upon our walls, and he came over the next day to exterminate the stuff. Assuring us that "la muffa" would not return, Marco collected his sponges, smiled and left.

Feeling pretty good about the way we handled the whole situation, Arielle, Sarah and I put the mildew out of our minds and agreed that "muffa" was too good a word to not incorporate into our daily conversations.

A week later the muffa was more than a vocabulary word; it was once again a neighbor.

By this time, we had enough. After a trip to our

Turn to EMILY, PAGE 8

Loaded Weapon I merely shoots blanks at audiences

By EDWARD W. HUMPHRIES
Collegian Correspondent

When thinking back upon my most recent cinematic indulgence, a little film called National Lampoon's Loaded Weapon I, I must say that my favorite part was. . . the closing credits. That particular moment in the film signaled to me that I was free to exit the theater and leave behind all of the boredom that I had suffered during this so called "comedy." Being the movie buff that I am, I am saddened to say that by the end of this film, "Home never looked so good."

Similiar to the Zucker Brothers' ingenious sendup of police dramas in the Naked Gun movies, Weapon is a good-natured yet dumb spoof of the Lethal Weapon films and the countless other buddy-cop clones which that far more entertaining series inspired.

Emilio Estevez (The Breakfast Club) and Samuel L. Jackson (Jungle Fever) play the roles of Colt and Luger, the loose cannon cop and the partner who's just "two day's from retirement." As they stumble upon an evil drug czar's plot to supply the world with cocaine via Wilderness Girl cookies (don't ask!!) the sight gags and celebrity cameos mount. Perennial over-actor William Shatner plays the role of the villain General Mortars with sadistic glee, but he's just not on screen long enough.

Sports Illustrated swimsuit model turned Budweiser huckster Kathy Ireland tries to make the most out of her hero's doomed girlfriend role, and turns in a funny sendup of the Basic Instinct interrogation scene, but these few bright spots fail to illuminate this film for more than a brief moment.

As far as the leads go, Jackson is fine as the no-nonsense veteran cop but he just isn't given enough funny things to do. Emilio Estevez seems a very poor choice for the role of the live-wire cop, and his attempt at deadpan delivery is weak, at best. Part of the reason that The Naked Gun films worked was in star Leslie Nielsen's deadpan delivery of dialogue which reveled in the star's obliviousness to the absurd actions around him. In Weapon, the humor seems forced and thus not funny.

Director Gene Quintano creates situations ripe with comedic potential such as the hunt for a suspect who bears more than a passing resemblance to Mr. Potato Head, but more often than not promising scenes simply fall flat. Either the jokes are too blatant or they just aren't there. Anyone who has watched television in the past three weeks has probably seen this film advertised infinitely and therefore has seen just about all the humorous scenes.

I found that in watching this film my attention fluctuated from trying to spot every joke (it doesn't take a brain surgeon to accomplish that) to looking forward to each star cameo. Tipping it's hat (probably unintentionally) to last year's spectacular lampoon of the Hollywood film industry, Robert Altman's The Player, the casting director of this film has lined up an impressive array of pop culture icons.

It is in these small blink-and-you'll-miss-them parts that the real fun in Weapon is to be had. From Bruce Willis' hapless role as the guy that just happens to live next to Estevez when the terrorists come-a-calling to Whoopi Goldberg's extended cameo as a corpse, the celebrity spots abound. Nike pitch man Denis Leary pines for a few moments of attention before being upstaged by one of Shatner's rambling villainous monologues.

Though I grew tired of Loaded Weapon soon after it's beginning, I have to admit that within this movie is a funny concept straining to emerge. The Lethal Weapon films and other high voltage action extravaganzas are ripe with material and situations to be mocked, unfortunately this movie does not gather its full potential and too often aims for the more obvious sophomoric joke.

Despite a stellar cast of extras and decent campy performances by Jackson, Shatner and Ireland (Estevez on the other hand should go looking for a Mighty Ducks II), National Lampoons' Loaded Weapon I ultimately disappoints. Awkward direction and a poor script leave Weapon shooting blanks.

■ reviews

continued from page 7

Forgery abounds with catchy, tuneful songs that you can actually sing along with ("Flint Jack," "Flow"), great instrumentals ("A.O.A.," "Off On a Comet") and even a decent Camper-like song that's just missing the voice of David Lowery ("What Does A Man Require"). If only they would get rid of the heavy, arty lyrics (see "Chaos Is Not Dead"), the Monks of Doom would be a perfect band. Buy it now! A

The Collegian's
Arts & Living Department is now accepting applications for the position of Arts Associate.
Ask for Jon or Lisa in 113 Campus Center.
This is a paid position.
The Collegian is an E / O / E.

■ Emily

continued from page 7

favorite store, "Spendibene" to buy some bleach, we donned our grunge clothes and went to work to kill the muffa at all cost.

Alas, I cannot say that our muffa is completely gone, but it is definitely getting better and, in a twisted way, is kind of like an old friend and permanent fixture.

This whole experience has made me realize that this haven I thought I was moving into is simply a place to live. While the apartment is gorgeous, it, like life, is not all peace and happineess, nor did I come to Italy to float upon a cloud for one semester.

This is reality, complete with nasty little things that none of us want to deal with like frustrating communication blocks, feeling and being treated as a foreigner and yes, "muffa."

But struggling through these situations not only makes you feel more capable of taking care of yourself under any cirumstances, but makes the not-so-bad things that much more valuable.

Sure, we have a little mildew, but we also have an entire city full of art, history, magic and romance at our fingertips.

I await more small disasters within the next four months, but do so with open arms and the knowledge that experiencing them will teach me about myself and how to cope in the future.

And heck, with funky words like "muffa" creeping into my vocabulary, who could ask for anything more?

HELP US FILL THIS SPACE.
The Collegian is looking for a few good photographers. If you've got what it takes, why not take give it a shot?
113 Campus Center • 545-1701

RUSH
ΒΘΒ
Beta Theta Beta
Open Rush
This Week
2/22 – What's in a Slug?
2/23 – Pulling the Wire
2/24 – Cropping Can Be Fun!
2/25 – Mark-up Mania!
113 Campus Center

rock bottom prices
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton / Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

How's your First Aid?
American Red Cross

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 Days
8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

BANANARAMA
Fabulous frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

SLEEP IN CLASS
While Your Car Is Being Repaired
Use the
FREE MIDAS SHUTTLE
to Campus plus
10% OFF with Student I.D.
Not Valid with Other Discounts. OFFER EXPIRES 2/28/93.
MIDAS
MUFFLERS BRAKES SHOCKS STRUTS
COMPUTERIZED ALIGNMENT
RTE. 9/HADLEY
586-9991
NEAR HAMPSHIRE MALL

Submit to
Reckoning
a non-fiction prose & poetry publication
send prose, poetry, and black & white photos to Hampshire College Box 367 questions; call Jeff Sharlot or Lorraine Strauss at 549-4600 x297
deadline Friday March 5

Explore Career Opportunities!
Register Now to Attend our Seminars
▷ Saturday, Feb. 27 (rescheduled)
Careers in Writing and International Media
Morning Panel 10:30-1:30
Accomplished local writers, Including Al Giordano (Advocate)
Afternoon Panel 2:30-5:00
* CNN
* World Policy Journal
* WBAI-Pacifica
* Platt's Business News Service
* New York Observer
Also seperately,
▷ Saturday, Feb. 27, 1:30-4:00, *Careers in Teaching
Special discount for students and advanced registration. Contact Avanti for more information.
Whether you are job hunting for the first time, changing careers, reentering the job market, or just exploring possible careers, consider Avanti. We are a Career Service firm, specialized in non-profit and international careers. We provid resume advisement, career counseling, a computerized Employment Databank, an extensive library, and a variety of other services.
Avanti (413) 584-8409
17 New South Street
Sullivan Square
Northampton, MA 01060
AVANTI Career Management

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Excuse me, sir, but could your entire family please step out of the car? ... Your faces are not in order."

Quote of the Day

"Power is the ability to define phenomena and have them react accordingly."
– Huey Newton
quoted in Seize the Time, by Bobby Seale (1970)

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are tuned in to prosperity. Trust your intuition to tell you where new profits lie. Opportunity knocks. Investigate a confidential offer.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel could be difficult now; make certain that your itinerary is in order. In influential circles, keep your calm even if things do not go your way.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A project you wished to wrap up still may have loose ends. Be agreeable to an alternative plan. Career or public recognition could come this afternoon. Put your best foot forward.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Crossed signals could have a negative impact on cash reserves or a new project. Avoid guessing about money matters; consult an expert. At work, let everyone have a piece of the pie.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Happiness can be purchased with a few well-chosen words. Keep a low profile. You are wise to say little and spend even less. Reorganizing your work space will increase your efficiency.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A domestic innovation could be a flash of genius. Acting quickly is the key to success. Confidential arrangements look promising, especially those connected to your career or real estate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You and your mate or a co-worker reach an agreement today: a private conversation cements your bond.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Look forward to a great day where work and finances are concerned. Unusual developments could present you — it pays to be flexible. Keep important secrets to yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make time to talk with prominent people today. Doing so will bring both favorable publicity and expert advice. A quiet afternoon will revitalize you. Keep doctors' appointments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A lucky day for friendships and public relations. Use your good press to promote a pet project. You can land in the spotlight tonight and shine.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A course in financial planning or home improvement will help you develop talents you did not know you possessed. Postpone signing contracts until you obtain more data.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Use your intuition to resolve a domestic stalemate and improve the emotional climate for all involved. The right words can work wonders. Try to replace harmful habits with healthy ones.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Jargon
6 Matador's garb
10 Coll. entrance exams
14 Certain race horse
15 USNA part
16 — blue
17 Suspect's need
18 Wood pulp product
20 Assent
21 Heroes' rewards: Abbr
23 Strikes out
24 Poet Millay
25 Uneven
26 Pesky birds
30 "10" actress Bo
34 Ran smoothly
35 Relieves
37 Vane dir.
38 Comida cheers
39 Like some leases
41 S. African fox
42 Bolivian export
43 "Aida" highlight
44 Amass
46 Generate
48 Makes critical notes
50 Turkish leaders
52 Sugars: Suffix
53 Eris and Huron
56 Humdinger
57 One of seven: Abbr.
60 Reciprocate
62 Friendship
64 Bad time for Caesar
65 "..— time in the old.."
66 Pierre's aunt
67 Nonsense!
68 Dundee negatives
69 Live

DOWN
1 Bridge
2 French composer Edouard
3 Etcher's need
4 Bird's bill
5 Cook's implement
6 High-kicking dance
7 Serves a winner
8 Feline foot
9 Detroit name
10 Line
11 Gobilike
12 Melody
13 Radio receivers
19 Trudges
22 Hall of Fame: Duke
24 Slops
25 Sale term
26 Notices
27 Holland product
28 Scene of action
29 Reaction to a pun
31 Lane button
32 Follow
33 Fakes a handoff
36 Ovet
40 Narrow inlets
41 Oh, dear!
43 Broadway backer
45 Say again
47 River or city of Indiana
49 Certain musical compositions
51 Oriental
53 Former NYC newspaper
54 Change the decor
55 Followers
58 Native American
57 Small
58 Giant Mel and others
59 Crimes negative
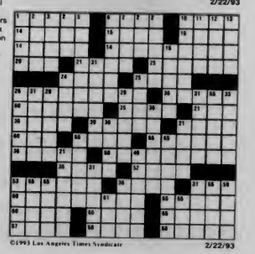
61 Sound of discovery
63 — Headroom

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

S	P	E	C		S	A	R	A		S	M	O
H	E	R	O		C	L	A	I	M	S	E	E
A	N	O	N		O	L	I	N		H	A	D	E	N
M	A	S	C	U	L	I	N	E		P	E	L	I	N	E
		E	N	D	S		O	M	I	T
	A	C	R	E	S		I	R	R		N	A	M
S	L	O	T	S		A	M	A	T	I		T	O	Y
P	O	L	I	C	E	D	E	P	T		C	L	I	P
Y	U	L		O	R	A	T	E		E	A	V	E	S
	D	E	L	A	M	A		I	M	P	E	L
		G	U	I	L	T		A	C	A	D
D	R	I	V	E	O	N	E	S	B	A	N	A	N	A	S
R	E	A	R	S		O	M	A	N		N	O	R	A
A	N	T	E	S		S	I	T	U		C	H	E	M
D	O	E	S		S	T	E	E		E	A	G	L	E

2/22/93



©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/22/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Sarah LeVèsque
Copy Editor ..... Stacy Malone
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Seth Kaye
Production ..... Jim Bruneau, Cathy Chaput

Menu

LUNCH
Sloppy Joe
Grilled Cheese
BASICS LUNCH
Tofu Sloppy Joe
Grilled Cheese

DINNER
Cheese Lasagna
Beef Stew w/a Biscuit
BASICS DINNER
Cheese Lasagna
Lentil Chili

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ refusal

continued from page 12

but Mike had hit that shot twice, so he shot it and that was fine with me," Calipari said. "He wants to take it; that's fine. He's made two, he's won two games on shots he's made that way."

The point remains that the Minutemen, for the first time in 42 days, lost. Their 24-game winning streak against New England teams is down the drain, and they must wait another day to clinch the Atlantic 10 regular season title. Refusing or not, they lost.

"I'll tell ya, we refused to lose there too. They just happened to make the shot at the end," Calipari said. "It wasn't like we gave up. At no point in the game did we give up and that's what you talk about."

Despite three technical fouls, UMass was still in the game. Despite officiating which was disruptive at worst and chintzy at best, UMass was still in the game. Despite shooting 26 percent from the field and committing eight turnovers in the first half, they refused to lose.

Shooting for ten minutes on a basketball goal that was a good two or three feet behind regulation position, the Minutemen missed four foul shots, including an air ball by Williams. Despite this, the Minutemen refused to lose.

Harper Williams and Lou Roe, arguably the two best players on the team, fouled out with 8:1 and 14.9 seconds left, repectively. Kyle Ivey-Jones had a career-high 20 points. The Minutemen refused to lose.

"Yeah, we still had the 'refuse to lose' momentum, because there were a lot of times where we could've gave up and quit and call it a day, but we came together, and at the end, there were just a couple of breaks which didn't go our way," said Derek Kellogg.

The "refuse to lose" mantra was concocted after back-to-back losses to Cincinnati and Temple in which the Minutemen stood by down the stretch. Massachusetts won their next game, a close shave against Rutgers, and had been refusing to lose ever since.

What looks like a plastic slogan normally thrown around by overzealous coaches has turned into a raison d'etre for the Minutemen. Calipari has his squad repeating and, more importantly, believing in the "refuse to lose" motto. He described what it meant after the first Rutgers win.

"Refuse to lose' doesn't mean we're going to win every game, but it means that we're gonna play hard down the stretch and not give any games away. We may not win every game, but we're going to start making teams beat us. We're gonna play UMass basketball."

UMass meets Hawks tonight

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team travels to Philadelphia tonight where coach Joanie O'Brien's club will meet a revenge-minded St. Joseph's Hawks club.

The two teams met previously on January 28th in Amherst, where the Minutewomen (9-12, 4-6 Atlantic 10) surprised the Hawks (15-6, 6-3 A-10) 65-56. Now St. Joseph's will get their chance for revenge at Hawk Hill.

Coming into the season, UMass and St. Joe's could not be much further apart. UMass was picked to finish last in the A-10 while St. Joe's was picked to finish first. Now, at midseason, the Minutewomen are fourth in the conference and the Hawks are third.

In their first meeting, UMass won a tight game in which the momentum swung back and forth. At the time, an understandably happy O'Brien said "This is a huge win for us."

The Minutewomen were up big for much of the first half against the Hawks courtesy of a 14-0 run. A late St. Joseph's surge cut the lead to four at half time.

In the second half, the two teams battled away at each other before the Minutewomen went on a 9-0 run that ended the game with UMass on top 65-56.

The Minutewomen were led by guards Maleeka Valentine (12 points, tough defensive pressure), Tricia Hopson (nine points, four assists) and freshman forward Octavia Thomas (12 points, 11 rebounds).

Guard Katie Curry led the Hawks' scoring with 18 points. However, Curry's points barely outnumbered her three-point attempts as she hoisted up 17 treys.

UMass is coming off a huge 59-57 victory at home over the second place team in the A-10, George Washington University. St. Joseph's, meanwhile, is on a roll, having put together a four-game winning streak.

Game Notes: After tonight's battle with St. Joseph's, the Minutewomen will travel to Piscataway, New Jersey on Saturday where they will meet up with A-10 frontrunner Rutgers (17-6, 11-0 A-10). From there the UMass will finish out the regular season by hosting Boston University on March 2nd at the Curry Hicks Cage.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

Melissa Gurile and the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team faces St. Joseph's in Philadelphia this evening.

SPORTS NOTICE

Student activity cards will be handed out Wednesday, February 24 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage. Tickets for the men's basketball game against St. Bonaventure (March 1) and St. Joseph's (March 4) will be given out Thursday at 7 a.m. at the Cage.

Students are advised that activity cards will not be given out Thursday and students without activity cards will not be allowed to pick up tickets.

ELECT Cruz

EXPERIENCE & DIVERSITY

"The concerns of the students should be the concerns of the town."

This is a paid political advertisement

OPEN RUSH IFY

You wanted to go to college
You didn't know which college to go to
You came to UMASS
You wanted to join the Peace Corps
You wanted to join the Circus
You wanted to hitch to California
You stayed at UMASS
You took Chem 102
You took Greek Myth
You thought about 'Greeks
You wanted to be a Greek
You thought about joining a sorority
You didn't know which one to join
You didn't know if you should join at all.

There comes a time in your life when you have to make a decision
Feb. 22, 23, 24 MAKE THE RIGHT ONE.....
6 - 8 PM

IGU 406 North Pleasant Street 549-2772 549-5936

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK '93 !!
LAST CHANCE TO SAVE!
FROM ONLY $449.00
WITH ONLY 1 WEEK TO LIVE, WHY BLOW IT?!
WE KNOW JAMAICA LIKE NO OTHER COMPANY.
FROM HOTELS TO VILLAS OUR EXPERIENCED STAFF
CAN MEET ANY OF YOUR NEEDS!
JAMAICA'S #1 SPRING BREAK COMPANY!!
Don't miss out on this year's hottest destination! Our packages are proven to be the best! Trips include Roundtrip Airfare, Hotel accommodations for 7 nights, Roundtrip Transfers, Hotel Taxes & Gratuities, many discounts, FREE APPLETON Rum Parties and much more!!
WE ALSO HAVE CANCUN AVAILABLE!!
For The Lowest Prices & The Best Trips, Call
Jill @ 253-4253
Sun Splash Tours 1-800-426-7710

Men's gymnastics places second to Army

By ANDREW BRYCE
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team is performing to the expectations of a young team. A young team is expected to improve as the season progresses, and head coach Roy Johnson's Minutemen are doing just that. UMass reached a season high team point total of 247.35 as Army trounced them with 258.00 points. UMass defeated Cornell University, who finished with a 234.10.

Saturday's exciting meet at Boyden Gymnasium featured some fantastic individual performances. But none was better than Steve Christensen's pommel horse routine, as the senior captain broke his own school record of 9.65 by scoring a 9.70 and finishing in first.

Christensen has stayed around the 9.6 area throughout the season, only to break the UMass record on Saturday. Christensen has been ranked in the top ten nationally in this event, and this outstanding performance should do nothing but help his ranking, which comes out on Tuesday.

Junior Jason Braud had another good performance for the Minutemen, taking first in the vault (9.25), second in the floor exercises (9.30) and parallel bars (8.8), and third on the rings. Braud's 9.45 on the rings was a personal best.

Sophomore Stu Backer also had a personal best on the rings as he tied with Braud for third place with the 9.45 score.

UMass had been averaging around 40 points throughout the season in this event; they had 43.15 points on Saturday.

"Rings was unbelievable; 43 points on the rings for UMass," said coach Johnson as he scanned the final score sheet. "Big, big improvement."

The Minutemen practically swept the vault, with Braud finishing first, sophomore Jason Lee finishing second (8.8), and Christensen and sophomore Tim Smith finishing in a three-way tie for third with an Army competitor (8.65).

Parallel bars also went well for the Minutemen, with Braud taking second, and Christensen and junior Jay Santos tying for third (8.75). UMass defeated the talented Army in both the vault and pommel horse.

Once again, the high bar hurt the Minutemen's point total as they scored a 35.3. UMass was riding high, down by only five points to Army going into the last event, and ended up being defeated by over ten points.

"It fells good that we got 247," said Santos. "We're getting closer and closer to going over 250. We have that one event that is just killing us. We might've been able to beat them if we had hit the high bar. But it wasn't there today. We'll just go back to the gym, and work even harder next week."

"We're getting better," said coach Johnson. "This was a great meet. We stayed close with West Point right up until high bar. If we can learn to hit the high bar, we'll be an even better team."

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

The University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team finished in second place in a tri-meet at home on Saturday. Army placed first and Cornell finished third.

■ swimming

continued from page 12

you have the winner of the "Swimmer of the Meet" award.

Peluso was also presented the Robert Muir Award, by his parents, for the senior who compiled the most points in N.E. Championship meets. He became the second UMass swimmer to garner such an award, after Brian McIver won it in 1990.

Out of the four title-winning teams Peluso has swam for, he said that this most recent one was the most satisfying "because we went to their pool and overcame some obstacles. And the fans were great. They were unbelievable. They really pumped us up."

The only other championship time the Minutemen recorded happened Friday night when Travis Stevens, Jeff Wicklund, Joe Morris and Adam Reich teamed to swim a 6:50.60 in the 800 Freestyle Relay, setting another N.E. record.

With all the excitement of those record-setting performances, Yarworth said one of the biggest keys to the weekend was the swimming of Jeff Little and Dave Laporte, both freshmen.

Little finished third in the 1650 m Freestyle, also known as "the mile", that put UMass up by 134.50 points. The next event was the 200 Backstroke, where Laporte took fifth and Little took sixth, offsetting what could possibly have been an event that put UConn back in the meet. Instead, the 35 points the youngsters achieved kept some needed breathing space between the two schools.

"Everyone scored and everyone swam well," Yarworth said, "but what Little and Laporte did was completely beyond expectations. That was incredible."

It was about that time where Yarworth knew that if his swimmers swam to their capabilities—not pressing or feeling they had to win an event—the N.E. Championship would be theirs for the seventh time since the present format was introduced seven years ago.

Monday - 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks
THIS WEEK ONLY
HAPPY 15th BIRTHDAY to Charlie's 1978 - 1993
Super Specials
10 oz. Miller Genuine Draft 50¢
1978 Prices!
Jumbo Jim Beam & Coke $1.99
Pint Bottles of Golden Anniversary Beer $1.50
Plus Our Famous Food Giveaway
Wednesday - 25¢ Cheese Pizza Slices
Thursday - 10¢ Chicken "Hot Lips" Nuggets
Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

A Freebie! Learn to play bridge – FREE! SOM 101 Wed. 2/24/93 5:30 pm-7:30 pm FREE T-shirt & book.

Student Union Day!
Wednesday, February 24 from 12-4
WATCH OUT FOR FLYING T-SHIRTS!
Come to the Student Union building and enjoy music in the Hatch, Earthfoods and Cape Cod Lounge! Participate in craft demonstrations and other open house activities. Get coupons for FREE sodas and goodies. All events are FREE! Brought to you by the Division of Student Activities!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMass Blood Drive
Today 11:00-4:00
Campus Center Rm 165

AUTO FOR SALE

83 VW Rabbit 97000 mi GOOD COND. $500 willing to negotiate
Call Doug 256-4253

COLLEGE PIZZA

SPRING SPECIAL
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-6098
549-6073

ENTERTAINMENT

Bands: Wa Want You
In the SU Ballroom
In April
Call 6-4812 or 253-9707

FOR RENT

1 bdrm in large apt. $350/ heat incl. 665-3615

112 Town House Apartment available for rent $267.50 available immediately to be shared with male graduate student 545-6744 or 865-2810 E

Room downtown. Quiet, private; lease through Aug.; $350/mo inclusive 253-4236 9am - 9pm

FOR SALE

1950's Coke Machine
Bottle type vending
Adj. Pricing
Keep 80 bottles very cold!
Great for Beer/parties
$400 b.o. 253-5196

Printer for sale 413-245-9542 after 7 ask for Don

Super Nintendo Final Fantasy II $50.00 and Romance of the Three Kingdoms $50.00 Both for $90 or best offer. Univega Rover Sport -- good condition $300.00 or best offer. Call Blake 584-7285 leave message

FOUND

Found gold anklet after MICBIO 180 Mon. Feb. 1 at 12:05 Maher Auditorium Claim at Campus Center Info Desk

Sweater found in Tower Library Call 6-1800 to claim

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

Camp Trucking is interviewing for summer positions during spring break. Individuals will learn different phases of business management, handle phones, and have general office assignments. File maker Pro and Macintosh experience helpful. $7/hr. Relaxed atmosphere. Call 508-663-1744 before March 1.

Greeks and Clubs raise a cool $1000 in just one week! Plus $1000 for the member who calls! And a free Igloo Cooler if you qualify. Call 1-800-932-0528, ext. 65

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT
Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000 - $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Summer Camp on Cape Cod
Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids. Beautiful location, excellent program.
Competitive Salaries. Call James, at 549-8353 for info and application

Summer jobs and internships - University Directories, the nations largest publisher of campus telephone directories (including UMass at Amherst), is interviewing goal oriented students for a challenging, full-time summer position. Gain valuable experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings $3900. Expense paid training program in Chapel Hill, NC. College credit may be available. Interviews on UMass at Amherst campus February 24th. Information and interview sign up available today at the Visitors Center or call 1-800-743-5556

Telemarketers – great money. Relaxed rural office. Evenings. Experienced only. Call Cheryl 9-4 548-9688

INSTRUCTION

Learn to Scuba diva earn two credits Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday at Curry Hicks 7-10 pm 1-800-282-0977

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

LOST! Brand new glasses grey and black plastic with silver frame. Lost in CC or Basics. Call April 6-4574

Lost Ring – Reward
Totman -- Feb 1st
Friendship "LTM"
Call collect 508-827-4555

MUSICIANS

Bassist seeks versatile musicians to compose new music (Firehose, Phish, Parliament, Crimson) Dan 6-5173

PERSONALS

Chris Cormier
Happy Birthday
Love Keren

Dear Delta Zeta Pledges,
Congratulations and Best Wishes
We bid you love and kisses with open we welcome
all of you to join our fun
Aimee B., Amy C., Jan, Stephanie
Erin, Carolyn, Susan

Leanne
Although this is late
It's best you not cry
I saved the best for last
My new little Phi
Love your Phi Friend

Lil B.
Happy Anniversary!
Thanks for being my Best friend and girlfriend
I'm asking you,
John

Look our Uptown!
Jen "Lucy" Johnson's
21! Finally!
Happy Birthday!
Love, The Lucys

Mike F.
Here's your personal.
Where's mine?

SERVICES

Have you baan ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Legal Services Center regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

SPORTS CARDS

Sportstop cards
Mt. Farms Mall

TRAVEL

Scuba Diva Kay Largo
Spring Break, Call Project Deep
1-800-282-0977

SPRINGBREAK!!
Panama and Daytona
$139 and up
7 nights!
Beachfront
deadline SOON!
Call Erica 546-0223

Spring Break: CANCUN, NASSAU
from $299
Organize a small group for FREE trip
Call 1(800) Get Sun 1

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549-7472

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Resumes, papers, theses.
Laser printing, on campus
Pick-up and delivery
Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED

Tutor Coins 105 1-2 hrs/wk 7:50/hr
Call 549-3516 ask for Amanda

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or
Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton
Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

The WHMP-FM Game Summary

Massachusetts	34	34	68
Rhode Island	38	33	71

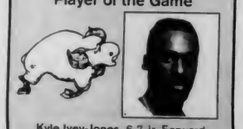
Massachusetts (18-5, 9-2)
Barbee 4-8 4-6 14, H. Williams 3-8 6-8 12, Roe 3-6 5-7 11, Kellogg 2-5 3-4 8, Malloy 3-8 1-3 10, M. Williams 2-5 6-8 11, Dingle 0-2 1-2 1, C. Robinson 0-1 0-0 0, K. Robinson 0-1 1-2 1, Cottrell 0-0 0-0 0. Totals: 17-44 27-40 68.

Rhode Island (16-7, 7-4)
Brown 3-7 3-4 10, Samuel 3-5 2-2 8, Solis 2-4 0-0 4, Cofield 1-5 1-2 3, Easterling 1-6 6-6 9, Collins 1-4 9-12 11, Fox 1-5 4-4 6, Moten 0-0 0-0 0, Ivey-Jones 8-12 4-6 20. Totals: 20-48 29-36 71.

Three-point goals: Massachusetts 7-14 (Barbee 2-3, Kellogg 1-2, Malloy 3-6, M. Williams 1-3), Rhode Island 2-11 (Brown 1-4, Cofield 0-2, Easterling 1-3, Fox 0-2). Rebounds: Massachusetts 33 (Roe 11), Rhode Island (Brown 11). Assists: Massachusetts 9 (Kellogg 5), Rhode Island 9 (Brown 3). Fouled out: H. Williams, Roe. Attendance: 12,152.

Player of the Game



Kyle Ivey-Jones, 6-7 Jr. Forward

Rhode Island's junior forward poured in 20 points for the game, 14 in the first half. With UMass' Harper Williams and Lou Roe in foul trouble throughout, Ivey-Jones was able to muscle in during play in the post. Ivey-Jones had three dunks and collected two rebounds for the game.

Why Rhode Island won

Rhode Island was able to withstand an early UMass surge and executed down the stretch. The Rams were able to get the ball into the post where they fouled out Harper Williams and Lou Roe and hit clutch free throws in the final minute of play. Rhode Island shot 41.6 percent from the floor, while Massachusetts shot only 38.6 percent from the field.

Atlantic 10 Standings

1. Massachusetts	9-2	18-5
2. Rhode Island	7-4	16-7
3. Geo. Washington	6-4	17-5
4. Temple	6-5	11-10
5. St. Joseph's	5-5	14-8
6. Rutgers	5-6	12-12
7. West Virginia	4-6	12-9
8. St. Bonaventure	0-10	10-12

Catch all the Minutemen Basketball Games – Home and Away – on the New 99.3 WHMP-FM!
the New 99.3
WHMP-FM
Join us live from Rafters each Wednesday from 6-7 p.m. for the John Calipari Radio Show.

Minutemen lose to Rhode Island

Hoop team falls for first time in 13 games in Providence

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — All season, playing on the road has been particularly difficult for the University of Massachusetts basketball team. Everywhere it goes, it is greeted with sold out crowds, games moved to larger arenas, delirious, taunting fans and opponents pumped up to play the nationally-ranked Minutemen. UMass can not sneak into town anymore. Now a date against the Minutemen is circled on the calendar, months in advance.

For the past six weeks, UMass, ranked No. 19, has survived all of that, as it plowed through the Atlantic 10. Saturday, against Rhode Island, it caught up with them.

When Michael Williams' last-second three-point shot, which would have tied the game at 71, fell long and Dana Dingle's follow was blocked, thousands of Rhode Island fanatics rushed the floor to celebrate the 71-68 victory. It showed how big a victory over the Minutemen has become.

"It seemed like they wanted it a little more," Dingle said. "They needed it a little more."

Massachusetts (18-5, 9-2 in the A-10) could have won it, but, uncharacteristically, did not perform in the clutch.

Two foul shots by center Harper Williams (12 points), with 1:49 remaining, gave UMass a 68-66 lead. At the other end of the court, the Rams (16-7, 7-4) got the ball into the post where forward Kyle Ivey-Jones (20 points), was fouled by Harper Williams, his fifth of the game. Ivey-Jones sank one of two, to cut the lead to 68-67.

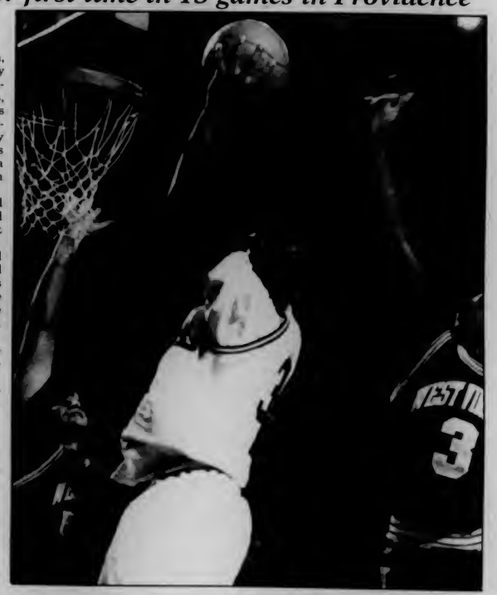
After a miss and offensive rebound by UMass guard Derek Kellogg (8 points, 5 assists), the Minutemen ran the clock down, but Michael Williams (11 points) dropped a pass from Kellogg out of bounds with 27.4 seconds remaining.

At the other end, Rhode Island forward Damont Collins (11 points) was fouled by Lou Roe, his fifth of the game, with 14.9 remaining. Collins made both clutch shots to give Rhode Island a one point lead, 69-68.

UMass guard Jerome Malloy streaked down the court and was fouled, with 10.4 seconds left, as he drove to the basket. With 12,152 fans whooping it up, Malloy clanked the foul shot of the front rim.

"I definitely think the crowd made Malloy miss that shot," URI coach Al Skinner said. "When he got on the line, it got so loud, I looked up because I thought the shingles were going to fall from the ceiling."

Dingle grabbed the rebound and put the shot in, but was whistled for pushing off of Mike Brown.



JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Dana Dingle, shown here against West Virginia, and the UMass basketball team lost to Rhode Island 71-68 Saturday.

"I didn't push off," Dingle said. "My basket should have counted."

Brown buried both shots, leaving Michael Williams, who has hit two buzzer-beating three-pointers already this season, to try to tie it.

"You've got to give Rhody credit," UMass coach John Calipari said. "We both had chances to win, but they capitalized."

UMass forward Tony Barbee (14 points) said, "We didn't play like we should've down the stretch. We missed our free throws and didn't execute and they did."

The Minutemen were whistled for three technical fouls, one on Calipari, one on associate head coach Bill Bayno and one on Michael Williams. URI nailed all six technical free throws.

The Minutemen also had a difficult time stopping Ivey-Jones, who shot 8 for 12 from the floor.

"I was hot, I was feeling it, I was the one we wanted to go to," Ivey-Jones, a junior form Hempstead, N.Y., said. "I was in one of those zones. If I got the ball, they couldn't stop me."

The loss ended UMass' 12-game winning streak, but may prove to be a blessing in disguise.

"I think some of us were content where we were," Barbee said. "Now we know we have to work a little harder. At the A-10s, there is no way anyone is going to stop us."

In defeat, UM refuses to lose

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Refuse to lose.

The University of Massachusetts basketball team had been using the above phrase as a rallying cry for the last 12 games. In each of those games, the Minutemen had posted a victory. Saturday in the Providence Civic Center against Rhode Island was the first taste of defeat in more than a month.

UMass played poorly throughout their 71-68 loss to the Rams, and yet they had a chance to win at the end. Despite being called for a holding foul and an offensive foul in the last 25 seconds, the team had the ball with a chance to tie.

Mike Williams, who had won two games on last-second shots, took a wild 3-pointer with 9.4 seconds left that did not come close, and UMass lost. Head coach John Calipari said he wasn't upset Williams' shot, or the snapping of the team's 12-game winning streak.

"Mike had Jerome up the floor open,

Turn to REFUSAL, page 10

Men's swimming win 7th straight N.E. title

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn. — Old habits die hard, and unfortunately for men's swimming and diving programs in New England, the University of Massachusetts squad has an addiction it can't kick.

Then again, they probably don't want to.

The Minutemen (12-1, ranked 30th) captured their seventh consecutive New England Championship over the weekend at the Wolff-Zackin Natatorium on the University of Connecticut campus, outdistancing the host school by a narrow 943.50-909 score.

"It's a surprise to me every year," said UMass head coach Russ Yarworth, who, much to the delight of the a large and vocal UMass crowd, participated in a post-meet celebratory race against his three assistant coaches, with all four of them in their street clothes. "It feels good every year. To me, this is how my professional success is measured. I guess I'm doing a good job."

The Minutemen certainly took Yarworth's teaching to task, trailing after the first event of the 20-event meet by six points but never trailed after that. The lead peaked at 134.50 points after Saturday's first event, the 1650 m Freestyle, in which UMass' Scott Reed, Jeff Little and Jeff Wicklund placed second, third and fifth for a big 99 points, and the closest score was the final score.

It was billed as a UMass/UConn showdown, and it lived up to its hype. To give you an idea of how much these two schools swam away from the field, consider that the third place team, Boston College finished an eye-popping 401 points behind the second place Huskies.

The competition saw a lot of UMass senior Jay Peluso's wake. The native of Cumberland, R.I. set N.E. varsity records in the 200 Individual Medly, with a time of 1:51.73, and in the 400 I.M. with a time of 4:01.39. Add to that a championship and UConn pool record in the 200 Breaststroke (2:05.78), and

Turn to SWIMMING, page 11

Tuesday February 23, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 83

Cloudy with some flurries, temps in the mid 30s.

Local News:
Dr. Dennis Kimbro, author of the best-selling book, Think and Grow Rich, is speaking tonight in the Campus Center Auditorium. Page 3.

Sports:
The UMass women's gymnastics team is led by three seniors. Read Art Stapleton's profile of their success. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England • Founded in 1890

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN
I THINK I CAN – A tractor clears snow from the path near the Fine Arts Center yesterday. Sunday's storm prompted UMass officials to cancel all classes before 11 a.m. yesterday.

AIDS crisis placed in context

Statistics show rates far higher for women of color

By QUYNH DANG
Special to the Collegian

Editor's Note: This is the second of a five-part series leading up to the Feb. 27 Women's Conference.

The response to the AIDS crisis occurs in the broad context of sex, race, class and international relations.

News Analysis

According to statistics cited in the ACT-UP publication, 73 percent of U.S. women with AIDS are women of color. A White man with AIDS is expected to live three to four times longer than an African-American woman with AIDS, according to the publication. This is due to the lack of health care facilities available to people of color.

Also, men are diagnosed earlier than women. In various cities around the world, AIDS is the leading cause of death of women between the ages of 20 and 40.

White men have taken the sex trade to Southeast Asia. In the Philippines, five out of every six people diagnosed as being HIV positive are hospitality workers connected to U.S. military bases, according to statistics published by the Panos Institute. The United States subsidizes forced testing of hospitality workers, while the same testing is not required for U.S. military personnel. This testing is geared more towards protecting the well-being of the military personnel rather than for the health of the hospitality worker.

U.S. soldiers who sought rest and relaxation during the Vietnam War are at the root of the existing Thai sex industry. Third World sex workers are often accused of being pools of infestation. However, the responsibility for the transmission of HIV lies with the client, because prostitutes are in no position to ask their customers to wear a condom.

Almost all the responsibility for contraception lies with women, while men control the means to safer sex. The Western view of the Third World as promiscuous

Turn to AIDS, page 2

Jury chosen in King case after hearing

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A jury that includes two Blacks and a Hispanic was chosen Monday to judge four White policemen in the federal Rodney King beating trial.

Lawyers for both sides agreed on the jury's makeup after a day of wrangling that included an unsuccessful bid by defense attorneys to dismiss a Black man from the panel.

U.S. District Judge John G. Davies said he would swear the 12 jurors and begin seeking three alternative jurors after concluding some pending legal hearings. Opening statements in the trial were expected to begin Wednesday.

The jury that will try the four officers for allegedly violating King's civil rights includes eight women and four men. Six of the men and three of the women are White.

The last man seated, a young Hispanic, said he knew little about the case and had never seen the famous videotape of King, who is Black, being beaten by White police officers after a traffic stop.

All of the other jurors said they had seen the videotape. The panel includes a former security guard and two ex-marines.

The jury that acquitted the officers on most charges in an earlier state trial included no Blacks and one Hispanic.

That decision set off three days of rioting in the Los Angeles area, killing 54 people and causing more than $1 billion in damage.

Both sides accepted the jury after a last-minute legal dispute over its racial composition.

The defense lost its challenge of a Black man from the city's Watts area after government prosecutors argued it was based on nothing but race and the judge agreed.

An unusual defense bid to block a government challenge of a White former National Guardsman on similar grounds of racial bias was rejected by the judge.

Davies ruled there was "a race-neutral explanation" for the dismissal of the White man, who helped police in the Watts area during the race riots of 1965. He also indicated the man would tend to believe police witnesses more than civilians.

"The challenge will be allowed," the judge said.

Defense attorneys claimed their effort to dismiss the Black prospective juror was "color blind" and based on inconsistencies in his answers.

Supreme Court ponders uses of Civil Rights Act

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether the Civil Rights Act of 1991 applies retroactively to court cases pending when Congress enacted the law.

The justices said they will use two cases — a Texas woman's 1989 sexual-harassment lawsuit against their ex-employer to decide the issue.

The court's eventual decision, expected some time in 1994, will affect thousands of cases in which employment discrimination is alleged.

In the Texas case, Barbara Landgraf sued USI Film Products after having worked at its Tyler production plant for 16 months.

Before she quit in early 1986, Landgraf worked the overnight shift as a machine operator making plastic bags.

Fellow employee John Williams subjected Landgraf to what a federal judge called "continuous and repeated inappropriate verbal comments and physical contact."

Lower courts found Williams' sexual harassment to be severe enough to make the plant a "hostile work environment" for Landgraf and make her employer liable under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

But lower courts ruled that Landgraf was not entitled to back pay because she could not prove she was "constructively discharged."

Landgraf had to prove that even though she left her job voluntarily "working conditions would have been so difficult or unpleasant that a reasonable person in the employee's shoes would have felt compelled to resign."

In ruling against Landgraf last July, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the sexual harassment Landgraf experienced was not that severe.

Under the 1964 law, only back pay was available in such cases. But under the 1991 civil rights law enacted by Congress and signed by President Bush, compensatory and punitive damages against employers are available.

However, the 5th Circuit court rejected Landgraf's argument that the 1991 law should be applied retroactively to her case.

Students call for voice

Write-in campaign stirs UMass issues

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

Students need a voice in town government, said Matt Pavesi, the Chair of the Public Policy Committee of the Student Senate.

The election for town meeting members is being held tonight and some UMass students hope to be elected by write-in votes.

Rory Pascar and Erin Jackson are two UMass students running a write-in campaign in tonight's election for town meeting members. They are running out of precinct two, which encompasses the Orchard Hill area.

Pavesi said he encourages students to write their names in today if they are interested in town meeting.

"Last year, we got members in with four votes and there are spaces open," Pavesi said.

In order to become a write-in candidate, a registered voter simply writes his or her name and address on the ballot.

"Nomination papers were due over intersession so we really lost out there," Pavesi said.

Pavesi said student representation is especially necessary in precincts four and ten, the Southwest area.

The town meeting is the major legislative body for the town of Amherst. It is made up of 240 members who vote on the town's annual operating budget and laws affecting students.

The group votes on zoning, keg and noise by-laws. They also approve the budget for the Housing Review Board, which is the only service the town provided to students, according to Pavesi. The board protects students who rent off-campus apartments.

Pavesi said students count for local aid and pump so much money into the community that they deserve a voice.

"We represent students, and only students," Pavesi said. "We don't want to get students to take over the town meeting, we only want to get some representation."

Voting in the election is also very important, according to Pavesi. The Select Board is also up for election.

A strong voter turnout would force

Turn to VOTING, page 3

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719
Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500
Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864
Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

WRITE FOR US!
The Collegian is looking for writers in all departments. Interested?
Come on down to 113 Campus Center and talk to Greg Sukiennik, our Training Director.

NOT READY FOR BEDTIME PLAYERS
Spring 1993 Performance Schedule
All Performances Begin: 8:00 P.M.

February 24	Gorman/Wheeler at 2nd Floor Gorman
March 3	Alpha Chi Omega/ Theta Chi At AXO
March 10	James/Emerson at James Main Lounge
March 24	Brown Main Lounge
March 31	Coolidge 19th Floor Lounge
April 7	Butterfield/Van Meter at Van Meter Main Lounge
April 14	Melville/Thoreau at Thoreau Main Lounge
April 21	Pierpont/Moore at Pierpont Main Lounge
April 28	Cashin Main Lounge
May 5	Orchard Hill In the Bowl 6 PM

Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual FORUM

The GLB Forum consists of event listings of interest to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual community. The GLB Forum is compiled by the GLB Issues Editor who can be contacted c/o the Collegian or by calling 545-0719.

Wednesday, February 24

Meeting — LBGA general meeting at 7:00 p.m. in the LBGA office. All are welcome.

Friday, February 26

Lecture — Julia Penelope, author of Call Me Lesbian; Lesbian Lives, Lesbian Theory, will discuss "Lesbian New-Rotics: Bogus or Breakthrough?" as part of the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Brown Bag Series, from 12:00 to 1:30 p.m., 9th floor Campus Center

Social — The Lesbian Bisexual and Gay Alliance will host a coffee social at 3:00 p.m. in the Campus Center 9th Floor.

Reading — Chris Cinque will present a staged reading of "The Scrub," the third part of her trilogy, "Growing up Queer in America," at 8:00 p.m.. in the Hampden Theater, SW. Tickets: $3 students, $5 others. (Made possible in part by a grant from the UMass Arts Council.)

Open House — The Two and Twenty SIRP will hold an open house from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m. in Mary Lion. A general welcome will be at 4:00 p.m. on the first floor.

Saturday, February 27

Reading — Chris Cinque will give a second presentation of a staged reading of "The Scrub," the third part of her trilogy, "Growing up Queer in America," at 8:00 p.m. in Hampden Theater, SW. Tickets: $3 students, $5 others. This program was made possible in part by a grant from the UMass Arts Council.

Dance — A cross-dressing dance sponsored by the Two and Twenty SIRP will start at 9:00 p.m. in the basement of Mary Lyon.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Brian Gormley
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

THEFT

• A student in Washington residence hall had a $125 telephone stolen Friday morning.

• A ski rack valued at $200 was stolen from a car parked in lot 11, near Stadium Drive on Friday afternoon.

• An individual in Pierpont residence hall left his room for a few minutes early Sunday morning. He returned to find his $300 acoustic guitar stolen.

ACCIDENT

• Friday night an individual backed out of a parking space in Orchard Hill and struck a parked vehicle. A detailed note left for the owner by a witness led to the arrest of the individual. The responsible party was cited for leaving the scene.

ALCOHOL VIOLATION

• Saturday night police confiscated alcohol which was found in the vehicle of a minor on Kennedy Drive.

■ AIDS

continued from page 1

obscures the reality of the effects of Western imperialism.

Like many other Third World countries, Haiti depends on tourism to acquire U.S. dollars needed to pay off foreign debts. Many of the tourists were wealthy White men from the United States. Bisexual male sex workers contracted HIV from these tourists and consequently passed the virus to their wives and girlfriends. AIDS is now a full-blown epidemic among women in Haiti.

Since the Centers for Disease Control have categorized Haitians as a high risk group, tourism in Haiti has decreased from 70,000 tourists in one year to 10,000, and has never recovered.

In Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, over 200 HIV positive Haitians seeking political asylum are being held in camps and are being deprived of treatment. If the U.S. Senate has its way, the ban that keeps HIV positive people out of the U.S. will soon become a law.

It is ironic that the West blames the Third World for the origin and spread of AIDS. This blame is perpetuated by the Western-controlled international media, combined with the Third World's limited access to research funds. Johns Hopkins Medical School has an AIDS research budget that is equal to the national budget of some Third World countries. This legitimizes the West's reasons for conducting human experiments on Third World women and women of color in the United States.

AZT has been approved as an anti-viral treatment for HIV in the United States, although it causes cancer in the reproductive organs in female rats and has never been tested on women. People of color pioneering in alternative therapies (to drugs), for example, acupuncture, are allegedly being murdered by the FBI. These discoveries threaten large profits of the pharmaceutical industry.

AIDS has become an effective tool for the United States in the ongoing genocide against people of color. AIDS, combined with higher infant mortality rates, could mean the decimation of whole communites of color.

Quynh Dang is the HIV/Health and Outreach Educator for the Multicultural AIDS Coalition in Boston.

First Ladies talk through the ages

By VERENA DOBNIK
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hillary Rodham Clinton says imaginary conversations with Eleanor Roosevelt helped her survive the stresses of last year's presidential campaign.

"Early on as the campaign would go and things would happen, I would shake my head, and I would say, 'Why me?'" Mrs. Clinton said Sunday night at a tribute to the former first lady.

But as she learned more and more about Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Clinton said she began to ask her for advice — "How did you put up with this? How did you go on day to day with all that would happen, with the kinds of attacks, criticisms that would be hurtled your way?"

Mrs. Roosevelt's answer? "Get out and do it, and don't make any excuses about it," Mrs. Clinton said.

Franklin D. Roosevelt III said there were similarities between his grandmother and Mrs. Clinton, "both women of intelligence and high energy. . . willing to take big risks" to help the less fortunate.

The new first lady arrived from Washington by train in a heavy snow storm to attend the benefit at Lincoln Center, featuring Joanne Woodward, Rosemary Clooney, Judy Collins, Barbara Cook, Lena Horne, Marilyn Horne and others.

Mrs. Clinton was welcomed to the stage with a standing ovation that capped two hours of Broadway, cabaret and folk tunes, Negro spirituals and Mrs. Roosevelts's words.

Ticket prices ranged from $40 to $400. Organizers hoped to raise $400,000 to landscape two acre of New York's Riverside Park.

Monday - 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks
Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings
Wednesday - 25¢ Cheese Pizza Slices
Thursday - 10¢ Chicken "Hot Lips" Nuggets
THIS WEEK ONLY
HAPPY 15th BIRTHDAY
to Charlie's 1978-1993
Super Specials
10 oz. Miller Genuine Draft 50¢
1978 Prices!
Jumbo Jim Beam & Coke $1.99
Pint Bottles of Golden Anniversary Beer $1.50
Plus Our Famous Food Giveaway

RUSH
ΒΘΒ
Beta Theta Beta
– tonite –
PULLING THE WIRE!
Learn the secrets of this time-honored tradition
113 Campus Center

Local News

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN
LET IT SNOW – Sophomore microbiology majors Ray Mercier (left) and Craig Weiss exult in the cancellation of morning classes yesterday.

Panel tackles gay issues

Actor says Black gays have worse plight

By VANESSA ADELMAN
Collegian Correspondent

Black homosexuals must confront two issues — homophobia in the Black community and racism in the gay community, said Brian Freeman, a panelist in last Saturday's symposium on racism and homophobia.

"Control of sex and sexuality is used by 'dominant culture' to maintain existing sexual ideas."

– Shyamala Ivatury

The discussion was held in conjuction with the performances of Fierce Love and Dark Fruit by the Pomo Afro Homos last weekend. Anthropology professor Helan Page, Women's Studies Professor Donna Goodleaf, and two graduate students, Tim Blake and Shyamala Ivatury, joined Freeman, an actor with Pomo Afro Homos, on the panel.

Moderator Joy James, professor in Women's Studies, began the discussion.

"We must love ourselves and be fierce," James said. "We can do this in two ways — self-responsibility and not being silent."

According to James, each person must love humanity and become active as an educator, a thinker and a doer. If people are silent, they are allowing the violence to continue, she said.

Shyamala Ivatury spoke about why society today is homophobic.

"Control of sex and sexuality is used by 'dominant culture' to maintain existing sexual ideas," she said.

According to Ivatury, in 'dominant culture' the woman becomes dependent because the man is seen as protector. The woman is then weak and subordinate to her protector, Ivatury said.

"To get away from this idea we need to get away from heterosexuality, which is the dominant way of looking at things in society," Ivatury said.

The symposium showed clips from the movie Tongues Untied, a film about racism and homophobia, by Marlon Riggs. The panelists commented on the clips and related some of their personal experiences dealing with the issues of racism and homophobia.

"Black gay men do not exist as a reaction to the White gay community or the Black community," Freeman said. "Our existence is influenced by having to react to both."

Page discussed the issue of silence. People become silent because of internalized oppression, she said.

According to Page, people need to find their own voice to challenge the mediums we deal with in society. Doing something cannot just take place politically or artistically, but must involve all aspects of life.

"Silence is suicide," Page said.

Author to discuss ways to attain 'riches' in life

By KRISTIN ST. JOHN
Collegian Staff

Dr. Dennis Kimbro, author of Think And Grow Rich: A Black Choice, will be giving a lecture at the Campus Center Auditorium tonight at 8 p.m.

According to Flavia Eldemire, a graduate student in business administration, Think And Grow Rich is the first self-help book geared towards the African-American of today. Eldemire explained that "it's not about what the White man has done, but what we can do, and that each of us must take on as a personal quest. . . It's spiritual and intellectual knowledge put into one book."

Co-written with Napoleon Hill, this best-selling nonfiction book shares success stories of African-American business leaders, while outlining the principles to lead one toward a "rich" life.

But, Kimbro notes that richness shouldn't be measured in monetary value. He says, "There are riches in lasting friendships, harmonious family relationships, sympathy and understanding between business associates, and inner harmony which brings peace of mind measurable only in spiritual values."

Kimbro also discusses the reasons behind failure. He feels that many have "denied ourselves opportunities because we harbor self-limiting ideas." He disputes the "I can't make it when I have so many disadvantages" myth.

In 1992, Kimbro was appointed director of the Center for Entrepreneurship at Clark University in Atlanta, the first such center in the nation to be housed at a historically Black college or university. The Center's goal is to equip Black students with the skills and core values necessary to compete as entrepreneurs.

Eldemire says that hearing Kimbro was an inspiration to her, and said she feels that he will do the same thing for everyone that attends.

"I wanted to bring something positive to this campus," Eldemire said.

Kimbro's lecture is sponsored by BMCP, Amherst College, Hampshire College and the UMass School of Management.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Dr. Dennis P. Kimbro, author of 'Think And Grow Rich: A Black Choice,' will speak tonght in the Campus Center.

Racism continues to plague medical profession, says prof

By KRISTEN LANS
Collegian Staff

A member of Hampshire College's first graduating class addressed the issue of racism in medicine Monday afternoon at Hampshire College.

Vanessa Gamble, a professor at the University of Wisconsin Medical School, said she wants the medical profession to address the issue of racism, because it influences how patients are treated, what diseases are studied and the way racial differences are viewed.

Gamble graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School after facing many personal hurdles.

"People have told me that I couldn't make it. But I am here and I will continue to fight racism," Gamble said.

Throughout medical school, Gamble said she fought stereotypes from professors and students as well as those in the literature and medical studies.

She said as a Black woman she dealt with both sexism and racism and added that the views of White educators end-up in hospitals.

"Black patients are often viewed as non-compliant and uneducated," Gamble said.

Gamble said she teaches her students to look beyond the biological reasons for illness. She cited factors such as income and living conditions as determinants of health.

"How one defines a problem determines

Turn to RACISM, page 4

MATTHEW J. SIMONEAU / COLLEGIAN
HELPING THE CAMPUS – Aaron Smith, founder of the service organization 'Circle K,' speaks at the charter night for the UMass chapter last Friday night.

Fraternity fights drunk driving

Sigma Alpha Mu members look to arrive home safely

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Staff

Sigma Alpha Mu is ensuring the safety of their fraternity brothers through the implementation of a designated driver program that not only prevents drunken driving, but models responsibility as well.

The program, in operation now for three weeks, has been highly successful with the fraternity's 55 members.

"The program was set up because all too often people drink a little too much and don't have the judgment to decide whether they are able to legally drive sober," said junior Eric Bachenheimer, the fraternity's public relations chairperson.

The volunteer program works by designating a Sigma Alpha Mu Fraternity member as a driver to take responsibility for either a Thursday, Friday or Saturday night. The driver works a six-hour shift and is made available from 9 p.m. to 3 a.m.

Before the start of the shift the driver leaves the number where he can be reached on a board in the fraternity's house.

The fraternity's president, sophomore Jordan Neumann, said the schedule of drivers is laid out at the beginning of the semester so a driver has ample time to borrow a car if he needs one. With 55 active members, Neumann said it works out that every member works one night a semester.

"It became an issue about how the brothers were getting home," said junior Scott Eber, last Thursday night's designated driver. "If it wasn't us who was getting the people that we care about home, who would?"

Eber, who received only three phone calls Thursday, said the program is not demanding and fraternity members are eager to help.

Neumann said the idea for the program came from junior Anthony DeLucia, who saw the need for a designated driver system for his brothers. DeLucia drew up a proposal and it was implemented soon after.

Bachenheimer said the program sets an example not only in the Greek area but in the whole UMass community.

"If one individual can take responsibility for 55, then one person can definitely take care of two or three people on their floor," Bachenheimer said. "Anyone can set up a responsible designated driver program."

"The benefit of the program is knowing that our brothers are safe," he said.

■ voting

continued from page 1

the town to give in to pressure to place a voting booth on campus, Pavesi said.

"There would be a higher voter turnout if students could vote in Hampden instead of having to truck to the Bangs Center," Pavesi said. "Who even knows where Bangs is?"

Orchard Hill residents vote in the fire station in E lot and voters in Central go to the Wildwood school. Southwest residents vote in Bangs Community Center and the Lutheran Church is the voting headquarters is home to the Northeast/Sylvan area.

Precinct locations can be found by calling the Town Registrar. Any other questions, or requests for emergency rides can be directed to the SGA office.

MICHAEL J. SIMONEAU / COLLEGIAN

EN GARDE – Freshman Jason Trunell (left) and junior John Weiss, foilists on the UMass fencing team, warm up before the New England Championships. See results on page 11.

Police shooting shows man fate of wife's killer

BOSTON (AP) — The husband of a women killed in 1986 thought the assailant was still in prison, until he learned the man was charged with fatally shooting a Boston police officer last week.

St. Clair Skeete said he was shocked to learned that one of the men convicted in his wife's death had served less than four years of a six-to-ten-year sentence for manslaughter.

Skeete said he found out when his his sister told him that Terrell Muhammad had been charged with fatally shooting Boston Police Officer Thomas F. Rose.

Rose, 42, died Friday after being shot in the arm and abdomen during a scuffle with Muhammad, police said.

Muhammad, who had been arrested earlier that day on larceny charges, was apparently trying to escape from the Area A station in downtown Boston when the scuffle occurred, police said.

Muhammad was being held on $1 million cash bail.

Muhammad, 30, and another man, Raymond Hurd, were initially charged with murder in the holdup-killing of Skeete's wife, Angela, in May 1986, but were allowed to plead to lesser charges.

Muhammad got a six to ten year term; Hurd a 12 to 20 year sentence. Muhammad was paroled in June 1990.

Skeete, a native of the West Indies, told the Boston Herald that prosecutors had discouraged him from attending court hearings for Muhammad, and never notified him when the trial was held, Skeete said.

"Even when the trial went down, I didn't know about it. I missed everything."

25 Years Ago Today...

Sit-In Cancelled by Committee Because of Poor Student Support

Reprinted from the Collegian, Feb 23, 1968

The ad hoc committee changed its position because the majority of students weren't interested in trying to change the open house rules, according to Bart Kaplan. Since the students weren't interested in changing things, "why should we stick our necks out."

The senate dropped the original ultimatum for a less radical proposal on open housing which was passed at the last meeting.

The Board of Trustees will meet March 19 and unless the Student proposal for open houses is accepted, there may be renewed demonstrators.

Learn German This Summer At URI

June 27 – August 6, 1993

The University of Rhode Island in co-operation with the Goethe Institute Boston is hosting the Thirteenth Annual German Summer School of the Atlantic. German will be the sole language of communication, and German life and culture the heart of this six week residency program of intensive language study. Earn up to nine undergraduate or graduate credits while living in the beautiful surroundings of our country campus, just minutes away from Rhode Island's magnificent beaches and historic Newport. This program is ideally suited for anyone wishing to enroll in beginning, intermediate, or advanced German. Take advantage of this rare opportunity to participate in this total German language experience.

Contact:
Dr. John Grandin or
Dr. Norbert Hedderich, Co-Directors
Dept. of Languages, URI
Kingston, RI 02881
Or call: (401) 792-5911

UNIVERSITY OF RHODE ISLAND

RECYCLE YOUR COLLEGIAN . . .
. . . AFTER YOU READ IT

Joe Turner's Come and Gone by August Wilson

A Co-Production of the Department of Theater and the New WORLD Theater
Feb. 25-27 and March 3-6, 8 pm
Rand Theater, Fine Arts Center
Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511
$5 general public; $3 students & senior citizens

■ racism

continued from page 3

how you institute a solution," Gamble said. "If you see the problem of infant mortality as attributed to biology, then you'll think that intervention won't help."

Gamble said she always asks her students to define race on their first day of class. She said she challenges their premises to show students the origin of racism.

"It is hard on me to teach about the issues of racism every day. I try not to jump on anyone's case. I want them to be able to talk because I want to understand," Gamble said.

Gamble said she views her work as an educator as a political.

"My students are predominantly White. They will never understand racism, but they can understand anger," Gamble said. "It is a part of America — it effects everyone."

Are you bored?
Have you completed your collection of bottlecaps?
Time for a change?
Come down and write for the Collegian.
113 Campus Center.
545-3500

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

SHARK NIGHT
➢ RETURNS ➣
Single Elimination Pool Tournament
• Free Pizza for Players
• $2.00 Entrance Fee
Sign-Up: 7:30–8:00
WINNER TAKE ALL!!!

University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family

Tuesday - March 9
6 p.m.- 8 p.m.
UHS - Room 304

I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?

I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest...Where should she go?

I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid...What can I do to help?

If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

For more information, please call
549-2671, Clinic IV - ext. 233 or 234.

News
Sports
Arts
Comics
Crosswords
Horoscope
Opinion
Lunch
Everybody reads us.

COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING
545-3500

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

The sterilization of women violates basic human rights

Millie is out, Socks is in; there are now more women than ever in Congress, and we can say so long to that nasty gag rule. There's a Democrat in the Oval Office, a woman is attorney general and our incredibly intelligent First Lady's talents have not gone unnoticed. The first Black woman has been elected to Congress, Clinton's family leave program has gone into action and Dan Quayle is learning how to say "D'ya want fries with that?" Things are really beginning to fall into place.

But just as it looks like some progress is being made in this backward decade of ours, reality kicks in (and it's kickin' hard!). Currently there is talk of the sterilization of women on welfare. Those in favor of this horrific idea believe it will decrease welfare costs while improving the lives of those children already on welfare. Perhaps so, perhaps not, it doesn't really matter: fundamental human rights are being violated.

Women's basic human rights are being ruined here. To further that, human rights are being destroyed.

This idea stems from the days when a person's hand was chopped off for stealing. They were being punished for committing a crime. Sterilizing women on welfare suggests they have done something wrong by being on welfare, and for bearing children. A woman cannot be punished for having children. It is her natural right, and that shouldn't be taken away from her.

This idea violates everything the United States stands for. It is simply "cruel and unusual" punishment to deny a woman the right to bear a child. Whether or not she is on welfare, if she has one child or 20, she does not have to give up her natural rights to remain on the welfare system.

Stephanie EISENBERG

We have long established (or at least tried to) that women were put on this planet for much more than just producing babies. If the purpose of sterilizing women is to "fix them so they can do no harm to society anymore" then the statement is that a woman who can't bear children is worthless. Whether a woman can bear a child or not should not affect her worth in today's society; the choice to bear children is hers and hers alone.

Conveniently absent from this proposal is the role of the father. Unless technology has changed drastically in the last hour or so, as far as I know, "it takes two to tango." By agreeing that sterilizing women will solve the welfare problem in this country, the father's role in baby-making and raising is eliminated.

If sterilization is really the answer, then I want to know why nobody ever suggested sterilizing all the men on welfare. A woman can only have one baby in a nine-month period. Imagine how many babies one guy could create. Hmm. . .

My fundamental argument is that women were given some "unalienable rights," and I refuse to sit back and watch as they are taken away. Regardless of the welfare problem in this country, or anything else, there are some rights that are so fundamental that they cannot be taken away. This is clearly one of them.

With a Democrat in office, I have hopes that this idea will never come to pass. But in today's controversial day and age, you never know. The struggle for women's rights continues to be uphill, and this proposal, if it ever came to pass, would put us right back with the cave men (and women!).

Women have been making a ton of progress; we can't let it slip away. I'm going to cross my fingers and put my faith in Bill and Al; I like what they've done so far. I'd feel a lot better though if we could only get those goofy Republicans out of Congress. . .

Stephanie Eisenberg is a Collegian columnist.

Hemp is not a 'safe' vice

Have you ever felt sorry for a lost cause? I sure have.

But as lost causes go, I can't feel sorry for those folks trying to legalize marijuana. Try as they might, everyone knows it's a near impossible task and for good reasons.

The UMass Amherst Cannabis Reform Coalition (UMACRC) have had a table on the Campus Center Concourse for days now, collecting signatures in an attempt to place a non-binding referendum question on the SGA ballots.

David RIVERA

It goes something like this: "Whereas we, the undergraduate student body of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, find that the prohibition of cannabis hemp (a.k.a. marijuana) is of arbitrary and capricious nature, one which we hold to be repugnant to the Constitution's guarantees of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. . . Whereas we find that recreational use of cannabis is far less harmful to campus society than either alcohol or tobacco. . ."

It also goes on about hemp being an "environmentally beneficial crop" that helps reduce pollution. It seems marijuana has gotten a bad image since the '60s. A whole generation (including the president) partook of marijuana and look where it has gotten our country.

Seriously, what would our society be like if you could buy a pack of marijuana cigarettes at the local convenience store? Most people who smoke marijuana, do it to forget their troubles. It's no different from alcohol, tobacco, heroin or crack.

Alcohol and tobacco are the top two abused substances in both the nation and world. With alcohol, people literally drink themselves to death. Granted that's their personal choice, but along the way to the grave they sometimes take innocent people with them. Legalized marijuana would lead to similar abuses on a much larger and complicated scale.

Any chemical addiction is unhealthy. I'm not trying to preach, I'll leave that to Billy Graham and a few others on this campus, but legalizing marijuana can only add to our already vice-filled nation.

The UMACRC leaflets say marijuana "isn't addictive," and that most people use it "socially to relax." It doesn't work in Amsterdam, and it wouldn't work here. Our nation has far too many vices now; we don't need to enlarge one we already have.

Easier access to addictive drugs isn't the answer for the pursuit of life, liberty and the happiness. The coalition could better serve the community if it involved itself in trying to help people with substance dependencies and not lend to this problem.

One leaflet states that marijuana doesn't lead to crime and "hard drugs." Tell that to a friend of mine who started off smoking pot and ended up smoking and selling "hard drugs." I'm sure he wouldn't mind talking about his early days of marijuana use, but the problem is he died two years ago — guess how.

David Rivera is a Collegian columnist.

Hypocrites undermine their cause

For nearly four years now, I have sat back and watched all the protests, takeovers, and rallies. I always found it amazing how such noble causes could be warped and twisted into what they often become here.

Hear me out. I have done it for you many times, so you owe me that much.

I am a White male. Most of my friends are White. We are members of the majority. That means there's a lot of us. It doesn't mean we are always right. I've seen friends called "racist" for simply walking through the Student Union, had someone throw a chair at my roommate for similar reasons and I've been called everything from homophobic to chauvinistic.

We did nothing to provoke such attacks — and they are attacks — but were forced to suffer them anyway. For almost four years I simply shrugged them off and moved on.

No more.

Ms. Fang Du wrote a letter [Collegian, Feb. 17] describing some shameful behavior of some undergraduates. I agree her complaints are legitimate, but she wrote one line that I simply can not accept: "You are showing me how American undergraduates act and think." You are wrong, Ms. Du. And that mistake is the whole point of this letter.

I am tired of being called racist, homophobic or whatever else people choose to call me. I am not racist, I am not homophobic and I do not discriminate against any groups because I feel they are inferior to "my kind" — whatever that is. You do not know me and you have no right to judge me without an intimate knowledge of how I think and feel.

You complain that you are discriminated against, trod upon and looked down upon. You have reason to complain. You do not have a right to take over a building and force everyone else to suffer with you. Many people came here to get an education so they can have a better life, and maybe make the world a better place for everyone. Do not infringe upon their rights.

Don't you see that you are hypocrites? Immediately after shouting that your rights have been infringed upon by someone calling you some slur, you turn around and do exactly what was just done to you. But you target the entire population, instead of those who are the cause of the outcry.

That is stereotyping.

In your fanaticism, you have become guilty of the very crimes you are trying to stop. Remove the log from your own eyes. Don't try to rip my eyeball out.

Change comes about when people listen to you. No one will listen if they do not respect those who are talking. You do not have my respect. Respect is earned, not shoved down the throats of those you wish would listen.

I hope someone will read this and better understand many of us on campus. I know I am not alone in my feelings.

I have said my piece. If you feel like writing a reply to tear apart this letter, feel free. It simply proves my point. And it shows you haven't learned a thing, ye who try to educate mankind.

Ms. Du, while your letter was very good, I would simply request that you do not group all "American undergraduates" together.

Larry Lagoy
Amherst

Anti-Semitism angers Central

Two weekends ago in Chadbourne, someone exercised their right to free speech by saying, "I hate Jews," outside a Jewish woman's door and scrawling the same on her memo board.

Anti-Semitism is alive and well in our world, and this act of bigotry and hatred brings it home. Anti-Semitism may not get much media attention, but its presence makes people in our community feel unsafe every day. That affects and hurts each person here.

We are angered and offended by this act. We want the victim to feel support — to know that voices of understanding and care are more numerous than those of hate, to know that many are outraged by this act, to know that our community standards will not tolerate the continuation of such behavior and that we will work to eliminate it.

Vivian Ostrowski
Residence Director
Central

This letter was signed by 85 Central residents.

Stop teasing the conservatives!

O.K., I give up. Who is this Michael Morrissey guy [Collegian, Feb. 19]? It's a joke, right? He's a fictional character designed to poke a little fun at conservatives and get people to write letters to the Collegian, right?

But you really shouldn't be so hard on conservatives. You shouldn't exaggerate so wildly by portraying them as such racist, bigoted, politically closed-minded people whose arguments are based on ignorance. We need conservatives. You should know that. It helps to balance the liberal side. There's no need for such harsh ridicule of conservatives. Sometimes there are rare instances when I am almost fooled, the character almost appears to be of an intelligent nature. Stop pulling my leg!

Has anyone noticed that UMass is having an image problem lately? It's nice to have a sense of humor, but it's kind of a bad time to be joking, don't you think? The conservatives should be truly represented, not just made to look like fools using this Morrissey character. Come on, a joke is a joke — let's not beat it to death. Let's get rid of the joke. I had to laugh though: "a Collegian columnist." That's a good one!

Brian Higley
Amherst

Learn about
Special Summer Programs
sponsored by UMass/Boston

Archaeological Field School
on Thompson's Island
in Boston Harbor

Studio Program in Traditional Woodblock Printing & Landscape Painting
in Guangzhou, China

Exploring the Coastal Environment
on Nantucket and the New England Coast

Marine Biology
on Nantucket Island

The New Europe: Field Study and Seminar
in Ireland

Spanish Translation and Interpretation
at UMass/Boston's Harbor Campus

Spanish Language and Culture
in Cuernavaca, Mexico

Playwriting and Performance
on Nantucket Island

Meet our representatives at the Campus Center Concourse between 11:30am and 3:30pm on Wednesday, February 24.

You can also call our Division of Continuing Education at 617-287-7900.

University of Massachusetts at Boston

Women and Leadership Styles
A workshop to provide women with information about leadership styles, mentoring and politics in the workplace

Explore issues such as overt and covert mentoring, moving up in the organization, and becoming aware of your leadership style.

Instructors: Ruth Weekes Washington, Mather Career Center
Alicia Smith, University Childcare Office

Wednesday
February 24, 1993
6:00 - 8:00 PM
Mather Career Center Room 101A

Sponsored by the Mather Career Center and the University Childcare Office. For information call 545-6256

THE
EDWIN M. ROSSMAN
ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS
ECONOMICS

DATE: WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1993
TIME: 8:00 PM
LOCATION: CAMPUS CENTER 904

SPONSORED BY:
MATHER CAREER CENTER
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF ECONOMICS

This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!

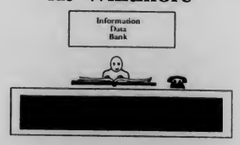
ALUMNI PANELISTS:

Ajay Jain '90 B.A. Economics	Senior Market Analyst Polaroid Corporation Cambridge, MA
Cheryl Ryan '88 B.A. Economics	Economic Research Analyst Massachusetts Department of Revenue Boston, MA
Stephen Etzler '90 B.A. Economics	Regional Training Manager Arbitration Forums New York, NY

For more information, please contact:
Mather Career Center
545-2224

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK '93 !!
LAST CHANCE TO SAVE!
FROM ONLY $449.00
WITH ONLY 1 WEEK TO LIVE, WHY BLOW IT?!
WE KNOW JAMAICA LIKE NO OTHER COMPANY.
FROM HOTELS TO VILLAS OUR EXPERIENCED STAFF CAN MEET ANY OF YOUR NEEDS!
JAMAICA'S #1 SPRING BREAK COMPANY!!
Don't miss out on this year's hottest destination! Our packages are proven to be the best! Trips include Roundtrip Airfare, Hotel accommodations for 7 nights, Roundtrip Transfers, Hotel Taxes & Gratuities, many discounts, FREE APPLETON Rum Parties and much more!!
WE ALSO HAVE CANCUN AVAILABLE!!
For The Lowest Prices & The Best Trips, Call
Jill @ 253-4253
Sun Splash Tours 1-800-426-7710

Information Data Bank
At Whitmore



is here to give direction at a large and seemingly complex university.

2nd Floor, Whitmore Lobby 545-1555

Arts & Living

Retro-Western Unforgiven rides again

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

With a sterling script, a solid cast (heavy on the testosterone) and some dazzling pop Western imagery, Clint Eastwood's morality play Unforgiven proved to be a late summer hit with critics and audiences alike. When Eastwood's revisionist Western cleaned up at the L.A. Film Critics Awards (Best Picture, Actor, Director, etc.) and at the Oscar nominations (nine in all), Warner Bros. has re-released the film, anticipating a heavily favored Oscar landslide and some extra box office bucks.

Eastwood plays an ex-gunman for hire who comes out of retirement (for the right price) to avenge the attack on a prostitute. He brings along his former partner in crime (Morgan Freeman) and a young upstart known as the Schofield Kid (Jaimez Woolvett). Gene Hackman turns in an Oscar worthy performance as the sheriff in the town where the attack happened.

It's the engrossing moral angle of David Webb Peoples' (Hero) Oscar-nominated screenplay that emerges as the biggest winner here. This is a far cry from the strict good vs. evil Western moral structure Hollywood Westerns usually enjoy. In the end, we're not sure whether Eastwood's character's actions were all that right or decidedly wrong.

Unforgiven may raise many more questions than it actually answers, but Eastwood (as a director) has never shied away from complex themes. After Bird and White Hunter, Black Heart, Eastwood here seems the most in command of his text and its repercussions. And the fact that he takes time with both his characters and the narrative is a breath of fresh air in a medium almost committed to slam-bam plots and breezy paces.

Eastwood lays on the panoramic vistas in Unforgiven, yet it never seems excessive or indicative of structural emptiness (see Dances With Wolves, or better yet, don't). Unforgiven is a lot more than eyeball deep — it takes an established genre and manipulates its construction — never retreating from the complicated issues it brings up. Basically, it never takes the easy way out.

Alas, there are some problems with Unforgiven. In the way of all-male ensemble acting, I'd go for another intricate cast of amoral characters from Glengarry Glen Ross. Here, an erratic cast — ranging from routine to superb — snags at the core of the film. It takes away subtle things that a more even cast may have attained.

I was most surprised by Eastwood's nomination for Best Actor. He's a solid center to Unforgiven, but Eastwood has played this stoic role before, many times in fact, and there's nothing new here to suggest a grand leap in the acting department. To quote Christopher Hampton, "One does not applaud the tenor for clearing his throat."

Morgan Freeman, who is getting in a certain rut playing sidekicks to white heroes, is adequate and nothing more. Much better is Richard Harris (The Field), who injects his small role with some deeply hidden pathos.

Gene Hackman, though, quietly steals the show from Eastwood and company in a role that could've been easily been played as a straight villain. But Hackman, who is consistently great in just about every film he does, brings out the best amoral shadings out of Peoples' script and Eastwood's visuals. It's the very definition of supporting performance, and Oscar-nominated Hackman should rightfully walk away with the statuette come Awards night.

There are a lot of very fine things about Unforgiven. Its breathtaking scenery is matched by its tough characterizations. While the cast has a hard time keeping up with each other, its praises outweigh its faults.

Deliberately paced with an eye for detail, Eastwood has crafted a Western for the 90s. It may not be worthy of an Academy Award for Best Picture (I'm still hoping for a Crying Game upset), Unforgiven is certainly worth catching — especially on the big screen — where you enjoy every inch of Eastwood's marvelous vision. B+

Army of Darkness — In this poor and very loosely based sequel to Sam Raimi's clever and funny horror/comedy, Evil Dead 2, Raimi lays on the groovy special effects and lets everything else fall flat. This time, our intrepid hero (Bruce Campbell) is blasted to the past, where he must battle with the Book of the Dead or something. Raimi lets the anachronisms fly — too bad the jokes don't.

From its stale premise and unispired gags, Army of Darkness feels long and boring, even though it's only 80 minutes. Raimi has always been an inventive director — I was a big fan of Darkman's comic book jokiness — but here, the special effects people deserve the most credit.

Strictly for really, really, really, diehard fans of Raimi and no one more, Army of Darkness is a limp retread of gags that worked in Evil Dead 2 but don't here. C

Synaesthesia raises Dead in the Hatch

By KEVIN COONEY
Collegian Correspondent

Synaesthesia
The Hatch
Feb. 18

The band from the hill, Synaesthesia mesmerized the crowd at the Hatch on Thursday night with more than two hours of incredible music.

If you, have not seen or heard or loved these guys, I would suggest you check them out.

They kicked their show off with an abridged version of "Fire on the Mountain," due to some lyrical anaesthesia. Next came the long-awaited, beloved "Whipping Post."

This was truly awesome.

The drumming duo provided for a true Allman-esque feeling, and this was furthered by the duelling guitar solos at the end.

The drumming duo provided for a true Allman-esque feeling, and this was furthered by the duelling guitar solos at the end.

If you closed your eyes, you imagined that you were at the Fillmore East in 1971.

Hell, I was hoping that this version of the song would last 20 or more minutes.

Also in the repertoire is Santana's "Black Magic Woman," which was performed to perfection.

Other Dead selections included "Eyes," "Franklin's" and "The Other One," all of which sound genuine.

The most surprising song was Floyd's "Fearless." This was the first time I've heard them play this one, and it certainly went over well.

My compliments to the additional singers that were used throughout the show.

The numerous originals which were played all sounded good, including the debut tunes.

Synaesthesia finished with what is, by far, their strongest creation, "Days of Leisure."

This song is awesome, and in my opinion, the best example of their originality and ability.

All six members of the band are extremely talented.

The drummers are a unique pair, and seem to work off of the same brain which sits between them in a jar.

Synaesthesia is one of the premier bands here at the university.

It would be worth your while to climb the hill to Butterfield and see them at their next gig.

Two jazz legends hit NoHo

By GREG AYMIE
Collegian Correspondent

Two legendary jazz performers are coming to the Iron Horse Music Hall this week. First, The John Scofield Quartet will perform Tuesday, Feb. 23 at 7 p.m. Then, on Friday, Feb. 26 at 7 p.m., vibraphonist Gary Burton will take the stage accompanied by Japanese pianist, Makoto Ozone.

Guitarist John Scofield's latest album, Grace Under Pressure, is "an unabashed celebration of the electric guitar," says Downbeat writer, Bill Milkowski. Scofield has worked with Charles Mingus, Larry Coryell, Bill Cosby, Miles Davis, as well as Gary Burton. Scofield helped Burton out with four tracks off of the Six Pack album, released last year.

Scofield will bring his unique style to the stage with friends and members of the quartet Joe Lovano, Dennis Irwin, and Bill Stewart. Scofield has played in a variety of groups, from a summertime tribute concert in '92 with Miles Davis and John McLaughlin, to a distinctive jazz trio in the late '70s through early '80s featuring bassist Steve Swallow and drummer Adam Nussbaum.

His style of playing is difficult to describe, even for himself. "Its not bebop, its not free jazz, its not funk, its not second-line New Orleans, and its not bossa nova; but its really kind of a lot of that stuff," Scofield said in a November of '90 interview with Downbeat magazine.

Scofield's guitar playing has received much attention from critics. Writer, John Ephland said, "Arguably the most imitated jazz guitarist today. . .yet to call Sco a bonafide jazz guitarist isn't entirely accurate."

Album after album, one good review after another, Scofield's guitar style is in the spotlight, yet he stresses "group interplay," not solo after solo. Scofield said in a '90 interview with Downbeat magazine, "You know why that 'guitar hero' thing happens? Because there is no interplay with the rest of the band. Group interplay is primary."

Gary Burton's career as a vibraphonist is no less prolific. Burton, a dear friend and former teacher of John Scofield, taught himself how to play the vibraphone, actually creating an entirely new style of playing which utilizes four mallets.

Born in Anderson, Indiana, Burton's roots include the likes of the George Shearings Quintet and Stan Getz's Quartet. Burton has played with many people, the most notable being pianist, Chick Corea, but he also made many albums on his own, including the Grammy Award winning Alone At Last.

Both shows start at 7 p.m. For ticket information call the Northampton Box Office. The Iron Horse Music Hall is located at 20 Center Street in Northampton.

COURTESY PATTI PERRET

John Scofield will bring his genius to the Iron Horse stage with support from Joe Lovano, Dennis Irwin, and Bill Stewart tonight at 7 p.m.

Third World Affairs

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Overpopulated urban areas destroy Brazil from within

Brazilians commonly claim that God made the rest of the world in six days, and lavished the seventh on Rio. And with good reason. Rio is one of a handful of cities whose beauty leaves you spellbound and whose distinguishing landmarks are immediately recognizable.

What the Eiffel Tower is to Paris and the Statue of Liberty is to New York; that is what the majestic statue of Christ the Redeemer is to Rio — with this difference: in Rio, the man-made is magnified by the grandiosity of the natural setting.

Rio is one of the three cities in the world, along with Hong Kong and San Francisco, possessing a natural beauty that surpasses anything the human expertise could attempt to build.

However, there is more to Rio today than the Sugarloafs, hotels, restaurants, nightlife, and the Carnival. Unfortunately, according to a variety of sources, Rio is one of the most dangerous cities in the world, and reaching crisis proportions.

The statistics are staggering. Since 1980, murders have tripled to the point where Rio has a murder rate four times that of New York, car robberies have also tripled to 45,000 per year, or 120 per day, and the new craze in the city is no longer the lambada, but kidnappings.

In a country caught in a depression since the military gave up power eight years ago, kidnapping has become of the few growth industries in Brazil and the "in" crime of the '90s — replacing bank robberies and apartment holdups, which were the most popular crimes of the past decade. Many Cariocas, as the natives of Rio are called, often joke that the famous Christ Statue's hands should be facing up instead of reaching out.

Presently the administration of Itamar Franco, Brazil's new President, is focusing on solving the kidnapping rage that has taken hold of the country, and especially Rio. To prevent these kidnappings, Franco has imposed penalties on the abductors and their accomplices.

Also, people failing to report abductions will be liable to legal action. The assets of the victims and their relatives (up to four times removed) will be embargoed as to prevent payment of ransom and hopefully deter potential kidnappers. Kidnapping and ransom insurance policies have also been banned by the government in Brasilia.

Through November of 1992, 146 abductions were reported in Rio alone, compared to 91 for the entire previous year. The only positive aspect of the kidnapping rage is that 70 new security companies have recently risen and consequently employed 50,000 people.

Chris
ROGERS

Who have the police and the newspapers identified as the abductors and potential victims? The kidnappers come from well- organized criminal groups who deal almost exclusively with drug trafficking and originate from the favelas, or shanty towns, that surround Rio, and are one its most recognizable sights.

Some of the favelas, such as Rocinha, have populations in excess of 300,000 people who leave without a sewage system or electricity and little or no political representation or economic hope.

The kidnap victims, who in 1990 paid $30 million in ransom, are the logical groups of people in a society distinguished by a tremendous discrepancy in wealth.

Foreign businessmen, Germans in particular, are unofficially the number one target along with local doctors, dentists, lawyers, successful businessmen. Over the last year, the victims have included the owner of a supermarket chain, a Coca-Cola bottler, a famous clothing designer, and nearly XuXu, one of Brazil's biggest superstars.

For XuXu it has gotten so dangerous that she never goes anywhere without her eight full-time body guards and has bought a second apartment in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Affluent Brazilians have sent their children overseas for schooling, bought inexpensive cars, or armored their luxury automobiles, and hired bodyguards to protect themselves. Anti- kidnapping classes have begun forming and charge up to $1,200 a month to join.

The less dangerous crimes that use to characterize Rio still exist but are practically not newsworthy compared to the amount of kidnapping that takes place in present day Rio.

The "smaller" criminals like muggers exist in numbers but are not interested in harming their victims. That would be the equivalent of a farmer hurting his cow — muggers do not want to lose their victims to smaller cities or the suburbs.

Tourists going to Rio have started referring to the muggings and purse-snatchings as a "tourist-tax" you must pay to enjoy the city's beaches and nightlife.

The new rule of thumb for tourists includes carrying a photocopy of your passport, carrying cash and credit cards, without a wallet, in your front pocket, no car renting — after all, carjacking was invented in Rio, and no flashing of cash. This is common knowledge in a country where the minimum monthly wage is $75.

Although the task of improving the safety of Rio's streets is monumental and looks to be a few decades away before it can be solved through economic stability and a viable educational system, Rio remains one of the great cities of the world for beaches, nightlife, the uniqueness of its Carnival, and its natural splendor which can be admired while standing next to the statue of Christ the Redeemer whose hands still remain outstretched — not up; contrary to what some pessimistic Cariocas believe.

Chistopher Rogers is a Collegian staff member.

TWA editor looks to community

This is the first Third World Affairs page to be printed this semester and also my very first opportunity to remind all of you that this page is suffering tremendously from the lack of writers. As an editor, part of my job entails recruiting new writers. I have contacted many people regarding this issue and I have run ads in the Collegian calling for participation. The reply has been very scarce.

Inês
VIEIRA

I believe that this page was created as an tool for the Third World community to use. As an editor with the help of one writer, who is not from a Third World country, I do not feel that this goal can be achieved to its full potential. The Third World community on this campus consists of an impressive number of members, each with a different experience or idea to share with theirs and other communities that can only benefit from the multiculturalism UMass is proud of.

Many people say they are not willing to write for this page due to the political conflicts that occurred in the past. My only comment regarding this view is that true representation can only come about through participation, and since the vehicle for this is available, the next crucial step to take is to take advantage of it.

I am urging all students who are from a Third World country, and anybody else who is interested in writing for this page, to contact me, so that the Third World Affairs Page can achieve its goal, and serve to represent and inform this campus.

Ines Vieira is the Collegian Third World Affairs editor.

United Nations plans rebuilding of Somalia

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS
Associated Press

It will take at least $250 million in U.N. projects just to start rebuilding Somalia, according to a draft proposal by the international body.

The wish list obtained by the Associated Press on Sunday, includes projects to restore water systems, schools, agriculture and health care, and promises to request further aide later this year.

It says success depends on allied forces continuing to maintain security in the lawless country.

U.N. officials are to present a final version of the report to a conference of donor nations on March 11, in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. An aid package should boost peace talks between rival Somali factions scheduled for four days later.

"Somalia as a nation and society lies in ruins," said the report, which estimates that up to 500,000 people died last year of starvation or disease, while clan warfare raged in several parts of the country.

Yesterday, an estimated 1.5 million Somalis remain at great risk and up to three times that number need some form of assistance, the report says. The largest request by U.N. agencies is $92.2 million for helping refugees, followed by $41.2 million for bringing in food. Employment and farming programs should each cost $20 million, and education $7.6 million.

While $253 million is needed now, "Further funds should be earmarked by donors for disbursement in the course of the year," says the report, titled "Relief and Rehabilitation Program for Somalia."

The Third World Affairs page is looking for new writers.

Any undergraduate or graduate students interested in writing, please contact Inês Vieira at the Collegian, 113 Campus Center.

The Massachusetts Daily
COLLEGIAN
Be a part of New England's Largest College Daily

Flexibility.

Do you want to be working after graduation or living at home?

If the answer is working, then flexibility on the job is a must. Employers want people with lots of different skills– not just a couple.

At the Collegian you can gain the experience you will need to be a competitor in today's job market. There are many opportunities at the Collegian. There is a diverse News Staff, a skilled Graphics Department as well as a motivated Business Staff.

If you're interested in becoming a part of our organization contact the Collegian at 113 Campus Center.

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

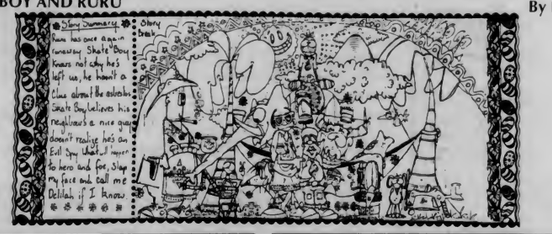
JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

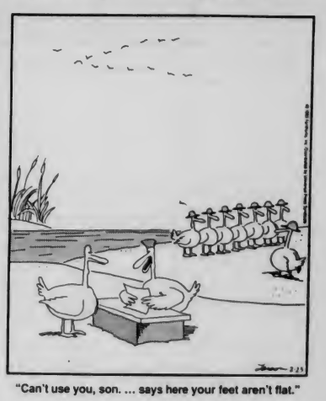
PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT



THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON



"Can't use you, son. ... says here your feet aren't flat."

Quote of the Day

"I take a simple view of life – keep your eyes open and get on with it."
– Sir Laurence Olivier

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An older person begins to appreciate your friendship and generosity. You will find this person enduringly loyal. Indulge in happy memories when you need them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may feel slightly out of kilter emotionally. Stick to routine chores early in the day. A financial situation improves with the arrival of the mail. A new friend displays bits of temper.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be planning to do something special tonight. Your poise and charm will win you many compliments. Share expenses if dining out in a pricey restaurant.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be practical. Face up to the reality of an unhappy situation and take steps to remedy it. Simple; you may be in for a pleasant surprise tonight. A change of scenery is favored.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your powers of observation will serve you well in a puzzling work or family situation. Member of opposite sex seems overly materialistic. You learn about the future by looking at the past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Others make new demands today. Influential people are willing to make concessions, but there could be strings attached. You may want to review the situation before committing yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look before you leap! Even your best financial guess might not bridge the chasm now. Resist the urge to merge funds. Write letters, make key appointments and think positive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Working partnership are fine, provided you avoid forcing issues. Do not antagonize someone with radical ideas. Some inside information comes your way. Use it wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Unusual ideas or specialized knowledge could lead you to financial speculation. Avoid going overboard. Your work is serious yet enjoyable. Remain true to old values and routines.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can boost your financial security by taking a complete inventory of your assets now. Work runs smoothly. You have a knack for recycling clever ideas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New financial rewards are part of the picture. Share the wealth with your loved ones. Teamwork will provide best results. Be receptive to suggestions.

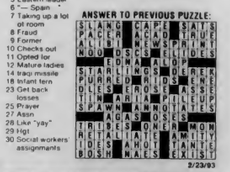
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Behind the scenes talks could lead an item of real value. The communication lines light up this afternoon and evening.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

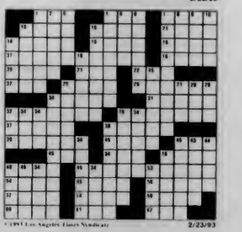
ACROSS
1 "Silence of — Lambs"
4 Alice's boss at the diner
7 Mule or pump
11 Boast about
12 One of the Three Bears
13 Shetland —
14 Do a barber's job
15 Like the desert
16 Sprint
17 Magazine's lead article
19 Former spouses
20 — friendly
21 In favor of
22 — pro nobis
24 State south of N.J.
25 12:00
26 Hat style
30 Podiatrist's concern
31 Reel component
32 Acts
35 Lack of water
37 Come up
38 Stream fish
39 Kale, spinach, etc.
41 Lion tamer's prop
42 — none
45 "Now I — me down to sleep"
46 Certain vans: Abbr.
47 Moora of the movies
48 Some food orders
51 Where one can get the score?
54 Cadabra lead-in
55 Symbol of sadness
56 From County Cork
57 Gimman song
58 Rope parts
59 Cincinnati baseball team
60 Openers
61 Manuscripts: Abbr.
62 Prior to

DOWN
1 Tour
2 Hang over
3 Pitcher
4 Strands
5 Eastern leader
6 "— Span."
7 Taking up a lot of room
8 Fraud
9 Former
10 Checks out
11 Opted for
12 Mature ladies
14 Iraqi missile
18 Infant tern
23 Get back losses
25 Prayer
27 Assn.
28 Like "yay"
29 Hgt.
30 Social workers' assignments
32 Purse
33 Go wrong
34 Gardening tool
35 Cattle herders
36 Perch
38 Duds
40 Solar —
42 Next to
43 Wrong
44 Wealthy
47 Artist Albrecht —
48 Make a speech
49 Off-Broadway award
50 "Cabaret" star Joel
52 Chicken coop matriarchs
53 Sward

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



2/23/93



© 1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/23/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jason George
Copy Editor ..... David Rivera
PhotoTechnician ..... Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor ..... Mike Carvalho
Production ..... Michele Bakis, Sandy Bogage and the ghost of Jack McKay

Menu

LUNCH
Chicken Pucks
Bagel Dog
BASICS LUNCH
Chicken Pucks
Flat Bread Sandwich

DINNER
New England Night
Roast Turkey/Gravy
Cornbread Stuffing
Cranberry Sauce
or Breaded Scallops

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ women's gymnastics

continued from page 12

One key part of college athletics is overcoming adversity, and Marshall said she almost left gymnastics because it almost became just too much.

"There was a time that I wanted to quit after I had knee surgery in high school. It was a battle coming back, but once you've done the sport, you are always drawn back to it," Marshall said.

May, like her teammate and roommate Marshall, had to overcome injury during her career. She broke her foot last season, and the journey back changed her, making her stronger.

"I was stronger after I came back [from the injury]. The team really needed someone on beam, so I had to be stronger," May said.

When these women leave not only the mat but the University itself, they will be missed for more than just gymnastics, according to their coach and teammates, especially the freshmen.

"L.B. takes some really funny falls. As far as entertainment value in the gym, when you see her fly off the bars, she's like a Muppet," Mitchell said. "Abby is very cynical and can make a comment with a straight face, and it comes out as a joke.

"She wouldn't think of it as a joke. It just cracks us up. With Tammy, we'll lose a smile that just doesn't stop. It is constantly there," Mitchell said.

"They've helped me adjust to the new environment, and how club gymnastics is different than college gymnastics," freshman Shaheda Keels said.

"They just prepare me mentally — I'm just a freshman, and I don't know what to do around here, so they tell me what to do," freshman Ruth Reeves said.

"I was really scared coming into this season because I was never around people this good before. The seniors really helped me a lot — Abby helped me out a lot on beam, and L.B. was really helpful. Tammy is like a role model," said freshman Lisa Coyne.

"Whenever we need help, they are always there. Whatever we needed, whether it was with gymnastics, or classes, the seniors were there for us," said freshman Leann Zavotka.

Marshall and May will graduate after this semester, and Cronen will do so in the fall. Marshall is applying to graduate school, and has a couple of job opportunities, but said she feels it is "inevitable" that she will be coaching gymnastics someday.

May is moving to Washington D.C. to live with her sister. She will look for a job in her field, but coaching may be in the future for her as well. Cronen will be looking ahead to continuing her education as well when she leaves the University, but not right away.

The seniors had their own opportunity to talk about each other, and expressed how much each of their teammates meant to the team.

"Lisa-Beth brings consistency to the team. You could always rely on L.B. to compete in any event, even beam," May said. "She doesn't compete on beam, but I think if she had to, she would."

"I was always amazed at the things Tammy would do in the meet. It's not that she didn't work out, because she did. She would just show up at meets and do things that you wouldn't expect out of her sometimes," Cronen said.

"There are just too many words to describe them [May and Cronen] and the friendships we've developed over the past four years," Marshall said.

This long road these three Minutewomen traveled may all come to an end in the regionals held in Missouri, but their coach knows that it was all worth it.

"They were the first. They've seen where we started, and where we are right now. We've all traveled down the road together. It was definitely not an easy one. I think when they look back at it, it was worth it.

"As far as replacing the talent in the gym, we are all replaceable. It is the personalities that are going to be missed," Mitchell said.

SPORTS NOTICE

Student activity cards will be handed out Wednesday, February 24 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage. Tickets for the men's basketball game against St. Bonaventure (March 1) and St. Joseph's (March 4) will be given out Thursday at 7 a.m. at the Cage.

Students are advised that activity cards will not be given out Thursday and students without activity cards will not be allowed to pick up tickets.

DON'S AUTO SERVICE 323-7762

91 Chevy Lumina
90 Chevy Corsica 4 cyl
90 Chevy Lumina V6
90 Olds Siera 4 cyl
90 Buick Century 6 cyl
90 Plymouth Sundance 4 cyl 5 speed
89 Chevy Silverado V8 4 wheel drive
89 Dodge Dynasty 4 cyl
89 Mercury Topaz 4 cyl
89 Chevy Cavalier 4 cyl
88 Dodge Caravan SE V6-7 passanger
88 Dodge Shadow 4 cyl
87 Chrysler Laburon 4 cyl Turbo
86 Chevy Capris V6 very low miles
86 Olds Delta Brougham V6
86 Buick Somerset 6 cyl
86 Dodge Caravan LE 7 passanger 4 cyl
86 Toyota Pick up 4 cyl 5 speed
85 Subaru Wagon 4 cyl 5 spped 4 wheel drive
85 Chevy Celebrity 4 cyl
85 Plymouth Turismo 4 cyl 4 speed
85 Chevy Chevette 2 door
85 Olds Siera 6 cyl
84 Chevy Celebrity 6 cyl
84 Buick Century 4 cyl
84 Mercury Lynx 4 cyl 4 speed
82 Ford Crown Victoria Wagon V8
82 Chevy Celebrity 6 cyl
82 Chevy S10 Pick up 4 cyl 4 speed

All cars are automatic with power steering and power brakes unless otherwise specified.

141 Sargeant St., Rt.9 • Belchertown

Estudiantes de Habla Hispana
Centro de Salud Mental
Universidad de Massachusetts en Amherst

Esta ofreciendo la oportunidad de unirte a un grupo donde exploraremos nuestras relaciones con miembros de nuestras familias. Muchas veces esas relaciones no fueron funcionales y hemos desarrollado sentimientos hacia ellas.

Ven, unete a nosotros, y en un amblente sano y confidencial convercemos.

Llama al 545-2337 y pide una cita para conocer de ti y para tu conocer la lider del grupo y lo que ella puede ofrecerte.

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA
One Free Tanning Visit with a Haircut
(just mention this ad)
expires 2/27/93

Collegian Advertising It Works! 545-3500

Have you hugged 19,000 copies today? Collegian 545-3500

New Management
SOUTHWOOD APARTMENTS & TOWNHOUSES

1	Bdrm	$360
2	Bdrm from	$430
3	Bdrm	$690
4	Bdrm	$880

- Free Bus
- Hot Water incl.
- Fully Carpeted
- Dining Room
- Tennis Court
- No Pets

Call 1-413-253-4055

Submit to Reckoning a non-fiction prose & poetry publication

send prose, poetry, and black & white photos to Hampshire College Box 367 questions; call Jeff Sharlot or Lorraine Strauss at 549-4600 x297

deadline Friday March 5

FLY TO THE BEACHES OF FLORIDA

Fly to Warm Sunny Florida
Spring Break
ONLY $129 ONE WAY

Daily non-stop jet air carrier service from Worcester to West Palm Beach, Florida beginning March 1. For complete information, schedules and advanced ticket purchasing, call our toll free number from 8:00 am to 8:00 pm today!

THE Florida SHUTTLE A PUBLIC CHARTER OPERATOR

"Your New England / Florida Connection."

1-800-FLY-SOUTH
1-800-359-7688

*The Florida Shuttle is a public charter operator with Direct Air Carrier Service Provided by Miami Air with Boeing 727s. Optional services include food and drink service for sale on board the aircraft and a $10 charge for carry-on baggage over and above our carry-on policy. For further information, refer to the required operator passenger contract.

HATCH BAR ENTERTAINMENT

Monday Feb. 22
The Big Band Sound of
JEFF HOLMES
& his 16 Piece Blend of Jazz & Swing

Tuesday Feb. 23
Come & Dance to the Sounds of SELECTA "Obie One" / DJ ZO PETE & the Hot R&B & Hip Hop Beats of

Thursday Feb. 25
NEW HORIZONS
They're back - hotter than ever - best reggae anywhere...Ya Mann

Friday Feb. 26
The Funky Hot Rock of
THE BOMBASTICS

Come Visit Our Taco Bar 4-8pm Mon.-Thurs.
Full Bar
Bud Natural Lite Pitchers, Drink Specials, Pizzas & More!
Selection of Fresh Made Pasta Dinners 'til 9PM

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

Fencing Results from New Englands:

Individual Men:
Craig Andrew, a senior, 5th place - Men's Sabre
Jason Trunnel, a freshman, 4th place - Men's Foil
John Weiss, a junior, 5th place - Men's Foil
Weiss and Trunnel, 2nd place - 2 Man Foil Team
James Butrym, a junior, 4th place - Men's Epee
Edward Roaf, a senior, 5th place - Men's Epee
Butrym and Roaf, 1st place - 2 Man Epee Team

Individual Women:
Mariah Howland, a freshman, 3rd place - Women's Epee
Jen Ray, a junior, 4th place - Women's Epee
Kathy Rudick, a senior, 7th place - Women's Foil

Men's Team:	Women's Team:
1. Brown	1. Wellesley
2. UMass	2. M.I.T.
3. M.I.T.	3. UNH
4. Tufts	4. BC
5. UNH	5. UMass

■ tidbits

continued from page 12

road games include Temple guard Rick Brunson at the St. Joseph's game and Boston Celtic President Arnold "Red" Auerbach at the George Washington game.

• Prior to the St. Joe's game, program hawkers were pitching this sales line — "Get your program to tonight's big upset." The Minutemen went on to win 81-69.

• No UMass signees were selected to participate in the McDonald's High School All-American game. However the McDonald's team is selected as much for prior hype as anything else.

Hartford (Conn.) Public High's 6-11 Marcus Camby lost out because he is playing his first year of high school basketball. Camby had previously been ruled academically ineligible as a sophomore and was forced to sit out his junior season after transferring to Public last season.

Philadelphia's Tyrone Weeks, a 6-6 forward, has been overshadowed by cross town rival Rasheed Wallace, a 6-11 big man, considered to be the top recruit in the nation. However, one Philadelphia sports writer described Weeks, a 6-6 forward, as "just as dominating and just as talented of a player as Wallace."

• Former Minuteman Jim McCoy, UMass' all-time leading scorer, is currently tearing up a professional league in Sweden. McCoy, reportedly, will return to campus after the season, in order to finish up some credits he needs to graduate.

UMass Sports in the Collegian –
Technically Speaking... it doesn't get any better...

ONE WAY SCREEN DESIGN
T-Shirts • Sweats • Boxers
Posters • Bumper Stickers
WE DO IT ALL!
Full Art Department, Free Delivery
584-0091
47 East Street, Hadley
5% OFF all orders with this coupon

ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA

All Who Are Eligible For Membership To Alpha Lambda Delta Must Pay Dues By February 26th.

Dues can be paid at
The Dean of Students Office.
227 Whitmore, 545-2684

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT
is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS

Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3
Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community
for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, Feb 24, 25, 26

Open house at the North Fire Station, Februrary 26, 5:00p.m.
Call 549-5419

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

A Freebie! Learn to play bridge – FREE! SOM 101 Wed. 2/24/93 5:30 pm 7:30 pm FREE T-shirt & book.

ATTENTION WILDLIFERS! Rescheduled meeting Tuesday Feb. 23 7pm Holdsworth 203 Speaker: Intern for school for Field Studies, Kenya

Chess Club Tuesday Nights 7-11 pm in Bluewall All are welcome!

Student Union Day! Wednesday, February 24 from 12-4 WATCH OUT FOR FLYING T-SHIRTS! Come to the Student Union building and enjoy music in the Hatch, Earthfoods and Cape Cod Lounge! Participate in craft demonstrations and other open house activities. Get coupons for FREE sodas and goodies. All events are FREE! Brought to you by the Division of Student Activities!

UPC General Committee Meeting: Tonight 2/23 at 6:00 pm in Campus Center Room 911. Help us bring you concerts! Everyone is welcome.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Europe this Summer! Only $189! Jet there anytime for $189! Reported in Let's Go! and NY Times. Caribbean $189 rt air to somewhere sunny, California - $129 one way either way. AIRHITCH @ 212-864-2000

History Honors Society Phi Alpha Theta Is now accepting applications Applications are available in Herter 808 ,Both Undergraduate and graduate students.

PreVet AnSci Club Meeting Tue Feb 23 Sled dog demo Paige 202 6 pm

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Escort '87 No rust runs great Must sell $2300/B O. Call 665-2350

83 VW Rebbit 97000 mi GOOD COND. $500 willing to negotiate Call Doug 256-4253

COLLEGE PIZZA

SPRING SPECIAL Small Cheese $3.50 Large Cheese $5.99 1 or 2 toppings add $1 549-6098 549-8073

ENTERTAINMENT

Bands: We Want You In the SU Ballroom In April Call 6-4812 or 253-9707

FOR RENT

Cape Cod – group summer rentals – Waterfront Houses Falmouth Area 508-477-6000

112 Town House Apartment available for rent $267.50 available immediately to be shared with male graduate student 545-6744 or 665-2810 E

Room downtown. Quiet, private; lease through Aug.; $350/mo inclusive 253-4236 9am - 9pm

FOR SALE

Beatles.

Metallica Photos from Mulliins Show 8x10, 11x14. Tape covers. Call 253-9794 after 7 pm. Josh.

OW Ticket To Los Angeles Use by 3/10 $125 413-586-7865

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

Camp Trucking is interviewing for summer positions during spring break. Individuals will learn different phases of business management, handle phones, and have general office assignments. File-maker Pro and Macintosh experience helpful. $7/hr. Relaxed atmosphere. Call 508-853-1744 before March 1.

GREAT SUMMER OPPORTUNITY Jewish co-ed residential camp seeks counselors and specialists. Capital Camps, located in the beautiful Catoctin Mountains, one hour from Washington, D.C. offers tennis, water sports, nature arts, video, gymnastics, radio, drama, photo, etc. If you are interested in the challenges and excitement of working with campers and excitement of working with campers in grades 3-10, we want you on our team. GOOD SALARIES, GREAT FUN! Our director will be at the Camp Fair on March 2. For more information and an appointment, call 1-800-229-7852.

Greeks and Clubs raise a cool $1000 in just one week! Plus $1000 for the member who calls! And a free Igloo Cooler if you qualify. Call 1-800-932-0528, ext. 65

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000 - $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Postal Jobs Available! Many positions. Great benefits. Call 1-800-436-4365 ext. p-3306

Summer Camp on Cape Cod Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids. Beautiful location, excellent program. Competitive Salaries. Call James, at 549-8353 for info and application

Summer jobs and internships – University Directories, the nations largest publisher of campus telephone directories (including UMass at Amherst), is interviewing goal oriented students for a challenging, full-time summer position. Gain valuable experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings $3900. Expense paid training program in Chapel Hill, NC. College credit may be available. Interviews on UMass at Amherst campus February 24th. Information and interview sign up available today at the Visitors Center or call 1-800-743-5556

INSTRUCTION

Physics and Math Tutor M.A. in Physics Experienced teaching assistant Call 256-0260

LOST

LOST! Brand new glasses grey and black plastic with silver frame. Lost in CC or Basics. Call April 8-4574

Lost Passport and important papers in brown purse with brown gloves in S&S Plastic bag Contact PRASHANT 549-9186 reward

Lost Ring – Reward Totman – Feb 1st Friendship "LTM" Call collect 508-827-4555

Lost Wire-rim glasses in the back of the Big Green American pick-up that gave me a ride to school last week. Please call 253-9794 after 5 pm. Ask for Mr. Clark

PERSONALS

Mike – THANKS FOR EVERYTHING! HAPPY BIRTHDAY! LOVE, Susan

Polly- Happy 21st! Now you can legally carry beer around the store! Love, Dawn

Poopsie 2 years ago you became my future – couldn't have asked for a more wonderful man to share my life with Happy 2 year Anniversary I love you! Melissa

Suzy M. It's your 21st birthday! Let the Birthday rituals begin! Prepare to be tortured. Steve & Ade

SPORTS CARDS

Sportstop cards Mt. Farms Mall

TRAVEL

SPRINGBREAK!! Panama and Daytona $139 and up 7 nights Beachfront deadline SOON! Call Erica 548-0223

Spring Break CANCUN, NASSAU from $299 Organize a small group for FREE trip Call 1(800) Get Sun-1

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1-800-426-7710

TAKE IT OFF!!! Spring Break '93 Best Deals Going Fast Jesse 549-7472

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Resumes, papers, theses. Laser printing, on-campus Pick up and delivery Rosemary 323-5031

WANTED

Need garage space or parking space for non-running car for about 4-5 months evening 549-0142

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women Need housing for spring semester Desire place near UMass Call Young-Mi 548-0580 or Jen 546-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 548-2296

Sports

Seniors provide leadership for Minutewomen

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

Four years ago, these members of the University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team were competing against each other just to have a chance at being where they are now.

Seniors Abby May, Lisa-Beth Cronen and Tammy Marshall began their Minutewomen careers as part of UMass head coach Alfie Mitchell's first recruiting class, setting the tone for what Mitchell's team stands for at the present time.

Both May and Cronen come from Amherst, so they have been around the University for most of their life. May, a finance major, works solely on one event for the Minutewomen, the balance beam.

Even though she had the ability to perform in all four events when she was first recruited, her best was always the beam, according to Coach Mitchell.

"Abby has always concentrated on beam because that was her strong point. She's very tall, she's got long lines, and she looks pretty, really pretty, when she works on the beam, and she has this uncanny knack of staying on," said Mitchell.

At the time of the recruiting, Mitchell had already given one scholarship to Marshall, and the team did not have much money, so they had to find women like May and Cronen to walk on for individual events.

Because of the intense competition during the walk-on try-outs that first year, May didn't even think she would be on the team come the start of the season, but according to Mitchell, he knew what type of gymnast she was.

"I knew with Abby that I was getting someone who was going to stay on beam, because I knew her coach. Beam is a very important event, so that was a big asset," Mitchell said.

Cronen, a sociology major, had been recruited by Rhode Island, New Hampshire and UMass, and cites Mitchell as one of the reasons she decided to stay in Amherst.

"I grew up in Amherst, so I had always seen the campus. It looked nice from the outside. When it came down to it, the other two coaches were downright rude to me, and I knew Alfie had always been nice to me, so I came here," said Cronen.

Cronen and May spent their early careers together in the same club, and what they bring to the team is very similar.

"As far as L.B. goes, she brings to bars what Abby brings to beam. L.B. is very consistent on bars," Mitchell said. "I put her in a category with money — the girl is as good as money when it comes to her event."

BETH KATE / COLLEGIAN

Seniors Lisa-Beth Cronen, Tammy Marshall, and Abby May (from left to right) lead the University of Massachusetts' women's gymnastics team into Wednesday's meet with Springfield College.

Marshall, from Hicksville, New York, has been in gymnastics since she was eight years old, when her mother put her in a dancing school, before moving on to gymnastics. She is the NCAA's defending national champion on the vault, and is a threat for the all-around title in every meet UMass competes in.

"Tammy — what has not been said about this young lady," Mitchell said. "Gymnastically, you've got all that. As far as a person, Tammy is a fun person to be around.

"I've only seen her cry, maybe, two times. Two times in all the years she's been here... As far as crying, if it gets to her, she won't let you know."

Turn to WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS, page 11

Hockey coach sought

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts may have a new head hockey coach before too long.

In a story in the Feb. 14 Boston Sunday Globe, it was reported the search committee slimmed the list to three candidates: Springfield Indians head coach Jay Leach, Boston College assistant coach Joe Mallon and St. Lawrence head coach Joe Marsh. Two of the men who were contacted seem interested in the job.

Leach, who has guided the Indians, an affiliate of the Hartford Whalers, to a fourth place 20-28-9 record thus far, said he could not comment about the job.

Leach did, however, comment on the William D. Mullins Memorial Center, which will be the hockey team's home.

"I've seen the Mullins Center — I've never seen anything like it," Leach said. "You can be blind, crippled and crazy and still recruit there."

Marsh has been the head coach of St. Lawrence for eight years, and has a 171-88-9 record. He is the school's first coach to achieve four consecutive 20-win seasons.

Associate athletic director and search committee chair Al Rufe said a short list of candidates has been submitted to athletic director Bob Marcum. Marcum, who is currently out of town, has the discretion to interview and choose the coach.

"The list is less than five people, that's all I can say," Rufe said. "We've had 68 nominations or applications."

The search committee consisted of three UMass coaches — football coach Mike Hodges, head women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien and associate head men's basketball coach Bill Bayno. Five other members made up of faculty and staff helped choose the candidates.

The hockey team will play a Division II schedule for next year, and then attempt to move into Hockey East and Division I by 1995-96. Marsh said the timetable is perfect.

"The sooner the better," he said. "You've got to take your licks, but the sooner you get it out of the way, the better it is for recruiting."

"You've got all of Massachusetts to draw from. It's just a tremendous amount of talent, a great talent pool."

Mallon did not return the Collegian's phone calls.

Garden XMas tournament possible for UMass hoop

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

College basketball talk has been heating up the airwaves on WEEI (590 AM), Boston's all-sports radio station.

The hottest topic of conversation has been the possibility of setting up an annual Christmas tournament, to be held in the Boston Garden, which would bring four Massachusetts teams together.

WEEI personality Eddie Andelman has been the loudest proponent of the tournament, which would be modeled after the Beanpot, a college hockey tournament held in the Garden each February.

The participants would be Massachusetts, Boston College, Holy Cross and Northeastern, four of the Bay State's six Division 1 basketball programs (Harvard and Boston University are the other two).

While the possibility of a tournament final between BC and UMass is intriguing, the tournament is nowhere near occurring.

First of all, UMass already hosts a Christmas tournament, the Abdow's Hall of Fame Classic, held in Springfield. While not as exciting, at least on paper, as Andelman's proposal, the Abdow's does provide UMass with the profits from two sellouts at the 9,000-seat Civic Center. At the Garden, UMass would be forced to share the gate receipts.

UMass and BC clashed in the finals of the Abdow's Tournament in 1990. The Minutemen defeated BC 83-81 in the game.

UMass, which has never lost in the Abdow's Tournament, is committed to holding the tournament through next season at the very least. Also next season, BC will participate in the prestigious Maui Classic in Hawaii, which traditionally brings some of college basketball's top teams together.

"We couldn't do it for a couple of years, but it is not out of question," Reid Oslin, the director of sports information at Boston College, said. "With 18 Big East games and some traditional rivals, it is difficult to schedule games, but BC would be interested in this."

Another obstacle is Holy Cross, which no longer offers athletic scholarships. While the Crusaders, who were defeated soundly by both BC and UMass this season, are still presently competitive, their future is uncertain.

• Faces in the crowd at recent UMass

Turn to TIDBITS, page 11

Men's track falls to Dartmouth

Minutemen take first place in 3 events, get swept in 4

By SEAN P. HAYDEN
Collegian Staff

And David reached into his bag for a stone to sling at Goliath, but the bag was empty so the giant crushed him.

That scenario should seem eerily familiar to the University of Massachusetts men's indoor track team. Ivy League champion Dartmouth wasted little time in showing Ken O'Brien's squad just who was the bigger and better team as they thumped the Minutemen 103-40. Saturday's loss drops the Minutemen to 3-5 on the dual-meet season.

The Big Green swept four events from the Minutemen — the high jump, the 200-meter run, the 800-meter run, and the 3,000-meter run. They also displayed their dominance by placing first in 15 out of the 18 events.

The three Minutemen who helped O'Brien avoid a shutout by winning their events were John Johnson in the long jump, Pat Reed in the mile and Lionel Benjamin in the 55-meter dash. Benjamin achieved a personal best in the dash with a time of 6.63 seconds.

UMass had six members take second place, led by Bart Soare's personal best throw of 46 feet, 11 inches in the 35 pound weight. Kevin Greenhalgh provided O'Brien with a nice one-two punch in the mile by taking second. Paul Doyle raced to second in the 55 meter hurdles and Kristian DiMatteo took second in the long jump. Pat Reed proved he is a double threat by following up his first in the mile with a second in the 1,000-meter run.

Rounding out the scoring for the Minutemen with their third-place finishes were DiMatteo in the long jump, Wojciehowski in the pole vault (personal best of 13 feet, 6 inches), Morrison in the 400-meter run, Rachupka in the triple jump, Greenhalgh in the 1,000-meter run, and Boilard in the 5,000-meter run.

"I didn't go up with any illusions of beating them," O'Brien said. He also said that he was just looking for an improvement from last weekend's last-place performance at the A-10 Championships and feels as though he got it from his squad.

This weekend, the Minutemen will be one of 43 schools from three divisions competing in the New England Championships being held at Boston University.

Excluding the Ivy League schools, this meet brings together every college in New England that has a men's track team. It appears to be just what the doctor ordered for the Minutemen. After being matched against the big boys for the past two weeks, the Minutemen will be a big fish in a small pond as they will be one of the top 10 teams competing this weekend.

O'Brien said he figures that the Minutemen will place anywhere from five through ten. He figures that host BU and Northeastern will be battling it out for the championship with the nod going to Northeastern because of their superior depth.

Associated Press College Basketball Top 25

	Record	Pts	Pvs
1. Indiana (63)	24-2	1,620	1
2. Kentucky (1)	20-2	1,509	2
3. North Carolina (1)	22-3	1,509	3
4. Arizona	19-2	1,423	4
5. Michigan	21-4	1,401	5
6. Florida St.	21-6	1,240	9
7. Kansas	21-4	1,401	6
8. Vanderbilt	21-4	1,125	11
9. Duke	20-5	1,103	7
10. Cincinnati	20-3	1,074	8
11. Utah	21-3	932	12
12. Wake Forest	17-5	854	10
13. UNLV	17-3	763	15
14. Seton Hall	20-6	762	16
15. Arkansas	17-6	672	13
16. Tulane	20-4	639	18
17. Purdue	15-6	537	14
18. Iowa	16-6	527	20
19. New Orleans	20-2	500	21
20. Marquette	19-4	313	24
21. Massachusetts	18-5	281	19
22. Virginia	16-6	235	23
23. Brigham Young	21-5	184	—
24. Xavier, Ohio	18-3	125	—
25. Pittsburgh	15-7	103	17

Wednesday February 24, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 84

It will be sunny today, with temps 25-30. Thursday only in the 20s.

Sports:
Four Massachusetts college hoop teams have a good shot at the NCAAs. Read about how our little state has turned into a college b-ball powerhouse. Page 12.

Local News:
Transit vans will now be available to take you and all your belongings to the library. Because you are here to study, right? Page 3.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England • Founded in 1890

ANDREA MIGLIASSI / COLLEGIAN

FROSTY, EAT YOUR HEART OUT — "Herman" the snow musician was made by members of the UMass Marching Band. (L to R) Chris Piquette, senior Pete Carney, junior Jill Richmond, senior Andy DeVivo, Herman, freshman Bill Murray, Mark Trulson, senior Mike Gaudet and junior Dan Rieder.

U.S. aims for Bosnian airdrop soon

By NANCY BENAC
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton said Tuesday the United States was considering "purely humanitarian" relief for Bosnians with no danger that America would be drawn into a deeper engagement it cannot escape.

"There's no combat implications whatever," Clinton said at the start of an hour-long Oval Office session with Boutros Boutros-Ghali.

Administration officials said the White House was working on an airdrop plan aimed at bringing food and medicine to starving Bosnians without worsening tensions in the region or endangering American military personnel.

"If we can reach an agreement, it will help, I think," Clinton said.

Asked about the risks of U.S. planes being shot at by antiaircraft artillery, Clinton said, "We think the risks are quiet small."

He rejected suggestions of the relief operation could draw the United States into a deeper engagement, saying, "not at all, because what we're discussing is very different." He said the operation under discussion was "purely humanitarian and quite limited."

Boutros-Ghali has said such an airdrop operation would be welcome only if it were under U.N. command.

Also on the agenda for the Oval Office meeting was the famine relief effort in Somalia.

The United States in anxious to turn over the operation to the United Nations and bring home most of the remaining 17,000 U.S. troops.

"We'd like to see this happen as quickly as possible but as smoothly as possible, and we'll continue to work with the United Nations to make the transition happen as quickly as possible," said press secretary Dee Dee Myers.

Stephanopoulos, asked about concerns that the Bosnian airdrops could escalate war in the former Yugoslavia, insisted that "we won't do anything to make the situation worse."

He added that the operation could be undertaken without "exceptionally high risk" to U.S military personnel.

"We don't necessarily think there'll be any additional risk involved in this kind of an operation," he said. "but beyond that, there's real suffering going on right now and we have to do what we can to help alleviate it."

A senior official said the administration hoped to avoid any need to bring in warplanes or monitoring aircraft to protect the operation by flying the relief planes above the range of antiaircraft fire.

Pentagon spokesman Bob Hall said the military would take "whatever measures. . . that we felt necessary to protect our troops." He said airdrops are undertaken only "under extreme circumstances" because road convoys are more effective at ensuring that aid reaches the needy.

Examining the rape of women

Sexual assault of women is a political tool, Dr. says

By CRYSTAL MASSEY
Special to the Collegian

Editor's Note: This is the third of a five-part series leading up to the Feb. 27 Women's Conference.

"Male violence towards women could not be as epidemic as it is without the cooperation of the entire social system - the press, police, courts, legislatures, academia, welfare agencies, the professions, and other institutions." (French, The War Against Women)

News Analysis

Economic discrimination worldwide has served to keep women and their children in poverty. Women do between two-thirds and three-fourths of the work in the world. Women produce 45 percent of the world's food, but women only receive 10 percent of the worlds income and 1 percent of the world's property (UN Conference on Women).

The things that our governments have chosen to place value on are also contributing to violence against women. In 1988, nations of the world spent more than $110.00 for every person on military expenses. This is much more than what was spent on food, water, shelter, health, and education. The majority of people in the world that are suffering from starvation are women and children.

There have been at least 207 wars fought in the 20th Century. Seventy-eight million people have died in these wars; the majority of them being women and children (Waring, If Women Counted). To seriously combat violence against women, it is necessary to fight against economic and political discrimination.

Angela Davis said, "Some of the most flagrant symptoms of social deterioration are acknowledged as serious problems only when they have assumed such epidemic proportions that they appear to defy solution. Rape is a case in point."

One out of three women will be sexually assaulted in her lifetime. One out of four women will be raped before the age of eighteen. Rape happens to women in every part of the world. Rape happens to women of every age, race, and class. Women are beaten, assaulted, mutilated, raped and killed every day, yet we still treat these crimes as if they were individual aberrations. Psychological studies of men who commit violent crimes toward women show them to be within the range of what is considered 'normal' for American men.

If we intend to stop violence toward women we must first understand the roots of that violence. We need to do more than analyze individual cases and study male psychology. We need to look at what purpose this violence serves in a society.

Rape is used by men everywhere to exert power and control over women. On Feb. 12, 1993 a group of four doctors presented a report to the United Nations Human Rights Commission about rape in Bosnia. They found that rape is currently being used as a means to terrorize and move a whole population.

"There are a lot of accounts of families refusing to

Turn to WOMEN, page 2

Author advises students ways to achieve success

By KRISTIN J. ST. JOHN
Collegian Staff

"All I ever wanted to do was find out what makes the great, great," Dennis Kimbro, author of Think And Grow Rich: A Black Experience, told people at his lecture in the Campus Center Auditorium last night.

Kimbro started out by saying of the scores of black achievers that he has interviewed, there are four aspects that they all share.

"Number one - they dream big dreams," he said. "Number two - they live life at the center. They walked to a beat of a different drum. Number three - Don't be average! Everyone remembers those who fall below the mark or those who over achieve. And number four - these individuals flat out refused to fail."

While sharing stories about his seven years of researching "why some men and women succeed and others fail and why is one individual rich and wealthy while another is poor and impoverished," Kimbro had underlying messages.

One story that stood out pertained to Lee Haney, Mr. Olympian for eight straight years. After being told that it would be ridiculous for him to strive to be a Mr. Olympian, Haney focused all of his attention to attaining that goal. After eight years, he's still holds that prestigous title. "Focus, you need to focus and you can achieve," Kimbro said.

He shared different pieces of advice that African-American achievers have told him. Boxing promoter Don King told Kimbro that "if you set yourself on fire the whole world will come and watch."

Kimbro also hit on networking, the 1993 term for law of association, especially for college students. "People don't care about you until they see how much you

Turn to SUCCESS, page 3

Seeking SGA offices

Students announce candidacy today

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

Six students have returned papers to become official candidates for the offices of Student Government Association president and student trustee.

Two students, David Nunez and Al Lizana will announce their candidacies at a press conference today at noon on the Student Union steps.

Nunez will be running for president against Kenneth Maisonet and Jennifer Fazzi. Lizana will be running against Kevin Jourdain and Jeffrey Turco for student trustee.

Elections will be held on campus March 9 and 10.

"I'm going from door to door to let people know about my candidacy and some of the issues," Nunez said.

Nunez said he met with campus organizations including the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance, the Asian American Student Association and MassPIRG.

Nunez cited reform of campus health services and more accountability of the University administration to students as issues he would target if elected.

Maisonet and Fazzi both said they were saving discussion of platform issues for the candidates' debate on Tuesday, but did comment on the need for good leadership.

Maisonet said the time is ripe for change.

"This is the time where students have the chance to move forward, but can only do that with someone who's in touch with the issues," Maisonet said. "I represent that change."

Turn to SGA, page 4

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lapo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING
It really works!
Call today! 545-3500

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, February 24

Meeting — The UMass Theatre Guild will be holding a membership meeting on Wednesday night at 7 p.m. in room 174 of the Campus Center. For more info call 545-0415.

Meeting — The UMass Black Student Union will hold a general assembly meeting in Room 805 Campus Center at 6:30 p.m.

Lecture — "Single Women in Rome: Windows, Concubines and Penitents," by Katherine Gill at 8 p.m. in the Neilson Library Browsing Room.

Thursday, February 25

Lecture — "American Popular Culture Abroad: Cultural Imperialism? Global Homogeneity? Or Bridge to Democracy?" by Benjamin Barbner at 4:15 p.m. in the Neilson Library Browsing Room.

Saturday, February 27

Dance — "Jhankar Night," presented by the South Asian Club. International Dance party to benefit an orphanage. All welcome, 10th floor Campus Center Hotel, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Auditions — UMass Theatre Guild's production of "Bedroom Farce." Held in Room 904 of the Campus Center at noon, Sunday at noon, or Sunday at 7 p.m. For more info call 545-0415.

Student Senate Update

The SGA Update is a service of the Collegian and the Student Government Association to inform students about items on the SGA agenda.

The following motions are on the agenda for debate and voting for the meeting of the Undergraduate Student Senate on Wednesday, Feb. 24, 7 p.m. in C.C. 163.

At the outset of the meeting Dr. Thomas Robinson, vice chancellor for student affairs, will address the Senate and field questions. To mark the 20th anniversary of the Legal Services Office, there is a resolution to reaffirm our support for the office, its work for the students, and our commitment to working to restore its litigation power. In addition, there is a motion to allocate funds through the senate Public Policy committee to fund Ralph Nader to speak on campus this semester.

All members of the University Community are invited to attend and speak on any motions that come up at the meeting. As the Student Senate is the representative body of all UMass undergraduates, the University community is encouraged to attend and be aware of the motions and opinions it passes.

■ women

continued from page 1

leave their villages. Then, after the rapes, families decide to leave to protect the women," Dr. Shana Swiss reported.

In her book Women, Culture, & Politics, Angela Davis explains, "rape is frequently a component of the torture inflicted on women political prisoners by fascist governments and counterrevolutionary forces. In the history of our own country, the Ku Klux Klan and other racist groups have used rape as a weapon of political terror."

In the United States many groups against rape have been focusing their attention on punishing the rapists. This does not appear to be something that will stop violent crimes toward women. If we are really looking for a solution to this problem we have to look at what is true in our society.

It is estimated that about 10 percent of all rapes are reported. Of these, only four percent are convicted. Increasing time in jail for those few will not help women. In this country our law enforcement agencies have repeatedly shown their insensitivity to women who have been raped.

White policemen have been especially cruel to women of color. There have been numerous reports of women of color being raped while in police custody.

The interconnection of societal oppression that is based on race, class, and gender has to be understood for us to effectively fight against any one form of oppression. "If we are militant activists challenging violence against women, we must also fulfill our duties as fearless fighters against police violence, and we must express our passionate solidarity with the racially and nationally oppressed people who are its main targets," Davis said.

"The banners we raise against rape must also be raised against racist and anti-semetic Ku Klux Klan and Nazi violence...As we further shape the theoretical foundation of the anti-rape movement and as we implement practical tasks, let us constantly remind ourselves that even as individual victories are claimed, the complete elimination of sexist violence will ultimately depend on our ability to forge a new and revolutionary global order, in which every form of oppression and violence against humankind is obliterated."

tonight!
IT DOESN'T DISCRIMINATE :
BLACK, WHITE, YELLOW, RED, BROWN, PEACH, BIEGE, REPUBLICAN, DEMOCRATE, INDEPENDENT, LIBERAL, CONSERVATIVE, LAYED BACK, UPTIGHT, RADICAL, POOR, RICH, MIDDLE CLASS, GAY, BI, STRAIGHT, DRUGEE, SUBSTANCE FREE, ALCOHOLIC, DRY, TALL, SHORT, FAT, THIN, LAZY, WORKAHOLIC, SKATER, PREPPY, CRUNCHY, JOCK, LONG HAIR, SHORT HAIR, NO HAIR, BIG, SMALL, FREAK, NORMAL, SMART, DUMB, RIGHT, LEFT, MIDDLE OF THE ROAD, THEM, HE, SHE, THEY, WE, YOU, US.....
"INTIMACY IN THE AGE OF AIDS" OUT OF THE DARKNESS
INTO REALITY
Intimacy in the age of AIDS is a fast paced seminar presented by commentator John Harris of Summer Night Communications that will give you clear and accurate information on the latest research dealing with the HIV infection. Using creative audio-visual tools, you will learn how to bring the epidemic to a complete halt. This could be the best investment in time and education you ever made. Seminar content takes an hour folowed by thirty minutes of questions and answers. This event is free to the public.
TUES. & WED. FEBRUARY 23 & 24 7:00PM S.U.B.
SPONSORED BY CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR CHRIST AND ALLIANCE CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP (ASU's)

Estudiantes de Habla Hispana
Centro de Salud Mental Universidad de Massachusetts en Amherst
Esta ofreciendo la oportunidad de unirte a un grupo donde exploraremos nuestras relaciones con miembros de nuestras familias. Muchas veces esas relaciones no fueron funcionales y hemos desarrollado sentimientos hacia ellas.
Ven, unete a nosotros, y en un ambiente sano y confidencial convercemos.
Llama al 545-2337 y pide una cita para conocer de ti y para tu conocer la lider del grupo y lo que ella puede ofrecerte.

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
- TONIGHT -
Coach Cal Show
- WHMP Live Radio -
50¢ Pizza Slices
9 til 12
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

RUSH
ΒΘΒ
Beta Theta Beta
– tonite –
PULLING THE WIRE!
Learn the secrets of this time-honored tradition
113 Campus Center

Submit to
Reckoning
a non-fiction prose & poetry publication
send prose, poetry, and black & white photos to Hampshire College Box 367 questions; call Jeff Sharlot or Lorraine Strauss at 549-4600 x297
deadline Friday March 5

Local News

Van to transport students from library to dorm

By JOHN WINCHELL
Collegian Staff

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
As midterms fast approach, students take advantage of the new transit van service to get to the library. The new transportservice will shuttle students between the library and the dorms in an effort to increase student safety.

In response to student and staff safety concerns, University of Massachusetts Transit Services and the Faculty Senate Library Committee have launched an experimental transit program to the Tower Library at night.

The program, which started on a snowy Sunday evening, runs a 15-passenger van every half hour on the Orchard Hill Loop I route, transporting people to and from the library. System hours are from 6:15 p.m. to 12:15 a.m., Sundays through Thursdays according to Allan Byam, manager of Transit Services.

The system will serve as a safe alternative to walking to the library from regular bus stops.

"It is designed to be a more safe and efficient way to get to the library," Byam said.

Byam hopes the program will reflect Transit Services' commitment to contributing to a safer campus environment for all.

"We wanted to increase our attempts to make the campus a safe place to live and work. This is just our way of pitching in to do something satisfactory for the UMass community," Byam said.

Transit services welcomes input from students and faculty on the program. Campus reaction will determine its fate, as this semester is only a trial period.

"The more information we get back, the more improvements can be made for the future," Byam said.

The concept was initially proposed by Professor Daniel Martin, chair of the Senate Library Committee, as part of a package to improve library access to students.

"It will greatly improve life for those who use the library at night by alleviating some of the fear of having to walk alone from the dorms, or from the parking lots," Martin said.

He feels the van is necessary because the library lacks a parking lot nearby.

Looking to the future, Martin is optimistic about the program's fate.

"We hope we can continue to run it at least through next semester," Martin said. "In the long term, we hope they will modify the roadways so a big bus can fit and be able to drop students right at the Library doorstep."

At the end of each loop the van will stop directly between the Library and Goddell to drop off and pick up passengers.

Martin says this service is a more cost-effective and comfortable means of transportation than having to call the campus police escort service and be driven in a cruiser.

Martin said hopes it will better the campus environment for students who frequent the library during evening hours.

"I hope it's going to be something great for students-something that will improve their quality of life," Martin said.

Students are celebrating the Student Union

By MATT McCARTHY
Collegian Staff

Are you looking to add something fun to your boring Wednesday?

If you are, come down to the Student Union today between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. and see what Student Union Day is all about.

The entire building will be decorated and the entire campus community has been invited. Come listen to music in the Hatch, Cape Cod Lounge and Earthfoods. Take part in demonstrations put on by the Craft Center and try your luck at catching UFTs (unidentified flying T-shirts)! There's also going to be giveaways and much, much more.

Nathan Crick will be playing saxophone on the balcony from 11:30 a.m. until noon and from 1 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. The Hatch will host the band "Race," between noon and 1 p.m. Performing from 1:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. will be "Monghani," and from 3 to 4 p.m., "Yep!" will be playing.

The Craft Center will be having an open house from noon to 4 p.m. Students can watch pottery, jewelry making and silk screening.

The Hatch will also be giving away food coupons and the Mini Store will be give away free popcorn for every drink purchase.

The Student Activities Service table will have T-shirts, bookmarks, and free cookies from Earthfoods.

All activities are to help celebrate the Student Union Building, described by Programming Assistant Gloria Santa Anna as "The living room of the campus."

This festival day is sponsored by the Division of Student Activities.

■ success

continued from page 1

care about them."

According to him there are four things an individual can do in order to achieve success. You must decide on the industry you want to work in, decide what company you want to work for in that industry, then you must decide the department you want to work in, and finally, determine the individual you want to work for or whose job you want.

To get an idea of one's area of excellence, Kimbro says to ask yourself "what do I love to do? What would I do for free? What comes easy to me and hard for others?"

Discussing the Russian plight

A 'real' Russia is rising to reveal itself, Prof. says

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Organized crime, low-budget American movies, nuclear weapons, democracy and left-over communism were among the many factors in the plight of post-Soviet Russia discussed last night at a panel discussion titled "Russia in Turmoil."

Associate Professor of Russian Studies at Mount Holyoke College Stephen Jones said expecting Russia to be able to adopt a Western-style economic and political system is unrealistic.

"The clothes of mature democracies don't fit these emerging democracies," he said. "Our own views of democracy, capitalism and nationalism are not necessarily compatible with Russian views, and the recommendations...we make about these concepts are not necessarily the best...for Russia."

The discussion, hosted at Amherst College by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies, focused on the political and economic future of Russia, where the overall standard of living has sunk rapidly since the breakdown of the Soviet Union.

Professor of political science at the University of Massachusetts Karl Ryavec described the situation in Russia by quoting Charles Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities," saying it was "the best of times, and it was the worst of times."

He said Russia's present plight was bad, but did "not even approach the great disasters of Russian history." He said since Russia is no longer burdened with a totalitarian system and the threat of nuclear war, the world might get a chance to see what he called "the real Russia."

"This is a Russia that has a good chance to be itself and find itself," Ryavec said.

He also said, however, that many Russians naively believe a "cavalry" of American investors will come and rescue their economy, since better investments can be made in Mexico and Central Europe.

Amherst College Professor of Russian Jane Taubman spoke of the growing diversity in Russian culture. She said in the past it was easy to study modern Russian culture, because one simply had to look at what books or films the government was making available.

Now, she said, there was much greater variety in the Russian cultural scene, with hundreds of titles coming out. Included in this diversity, however, were masses of old "grade C" American movies, which had replaced more thoughtful Russian films.

Taubman thought little of the films, but Alexander Gorin, a visiting professor at Mount Holyoke College from Kiev University in the Ukraine, said "for the Soviets these are like masterpieces. They deal with problems we did not understand before."

Gorin referred to the present preponderance of racketeering and organized crime in Russia as a "period of primary capital accumulation," and said he expected it to subside as the free market provided more legitimate ways to make money.

Viewing culture with U.S. twist

By JESSE ARMSTRONG
Collegian Staff

Drawn by the eternal desire to see how others see you, a large crowd filled the alumni house conference room at Smith College Monday to hear a lecture on images of America in British popular culture.

The lecture, given by Dick Hebdige, British author of the seminal 1979 work Subculture: The Elements of Style and presently dean of Critical Studies at the California Institute of Arts, was the fourth of a seven-lecture series on American popular culture abroad.

Using a mixture of music, slides and video clips, Hebdige sought to illustrate what he quoted cultural theorist Stuart Hall as calling "the dirty game of somatic," or the battle within culture for the control of meaning.

The presentation centered on the idea that the old model of the unstoppable "Americanization" of other cultures naturally spreading from U.S. economic hegemony is flawed, and should be replaced with a view of culture being "disseminated and interpreted."

As an illustration of this type of interpretation, Hebdige used the example of a group of Scottish steel workers, who regularly hold country and western nights, complete with mock-gunfights and the parading of the Confederate flag.

Rather than seeing this as an example of the ubiquity of U.S. culture, Hebdige interpreted it as an equation of Scottish nationalism with Nineteenth century southern rebellion, and a longing amongst the males of this working-class group for the patriarchal values which are still largely intact in the world of country and western.

Hebdige's title for the lecture was "Fabulous Confusion," and occasionally his arguments became obscured behind the frequently opaque language of critical theory.

The next lecture in this series titled "American Popular Culture Abroad: Cultural Imperialism? Global Homogenity? Or Bridge to Democracy?" will take place on Feb. 25 at the Neilson Library Browsing Room at Smith College.

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK '93 !!
LAST CHANCE TO SAVE!
FROM ONLY $449.00
WITH ONLY 1 WEEK TO LIVE, WHY BLOW IT?!
WE KNOW JAMAICA LIKE NO OTHER COMPANY.
FROM HOTELS TO VILLAS OUR EXPERIENCED STAFF
CAN MEET ANY OF YOUR NEEDS!
JAMAICA'S #1 SPRING BREAK COMPANY!!
Don't miss out on this year's hottest destination! Our packages are proven to be the best! Trips include Roundtrip Airfare, Hotel accommodations for 7 nights, Roundtrip Transfers, Hotel Taxes & Gratuities, many discounts, FREE APPLETON Rum Parties and much more!!
WE ALSO HAVE CANCUN AVAILABLE!!
For The Lowest Prices & The Best Trips, Call
Jill @ 253-4253
Sun Splash Tours 1-800-426-7710

■ SGA

continued from page 3

Fazzi said she's been actively seeking to determine student needs.

"I've hit a good portion of campus, and I have a good idea what students are looking for in an SGA president," Fazzi said.

"I'm confident that I can fill that role."

Student trustee candidate Lizano cited numerous areas of student life he would address, if elected.

"I want to make the trustee level of administration more accountable to students," Lizano said. "We need tuition and fee control and financial aid reform."

Lizano said he'd also fight for litigation power for legal services and enrollment retention, especially of minority students.

Turco said fair representation of students is needed.

"I'm running because I feel I can represent the student interests as a whole," Turco said. "There's a need for someone who takes a color-blind view to student interests. I'm concerned that won't happen with the other candidates."

Student trustee candidate Jourdain was unavailable for comment.

Although voting ballots do not list "running mates" - all candidates are listed singly - Nunez and Lizano said they have a common view of student needs and areas of concern for the Senate.

Fazzi and Turco also have similar goals, Fazzi said.

Candidates were required to collect 250 student signatures before becoming eligible.

INTRODUCE YOUR BUSINESS
TO OVER 19,000 STUDENTS!
ADVERTISE IN THE COLLEGIAN
CALL 545-3500 FOR RATES AND INFO
IT WORKS.

Recycle this paper.
It'll make you feel good.

CONTACT LENS CARE
AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES
We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses
•••
Offering a broad array of contact lenses with a large in house inventory.
•••
The new daily wear disposable and frequent replacement contact lenses are now available.
•••
All fittings are done by our eye doctors with experience in contact lens care and solving contact lens problems.
•••
Emphasis is placed on your ocular health and professional service.
uhs
EYE CARE PROGRAM
Convenient hours and convenient on campus location.
For questions or appointments, call 549-2671

Learn German This Summer At URI
June 27 – August 6, 1993
The University of Rhode Island in co-operation with the Goethe Institute Boston is hosting the Thirteenth Annual German Summer School of the Atlantic. German will be the sole language of communication, and German life and culture the heart of this six week residency program of intensive language study. Earn up to nine undergraduate or graduate credits while living in the beautiful surroundings of our country campus, just minutes away from Rhode Island's magnificent beaches and historic Newport. This program is ideally suited for anyone wishing to enroll in beginning, intermediate, or advanced German. Take advantage of this rare opportunity to participate in this total German language experience.
Contact:
Dr. John Grandin or
Dr. Norbert Hedderich, Co-Directors
Dept. of Languages, URI
Kingston, RI 02881
Or call: (401) 792-5911
UNIVERSITY OF RHODE ISLAND

Joe Turner's Come and Gone by August Wilson
A Co-Production of the Department of Theater and the New WORLD Theater
Feb. 25-27 and March 3-6, 8 pm
Rand Theater, Fine Arts Center
Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511
$5 general public; $3 students & senior citizens

THE PUB CELEBRATES 25 YEARS 1968 • 1993 IN AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

Toute la dignité de l'homme consiste en la pensée. La pensée est donc une chose admirable et incomparable par sa nature.
All man's dignity consists of thought. Thought is, therefore, an admirable and incomparable thing by its very nature.
Blaise Pascal (1623-1662)
SEMESTER OR YEAR ABROAD
The American University of Paris is a four-year liberal arts college in Paris welcoming visiting students.
Majors in: Art History, Comparative Literature, Computer Science, European Studies, French Studies, International Affairs, International Business Administration, International Economics, and Fine Arts at Parsons School of Design.
Two programs especially designed for visiting students:
The Institute for French Studies in Paris (IFSP) offers students with strong French language proficiency the chance to combine their studies at AUP with courses at the Institut d'Etudes Sociales, Institut National des Langues et Civilisations Orientales, Université de Paris IV–Sorbonne, and Institut d'Etudes Politiques ('Sciences-Po').
The Program in European Affairs (PEA) allows students to select Europe-focused courses from three of our majors and to integrate them through an on-going seminar. Year-long students may qualify for international affairs internships in their second semester.
• 1000 students from 70 different countries.
• 40% U.S. citizens, 14% French.
• In 1991-92, 12% visiting students.
• Housing is guaranteed.
Full college credit summer courses:
• Three-week French immersion.
• Six-week regular summer session.
THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF PARIS
établissement d'enseignement supérieur privé
31, avenue Bosquet 75007 Paris, France
Accredited by the Middle States Association of Schools and Colleges
Please send me more information on study abroad opportunities at The American University of Paris
Name Mr./Ms. _____ please print in ink
Mailing address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____ Telephone ( )
Name of college/university you currently attend _____
I may be interested in applying for entry in Fall 19__ Spring 19__ Summer 19__
I am a: ☐ Freshman ☐ Sophomore ☐ Junior ☐ Senior
My primary academic interest/program: _____
Please send to: United States Office, The American University of Paris
80 East 11th Street, Suite 434 New York, NY 10003-6000
Tel. (212) 677-4870 Fax. (212) 475-5205

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Some viral mumbo jumbo

I don't have any patience for this — my head feels like an atom bomb has gone off and the radiation is feeding off my brain.

I haven't eaten in two days, my stomach is writhing like an ocean in a storm, my muscles might as well be made of Jell-O, the bags under my eyes are like dark caves, my lungs are as volatile as a can of spray paint under pressure, my hair is matted, my lips are cracked, my nose is peeling off — and well, I feel like the only solution to my misery is not Tylenol or Actifed but death.

E.C.
THOMAS

What do I have to keep me company during this term o' miserablis? My pals: Courtney Cough, Frankie Flem, Seymour Swollen Glands III and my favorite — Freddy Flu. And so I sit, nestled among blankets, tea bags and Kleenex with no end in sight to my miserable existence.

Have you ever noticed how as soon a someone finds out you have a cold they offer you a cure, regardless of the fact that bio-chemists from MIT haven't found one. They in their infinite wisdom have the answer. Seeing as school will not be closed down (what moron came up with that one?) I'll share a few recipes I've recently been offered:

• Mommy's Mixture: Get plenty of rest (as if you don't have hundreds of pages of reading to do), drink plenty of liquids (as if you have the mobile ability to get to the bathroom), take your vitamins (as if they'll actually stay in your stomach).

• The College Concoction: One case Budweiser, one eighth hemp.

• The Remedy of Ridiculousness: Go to Health Services.

• Health Services Serum: Drop your classes.

• The Voodoo Brew: 1 cup hot water, 1 tbs garlic, 1 tbs ginger, 1 onion peel, peppermint, lemon (I'm trying not to get sick).

• The Italian Tonic: 1 pan lasagne with heavy garlic, 1 loaf garlic bread, 3 glasses wine — with garlic.

• The Irish Inkling: Stop whining, SUFFER — pain makes one stronger — pain makes the man!

• Health Services Serum: Are you pregnant?

• The Christian Scientists' Sorcery: 1 half dozen Hail Marys.

• The Vampire Vaccine: 3 cloves garlic.

• The Housemate's Hint: Dangle a chicken above your head while dancing the Hava Negeela.

• The Passion Potion (or Madonna's Magic): 1 hour bondage, 1 hour masturbation.

• Nature's Nouget: 1 piece bark, 1 branch willow tree.

• Health Services Serum: Why do we bother?

Well, there you have it. Personally I've been trying the take-every-over-the-counter-drug-available method. However, I'm beginning to realize its side effects: in order to afford any medicine you have to take out a second loan, you become a delirious zombie and/or look and act like the older sister in Sixteen Candles as she gets married.

All things considered, I think I'll be munching on some garlic — I'll use mint flavored Cloroseptic to freshen my breath — for I will cure this cold — I must — it is my quest. . .

(For any other amateur but brilliant doctors, witches, warlocks, voodooers or Granola Gurus — send your antidotes to Elixirs for E.C. Collegian, 113 Campus Center basement).

E.C. Thomas is a congested and contagious Collegian columnist.

Real world, real pettiness

And they tell us this isn't the Real World.

A young woman got a job as a resident assistant in one of our prestigious dormitory areas. She intended to be there on move-in day, but a slight change in plans forced her to request that day off so she could be in her best friend's wedding party. She was all ready to go when the new resident director moved in and demanded her, on penalty of being fired, to answer the question, "What is more important, your duties here as an RA or your social life?" She cried a lot the day she missed the ceremony.

Nathan
CRICK

That same spring semester a returning RA had made plans with the old management to return job two days late due to travel complications. He arrived to find this same RD had dismissed him without notice because of his tardiness. He spent about a month housed in the Campus Hotel waiting for his new assignment.

Suddenly weekly staff meetings in that area became the authorized two-hour length so staff could discuss important issues like the necessity to return the RD's voice messages and memos within 24 hours for the sake of expediency. One week, a staff member had to miss one of those significant gatherings in order to attend a class. The response echoed: "What is more important, your duties here as an RA or a single class period?"

Weekly reports have to be issued to RDs to update them on the happenings of each floor. One senior RA argued that the questions asked for meaningless information, and in faint protest did not return them for three weeks. The RD agreed and the question format was altered. After this was settled, now the RA did not respond to the RD's many voice messages and memos within the allotted time frame because he, as a student, did have a life and did not check his messages with the utmost vigor.

Finally, when he failed to appropriately schedule a one-on-one conference with the RD within two weeks, a notice appeared in his mailbox. He was being considered for dismissal, for reasons including such things as "failure to turn in several weekly staff reports," "failure to respond in time to memos, voice messages, etc. of RD" and the fear of his performance potentially faltering due to this being his graduating semester.

Paraphrased: "Failure to sufficiently brown nose."

Pettiness and selfish power games are hard to convey sometimes. Unless you are the one being harassed and pushed around, the feelings of frustration just do not come out with stories of little incidents that would seem ridiculously childish to anyone else's ears. Sometimes, though, things are just bad enough where you can get people to stop and think.

I consider myself tolerant of almost anybody. If you're not then life is simply not going to be a very peaceful existence. However, I cannot stand people who feel it necessary through their positions of limited significance to impose their petty rules and small-minded values upon others. Where does somebody get off messing around in their employees' lives for the sake of enforcing attendance policies and memo dictates?

I'll tell you where they get off.

They get off at University administration, corporate management, government agencies, small business chains and college dorms. They get off all over, because petty small-minded people on power trips are in demand to keep ambitious people from, God forbid, actually doing something useful. I may be exaggerating, but it seems it has historically been the mediocre people with phony smiles getting into positions of power and staying in them.

Welcome to the Real World.

This fellow of which I speak is not worthy of mention, because anything he is or will have been will pass without memory when he departs. That's the legacy of people who smile with artificial lips and command with nothing but their precious rules and hollow authority. They disappear without a trace and are replaced by another empty voice. Meanwhile the rest of us just keep on living, secure with the comfort that at least we don't have to hide behind some imaginary authority to feel we have achieved something in this world. Real one or not.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Flying in the face of ignorance

Mr. Morrissey, you wrote an editorial slamming and lambasting the problematic, "knee-jerk" SGA liberals (Collegian, Feb. 19). Incidentally, I am not only writing this as a fellow undergraduate student, but I also happen to be one of the SGA senators.

You asked if students "should at least know the names of some of the senators, if not the president." If you bothered to read the Collegian on even a semi-regular basis, you would see that members of your "ineffectual SGA" appear all the time. Believe it or not, Jen Wood, president of the SGA, has made a myriad of appearances in your paper, Mr. Morrissey.

In addition, hard as it is for a worshipper of Pat Buchanan to fathom, we do have senators who are more extremely right-wing than even the almighty Michael Morrissey. But, of course, you would not be expected to know that since the names of SGA senators and officers are kept confidential and under lock and key, and since you apparently do not bother reading the newspaper you write for.

Also mentioned in your traitorous lambasting is one Jason Rabinowitz, an SGA senator from five years ago. Mike, five years ago you were worrying about who you should take to your junior prom. If you knew anything about the Student Government Association, you would know that the SGA of five years ago was absolutely nothing like the student government of today.

You said "representatives are not serving us in the least." Perhaps your representative, if you know who he or she is, but you do not speak for the general undergraduate student population.

Josh Weissman
Southwest

Military isn't testing ground for social utopias

I have been outraged ever since reading editorials by David Rivera (Collegian, Feb. 16] and Tami Monahan [Feb. 1] on gays in the military.

The military has never been, nor will it ever be, a testing ground for social utopias. The military is a place where no chances can be taken. Everyone's hair is cut short, everyone wears the same clothes and right and wrong do not necessarily exist because orders are everything. I know that if I were to be in a tank looking directly at the enemy as he was looking at me, the last thing I want on my mind is how my navigator feels about me. I am not homophobic. I am trying to make a point. What would happen if that thought crossed my mind, even if for a second? We are dead.

Tami Monahan wrote that there wouldn't be a problem in the ranks if the men of a platoon found that one of their own dressed in drag. I am sorry, but basically everyone I know in the general infantry is beer and football type of guy. The military likes that. Everyone is the same.

I don't refute the fact that there have been homosexuals in the military ever since there was a military. I do refute that lifting this ban would do little or nothing in the way of military morale. It is one thing to have them there, but it is another thing to openly express the fact. Public opinion of homosexuals is not nearly high enough to justify equality. In the historic cases of allowing Blacks and women in the military, these groups were held in much higher esteem than the gay community today.

Colin Powell and the Joint Chiefs of Staff have stated their position clearly, calling for their resigning en masse if this ban was to be lifted. These esteemed men deserve to be heard. They know what is good for us.

I would like to submit a proposal. Instead of spending $27 million on routing out gays, the government should start putting it back into education. However people who have professed their homosexuality while serving in the military should pay the price: court martial and dismissal. This is a military crime; why shouldn't they pay the price? It is either our freedom or their victory.

Scott D. Conlin
Southwest

This letter was also signed by three more people.

Fraternity brothers say 'thank you'

We, the brothers of Delta Chi Fraternity, would like to thank Dr. James Abel for delivering his lecture on safe sex as a part of our Regional Leadership Conference this past Saturday.

His lecture not only taught us about safer sex and health issues, it was also the funniest, most interesting lecture we had ever been to.

Many of our brothers from other campuses and some of our national advisors in attendance were so impressed with Dr. Abel that they expressed interest in having him speak at their campus.

Again, our sincerest thanks to Dr. Abel for his candid and humorous speech, and for showing our visiting brothers what UMass has to offer.

Delta Chi Fraternity
Amherst

Black Affairs

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Remembering our history of struggle at UMass

Martin F. JONES

As we observe Black History Month at UMass, we must also gain a proper perspective of the history of the Black liberation struggle here at the University of Massachusetts.

This year marks 25 years of struggle by students of color for equal access to public higher education. It all began back in 1968 when a group of Black faculty at the University decided that UMass needed to recruit more Black students. At the time, there was a heightened political awareness around the country as a result of the 1960s social revolution. It was 1968, the year of the King and Kennedy assassinations, urban insurrections, and the Vietnam War was at its height.

Faculty members Randolph Bromery, William Julius Williams, William Darity, and graduate student Michael Thelwell would eventually succeed in securing a million-dollar grant for the creation of a special minority recruitment program called CCEBMS (the Committe for the Collegiate Education of Black Students).

The first class consisted of approximately 250 Black students who created quite a stir on a campus which previously had more students from Africa and Taiwan than it did African-American students. Until that point, there were fewer than 30 Black students on the entire 20,000 student campus.

In 1969, Michael Thelwell who had received his MFA from UMass, was hired as a faculty in the English department. As the Black students arrived on campus, there began a drive to create a Black Studies department at the University, reflecting a nationwide trend that was taking place at other universities across the country. Thelwell was approached by several faculty and administrators to chair-a committee which would create what is now the W.E.B. DuBois department of Afro-American Studies.

Thelwell served as the first chair of the department, whose original faculty would include: Esther Terry, Ivanhoe Donaldson, former member of SNCC, Cherif Guellal, an Algerian revolutionary, Playthell Benjamin, and Kenyan linguist Ben Okari. Other faculty of the department were the famous writer James Baldwin, and Jonetta Cole, president of Spelman College.

Another important component of the new Black Studies program called for the creation of a Black cultural center. Mills house, a dormitory in the Central Residental Area, was the original designated site, and the first two floors were to be renovated for the cultural center.

In February of 1970, after a meeting at the new cultural center, a group of Black students fell into a confrontation in front of the building with some White students.

The Black students eventually stormed the building and others joined in the occupation. The White residents of the building were chased out, and the crises was ultimately resolved with an agreement to turn the entire building over to the students, with the residential area designated as space for the Afro-Am department and the CCEBMS program, both of which were previously housed in Herter Hall. The building was then renamed the New Africa House, and it still stands here to this day, 23 years later.

Over the past 25 years, there has been many advances in our struggle here at UMass. Professor Bromery, of the original CCEBMS committee, went on to become Chancellor of the University from 1971 to 1979. In 1977, he was accompanied by five other Black administrators, and there was a major difference in the climate for Black students here.

There was an annual Black Homecoming with a parade, complete with a concert, dances, and various activities. Student-established organizations such as Afrik-Am, Nommo, Black Affairs, BMCP, the Malcolm X Center and the Duke Ellington Committee were at their peak, offering a host of cultural and political programming. Most recently, in 1992, students here established the Black Student Union to serve as a comprehensive political and outreach organization to solidify and consolidate our base at UMass.

This July, CCEBMS will be hosting a 25-year reunion. Many of the alumni, which include the likes of Natalie Cole and Julius Erving, will bring with them the memories and experiences of our long and colorful history at UMass. There are also staff alumni and the Afro-Am professors. For more history, read through the reserve issues of Nommo and Black Affairs at the library. This is your University, and as you learn about the history of our struggle here, so will you prepare yourself to continue it into the future.

Martin Jones is a Collegian columnist.

ALANA Students Run For SGA

By KRISTIN ST. JOHN
Collegian Staff

This upcoming Student Government Association election will include two well-known UMASS students running for offices. Sophomore David Nunez and junior Arnold Lizana will be running for Student Government President and Trustee.

On running for SGA president, Nunez, a history major, said he felt that he was "the best person for the job."

A graduate from Lawrence Greater Technical High School, Nunez was class president for four years. He also wrote for the Lawrence Tribune, the school paper, and was on various committees. Nunez was also involved with football, track and wrestling.

Here, at UMASS, Nunez is an SGA senator and a chairman of the Third World Caucas, while also being the coordinator of the Latin-American Cultural Center. He has worked with many people in the administration such as Chancellor Richard O'Brien, Ricardo Townes of the academic support services and Grant Ingles of human relations.

About his close relationshp with the administration, Nunez says, "I'm a person who's not afraid to say it straight. [SGA President] is not a job to be friends with the adminstration, it's to make them accountable."

Lizana, a social thought and political economy and a Afro-American history major said he thought long and hard before deciding to run for Student Trustee.

A graduate of Springfield Central High School, Lizana was senior class president and the captain of the wrestling team. He was also president of a citywide organization called Brothers and Sisters United (BSU) for two years.

"We did a lot of projects for the homeless, battered women, and disadvantaged families," said Lizana, "We also worked with students who had goals for college."

During his time here at UMASS, Lizana has been vice president of the Afrik-Am Society and was a founding member of the Black Student Union.

"I was on a team of people that built it [the BSU] from the ground up to a working organization," said Lizana.

He was a legal assistant for the Legal Services Center, and a coordinator for the Sylvan Cultural Center. He is currently a liason for the seven cultural centers on this campus.

According to Lizana, being a ROTC cadet at one time "has taught me alot about leadership and organizing."

Both Nunez and Lizana were involved with the student negotiatons that took place last semester. They were able to help the adminstration agree to a list of student demands, some of which included 40 new scholarships.

Nunez said the talks with the administration demonstrates their abilty to negotiate on behalf of the students.

"A lot of students benefited from the negotiations. When we are arguing on behalf of students of color, everyone benefits," said Lizana.

Together they want to stop the adminstration from another tuiton and fees hike that is planned for next semester.

"Every student is witness to the fact that tuition is high," Lizana said. "There's going to be between 2-2.5% increase next semester."

Nunez and Lizana also support Title IX, a federal law that mandates equal funding for mens and womens college sports. "We have the distinct opportunity of being the first college to be in compliance," said Nunez.

Nunez and Lizana said they feel they are the right people for these positions.

"We are an activist leadership, not couch potato leadership," Lizana said.

Casa Dominicana Dominican Week

The Office of Third World Affairs and Dominican students of UMass will host Dominican Week '93, from February 23-27.

February 24

Dominican Dinner at the Southside Room, Southwest 6 p.m., $3.

February 25

Keynote speaker: Ramona Hernandez "Dominicans in the U.S." 8 p.m. in the Southside Room, free admission, all are welcome.

February 26

Latin-American Semi-Formal Party. 9 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Free admission, free food, cash bar - ID required.

February 27

Fiesta Quisqueyana - Party 9 p.m. - Until Breakfast In Bed. Southside Room, Southwest. $3 admission

Ujima Fashion Show

By KRISTIN ST. JOHN
Collegian Staff

This past Sunday, Feb. 21, The Ujima Hair and Fashion Show was held at the Campus Center Auditorium.

With the models providing their own outfits, the program consisted of four themes, "Elegance," "Sunshine," "At The Club" and "Africa."

Penny Cameron and Natasha Springer performed between the parts. Springer provided those who attended an a cappella version of Whitney Houston's "I'll Always Love You" and Cameron recited an emotional poem.

Hair and nails were done by Helen Johnson, Donna Smith, Eveleen O'Neal, Debra Brown, Sherri Burton, and Jennifer Griffin, with manucurist Shelly Jackson, courtesy of Helen's Hair-Um.

All proceeds went to benefit the CCEBMS (Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black and other Minority Students) library.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Monica Slade from Smith College models her evening dress during Sunday's Ujima Fashion Show.

Especially For You
Haircare & Beauty Boutique
Now at
233 N. Pleasant St., Downtown Amherst Carriage Shops
OPTIMUM • MORNING MAGIC • LUSTER'S
BRAIDS & WEAVES HUMAN & SYNTHETIC & BEADS & MUCH MUCH MORE
Come Down & Browse Around or Call 549-8316 To Place Your Order
FREE Delivery Within The Five-College Area
Especially For You
Hair Care & Beauty Supply Specializing in African American Hair Care Products

WRITE FOR BLACK AFFAIRS
If you are interested in writing for Black Affairs, or if you have a story idea you think we should look into, please contact Kristin or Yvette at the Collegian offices
113 Campus Center

Arts & Living

Jazz series opens with septet

It has been brought to us each Spring for the past four years by WMUA. And it is always a "big deal." These shows are big and theirs is usually a sellout crowd. Those avid followers of the jazz scene know what I'm talking about. But for those of you who haven't already guessed, I'm talking about WMUA's Magic Triangle Jazz Concert Series.

Beginning its fourth year on Thursday, Feb. 25, WMUA will bring to us the Magic Triangle Jazz Concert Series featuring a performance by the Mario Pavone Septet. This septet will feature Mario Pavone on bass, Marty Ehrlich and Thomas Chapin playing reeds, Peter McEachern on trombone, Bill Ware on the vibraphone, Peter Madsen playing the piano and Steve John on drums.

A Connecticut-born bassist, Mario Pavone did not start playing bass until he was 24 years old.

"When I went to the University of Connecticut, I started hearing a lot more jazz and really became more open to it," Pavone says. "I heard Coltrane particularly. I was inspired by his spirituality to want to play."

Pavone has played and recorded with such well-known artists as Paul Bley, Bill Dixon, Dewey Redman and Leo Smith. He is a member of the highly praised Thomas Chapin trio and has performed at many jazz festivals in North America and Europe. Jazz Times magazine described Pavone as a "widely recognized musician, but who is under recorded."

Of Thursday's concert Pavone said, "We will be doing primarily new compositions in a similar vein to [his latest album] Toulon Days. My pieces have an angularity to them, but the rhythms are firmly anchored in the swing and groove traditions."

"You can expect pretty hard-hitting music with wonderfully arranged colors and a lot of instrumental possibilities," Pavlone said.

Also appearing will be saxophonist Marety Ehrlich, who, in addition to leading his own bands, is one of New York's most in-demand sidemen. He has worked with Muhal Richard Abrams, Julius Hemphill, Anthony David, the late John Carter, Milt Hinton and Don Grolnick.

Fellow saxophonist Thomas Chapin served as head alto and musical director of the Lionel Hampton Orchestra (1981-1986) and Chico Hamilton in 1989. Chapin recently recorded a quartet album of original music with Ronnie Matthews and Ray Drummond.

Trombonist Peter McEachern has toured with the legendary bluesman Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown and plays in minimalist composer Lamonte Young's orchestra.

Vibraphonist Bill Ware is a long-time member of the Jazz Passengers and is presently touring with Herome Harris.

Pianist Peter Madsen has played with the late, great Stan Getz. Madsen has also performed with Sonny Fortune, Don Cherry, John Abercrombie, Joe Lavano and others. He is presently working with the Maceo Parker/Fred Wesley/James Brown Horns.

Drummer Steve Johns has been a member of the George Russel, Gil Evans and Mingus Big Bands. Johns has also played with the John Hicks trip and with Walter Booker.

The Magic Triangle Jazz Concert Series begins Thursday with The Mario Pavone Septet, playing at Hampden Theatre at 8 p.m. Tickets $7 general; $5 students. Call 545-25511 for more info.

Story delivers melodic riffs, comic hooks

By ADAM GOULSTON
Collegian Correspondent

The Story
Amherst College Frontroom
Feb. 21, 1993

No oversized amp stacks here, no flannel shirts, no elaborate stage sets, just beautiful harmonies, friendly faces and a pair of acoustic guitars occupying the stage in Amherst College's Frontroom.

Amherst alumni Jennifer Kimball and Jonatha Brook, known collectively as The Story, filled the hundred or so seat room with a culturally diverse and somewhat snowbound crowd as part of the Sundays at Eight Coffeehouse Series.

The Story call this their "Anti-Diet Tour" — a tour which they've always been on and always will be on. But they're not insecure about the fact they like to eat, and they justify it in "Fatso," their anti-dieting song in which they lament over the cruel influence of the media. "Fatso" proved quite typical of the cynical attitude maintained by the pair.

Kimball and Brook were actually quite striking in the simplicity of their appearance. A second glance would probably not even be given them roaming the Amherst campus. I found it quite hard avoiding making comparisons to the Indigo Girls: two girls, acoustic guitars, pinpoint harmonies and a folk spirit. The main difference lay in the more comical approach of The Story.

Kimball and Brook have the standard base of love songs which is to be expected, and these are their prettiest tunes. No song better exemplified this than "A Perfect Crime." Sang the duo, "Love is the perfect crime and you'll never be convicted" — nice sentiment. If anything, The Story's repertoire of love songs proved a bit tedious, and their less traditional topics were greatly welcomed.

A definite high point in the 15 song set with a one song encore (a love song) was "The Barefoot Ballroom." This tune exemplified how the duo draws upon dreams as a source of subject matter. It is a fictional tale relating that trauma of "thinking you're going crazy." Their ballroom is that unattainable place where everything is perfect. It's also a home for beautiful melody, as proven by the pair.

"Grace in Gravity" is the title cut off The Story's first CD, and it's their best story as it's true. While in New York, Kimball and Brook met a paralyzed African-American choreographer. Once a top dancer, he had suffered the misfortune of being involved in a car accident in South Africa. His paralysis probably would not have occurred had he

Turn to STORY, page 8

FLY TO THE BEACHES OF FLORIDA
Fly to Warm Sunny Florida
Spring Break
ONLY $129 ONE WAY
Daily non-stop jet air carrier service from Worcester to West Palm Beach, Florida beginning March 1. For complete information, schedules and advanced ticket purchasing, call our toll free number from 8:00 am to 8:00 pm today!
THE Florida SHUTTLE A PUBLIC CHARTER OPERATOR
"Your New England / Florida Connection."
1-800-FLY-SOUTH
1-800-359-7688
*The Florida Shuttle is a public charter operator with Direct Air Carrier Service Provided by Miami Air with Boeing 727s. Optional services include food and drink service for sale on board the aircraft and a $10 charge for carry-on baggage over and above our carry-on policy. For further information, refer to the required operator passenger contract.

ACADEMY-MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435
7th Week! - Curtain Daily - 6:45 & 9:00
6 Academy Award Nominations including Best Picture, Director, and actor.

LATE SHOW THIS FRI. & SAT. AT 11:00PM
(ONLY AREA SHOWING-BOX-OFF FROM 10 PM)

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

"Don't Look Like A Ghost, Look Your Most!"
TANNING
at Carol's Headquarters
Intro Special: 8 Sessions for $29.95
115 Russell St. • Rt.9 Hadley • 584-9948

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 Days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day
326 College St. (Rt. 9) Amherst • 352-5072

CEDAR TREE BUSINESS SERVICES
11 Garage Rd • Sunderland, MA 01375
Word Processing
Resumes - Personal Taxes
Laser Jet Printing
Copies - 10 Free per visit
ON BUS ROUTE
M-F 8am-5pm • Sat. 8am-5pm
CALL 665-8499

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M. Tel: 549-2692
Warm Up To These Savings At Scotts!!!
Busch & BuschLight 24-12 oz. cans $9.99 + dep.
Koch's Golden Anniversary 24 16 oz. bottles $8.99 + dep.
Natural Light ½ Kegs $31.99
Busch ½ Kegs $38.99
NO PERMIT NEEDED TO PURCHASE KEGS
Anheuser-Busch's Natural Light 12 pk. cans $4.49
Glen Ellen Chardonnay, Cabernet, Sauv. Blanc $3.99 750 ml
Sam Adams All Varieties 6 pk. $4.99 + dep.
Rolling Rock & Rolling Rock Light 24-12 oz. bottles $12.99 + dep.
Smirnoff Vodka 750 ml $7.99
Jack Daniels 750 ml $11.49
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
Tele-check for your personal check.
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games!
QUANTITY DISCOUNTS AVAILABLE !!

Story

continued from page 7

been treated at a nearby white hospital rather than driven to the nearest black one some 75 miles away. Through dazzling harmony and Brook's acoustic accompaniment, The Story relate this tale with passion and clarity.

The set's peak was the returning of opening act Justina and Joyce for a quartet performance of the folk classic "The Water's Wide." Their rendition featured a variety of harmonies, broad range, and proved to be the crowd favorite.

Justina Golden and Joyce Zymeck are also Amherst alumni. Their opening performance, while a little awkward at times was for the most part a nice complement to The Story's more diverse set.

Properly equipped with CDs, T-shirts, and coffee mugs promoting their first album, Justina and Joyce rattled off a set displaying Justina's fantastic range, Joyce's more than adequate accompaniment and their respective proficiency on acoustic guitar.

"Ancient Mother," the duo's first number had a classic folk subtlety, nice harmony, range and restraint. Such was the case for most of their tunes.

The most warmly received of these tunes was the least musically appealing one. The pair adopted a cynical attitude about getting over breakups in "Why Forgive and Forget When You Can Remember and Blame." The crowd became one big support group for an amusing song reminiscent of the forced wit of "Saturday Night Live's" Sweeney Sisters.

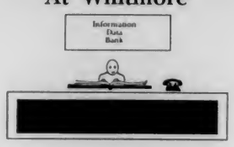
Finishing the set was "Testimony," a spiritual folk tune and undoubtedly their prettiest. The audience didn't need Justina to tell them that Joyce "sounds great."

While the evening of music proved a little lengthy, it was undoubtedly not lacking in talent or charm. The Story deserves attention, which will hopefully be earned with their forthcoming CD due out this Spring. With a little more professionalism and promotion, The Story could prove a much better known talent. Until then, enjoy opportunities such as these to see a blooming talent.

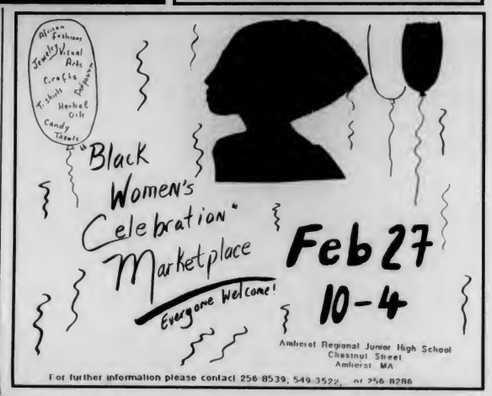
haircuts always $10
BUCCI
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256 0733

rock bottom prices
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton / Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

BANANARAMA
fabulous frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

Information Data Bank
At Whitmore


is here to give direction at a large and seemingly complex university.
2nd Floor, Whitmore Lobby 545-1555



Learn about
Special Summer Programs
sponsored by UMass/Boston

Archaeological Field School
on Thompson's Island
in Boston Harbor

Studio Program in Traditional Woodblock Printing & Landscape Painting
in Guangzhou, China

Exploring the Coastal Environment
on Nantucket and the New England Coast

Marine Biology
on Nantucket Island

The New Europe: Field Study and Seminar
in Ireland

Spanish Translation and Interpretation
at UMass/Boston's Harbor Campus

Spanish Language and Culture
in Cuernavaca, Mexico

Playwriting and Performance
on Nantucket Island

Meet our representatives at the Campus Center Concourse between 11:30am and 3:30pm on Wednesday, February 24.
You can also call our Division of Continuing Education at 617-287-7900.
University of Massachusetts at Boston

THE
EDWIN M. ROSSMAN
ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS
ECONOMICS

DATE: WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1993
TIME: 8:00 PM
LOCATION: CAMPUS CENTER 904

SPONSORED BY:
MATHER CAREER CENTER
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF ECONOMICS

This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!

ALUMNI PANELISTS:

Ajay Jain '90 B.A. Economics	Senior Market Analyst Polaroid Corporation Cambridge, MA
Cheryl Ryan '88 B.A. Economics	Economic Research Analyst Massachusetts Department of Revenue Boston, MA
Stephen Etzler '90 B.A. Economics	Regional Training Manager Arbitration Forums New York, NY

For more information, please contact:
Mather Career Center
545-2224

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Look, if it was electric, could I do this?"

Quote of the Day

"It is well with me, only when I have a chisel in my hand."

– Michelangelo

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A friend would like to capitalize on your financial success. Stand your ground. Self discipline will help you make the most of a golden opportunity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An excellent day to discuss educational costs with teen-agers. An unexpected bonus or windfall reduces financial worries. Celebrate your good fortune by dining out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A proposed change at work holds great appeal. Show your enthusiasm. New friendships mean a more fulfilling social life. Concentrate on finishing projects already under way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A friend is a fountain of valuable information. Be diplomatic but firm with a stubborn individual who demands too much of your time. Make it clear that you have your own needs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Love finds you when you least expect it. A new scientific discovery could benefit you greatly. Do be gentle with people's feelings. A subtle approach leads to greater harmony.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A warning signal suggests that you treat everyone, including yourself, with utmost gentleness. Better to say nothing than annoy people unnecessarily. Pursue your goals quietly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Play it safe with your savings and investments. Consider repaying an outstanding debt. A period of solitude will help you get your work better organized.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your moral courage and original ideas uphold you in your work. Friends at a distance get in touch with you. Discuss rival theories without quarreling.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be overly concerned about a career vs. home conflict. Try to look on the bright side. You can make amazing progress by focusing on long-range goals!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It may be difficult to see all the ramifications of a career move. You benefit from treating everyone involved with kindness. Let friends and allies help out during an emergency!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your gentle ways will help you work out a deal with higher-ups or business contacts. Good things come to you, thanks to your friends. Mediate disputes with finesse and you will win big!

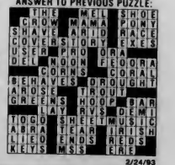
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A blue mood may be related to your disappointment in a friend: be careful what you say. Good financial news is headed your way. New alliances enjoy highly favorable influences.

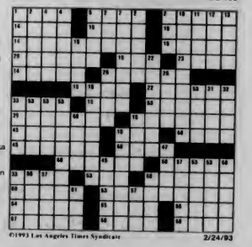
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Meeting: Abbr
5 Senora's abode
9 Accommodate
14 Entr' —
15 Actor Guinness
16 Spanish dancer Lopez
17 Early military post in Arkansas
19 Fresh air
20 Delights
21 Asian holiday
23 Piquancy
24 Rejuvenate the African violet
25 Company lover?
27 Examine
29 Certain camper?
33 Airplane maneuver
37 Haul
38 Reddish brown
39 Vapid
41 Mosque tower
42 " need someone we can —": Rolling Stones
43 Chip off the old block
44 Revere and Sparks
45 Apprehend
46 Labels
48 Monkeybread tree
50 Sports official
55 Election
58 Bottom line
59 Ventilate
60 Vocal
62 Memorable Arkansas senator
64 Pocahontas' spouse
65 City on the Okal
66 Large knife
67 First copy
68 Actor Hackman
69 Impair

DOWN
1 Newsman Morley
2 School for an elevé
3 Part of a sandal
4 Brief skirmish
5 Machinery parts
6 — Baba
7 Background
8 Yearns
9 GI's address
10 Famous pitcher from Luces, Ark.
11 Lotion ingredient
12 Turns thumbs down
13 Waste allowance
16 Deters the bidder
22 Becoming stiff
25 Shawl, of old
26 Devastate
28 Arkansas' favorite son
30 Concerning
31 Prune, in Ayr
32 Makes lace
33 Actress Kedrova
34 Lulu
35 Glacial ridge
36 City SE of Little Rock
40 Pose, Italian style
41 Biblical kingdom
43 Eminence
47 Mob follower
49 Confuse
51 Hibernian
52 — cum laude
53 Clear sky
54 Old Testament juniper
55 Sidekick, for short
56 Swan genus
57 She gets what she wants
59 Fit
61 Motor city: Abbr
63 Author Deighton

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:





©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/24/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Tami Monahan
Copy Editor ..... Christina Rothwell
PhotoTechnician ..... Andrea Migliassi
Production Supervisor ..... Nicole Dumas
Production ..... Dana Dorman, Mike Carvalho, Lisa Jezowski

Menu

LUNCH
Tuna Noodle Casserole
Hamburgers
BASICS LUNCH
Tuna Noodle Casserole
Oatburgers

DINNER
Chicken Fajitas
Shells in Cheese Sauce
BASICS DINNER
Chicken Fajitas
Shells in Cheese Sauce

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ women's gym

continued from page 12

refocus on what they need to do to reach their long-term goals.

"It gave us a chance to clear our heads and start to think straight, because we weren't thinkin' straight, that's one thing," said Mitchell.

Springfield (4-3), led by head coach Cheryl Raymond, and senior co-captains Tara Brady and Meg Geddes, possesses a storied history in gymnastics, according to Mitchell, but may have a tough time against the Minutewomen.

"As far as posing a challenge in losing the meet [with Springfield], there really is none. We have more firepower, but what we want to do is be consistent all the way through the meet," Mitchell said.

There is one difference in this meet that UMass will have to deal with unlike in any other thus far. When it comes to performing, the teams will be on the same apparatus simultaneously, instead of both teams competing at the same time on different events.

Even though UMass has to worry about itself and not its opponent, Mitchell still feels that his team has to give it their all, no matter what the circumstances are, especially in the sport of gymnastics.

"To do what you do day in and day out as a gymnast, it is very hard, especially when you don't want to do it. If you're in a team sport, you can hide it sometimes. If one day you really don't feel like running as fast, well, your times are off. If you don't want to shoot that day, you'll pass the ball away.

"In gymnastics, if you don't go in there [the gym] with the right state of mind, you may not walk out. And that is a big difference, you can not do it half-way," Mitchell said.

Other Notes from the Mat: In the Atlantic 10 rankings, senior Tammy Marshall is first in the all-around (39.20), beam (9.85), floor (9.90), and vault (9.80).

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

Shaheda Keels and the UMass women's gymnastics team travel to Springfield College tonight at 7 p.m.

■ Scott's Shots

continued from page 12

ing the point again as the season winds down.

"Tell Coach Cal to spend some extra time on free throws," The Shirl said.

Hear that Cal? That's my mother talking and you better listen or there'll be no more brownies.

The Shirl, telling it like it is.

• Keep your feet in bounds and your eyes on anyone named Yinka.

David Scott is a Collegian columnist

SPORTS NOTICE – Activity Cards –

Student activity cards will be handed out today from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage.

Students are advised that activity cards will not be given out Thursday and students without activity cards will not be allowed to pick up tickets.

SPORTS NOTICE – Ticket Distribution

Tickets for the men's basketball games against St. Bonaventure (March 1) and St. Joseph's (March 4) will be given out Thursday at 7 a.m. at the Cage. No lines will be allowed to form until 6:30 a.m., and no activity cards will be given out Thursday.

Peer Assistance Information and Referral Hotline to support students experiencing harassment and other forms of intimidation

Applications available at the Dean of Students Office, 227 Whitmore, and must be received by 5:00 p.m., March 2, 1993

Training sessions for Spring 1993 will begin Wednesday March 3 from 4-6 p.m. and will continue on a weekly basis at that day and time.

Questions??? Contact Steve Sparling, Office of Human Relations, phone #: 545-0851 or Paul Vasconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students, phone #: 545-2684

Write for the Collegian
for further information contact any of our editors at 113 Campus Center

RUSH ΒΘΒ

Monday - 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks

"Hot Lips" Nuggets - Thursday - 10¢ Chicken

Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings

THIS WEEK ONLY

HAPPY 15th BIRTHDAY

to

Charlie's

1978 - 1993

Super Specials

10 oz. Miller Genuine Draft 50¢
1978 Prices!
Jumbo Jim Beam & Coke $1.99
Pint Bottles of Golden Anniversary Beer $1.50

Plus Our Famous Food Giveaway

Wednesday - 25¢ Cheese Pizza Slices

Mike's Westview

Drink Special
Miller Genuine Draft Bottles
$1.50

Wednesday Night is Guest Bartender's Night
This week's bartender is
Deanna Cook

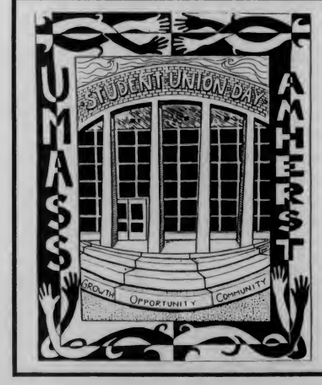
Thursday Night is Bud night
Come register to win a FREE pair of skis

Join us for our Friday Happy Hour, All You Can Eat Buffet, and our Sunday Brunch.

Drink Special
Bud Pitchers
$5.00

Always Something For Everyone!

Drink Special
Miller Genuine Draft Light Bottles
$1.50



STUDENT UNION DAY

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24
11:30 am - 4:00 pm
STUDENT UNION BUILDING

☺ ☻ FREE ☻ ☺

MUSIC • T-SHIRT TOSS
GIVEAWAYS • INFORMATION
DEMONSTRATIONS

Free Soda Coupons for The HATCH
Free Popcorn with drink purchase from The Mini Store

Sponsored by
The Division of Student Activities

ALL BEEF

2 BURGS 2 BUCKS

QUARTER POUNDERS

BURGERS • HOT DOGS
FRIES • ONION RINGS
PHILLY CHEESE STKS
SHAKES • FLOATS

PETE'S BRINEY BEEF

ROUTE 9 HADLEY 585-0241
ONE MILE WEST OF THE HAMPSHIRE MALL

■ Bruins

continued from page 12

week's colorful Sports Illustrated is an excellent article on UMaine's freshman superstar Paul Kariya.

It's nice to see SI's increased coverage of hockey this season. If Kariya resists the temptation to come to the NHL early, the Black Bears could rule the NCAA for several years to come. I'd bet on Maine over Ottawa, San Jose, Tampa Bay and usually Hartford. Less than two years 'til they face off in the Mullins against UMass.

Around the NHL:

Wayne Gretzky scored his first goal in seventeen games this week. This is the longest stretch during Gretzky's career that the Great One hasn't lit the goal light. Since returning from a herniated thoracic disc, Gretzky hasn't been the presence that he once was. Rumors of retirement and trades have been swirling around Wayne's World. Although these rumors have been denied, the aging Kings need a shake up fast.

The Kings who were atop the Smythe division early in the season have fallen to third with a sub .500 record. Even if Gretzky returns to form, the Kings are still a long way from contention.

It appears that North Stars will be leaving Minnesota, probably for Dallas. This move would not only make the Stars the only hockey team in the Lone-Star state, but the best hoop team in Dallas. USA TODAY's Kevin Allen reports that the Dallas Mavericks (they would be second best hoop team in Dallas) might try to block the move, because the cellar-dwelling Mavericks can ill afford to compete for fans until the franchise is back on its feet. North Star owner Norm Green hopes to persuade Maverick ownership that joint tenancy has its advantages.

A recent trade rumor has Edmonton sending Esa Tikkanen, Joe Murphy and Dave Manson to Detroit for Yves Racine, Dallas Drake, Keith Primeau and Mike Salinger. This deal would shore up the holes in the Red Wing defense and will make Detroit an instant contender for the Stanley Cup.

Suggestion to NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman: Draft Lottery. The Ottawa Senators last week tried to convince the San Jose Sharks to accept a proposal that would have the second to last place team draft first instead of the last place team. The Sharks management basically laughed at the proposal, realizing that finishing last (where they currently are) will earn them junior star Alexander Daigle. A draft lottery would eliminate such foolishness.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

AMHERST FIRE DEPARTMENT
is now recruiting for
VOLUNTEER FIRE FIGHTERS

Join the Student Force of Engine Company 3

Gain Valuable Experience
Serve Your Community

for information see our table on the Campus Center Concourse, Feb 24, 25, 26

Open house at the North Fire Station, Februrary 26, 5:00p.m.
Call 549-5419

ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA

All Who Are Eligible For Membership To Alpha Lambda Delta Must Pay Dues By February 26th.

Dues can be paid at
The Dean of Students Office.
227 Whitmore, 545-2684

Vision Showcase

★ EYEGLASSES ★
★ CONTACT LENSES ★
★ EYE EXAMINATION ★

584-8324
Hampshire Mall, Hadley

Eye Examination performed by
Dr. Robert E. Delaney
Independent Doctor of Optometry

Eyeglass & Exam $99.00 Complete

Price Includes

Frames from our special selection, 1st & 2nd division clear single vision uncoated plastic lenses, and, a standard Eye Examination.

Please present this coupon at time of purchase.
Offer expires 3/31/93 & precludes previous offers. College I.D. required.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE

CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center

PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild Production of Bedroom Farce Saturday (2/27) at 12 noon; Sun (2/25) at 12 noon or 7 pm all auditions will be in CC904 only one session need be attended ??? Call 545-0415

A Freebie! Learn to play bridge - FREE! SOM 101 Wed 2/24 9:5-30 pm 7:30 pm FREE T shirt & book.

Student Union Day!
Wednesday, February 24 from 12 4 WATCH OUT FOR FLYING T-SHIRTS! Come to the Student Union building and enjoy music in the Hatch, Earthfoods and Cape Cod Lounge! Participate in craft demonstrations and other open house activities. Get coupons for FREE sodas and goodies. All events are FREE! Brought to you by the Division of Student Activities!

The UMass Theatre Guild will be holding a membership meeting today 2/24 in CC174 at 7 pm New members welcome!! Questions? Call 545-0415

ANNOUNCEMENTS

History Honors Society
Phi Alpha Theta
Is now accepting applications
Applications are available in Herter 608 Both Undergraduate and graduate students

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Escort '87
No rust runs great
Must sell $2300/B.O.
Call 665-2350

83 VW Rabbit 97000 mi GOOD COND $500 willing to negotiate
Call Doug 256-4253

COLLEGE PIZZA

SPRING SPECIAL
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $6.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549 6098
549 8073

ENTERTAINMENT

Bands: We Want You
In the SU Ballroom
In April
Call 6 4812 or 253-9707

FOR RENT

Cape Cod – group summer rentals – Waterfront Houses Falmouth Area 508 477-6000

112 Town House Apartment available for rent $267.50 available immediately to be shared with male graduate student 545-6744 or 665-2810 E

Room downtown. Quiet, private, lease through Aug., $350/mo inclusive 253-4236 9am - 9pm

FOR SALE

Bose Speakers, Sony Receiver and CD Player $350 00 or B O. 253 3841 Leave message

Guns N Roses
2 floor tickets
Mullens Arena 3/19
546 4910

Metallica Photos from Mullins Show 8x10, 11x14. Tape covers. Call 253 9794 after 7 pm. Josh.

OW Ticket To Los Angeles
Use by 3/10 $125
413 586 7865

Old color TV for sale good working condition $55 leave message 253 5843

GREEKS AND CLUBS

$1,000 AN HOUR!
Each member of your frat, sorority, team, club, etc. pitches in just one hour and your group can raise $1000 in just a few days! Plus a chance to earn $1000 for yourself! No cost. No obligation. 1-800 932 0528 ext. 65

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

Camp Staff Openings: Girls' resident/day camps (Stafford Springs, Bristol, CT) Seek administrators, Counselors willing to work and play hard start 6/20. Call 203 677 2667 for application or see Connecticut Yankee Girl Scouts at Camp Day March 2 (Student Union Ballroom) 10 5

Camp Trucking is interviewing for summer positions during spring break. Individuals will learn different phases of business management, handle phones, and have general office assignments. File maker Pro and Macintosh experience helpful. $7/hr. Relaxed atmosphere. Call 508 663-1744 before March 1.

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT
Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000 $4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632 1146 ext. J5001

Summer Camp on Cape Cod
Need enthusiastic, dedicated people for workforce with kids. Beautiful location, excellent program.
Competitive Salaries. Call James, at 549 8353 for info and application

Summer jobs and Internships
University Directories, the nations largest publisher of campus telephone directories (including UMass at Amherst), is interviewing goal oriented students for a challenging, full time summer position. Gain valuable experience in advertising, sales, and public relations. Average earnings $3900. Expense paid training program in Chapel Hill, NC. College credit may be available. Interviews on UMass at Amherst campus February 24th. Information and interview sign up available today at the Visitors Center or call 1 800 743 5556

INSTRUCTION

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

I need my bookbag back!
Black leather shoulder bag containing extremely important items.
Hampshire DC – Feb 18
Call 6 7187. No questions asked.

LOST! Brand new glasses grey and black plastic with silver frame. Lost in CC or Basics. Call April 6 4574

Lost Passport and important papers in brown purse with brown gloves in S&S Plastic bag Contact PRASHANT 549 9186 reward

Lost Ring – Reward
Totman – Feb 1st
Friendship "LTM"
Call collect 508 827 4555

Lost Wire-rim glasses in the back of the Big Green American pick up that gave me a ride to school last week. Please call 253 9794 after 9 pm. Ask for Mr. Clark

PERSONALS

Allison Grady
Happy 20th Birthday
I love ya little sis
Have a great day.
Love,
Jennifer (Squeakers)

Congrats to the New Pledges of Alpha Epsilon Phi
You guys are the best!!!!
Get ready for a Phitastic semester!
Phi love – The Sisters of AEPhi

Congrats to the newest pledges of Sigma Delta Tau Andrea, Melissa, Shea, Melissa, Rehana, Tracey, Michelle, Kim, Heather, Cheryl, and Lauren! Get ready for a great semester! We are very happy you're with us!
Love,
The Sisters of SDT

Jack – You have made me so happy! It's great to have a real partner in my life. You're the balls!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY GREG MONTELLO
Happy 20th sparky, I'll help celebrate with ya this weekend. Be good.
DLR

Rachel–
Welcome to AEPhi!
We're always here
for you now.
Phi Love,
A Friend

Sigma Kappa Pledges
Allyson, Aimee, Bea, Beth, Dana, Ellen, Gina, Heather, Heather, Kim, Kate, Kate, Kerri, Lisa, Marie, Robin Sonya, Suzanne Holly
Congratulations and good luck It's going to be a great semester.
In Sigma Love,
The Sisters

This little pig has no mind of its own 3/2/93!

Tricia–
Welcome to our phinominal family!
Good luck!
LML
Phi Friend

To the Weird girl I met at Health Services – Thanks for a great weekend. Busy Friday?

RIDE WANTED

I need a ride to Ithaca/Syracuse Friday Feb. 26 Ricky 6 5260 SS

SERVICES

SCHOLARSHIPS GUARENTEED 1-800-666-2137

SPORTS CARDS

Sportstop cards
Mt. Farms Mall

TRAVEL

SPRINGBREAK!!
Panama and Daytona
$139 and up
7 nights
Beachfront
deadline SOON!
Call Erica 546-0223

Spring Break: CANCUN, NASSAU
from $299
Organize a small group for FREE trip
Call 1(800) Get Sun-1

Spring Break '93! Last chance! Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, from $459! Florida from $149. Organize group travel free! 1 800 426 7710

TAKE IT OFF!!!
Spring Break '93
Best Deals Going Fast
Jesse 549 7472

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Resumes, papers, theses.
Laser printing, on-campus
Pick-up and delivery
Rosemary 323 5031

WANTED

Need garage space or parking space for non-running car for about 4 5 months evening 549 0142

Phys 142 tutor needed
Will pay $8 an hour
Call 549 8244 ASAP

Want to buy: Nice Pultrout car stereo or nice protable CD player. Call James at 253 9652

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546 0580 or
Jen 546 4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January. 548 2296

Sports

NCAAs may have Mass participation

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

When you think of hot spots for amateur basketball in the United States, places such as Indiana, New York City, Kentucky and North Carolina quickly come to mind.

This season, four Massachusetts college teams are trying to add the Bay State to that list. For the first time ever, the Commonwealth may send four schools to the NCAA Tournament in March.

The University of Massachusetts (18-5, 9-2 in the Atlantic 10), ranked No. 21 nationally, is a sure bet, save a total late season collapse, to make a return trip to the NCAAs.

Boston College (14-8, 8-6 in the Big East) has placed itself on the bubble after dropping three of its last four contests, but with a late season surge and a strong showing at the Big East Tournament, the Eagles could return to the Tournament for the first time since 1985.

Holy Cross (20-5, 12-1 in the Patriot League) will need to win its conference championship in order to gain an invitation to the Big Dance. The Crusaders are currently in a first place tie at the top of the Patriot League with Bucknell.

The regular season champion hosts the post-season tournament, a distinct advantage, since Holy Cross has not lost a conference game at home all season.

Northeastern (16-7, 9-2 in the North Atlantic) has been the most regular Bay State participant in the NCAAs. The Huskies have played in the NCAAs seven times in the past 12 years. Northeastern will again need to win its conference tournament to earn a bid.

Massachusetts, a state long dominated by the NBA's Boston Celtics, has quickly developed an interest in college basketball.

"The interest in college basketball in this state has picked up," Karl Fogel, head coach at Northeastern, said. "It's not night and day, but with the Celtics down a bit this season, people are beginning to get interested in the college game, and we're providing them with winners."

UMass coach John Calipari said, "The winning is great for our fans and for the Commonwealth."

Calipari said the emphasis should not be placed merely on Massachusetts teams but on all of New England.

"You have to look at the four Massachusetts teams as well as Rhode Island, Providence College and Connecticut," he said. "I think all of this is great for the region. Let's keep some of the high school talent at home, instead of letting them leave the region."

Reid Oslin, director of sports information at Boston College, said, "The success has generated a lot more publicity for all four programs. We had a run of success in the mid-80s, where we made the Sweet Sixteen three out of four years, but we didn't have this kind of enthusiasm.

"As you people out at UMass have found out, a basketball crowd going bonkers on campus makes for a great atmosphere. When your winning, it's fun and that's what college is all about."

And winning is what Massachusetts basketball is all about.

COURTESY HOLY CROSS

Bill Walker, who was named to the Abdow's All-Tournament team in December, will try to lead Holy Cross into the NCAAs.

Minutewomen fall to Lady Hawks

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

Kim Kristofik scored her 900th career point in Tuesday's loss at St. Joseph's. Kristofik, a senior, is a big reason for the team's resurgence.

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

After being upset by the University of Massachusetts women's basketball team on Jan. 28 at the Curry Hicks Cage, St. Joseph's entered Monday night's game with not only a victory on the line but their pride as well.

Thanks to a game-high 24 points from Amy Mallon and some key hoops down the stretch, the Lady Hawks managed to come through, redeeming themselves on their home court with 68-57 victory over a gritty Minutewomen squad.

UMass was right in the game early in the second half, trailing by three points on a Melissa Gurile jumper with 14:45 left. This would be the closest the Minutewomen would get the rest of the way, as St. Joe's proceeded to go on an 11-3 run over the next 6:30 effectively putting the game away.

UMass falls to 9-13 overall and 5-7 in the conference with the loss. St Joseph's improves to 16-6 overall and 7-3 in the A-10, good for second place in the A-10.

One bright spot for the Minutewomen was senior Kim Kristofik, who scored her 900th career point while chalking up a team-high 19 points and five rebounds. Kristofik is the only player in Umass women's basketball history to have 900 points, 500 rebounds and 100 steals.

In the first half, UMass tied the game at 10 and it looked as though coach Joanie O'Brien and company might take the lead. But it wasn't to be as the Lady Hawks went on an 11-4 run thanks to key hoops from Mallon as well as teammates Katie Curry (15 pts) and Audrey Codner (11 pts). St. Joe's led 37-29 at the half despite the fact that UMass shot a steady 50 percent (42 percent for the game).

Playing well for UMass were a couple of the superfrosh, Octavia Thomas and Kim Gregory. Gregory scored 13 points off the bench and Thomas, who seems to improve with every game she plays, finished with 17 pts and six rebs.

Hoop Notes: UMass' nine wins this season are the most victories since the 1988-89 campaign, when the team had a record of 11-18 . . . freshman Melissa Gurile has scored 313 points this season and needs 62 to break the freshman scoring record; she also has 184 rebs, 33 away from surpassing the frosh record . . . the

Women's gym heads south to Springfield

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

Tonight, at 7 p.m., the University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team travels to Springfield College for the first of three meets that, according to head coach Alfie Mitchell, could be one of the stepping stones to the Regionals.

"For the regionals, the next three meets [Springfield, New Hampshire, Georgia] can pretty much tell the tale. We could have a solid lock [to get in] if we perform well," said Mitchell.

The Minutewomen (4-3) have had a midseason break since the last time they took the mat, a loss one week ago Monday against the Northern Illinois Huskies, 185.45-184.95. Coach Mitchell feels that the time off may have helped his team

Turn to WOMEN'S GYM, page 10

Boston Bruins, Maine Bears on top in hockey

Hockey fans in Beantown are smiling. On Wednesday, the Bruins traveled to the Montreal Forum and bested the first place Canadiens 5-2. In the past, the Forum has been a regular season "House of Pain" for Boston, but nobody told rookie goalie John Blue, who turned back 29 Canadien shots. The Bruins are breathing down the neck of the second place Quebec Nordiques, who are only two points ahead.

Matt
VAUTOUR

When the Minnesota North Stars come to the Garden, Tuesday night, they will see a new old face on the Bruins right wing. Yes, after several setbacks and months of rehabilitation, Cam Neely will return to the lineup. With only 24 games remaining, the Bruins may have picked a good time to peak.

The University of Maine Black Bears finally lost their first game this season. The defeat came at the hands of the fifth ranked Boston University Terriers. The top ranked Black Bears remain high atop the NCAA with a 30-1-2 record. Bet on the top ranked Black Bears to waltz through the NCAAs to their first national title. Hidden within in last

Turn to BRUINS, page 11

Scott's shots runs the gamut

There's a new light over the pool table at the Montague Inn. It's a new fangled, modern deal, like Mullins, that replaces what was The Cage of all pool lighting fixtures. I'll never understand change.

• It would have been too much to ask for Mike Williams to hit another buzzer beater and in the grand scheme of things the loss was not very damaging. Now Cal's Pals know they're not invincible and lessons like that are beneficial come Tournament time.

David
SCOTT

• The Rhode Island game exemplified the poor officiating that has been present throughout this season. It has to improve now, because this is the time of season when a bad call can send a team on an early Spring Break.

• In what some may consider the biggest upset in recent sports history, Dick Kirby of Orchard Park, N.Y. won the Turkey Calling Championship held in Louisville, Ky. this past weekend. Equally impressive was the two event sweep by Mississippi's Tucker Crisp, who took both the gobbling and owl hooting crown.

• With UMass women's hoop on a steady rise and with programs at Vermont and the University of Connecticut in the national picture, the pieces are in place for the establishment of some serious East Coast women's hoops.

• I let my dog, Bo, out in the snow the other night and he returned with four inches of packed powder. Small squirrels were using his tail as a jump.

• Did the Globetrotters win last week?

• So Roger Clemens doesn't especially care for Lou Gorman? Does Lou Gorman care for Lou Gorman? Is it spring training if there isn't a Clemens Controversy? If Ellis Burks wins the batting title in Chicago, are we left to wonder "what we'd do with an Ellis Burks anyways?" These and other intriguing questions will never be answered, but as long as there's the Red Sox there'll be reason to ask.

• Last year John Calipari's standard question after games went something like,"Is Lou Roe the rookie of the year in the A-10 or what?" The final balloting answered "no." This year, redemption should be Roe's as he's named the conference's player of the year.

• Cal should be joining Lou on the podium in Philly next week as he picks up the award he should have gotten last year, as Coach of the Year.

• Has the hockey all-star break ended? If so, does that mean every team has already qualified for the playoffs?

• The Pro Bowl went to overtime and the NBA All-Star game needed the extra five to decide the winner. Maybe these games do mean something.

• The UMass men's swimming and diving team won their 108th consecutive New England Championship this past weekend. Which leads to the question, how much is a Yar worth? Regardless, the guy's built a dynasty.

• From turkey calling to swimming, this space runs the gamut - all in an effort to serve you, the reader.

• The Jim Valvano tribute on Sunday brought a tear even to the most hardened sports fans' eyes and despite what rules Valvano might have broken at N.C. State, he is now a model of courage.

• The pizza battle Uptown has officially begun and Vegas is installing the veteran joint as an early favorite. The battle will be won in the trenches.

• J.R. Rider has everything necessary for the NBA, including the professional upbringing at UNLV.

• The Shirl has been complaining all year long about foul shooting in college basketball and she is emphasiz-

Turn to SCOTT'S SHOTS, page 10

Thursday February 25, 1993
VOLUME CII ISSUE 85

Clear and cold tonight, 20s. Snow tomorrow. Buy shovels.

Local News:
Vice chancellor Thomas B. Robinson announces to the Undergraduate Senate he plans to investigate certain administrative offices. Page 3.

This Weekend:
'Swamp Yankee' Bill Morrissey will play his detailed and emotional folk music at the Iron Horse this Sunday.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England • Founded in 1890

TORSTEN KRACHT / COLLEGIAN

YEE-HAH! — Six-year-old Amherst resident Taylor Goodwin takes on the the slopes by University Apartments.

UM, Mexico to join for telescope project

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press

Massachusetts astronomers want to join Mexico in building the world's biggest high-frequency radio telescope, a 22-story-high steel and Gortex monster to digest signals from the beginning of time.

"It's not only great scientifically, but it's great for North American collaboration," said William Irvine, a University of Massachusetts astronomer leading the project.

Astronomers say a 165-foot-wide telescope dish made of steel and aluminum could collect electromagnetic radiation from up to 10 billion light years away. Such signals have traveled all those years across the universe, which is believed to have taken shape 10 to 15 billion years ago.

The dish, which would be housed inside a 22-story-high dome of Gortex and steel, could read the high-frequency electromagnetic waves from interstellar molecular material. It would let scientists take a peek, as they do at some of the world's other large telescopes, at the universe in its formative years.

"We can see material before it has yet formed stars," Irvine said Wednesday.

University of Massachusetts officials hope the government of Mexico, which is spending hundreds of millions to build up its science and technology capabilities, will fund $18 million of the more than $36 million project. They are asking the National Science Foundation for about $13 million and the state of Massachusetts for about $5 million.

Gov. William Weld and Piedad Robertson, the state's education secretary, promoted the project to Mexican officials on a trip there in November.

Maria Rodriguez, an education spokeswoman for the governor, said the state looks upon the project as a way of creating jobs while promoting academic exchange between the two countries.

"We offer them through our colleges and universities our expertise; in turn, we have a chance to exploit and use . . . the telescope for our scientific purposes. There is the obvious advantage of jobs that are created for both countries in the construction and operation of the telescope," Rodriguez said.

Organizers say the American funding will pay for U.S.-based design and manufacture of components, generating hundreds of jobs.

Turn to ASTRONOMY, page 7

Western eco-terrorism

Rich exploit Third World environment

Editor's Note: The following editorial is the fourth of a five-part series leading up to the Feb. 27 Women's Conference.

By SHYAMALA IVATURY
Special to the Collegian

The savage destruction of our environment, instigated by the wealthiest citizens of the world, impacts the lives of the poorest populations.

FOCUS on the 1993 Women's Conference
EmPOWERing Women

The human victims of ecological degradation are typically the rural populations of the Third World, the land-poor and landless masses for whom ecological questions translate into food, fuel and fodder — a matter of life and death.

Soil depletion in the African Sahel (which includes the Senegal, Mauritania, Niger, Mali, Burkina Faso, Nigeria, Chad and Sudan) has resulted in mass poverty and starvation.

Deforestation is destroying the lives of the indigenous people of the Amazon. The Brundtland Commission has determined that every year 11 million acres of tropical forests are being denuded despite the well-known fact that forests act as watersheds, maintain ecological balance, sustain productive crops and allow for animal husbandry.

Although loggers remove only 5 to 10 percent of the wood from forests, their mechanized logging process destroys an-

Turn to ENVIRONMENT, page 8

Weld expresses wish to stem tuition hikes

By TOM OUELLETTE
Collegian Correspondent

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. William Weld and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci outlined their top three priorities as jobs, public education and crime at an open meeting Tuesday at Springfield Technical Community College.

The state's two top leaders fielded questions ranging from the economy to higher education from the approximately 200 people in attendance.

One of the meetings most repeatedly asked questions was that concerning the state's higher education costs. Many students from various state colleges and universities, including UMass-Amherst, were in attendance and asked why tuition costs rise higher than the rate of inflation.

Weld responded, "I'm trying to stop that."

He also added that tax credit will be granted to students to help defray tuition costs, although he did not elaborate how on this will done.

Weld confronted the issue of higher educational costs by saying, "politics should not interfere with the management of our state colleges."

"My philosophy on higher education is to give our educational institutions

Turn to WELD, page 2

Robinson seeks to set new course for UMass

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Coming from California State Polytechnic University, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Thomas B. Robinson said it took him a while to not only adjust to the snowy weather in Amherst, but also to the overall climate at the University of Massachusetts.

Robinson, who took over the position last September, was selected after an extensive national search.

"I am a new person coming in, so my eyes are a little different than the people who have been here for a long time. The politics of the campus were considerably different than here," Robinson said. "In California I had a very good relationship with the student body, so I really want to build relationships with students here."

"I dealt with multicultural issues every day on that campus as I do here. And the context was a little different though because we had a very, very diverse University not only among students but also we had diverse staff, administration and diverse faculty. That was very positive," Robinson said.

And so under the shadow last semester's racial incidents, Robinson took his position in a spacious white-walled office on the third floor of Whitmore Administration Building overlooking Haigis Mall.

On his first day, Robinson said he was faced with a racial incident and a month later he was hit with the Washington Tower incident in which resident assistant Arlens Barosy was racially assaulted.

In an attempt to prevent further racial incidents, Robinson established a resident assistant role review committee in December, which recently reported that resident assistants needed more respect from students and less responsibility.

He said he quickly saw other problematic situations with Housing Services, Health Services and Student Activities, and so he formed review committees.

Health Services is being reviewed by an outside consulting firm that deals with examining college health programs, he said. The Student Activities Office has had a history of problems over administering the Student Activities Trust Fund. The results will come out later this semester, Robinson said.

But Robinson added he would like to have program reviews for all the University's services to help improve student life on campus by making them more accessible.

"I think a lot of the situations that have developed here over a long period of time and not just one incident, but the way in which issues are randomly addressed, really brings less than a satisfactory response from everybody's point of view," Robinson said.

Robinson said he plans to hold informal meetings with student groups to hear their concerns as part of his "open-door" policy.

Turn to ROBINSON, page 6

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN

Thomas B. Robinson, the new vice chancellor for student affairs.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... David Rivera
Managing Editor ..... Michelle Bayliss
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... Jason George
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editors ..... Lisa Curtis & Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Matt Kahn
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Mimi Fellner
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Melanie DeSilva

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Dana Grossman
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Lisa Jezowski
Editorial Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Address all correspondence to:
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Thursday, February 25

Lecture — "American Popular Culture Abroad: Cultural Imperialism? Global Homogeneity? Or Bridge to Democracy?" by Benjamin Barber at 4:15 p.m. in the Neilson Library Browsing Room.

Friday, February 26

Meeting — Muslim Students Association is holding Jumaa Salat in rm. 904 in the Campus Center.

Saturday, February 27

Dance — "Jhankar Night," presented by the South Asian Club. International Dance party to benefit an orphanage. All welcome, 10th floor Campus Center Hotel, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Auditions — UMass Theatre Guild's production of "Bedroom Farce." Held in Room 904 of the Campus Center at noon, Sunday at noon, or Sunday at 7 p.m. For more info call 545-0415.

Ramadan Iftar — Muslim Students Association is holding Magrib Salat service and a pot-luck Iftar (Breaking Fast), from 5:15 to 7 p.m. in the Campus Center rm. 917. Call Fatima at 546-0962 or Syed at 546-1525 for more information.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Brian Gormley

Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

VANDALISM

• Sunday afternoon a rear window was smashed on a vehicle parked in Sylvan Drive. There were 50 cassette tapes and a tape holder stolen. Police estimate the total value of the stolen goods at $550.

DRUG LAW OFFENSES

• Police received a complaint of marijuana in Webster Residence Hall Sunday afternoon. Police confiscated the drug from two individuals, who will be summonsed to a showcause hearing.

ACCIDENT-PROPERTY DAMAGE

• Sunday night a State vehicle made a left hand turn into the Physical Plant on Campus Center Way. It was struck by a vehicle attempting to pass the van, causing $600 of damage. The operator was cited for improper passing.

• A vehicle operated by Wolfgang Wedler of Sunderland was making a turn in Lot 45 when his vehicle slid on the snow-covered surface and collided with a parked vehicle Tuesday morning. The collision pushed that vehicle into another parked vehicle. The estimated damage to the three vehicles was over $2500. No citations were issued.

LARCENY

• An individual in Pierpont Residence Hall reported on Tuesday that her gold ring and bracelet were stolen on Feb. 21. The theft occurred when the room was left unattended for a brief period. The bracelet and ring were valued at $480.

■ Weld

continued from page 1

the money to get them started, employ a top-notch Board of Trustees, and let [the Board] run the institution by themselves," Weld said. "We have to trust someone sometimes and I think if we put the right people on Boards of Trustees statewide there should be no problems.

Tuesday night's hour-long meeting, with just under 200 in attendance, was hailed a success by state Sen. Brian Lees , R-Long, who lauded the process, as well as the Governor, saying, "this is a great, great opportunity to get their message across. This is the Governor's forte. His candor was excellent."

Weld and Cellucci capitalized on the recent political trend of Town Hall Meetings, which are forums that allow the public to not only meet politicians face-to-face but provide them the opportunity to ask questions as well.

Such meetings have recently been viewed as a successful process in which politicians can effectively reach out to people and deliver their messages, as witnessed and made popular from the 1992 Presidential election.

ALL NEW Thursday Night Wheel of SAVED FORTUNES
8:30p.m. - Midnight
After Bowling, Spin the Wheel for your rate... YOU COULD WIN $50
Red Dot.....25¢ Off Each Game
Blue Dot.....50¢ Off Each Game
Green Dot.....1 FREE Game
Yellow Dot.....3 FREE Games
Orange Dot.....$5.00 Off Bowling
White Dot.....Pick up 5-7-10 and your bowling on us!
Black Dot.....$50.00 - Strike on the Headless Rack and WIN!
NORTHAMPTON BOWL
525 Pleasant Street • Northampton, MA • 584-4830

Rich's Continues With Great Prices!
Winter Clearance
25% - 50% Off
Selected Items
RICH'S
RICH'S ARMY/NAVY & CASUAL CLOTHES
24 Center St., Northampton
586-0275
(Next to the Iron Horse)

New Management
SOUTHWOOD APARTMENTS & TOWNHOUSES
1 Bdrm $360
2 Bdrm from $430
3 Bdrm $690
4 Bdrm $880
• Free Bus
• Hot Water incl.
• Fully Carpeted
• Dining Room
• Tennis Court
• No Pets
Call 1-413-253-4055

SUMMER SESSION
Main Session
June 21-August 13
Language Workshops
June 7-August 13
Tuition is $200 plus $70 per unit. Tuition is the same for all United States residents. Some courses have special fees.
Write for catalog
Summer Session
22 Wheeler Hall
Berkeley, CA 94720
(510) 642-3611
Name
Address
School
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA
BERKELEY
1993

ZAWA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Amherst Brattleboro
413.253.2563 802.254.4421

Smith Hadley's
TOWER THEATRES
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY 533-2663
"A CROWNING ACHIEVEMENT · A MASTERPIECE"
"SO MUCH FUN THAT IT BECOMES A GUILTY PLEASURE."
"THE FIRST GREAT MOVIE OF 1993!"
HOWARDS END
Fri at 6:15 & 8:55
Sat and Sun at 3:30, 6:15 & 8:55
Mon - Thurs at 6:15 & 8:55
Richard Gere Jodie Foster
SOMMERSBY
PG-13
Fri at 4:10, 6:30 & 9:00
Sat and Sun at 1:55, 4:10, 6:30 & 9:00
Mon - Thurs at 6:45 & 8:55

Local News

Fair focuses attention on student activities

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
Elementary education major Julie Mink tries her hand at marbleizeing in the craft shop during its Student Union Day open house.

By MATT McCARTHY
Collegian Correspondent

"Celebration" was the key word yesterday as the Student Union Building exploded in color and life as part of Student Union Day.

Virtually all the Registered Student Organizations and student-run businesses on campus were decked out in streamers and balloons for the day's activities.

All the activities produced "a festive atmosphere," said Student Activities Services programming assistant Gloria Santa Anna.

"It's real fun and busy," said Maureen Caswell, a student working at the Mini Store.

"Finally, something good for free," a student was overheard to say.

Organizers said the day was held to celebrate the Student Union and show what it provides for the students.

Music from local campus musicians could be heard in the Hatch, Earthfoods, the Cape Cod Lounge and the Student Union balcony.

Among the student performances, Nathan Crick played saxophone on the Student Union balcony, while students in the Cape Cod Lounge students listened the soft guitar sounds of Pat McCorkle. The hard-rock group Monghani played in the Hatch during the afternoon."

"Pretty fun," said student Adam Myerson. "It's nice to have musicians that can play," he added.

A number of other bands played during the day. Organizers said they used local musicians from the University to show the talent on this campus.

The Craft Center had an open house featuring paper marbling with organic paints, pottery and jewelry making. The center offers regular classes on these activities for students.

Student Activities Services, the day's sponsors, provide organizational, programming and financial advice for the more than 200 active RSOs. A table set near the Mini Store provided free pins, coupons, bumperstickers and information about RSOs. Organizers also had spontaneous "T-shirt tosses," with T-shirts thrown down from the balcony to students below.

Robinson unveils plan to investigate services

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Thomas B. Robinson told the Undergraduate Student Senate last night he plans to investigate the practices of several administrative and student service offices.

Robinson said University Health Services, the Student Activities Office and Housing Services will be reviewed and at least the results of the UHS inquiry will be made available to students.

Robinson said he wondered if Housing Services was attentive enough to student concerns.

"I'm aware that problems are not always being addressed by Housing Staff," Robinson said.

The Student Activities Office would be looked at in terms of its relationship with the Senate and how the Student Activities Trust Fund is used, is also being reviewed, Robinson said.

Robinson said he is looking at ways to develop a more advisory relationship between students and administration.

"I'm reshuffling my organization, trying to cut down on the buffering between students and the administration. I want it to be more accessible to students," Robinson said.

Robinson also said he is working to develop a better campus climate.

"The climate we now have may not be comfortable for students of color or for women," Robinson said. "We need changes in policies, procedures and attitudes on campus."

Student Government President Jen Wood said she is trying to secure a permanent voting place on campus.

Wood said Hampden Commons is being considered as a possible polling place. Proof of adequate parking, handicap access and building space must be demonstrated in order to make it eligible, she said.

Student Trustee Kevin Newnan said he is lobbying for 0 percent increase in tuition at the University.

Newnan also said he met with the chancellor's search committee in Springfield and the first candidates will visit the campus before spring break.

The Senate voted to offer continued support to Legal Services and its efforts to regain the right to represent students in court.

Office seekers tout toughness

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

David Nuñez and Al Lizana announced their candidacies for student government president and student trustee yesterday before about 25 students gathered in the Student Union lobby.

"We need someone that talks tough and is not just friends with the administration," Nuñez said. "We can't have people telling us where our business is."

Nuñez said reforming University Health Services is one of his goals if he is elected.

"Health services is a joke," Nuñez said. "We must make them more accountable to us."

Nuñez said he would also pursue financial aid reform and help the Legal Services regain its litigation rights.

Nuñez and Lizana also addressed the need for student unity and empowerment.

We want to unify the campus and get people working together," Nuñez said.

"Any gains made for students of color are gains made for all students," Nuñez said. "I'm only interested in working for students. I don't care if they're gay, Black, White. We have to get everyone involved in student government."

"When tension is high, it really affects the ability to be a student," Lizana said. "All students have the right to walk on campus and feel safe."

Lizana and Nuñez expressed support for each others' accomplishments and goals for student government.

"Dave and I are definitely the most progressive ticket running this semester," Lizana said.

"Sometimes I feel like Dave and I were Siamese twins separated at birth," Lizana said. "We've done so many of the same things."

Lizana said he and Nuñez were both involved in student government in high school.

Women's studies dept. void of male students

By JOY COLLINS
Collegian Correspondent

There has never been a male graduate from the University of Massachusetts women's studies department, according to one of the department's faculty members.

Arlene Avakian, a lecturer of various women's studies courses, said there are currently no male women's studies majors and only three or four male minors.

"What does this say about the men on this campus?" Avakian said.

"All men are connected to women in some way — mothers, sisters, friends, lovers — men should have more interest [in women's issues]."

Avakian said women's studies courses are open to everyone and there is nothing barring anyone from participating in the department.

She said the introductory class, which is approximately 10 to 20 percent male, is a large lecture which fulfills a general education requirement and it attracts people who otherwise would not have take a women's studies course.

Carla Garabedian, a women's studies major, said, "I think that the title 'women's studies' intimidates men.

"It probably prevents some men from taking classes in the department."

Avakian said that the upper level classes are smaller, involve more discussion and have fewer male students.

"The men who take these upper level courses have a genuine interest in women's issues," she said. "They are self-selected men."

Matt Genatossio, a psychology major, said, "Most people think that women's studies classes are only for women and that men don't have a place in those classrooms."

Jason Schrieber, an undeclared major taking "Indigenous Women's Struggles for National Liberation," said women's studies courses were recommended to him by friends from different universities.

He added that he is familiar with the reputation of women's studies being a forum for male-bashing.

Schrieber, who was previously an engineering major, said he "felt that engineering was too focused and narrow and that I need to open my mind and broaden my view."

JOSH MCKENNA / COLLEGIAN
WATER, WATER, EVERYWHERE... — Construction worker Joe Szymkowicz helps build the town of Amherst another water plant.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Capitalism rooted in exploitation

I sense Chris J. Petropoulos doesn't believe anything he sees, not to mention half of what he says (Collegian, Feb. 18). Corporations may prove scapegoats, but it is the economic foundation which is the source of our grievances.

Chris, how can you defend firms when they do not care about you at all? Chief Executive Officers (CEOs) only care about their profits. Firms feel they have no social responsibility, doing whatever it takes to achieve a higher profit. Even if this means leaving this country to exploit Hondurans for 55 cents per hour.

If we let companies "control their own business affairs," monopolies (price control) would still exist, as well as child labor exploitation and continuing destruction of the environment. Prioritizing short run profit over the environment is not wise. It is contradictory to the idea of expansionist and long-term growth of the economy, not to mention our biospheric existence.

As for the "wonderful comforts" of this country, few enjoy them. More importantly, at whose expense did these comforts arise? The Industrial Revolution was fueled on the blood, sweat and tears of people of color. It is of the utmost importance not to forget how this country achieved the "wonderful comforts" it has.

Exploitation and Imperialism are concepts that hold constant with capitalism's philosophy. All this in the inherent nature of capitalism and its profit-driven corporations. It is whether one is a capitalist (have) or a worker (have not), that defines a corporation, with its hierarchy, as a friend or a foe.

Kaisar Khatak
Amherst

Open invite to judge for yourself

As many of you know, there have been some misconceptions about the 2-in-20 special interest residential program in Mary Lyon. Questions have been raised about the purpose of this floor and while those of us who live here have tried to answer them (Collegian, Feb 10) people persist in believing the misconceptions.

We tried to explain the need for safe space, but people still insist that roommates are sleeping together and complain that it is not fair. If we wanted to sleep together we could do it anywhere on campus. As Melanie DeSilva conveyed in her column (Collegian, Feb 17) we are here for a source of protection and community. But there is even more to it than that.

That is why we of 2-in-20 SIRP are holding an open house Friday, Feb. 26 from 3:30-5 p.m. We want to dispell the myths and allow people to judge for themselves what the fourth floor is all about. We are submitting this letter as an open invitation to anyone who has questions or concerns about life on the fourth floor of Mary Lyon. Come one, come all and see for yourself what the 2-in-20 SIRP is all about.

Deven DeMarco
Northeast

Pass on the University Lite

The face of the University has changed in the last four years. The students walking across the concourse and eating in the Bluewall are not the same students who protested state budget cuts and hung the governor in effigy. The student body today wears cheaper clothing, drives dying cars to meaningless for-money-only jobs, and they all drink University Lite.

Marc
ELLIOTT

University Lite has a smaller budget, fewer classes, fewer instructors and only costs 47 percent more than it did four years ago when times were more promising for UMass. Odd that students who can afford it less, drink University Lite by the bucket.

Surpise! The University takes almost twice as much money out of students' pockets than it did four years ago. Yet, according to freshman orientation questionnaires, students today can less afford expensive University Lite than they could have when times were easier.

Eighty-four percent of the '89 freshman class (this year's seniors) said their parents' combined income was $30,000 and over. Only 77.4 percent of this year's freshmen claimed likewise.

What happened? Well, enrollment went down and services went to seed in the wake of the Dukakis education and accounting era. State aid for the campus that calls itself "the flagship" plummeted and Chancellor Duffey's "margin of excellence" gave way to Chancellor O'Brien's "year of austerity." In the 1989-1990 school year, the Amherst campus had 17,658 full-time undergraduate enrolled. This year there are 16,072.

When a grenade is dropped in a foxhole, the people who can get out, do. A good guess would be that when the University was being turned into University Lite, the students who could afford to flee to private schools or public schools with more sane state Legislatures, did. When the financially able left, the University lost students and their tuition money.

But this is strange. Four years ago, the campus was overrun by people upset at tuition hikes and budget cuts. There were rallies all the time, non-stop, cold weather or not. Now, with a student body even less able to handle sky-rocketing fees, there is nothing. Perhaps the students are too busy working to pay these inflated costs and they don't have the time to march in circles outside government offices that habitually ignore them.

Chances that the Board of Trustees will lower tuition (4-6 percent increase in the works) or the now astronomical curriculum fee are slim, according to Chairman Gordon Oakes.

Kevin Newnan, the Amherst student trustee, agrees that decreases are unlikely, although he's not exactly happy about it. Newnan believes it futile to oppose tuition hikes and prefers to set "the parameters in which tuition can move" and "try to get into a regular habit" of small but regular tuition increases that are less than inflation. It's more or less a novel, if not sneaky, way of getting the price down.

Meanwhile, representatives of some of the other state colleges have convinced the Higher Education Coordinating Committee to postpone making a recommendation on next year's tuition increase. Students have until March 4 to do something, anything.

Either students on the Amherst campus can join leaders at other state colleges and fight for lower tuition and, more importantly, fees or maybe they'd rather sit back, prop their feet up on their desks and enjoy a nice cold, frothy glass of University Lite.

Marc Elliott is a Collegian columnist with a calculator and friends in the research offices of Whitmore.

You have a right to choose hemp

David Rivera's editorial (Collegian, Feb. 23) on hemp makes several disturbing assumptions. "Most people do it to forget their troubles. It's no different from alcohol, tobacco, heroin, or crack." This assumes motives for personal habits. I know plenty of cigarette smokers and beer drinkers who don't smoke and drink "to forget their troubles," and likewise pot smokers shouldn't have their motives judged by observers like yourself.

Rivera concludes by emotionally describing a friend who overdosed on the hard drugs a marijuana habit led to. His death can't be attributed to marijuana any more than it can be attributed to tobacco or alcohol. It was his unfortunate choice.

Driving into a tree after too many beers is a choice that kills more people than all illegal drugs combined yet you seem reconciled to it: "Granted that's their personal choice." There're plenty of pot smokers who don't overdosed on hard drugs.

Irresponsible choices should be prosecuted. Driving or working under the influence is intolerable and anyone who supplies drugs to children should be punished viciously. Adults, however, should have the right to do as they choose in their homes if it doesn't interfere with others. This is an individual's choice — not the choice of someone in Washington, and not yours.

Michael Gerber
Amherst

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Last Friday, the Collegian ran a front page story about faculty efforts to restrict tobacco smoking on campus, while an abutting article was about a student group working to ease restrictions on a different type of smoking. I found it an interesting juxtaposition of freedom to verses freedom from.

Americans have always had a hard time balancing personal liberties and protection against the injuries of others. Combined with frequent confusion of cause and effect, these smoking debates are perhaps the best illustration of this dilemma, excluding of course an argument between Mr. and Mrs. Gore over appropriate inaugural theme music.

The majority of the anti-smoking effort is aimed at penalizing those who already smoke, rather than educating both smokers and the 14-year olds targeted by R.J. Reynolds/Nabisco advertising (no relation). "No-Smoking Area" rules are of dubious enforceability, and the need to protect the chancellor from damage suits brought by those who inhale second-hand smoke, as suggested by the policy now under consideration by the faculty senate, is purely imagined.

If you're sending smokers out into the cold to get their nic fix, or requiring them to wear a crimson "S" on their clothing, the battle is lost. You've let tobacco companies steer the agenda and have agreed to fight on their terms. The effort would be better spent seeking to repeal federal subsidies to tobacco farmers or putting together a cartoon campaign featuring a wheezing dromedary named "Joe Cancer."

Tobacco companies have had judges sympathetic to the rights of lung cancer patients barred from wrongful death suits for their partiality, while Washington decries the "unfair trade practices" of southeast Asian nations which attempt to place tariffs or warnings on cigarettes exported from the United States — as our own government requires of those sold domestically.

Josh
REYNOLDS

How would we react if their armies were bold enough to conduct guerilla wars against our sanctioned drug cartels, or even kidnap our head of state to stand trial in their country according to their laws?

On the other side of the coin, while marijuana can't be any better for your lungs and, like alcohol, can do a number on your head, at least you can feel better about who's pocket your money is going into.

As poorly aimed as the effort against tobacco smoking, the 1980s' War on Drugs seemed an excuse to jail large numbers of drug purchasers rather than stop the sellers. The fact these users at the bottom of the food chain happened to share certain age, ethnic, economic and demographic patterns is hardly incidental. The difference between these plebians and others who stood accused, such as Dan Quayle, was that they didn't have friends in the Department of Justice department (most common folk couldn't afford the quantities that other notables, such as Robert Parish have been caught with either).

Now that dozens of our highest lawmakers as well as candidates to the U.S. Supreme Court have admitted to breaking this law, perhaps it is time for a grass roots effort to change it. With all its hysterical propaganda, the War on Drugs was more reminiscent of the 1950s' Red Scare than to the prohibition of the 1930s to which it is so often compared. With the installation of the first all-pot-smoking White House, it is time to bring the debate back from the ideological dungeon in which it has resided for the past decade.

Unfortunately, the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition's front man Aaron Wilson is uniquely unqualified to argue that marijuana does not impair one's judgment. In an address to a Hemp Legalization rally on Amherst Commons last spring, Wilson stood, decked in military beret and camouflage, and told his audience:

- Pot smoking does not distort one's long-term judgment, paranoia or promote violence.
- Pot smokers should arm themselves and be prepared to "shoot anyone who tries to keep us from smoking our pot."

Wilson is a disturbing combination of a single issue zealot and a reactionary NRA member. While many have recommended marijuana as a treatment for glaucoma, Wilson is proof it is no cure for cerebral myopia.

Josh Reynolds is a Collegian columnist.

Strange, but ignorant, ideas are still lurking in our minds

Despite continual attempts by gay, lesbian, bisexual organizations on campus to educate the masses, strange ideas are still lurking within the minds of many students about what it means to be gay, lesbian or bisexual.

Cultural images flood the Happy Valley from the external world of more intolerant behavior. Media images boasting blatant heterosexuality bombard society's visual scope, the Pentagon classifies homosexuals as approximately three fifths of a human being, our churches tell us gays are going to Hell, and most teachers simply deny the fact that the gay community exists.

In a culture encompassed with homophobia, it is not surprising that the wheels of social change are turning at tricycle speed.

During the summer, a co-worker of mine, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ our Savior, proceeded to cheerfully flip open the Bible to the page where it states that gays should be killed. Murder? What ever happened to love thy neighbor? Jesus isn't my savior.

She told me she did not agree with "my lifestyle." My lifestyle? When I asked her what my lifestyle was, she replied, "you know." Oh really?

Contrary to popular ignorance, there are almost as many lifestyles as there are gay people, just like there are almost as many lifestyles as there are heterosexuals. Undeniably, of course, gay and lesbian cultures do exist, like African-American or working class cultures, but to assume that someone's entire way of life is determined solely by their sexuality is wrong.

Gays, lesbians and bisexuals are raised in different ethnic groups, classes, countries, geographic locations and families which mold their experiences and influence their lifestyles. What is my lifestyle? Right now my syllabi and not my sexuality are determining that.

Melanie
DESILVA

Last semester a genuinely curious man asked me what it meant to be bisexual. "Do you have a girlfriend and a boyfriend?" Patiently assuming the role of peer educator, yet silently bursting with agitation, I said, "no."

Brainwashed by the lies spewing from mainstream films, "Geraldo," "Hardcopy" and the Minuteman, many people believe that non-monogomy, menage-a-trois and promiscuity are ingrained in the definition of bisexuality.

Well, guess what? Sharon Stone's promiscuous lifestyle probably represents the same small percentage of the bisexual community as it does the straight community. She certainly does not represent me. I like my male lovers alive.

Recently I discovered that a few individuals in my residence hall assumed my roommate was a lesbian or bisexual because she shared a room and closet space with me. Since when does having short hair and a friend who wears a pink triangle qualify a woman to be a dyke?

Here's a lesson for all you people out there who are quick to label people's sexuality based on appearance. It doesn't work! I have met straight women who fit the lesbian stereotype and lesbians who could be fashion models.

Yet, the most striking aspect of homophobia I have experienced on the UMass campus has been within myself. Last Christmas, when I went to see the Nutcracker in Boston I was seated next to an affectionate gay male couple.

Like heterosexual lovers in a dark theater, they held hands and rested their heads on each other's shoulders. As the performance started, my bisexuality did not stop me from feeling uncomfortable in the presence of this particular gay couple.

Missing most of the production, I panicked, wondering why my logic was not connecting with my emotions. "Oh my God! I'm feeling homophobic. What the hell's wrong with me?"

What was wrong with me? The question should have been — what the hell's wrong with this culture? Whether gay or straight, no individual can expect to quickly discharge a lifetime's worth of homophobic brainwashing.

Internalized homophobia does not simply lurk within the conservative closets of the Republicans, but also within the reluctant minds of many out gay, lesbian and bisexual individuals. It should not be surprising. Culture is a powerful thing.

Melanie DeSilva is a Collegian columnist.

You can do more than whine

Humor me for a while as I tell you a story about some people I know. It won't make sense at first, but by the time it's over you'll understand what I'm after.

Soon after the turn of the century, two families emigrated from Poland — a nation torn to bits by invasions, authoritarian government, poverty, prejudice and God knows what else. These two families had no knowledge of each other's existence, but their aims were similar. They had to get out before it was too late.

Greg
SUKIENNIK

Achieving this goal was no easy task. Imagine doing it yourself — saving enough money to afford moving, packing up as many possessions as you can carry and leaving everything you know behind to travel to a place where you can't even speak the language. No easy task, huh?

One of the families went to Canada first before crossing to Niagara River to the United States and Buffalo, N.Y. The other emigrated directly to Buffalo and went about the business of setting up shop.

Why Buffalo? It was an industrial city with plenty of mill and factory jobs and a large Polish-speaking population. Those, however, were the only advantages the United States offered.

There were no labor laws and no eight-hour day with a lunch break. The equation was simple: you want the job, you do what I tell you. Otherwise, I'll find someone else with hungry children who wants this job more than you do.

There was no welfare to protect you if your landlord decided to throw you out. No government cheese, no subsidized housing and no "reproductive rights" (read: abortion on demand) if you got pregnant and you couldn't afford another mouth to feed. The money did, in fact, run out once on them — with a sixth child just born and five others to feed and clothe.

Don't lose me yet. There's more.

To make a long story short, the two families eventually met when son met daughter. But even a generation after, the hardship wasn't over. The husband had to work two jobs to pay for the land he had bought — and there were three children to feed. Meanwhile, the wife's father was still working two jobs. They had all learned to speak English, and social reform had finally caught on, but it still wasn't easy.

Forty years later, all but one of the original immigrants have passed on, leaving me a life I probably don't deserve. She is 92 years old, still speaks Polish and still lives in her own house, where she bore and raised six children.

Now that I'm done with the story, you probably want to know why I took up 40 lines of space to tell you about how my great-grandparents emigrated to the United States and carved out a life for themselves. You want to know why you should care.

What does the word "oppression" conjure up for you?

There is oppression in this world and on this campus. Fair enough. But here's the punchline — these people I just told you about suffered the same kinds of oppression.

Oppression by capitalist businessowners. Oppression by societal and religious dynamic that insisted women stay home and bear children, lots of children, and too bad if you couldn't afford them. Oppression by a government that didn't care about the welfare of its people. Oppression at the hands of xenophobic "Americans" who, forgetting they went through the same process, thought each wave of immigrants meant another loss of jobs. Face it — being American is about being, at some point, oppressed, unless you're extremely lucky.

My great-grandparents probably didn't even know they were oppressed. They sure as hell didn't blame anyone else, even though they could have. The point is, you can do a lot more to further yourself by taking what you need instead of whining about it and hoping for a handout.

Life is neither easy nor fair. But allowing yourself to be oppressed is admitting that you've already lost. That's not the way it has to be — ask great-grandma.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist.

Hemp is as dangerous as skiing

Ibuprofen is a drug. Tetracycline is a drug. Cannabis Sativa is a plant. Many think this plant is illegal because it's consumed for its psycho-active properties. But other mind-altering substances are perfectly legal — the most popular is alcohol. Nicotine, the highly addictive drug used by roughly one-third of all Americans, is the one product that can kill you if used properly. Tobacco is even subsidized by the government.

Thousands could write a letter praising the uses for hemp in agriculture, paper production and other industries, but I'm writing to defend its recreational use. Whether or not something is dangerous, like speeding, bungee-jumping or downhill skiing, it's my choice as an American adult to engage in these activities.

The charges cannabis consumption leads to the use of "hard drugs" are preposterous. Mr. Rivera (Collegian, Feb. 23), uses an example of a friend of his who died, implying the cause of his death was hemp. However tragic it is, one must realize some people have problems coping with modern society. "Substance abuse" is usually the symptom of personal problems, and can exacerbate them, but it's rarely the cause.

I know two UMass students who smoke hemp on a daily basis and are members of the Honors Program in good standing. Obviously the use of hemp has not impaired their abilities to be productive members of our society, and has not yet driven either of them to other criminal activities. I know two others who are partners and have been running a profitable small business for the past 10 years. They've been hemp smokers for 14.

Pot-smokers are not criminals, and pot-smoking is not a vice. Mr. Rivera should concentrate on the virtues that do not exist in this imperfect world. If he thinks smoking cannabis is wrong, then he shouldn't do it.

Peter S. Wall
Amherst

Life without sex isn't a curse

I was so refreshed and enlightened to read Ms. Wheeler's column (Collegian, Feb. 18) about that "wacky little thing called sex." I was beginning to believe that everyone, like me, who wasn't having sex was a prude or a Bible-thumper (since that term has become so popular these days). Thanks to Ms. Wheeler's column, I have discovered that I am mystified and scared of sex. Not the mention the fact that I am holed up in a motel room somewhere "preaching to my flock."

Now that Ms. Wheeler has told me what I am feeling, I am going to tell her how I really feel. Guess what? I am not afraid of sex. I have known about the birds and the bees since I was about 5. I do not blush when the subject comes up, nor do I ignore it. On the contrary, I believe that, in a healthy marriage, sex is the most beautiful display of love and tenderness created by God.

You guessed it — I'm a virgin. Now not only does Ms. Wheeler know, so does the rest of the University. I am not afraid to admit it, nor am I looking to dispose of it as some sort of a plague. I am not even looking for the right moment, or for love. I am waiting for marriage. I have waited 20 years and I plan to wait the rest of my life if I have to. This does not scare me. I have enough will power that I can stroll by the candy store and not stop. When the time is right I'm going to enjoy my candy. My reasons just happen to be based in the Bible. I happen to follow the teachings of Christ Jesus. He has told me to wait, so I will.

My point is that abstinence (the terrible "A" word) is a viable, healthy option for many people. Many have different reasons for waiting, whether spiritual or not, and many of these people are not scared of sex. They do not feel the need to wear hoop gowns and chastity belts. On the contrary, they seem to go about their business focusing on other things. Does this mean that we are missing out? Maybe. I am sure that many of you are screaming, "Yes, you fool!" Well, this fool has chosen to wait. Remember that, Ms. Wheeler, the next time you stop to ponder sex. Stop by, maybe we can chat awhile, and I promise not to be afraid.

Leneita D. Sherrin
Sunderland

Will Clinton's plan fail?

For the past three years the United States has been suffering from a severe economic recession. An astoundingly large national debt has plagued the nation and made recovery impossible. In response to the $4 trillion debt which is crippling our industries, President Clinton has developed an economic plan to attack the deficit. There's only one problem — it's been tried before.

Romin
THOMSON

During the election, candidate Clinton witnessed millions of Americans express their fears about the dwindling economy. The issue grew so severe that it quickly entered the forefront of American political discussions everywhere. Now President Clinton has responded to their demands by proposing a plan which covers the concluding opinion, shared by many economists, that came out of the woodwork last year. The president's agenda calls for great sacrifices on the part of the public as well as the federal government.

What the president needs to realize is that no matter how much revenue he generates from increasing tax levels, the gains will be lost if the massively oversized U.S. government does not begin to downsize itself.

This was proven in the late '70s by former President Jimmy Carter. Carter, like Clinton, rose atop the shoulders of a people upset by a poor economy and a leadership that could not budget itself. He too addressed the American public and tried to assure them that he would have no trouble adding balance to a tipped national debt. Yet he failed for two major reasons.

First, he was never able to convince people to support any of his programs. He is widely known as one of the poorest communicators to have sat in the Oval Office. Politically, though, his problems ran much deeper than public opinion.

Within the federal government, Carter was unable to positively affect a massive administration whose power has grown immeasurably. Due to his sincere belief that the administrative agencies, in existence at the time, were worthwhile, he refused to cut them completely and instead tried to reach these oversized agencies by imposing limits on their funding.

When he did this he was met by a barrage of resisting bureaucrats fighting for their livelihood. They fought and the president lost the battle. Carter could not lower the budget because, as president, he was simply not powerful enough to do so.

The debt grew, public opinion fell, and faced with dissent from inside and out of Washington, Carter became one of the few American presidents to be voted out of office. The new president must learn from the mistakes of his Democratic predecessor, for the country can no longer ignore the pressing burden of our debt.

However, there is hope. President Clinton is already succeeding in areas Carter never could. Clinton has been successfully building support for his agenda by touring the nation and preaching his program. Polls show the number of people looking favorably on our new president growing each day. As public support grows so too does congressional favor.

Clinton has separated himself from one of Carter's failings by demonstrating his ability to communicate and win support. However, he still will need to develope a method to implement his spending cutbacks successfully. It still remains to be seen whether the massive program cuts his recovery plan demands can be placed into a federal government that has not been willing to shrink.

Romin Thomson is a Colle[illegible] an staff member.

■ Robinson

continued from page 1

Student Government President Jen Wood said Robinson is doing a good job in easing the tensions between students and administrators.

"He sees himself as a link for us. The thing I like about him is that he talks straight," said Wood, who was on the the search committee that unanimously voted for Robinson to join the University. "We were really impressed by him."

Although Robinson said, as of last Monday, he has not read the SGA constitution, but said he would like to see a strong student government. Only with a strong student government, Robinson said, will there be better communication between students and faculty.

Robinson has been working to break the gridlock between the student government and Student Activities Office.

"He has been very open in listening to us, although it is too early to evaluate [his performance]," said Student Activities Business Manager Allen H. Brainerd.

In addition to giving students power, Robinson said he would like to strengthen the University's Legal Services Office. But he said he did not want to give Legal Services the power to sue the University.

Robinson said he plans to have some computer labs open 24 hours a day, to give students greater access to University resources.

Evelyn Rivera, an a senior sociology major working in the Third World Affairs Office, said Robinson and Chancellor Richard O'Brien have been working well together in getting the Latino Center established in the Hampshire Dinning Commons.

Robinson said the Asian Cultural Center, currently located in Knowlton with the Learning Center, will be moved to the Worcester Dinning Commons to provide more space.

"To a large extent, our mission is one of teaching and learning along with research and public service," Robinson said. "For me coming out here as an outsider I noticed right off the bat that there is a hard edge to this campus. And that is what I would like to see if we can work on it so when people come here. . . the feeling on this campus would be one of openness where people are welcomed."

DANCER/CHOREOGRAPHER
ARIE BURSZTYN will perform on Monday, March 1, 8pm
Bowker Auditorium
$5 Gen. Public
$3 Student
(free to Hillel Activity Card Holders)

Arie Bursztyn has toured with "Kol Demama" Company, "Karmon" Dance Company and participated in the first creations for Western dancers by Ushio Amagatsu, creator of Sankai Juku. Arie Bursztyn has also toured and presented his own work in Israel and the U.S.

A Jewish Arts Festival Event sponsored by UMASS Hillel, UMASS Arts Council, and the UMASS Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund.

News from other U's

Compiled by Dan Wetzel

"Honk if you're a homophobe"

A Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual dance at the University of Idaho was disrupted by a group of protestors, who openly described themselves as homophobic, according to The Argonaut, the student newspaper on campus.

"Honk if your a homophobe" and "AIDS distribution center" proclaimed signs held by about a dozen protesters outside the dance.

"We object to the attempt to introduce homosexuality to mainstream society as an acceptable behavior," protester Doug Wilson said.

The protestors handed out pamphlets entitled "We are homophobics standing against sodomy."

Wilson said he and others we pleased when both Freddy Mercury, the lead singer Queen, and movie star Rock Hudson died of AIDS.

"Homosexuality is a sin," Wilson said. "People who sin deserve to die."

As expected the protestors meet resistance from some of the dancegoers. There were dozens of shouting matches.

"They (protestors) are creating an atmosphere frighteningly similar to what happened in Oregon, which resulted in the death of two gay people," Kathy Sprague, the co-chair of a local gay student alliance.

Wilson used The Bible as proof of his views.

"By sharing the gospel with homosexuals, we can show them a way out," Wilson said.

One student wasn't impressed,, "They pick a few biblical passages to suit their agenda and leave others out."

University administrators had no comment on the issue.

Kids today

At the University of Washington, a man was mugged by a knife wielding teenager, who stole only a recently purchased twelve-pack of beer.

The teenager, according to a police report in The Daily, the student newspaper of UW, followed the man out of the liquor store and drew a buck knife on him, demanding a twelve-pack in exchange for the man's well-being.

In other teenage crime, a 20-year-old student the University of Pittsburgh was beaten on a street corner by a local 15-year-old, according to the student newspaper on campus, The Pitt.

The fight was witnessed by police officers, who took the teenager into custody. The reason for the fracas is unknown.

Porn 150

At the University of California at Santa Barbara, students can take a four credit class dealing with pornographic film.

"Film Studies 150" covers all aspects of the pornographic film genre, including straight, gay and amateur films.

"We want very serious students form different disciplines," Edward Branigan, chair of the film studies department, said.

"Pornography is a highly charged genre that has political and social weight to it."

This semester, 70 students are enrolled in the course. Branigan did not mention if students could receive practicum or internship credits for the course.

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
■ TONIGHT ■
CHARTREUSE SKI PARTY
- Final Night -
Over $1000.00 Ski Package Given Away
Peter Pan
Stratton
SKI EXPRESS
Boots by Raichle
Bindings From Look
Sponsored By COMPETITIVE EDGE
SKI & BIKE
HOLYOKE & HADLEY
"GET THE EDGE AT COMPETITIVE EDGE"
Win Passes to Stratton From Peter Pan
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

FLY TO THE BEACHES OF FLORIDA
Fly to Warm Sunny Florida
Spring Break
ONLY $129 ONE WAY
Daily non-stop jet air carrier service from Worcester to West Palm Beach, Florida beginning March 1
For complete information, schedules and advanced ticket purchasing, call our toll free number from 8:00 am to 8:00 pm today!
THE Florida SHUTTLE A PUBLIC CHARTER OPERATOR
"Your New England / Florida Connection."
1-800-FLY-SOUTH
1-800-359-7688
*The Florida Shuttle is a public charter operator with Direct Air Carrier Service Provided by Miami Air with Boeing 727s. Optional services include food and drink service for sale on board the aircraft and a $10 charge for carry-on baggage over and above our carry-on policy. For further information, refer to the required operator passenger contract.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
NOPE, TOO COLD — Campus dog decides the water is too cold to chase the campus ducks through.

Exercise prolongs life

But it's no fountain of youth, study says

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press

BOSTON — Here's something for middle-age men to think about while jogging: Taking up vigorous exercise adds about 10 months to their lives.

Those who start while young gain a bit more, perhaps a year or two, while men who wait until their 50s or 60s add a few months at best.

These results, the latest from a long-running study of Harvard graduates, show that despite its many apparent benefits, exercise is no fountain of youth.

"Some may be discouraged over the fact that you don't gain a lot of years. I hope people won't be," said Dr. Ralph S. Paffenbarger of Stanford University, who directed the study.

In fact, he said, the work suggests it's never too late to benefit from exercise. Even those who take it up past age 75 live a little longer.

The figures are averages. Some who exercise probably extend their lives for several years. Other gain no extra time.

However, Paffenbarger noted that living longer is just one reason to work out. Those who keep in shape also tend to live better: They have fewer chronic diseases, such as heart trouble and diabetes.

The study also demonstrates the difficulty of extending the human life span. Other works have shown that eliminating all cancer, for instance, would only add about two years to the average human life.

However, commented Dr. Graham Colditz of Harvard Medical School: "When looking at life expectancy as it is in the Western world today, adding another year is a fairly major shift at the population level."

Most experts believe that exercise is good for women, too, but it's uncertain whether they would gain the same amount of extra life as did the men in the study.

The latest study was based on questionnaires filled out by 10,269 male Harvard graduates. Among the findings, published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine:

- Men who take up moderately vigorous sports between ages 45 and 54 live 10 months longer than those who remain sedentary. For ages 55 to 64, exercise adds nine months, for 65 to 74 it adds six months and for ages 75and 84 two months.
- Middle-age men who give up cigarettes add 1 1/2 years to their lives, while those who both quit smoking and start exercising gain almost three years.
- Exercise seemed to extend lives most by warding off heart attacks, although those who worked out were less likely than other men to die of all causes.

The researchers considered moderately vigorous sports to include such things as brisk walking, tennis and other court games, biking, jogging and digging in the garden. Less demanding pastimes, such as pitching horseshoes, bowling and golfing with a cart, were not deemed strenuous enough.

Another study in the journal looked at the benefits of exercise a different way.

That study, by Leiv Sandvik and others from Central Hospital of Akershus in Nordbyhagen, Norway, tested 1,960 men's stamina on stationary cycles, then watched their health for 16 years.

It found that the risk of death among the one-quarter of the men who were most fit was about half that of the least fit.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Gregory D. Curfman, a journal deputy editor, noted that such studies don't actually prove exercise makes people live longer.

He noted that sedentary men might avoid sports because they are already not as healthy as avid exercisers. Another possibility is that people who work out also have other healthy lifestyles, such as low-fat diets.

"Until the answer is known, the public should be given the straight facts and spared the hype," Curfman wrote.

■ astronomy

continued from page 1

The telescope would be run by a partnership of the University of Massachusetts and three Mexican institutions: the National Institute for Astrophysics, the Center for Research and Higher Education, and the National University in Mexico City. In addition to research, it would be used to train students.

Irvine said organizers want to seek a site on a mountaintop in Mexico in a dry area, where airborne water vapor would not interfere with reception.

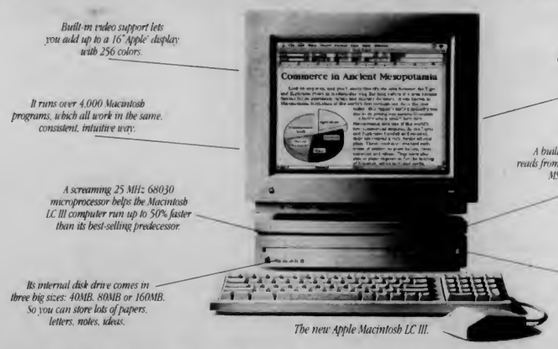
Mexico gives a view of the southern sky, where the hub of our Milky Way galaxy is visible. Most giant telescopes are in the north, so that part of the sky has been studied more intensively.

If the Mexican government approves the project, it could be built in about five years, Irvine said. He gave no timetable for approval.

New from Apple

Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller:
a lot of Macintosh for an affordable price.

The best investments start with inside information.



The new Apple Macintosh LC III.

When you know what we've built into the new Macintosh® LC III computer, its low price tag looks even better. It's the successor to Apple's top-selling personal computer—the Macintosh LC II. And it has even more speed, power and flexibility. Plus built-in networking, built-in file sharing and more. See the new Macintosh LC III today by visiting your Apple Campus Reseller. Where you'll get special student pricing, as well as service during college.* And discover the power of Macintosh. The power more college students choose. The power to be your best.®

UNIVERSITY STORE

Stop in for more information - or call 545-2619

Campus Center 545-2619
Hours: Monday-Friday 9am-5pm Saturday 11am-3pm

Service is available only from Apple Campus Resellers which are Apple Authorized Service Providers. © 1993 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh and The power to be your best are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. SuperDrive is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc. MS-DOS is a registered trademark of Microsoft Corporation.

■ environment

continued from page 1

other 40 to 50 percent. More than 5 million acres of Brazilian Amazon forests have been destroyed. In 30 years, the area affected will be as large as India.

The income generated from deforestation finds its way to the private companies and not the rural poor. Rural women in countries like India are being forced to travel three to five hours a day to search for firewood.

The battlegrounds for proxy wars (or war-related research) have always been in the Third World. A "harmless weed killer" (a U.S. military term) tore the mangrove forests from Vietnam, destroyed rare species and deformed youth and children for life. Even today, not a sapling grows, except for the fire resistant, indestructible and useless plant called "American grass."

On March 1, 1954, the United States exploded a hydrogen bomb on an island in Micronesia, located east of the Philippines in the Pacific Ocean. The result has been "jellyfish babies" with no eyes and no heads. They are born twisted and live only for a few hours. The adult population dies from thyroid tumors, stomach cancer and leukemia. A second series of 43 bombs were dropped on the neighboring Eniwetok Atoll in the subsequent years, creating nuclear nomads out of the inhabitants of the islands. Naturally, the U.S. government has taken great pains to hide its tracks.

Today, one of the most gruesome acts of Western dominance is the dumping of toxic and radioactive waste in parts of the Third World.

In a memorandum dated Dec. 12, 1991, Lawrence Summers, a noted World Bank economist currently with the Clinton Administration, had argued for the disposal of toxic wastes in parts of Africa, for it is underpolluted and underpopulated. The West appears to have responded favorably to this suggestion.

A study conducted by Greenpeace Environmental Organization estimates that at least 115 shipments of toxic waste have been shipped to Mexico, Argentina, Brazil, Panama, Uruguay, Morocco, Senegal, Congo, Zimbabwe and Djibouti in the past two years. Fifteen thousand tons of toxic industrial incinerator ash has been shipped from Philadelphia to the Island of Kassa, Guinea. Forty-thousand tons of deadly toxins, including dioxin poly-chloro bi phenyl has been shipped from Italy to Koko in Nigeria. Sesco, a British company contracted the West African nation Benin to store five million tons of waste. A West German company has exported toxic waste to Liberia.

Peace, prosperity and a relatively clean environment in the North is maintained by reeking ecological havoc in the lesser-developed countries. Lesser-developed countries are denied the opportunity to create their own infrastructures for national science and technology in areas such as agricultural research. In most lesser-developed countries, there are no sustained programs to adapt imported technological innovations to suit local conditions. This has perpetuated their technological stagnations and dependency.

The multinationals from the West have been able to "buy off" the ruling class in the lesser-developed countries. This "compradore elite" in collaboration with the multinationals, under the pretext of development, are responsible for the adoption of failed programs that have led to famines, drought, pollution and environmental degardation in the Third World.

Shymala Ivatury is a UMass graduate student.

MELINDA LESTER / COLLEGIAN

NOT JUST COLD, FUN TOO — Biology major Megdalene Moise and Andrea Presti prove snow can be fun and not just slippery, cold and wet.

N. Korea said to be evading U.N. officials

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — North Korea has manufactured enough material to produce at least one nuclear weapon but is hiding its production from international inspectors, the new director of the CIA said today.

R. James Woolsey said North Korea's plutonium production capabilities are "our most grave current concern" among a host of countries seeking to obtain or that already have nuclear weapons.

Woolsey, in his first testimony before Congress since being sworn in earlier this month, offered the first official confirmation of growing reports about North Korea's attempts to hide its nuclear program from the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Woolsey said North Korea also apparently had agreed to sell ballistic missiles to Libya, having already sold extended-range Scud rockets to Syria and Iran.

North Korea's standoff with the IAEA could end up before the U.N. Security Council. The governors of the international agency held a closed session Monday after North Korea again refused an inspection of its nuclear facilities. North Korea had said earlier that any attempt to force a special inspection could lead to war in Korea.

Woolsey, a former arms control negotiator, painted a worrisome picture of the state of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons spread throughout the world. He said more than 25 countries, many of them hostile to the United States and its allies, may have or may be developing such weapons.

He also singled out Russia and Ukraine for criticism, saying they were selling missile technology to India and China in violation of the Missile Technology Control Regime, into which the Soviet Union entered along with the United States and other weapons producers in the 1980s.

Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586 5726
213 MAIN ST

SON OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586 1707
21 STATE ST
NORTHAMPTON

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Busch & Busch Light $9.99 case cans
Labatts $7.99 12 pk bottles
ARCTIC BAY $11.99 case bottles
S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75 L
Hudy Gold Lager cans & Hudepohl Premium cans
Reg. $10.99 case Now! $7.79 case
$6.99 case (10 cases or more)
American Beer
Still Only $7.29 case cans
(Quantity Discounts Available)
Sam Adams Winter Lager $4.99 6 pk
Schaefer $7.99 case cans
Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) Delivery Available

BANANARAMA fabulous frozen YOGURT
Soft-Serve Frozen Yogurt Shop
Delicious FAT-FREE & Sugar-Free flavors
One Boltwood Walk, Amherst, 253-2774
186 Main Street, Northampton, 586-9659

REKINDLE YOUR PASSION For Indian Food at
The Valley's Original
INDIA HOUSE
Restaurant ON STATE STREET
Where Indian Food is more than Curry!
For Excellent Food and Hospitality Come to Our House...
45 State Street
Northampton, MA 586-6344

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

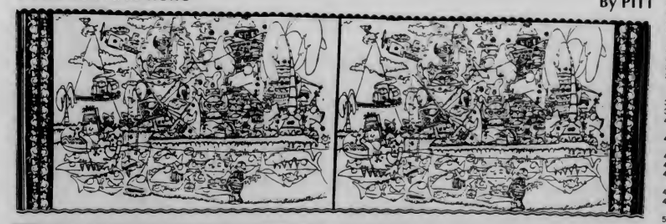
JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT



THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

How attack-wiener dogs are trained

Quote of the Day

"Once you get people laughing, they're listening and you can tell them almost anything."
– Herb Gardner

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put your personal affairs in better order. Lost treasures may be revealed once the clutter is cleared away. Romance will be especially rewarding for singles this coming weekend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Ease upon the rhetoric at work and just do the best job you can. Anew feeling of power and confidence helps you convince someone to forge an alliance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Nervous energy need not turn to impatience — use it to catch up on a backlog of chores. Your originality and inventiveness are high. Circumstances beyond your control may dictate a tough choice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Skill and quick action are essential in your line of work. Good friends share their concerns in a serious way. Love can be heartrending as well as ecstatic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Someone's emotional problems could make you work more difficult. Do not despair. A combination of charm and brilliance helps you get your way. Be generous with praise.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The talents you have worked to develop are "hot" now. Attending seminars could increase your earning potential. Discuss your plans with someone who is perceptive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An excellent day for real estate ventures. Showcase your special talents as a negotiator. Avoid overload by not scheduling more work than you can handle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Work requires more concentration and effort than usual. An envious associate may try to interfere with your plans. Isolate yourself as much as possible.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 12): Lucky occurrences may direct your finances or dealings with authority figures. A brainstorming session will teem with brilliance, innovation and mutual consideration.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): With your knowledge and understanding, you will be a prime mover today. Those in authority respond favorably to a well-worked proposal. A raise is likely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your bright ideas make you a key player in Friday videoconferences. Listen closely to family members to hear what is not being said. Act on a romantic hunch. Your home is your castle. Look both ways when crossing the street.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your business acumen is in great demand now. You may possess inside information that is indispensable to those in charge. Make acts brief. Look for ways to spice up your love life!

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

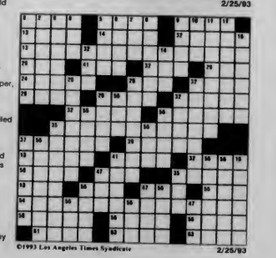
ACROSS
1 Symbol of authority
5 Military meal
9 Utah resort
13 First person
14 Landed
15 Black tea
17 Van Gogh painting
20 "For — a jolly good..."
21 Pale
22 Moist
23 Gal of song
24 Muslim decree
26 Write
27 Alpha follower
28 Parched
29 Declaimer of heroic verse
31 Exeter's locale
32 Social asset
34 Abandon
35 With "The," Hepburn TV film of '79
37 Demeaned
39 Finnish lake
40 Language for the Masses
41 Give the cold shoulder
42 Grapple
46 Chert
47 Tidbit for Dobbin
48 Tear
49 Mont Blanc, for one
50 Actress Harper, to friends
51 Whitney or Wallach
53 Formerly called
54 Boxers' affliction
58 Improvise
59 Bread spread
60 Nice seasons
61 Capital of Mancha
62 Alert
63 Mother of Helen

DOWN
1 Singer Johnny
2 Stick
3 Funny Sid
4 Part of H.R.E.
5 Garbo role
6 Dash
7 Pose
8 Put in the hold
9 "... like — out of hell"
10 Fate
11 — Sisters: college group
12 Bubbla maker
16 Obliquely
18 See red?
19 Dusk, to Donne
25 Banking action
26 Submit
27 Implore
29 Truss
30 "— was saying"
31 Fast buck?
33 "Mourning Becomes Electra" role
34 Uninteresting
35 Hartle
36 Modern-sounding antelope
37 Llama's cousin
38 I Down's repertoire
41 See 21 Across
43 Rococo
44 Give a look
45 City near Salonika
47 Lout
48 Title for Galahad
50 — Valentia, Calabria commune
51 Jug
52 Boxer Spinks
55 Role for Mae West
56 Biographer Winslow
57 Shocking swimmer

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	E	S	S		C	A	S	A		A	D	A	P	T
A	C	T	E		S	A	L	E	C		P	I	L	A
F	O	O		S	W	I	T		H	O	N	O	R	S
E	L	A	T	E	S		T	I	E	D		Z	O	O
R	E	P	O	T		M	I	S	E	R	Y		N	G
			L	O	O	P	E	R		S	C	A	N	D	U	S	T
L	I	N	S	E	E	D		I	D	M	A	R	A
L	E	A	N		S	O	N		S	H	E	D	S
A	R	M	S		S	P	A	S	M		B	E	T	S
			D	A	D	A		A	R	T	I	M	E	R
P	O	L	L		N	E	T		A	E	R	A	T	E
A	L	O	U	D		F	U	L	B	R	I	G	H	T
R	O	U	T	E		R	E	S		S	W	E	E	T
D	R	A	F	T		G	E	M		H	A	R	M

2/25/93



©1993 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 2/25/93

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Copy Editor ..... Jason George
PhotoTechnician ..... Aram Comjean
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Jim Ganley, Sean Ramsey, Amanda Mead

Menu

LUNCH
Pizza
Corned Beef
BASICS LUNCH
Pizza
Veggies with Dill

DINNER
Roast Pork
Eggplant Parm
BASICS DINNER
Garbanzo Beans w/Rice
Eggplant Parm

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Patriots rebuild for future

With the NFL draft just a few months away, and the free agency hearings coming to an end, the rebuilding of the Patriots is about to begin. Sorry Pats fans, but don't buy your Super Bowl tickets just yet.

The Cowboys went from worst to first in four short years, don't expect the Pats to do likewise. I don't care if Vince Lombardi is the new coach, it will be a while before this team contends.

Glen GOLAND

The biggest problem the Patriots have is the front office. When Jerry Jones bought the Dallas Cowboys, he bought 100 percent of the team. Jones then fired everyone, from Landry to the water boys, and brought in coach Jimmy Johnson, an old friend and former teammate. Johnson and Jones made every decision on the organization, there was no general manager or vice president to get in the way.

Look at the top teams in the league — Dallas, Washington, and San Francisco — all have coaches and owners who work together to bring the best players to their organizations, at almost any cost.

In New England, there are all sorts of executives and important office people who constantly second guess each other. The Patriots front office is similar to the government of our country — there are too many people who don't want to risk their own hides over important decisions, so nothing ever really gets accomplished.

New head coach Bill Parcells has been given a lot of power, so hopefully the stalemates in the front office are a thing of the past. The Patriots front office is such a mess that unless Parcells takes control, they aren't ready to take the next step.

The obvious solution is to get new players. The Pats have some talented athletes, but there are a lot of holes. In four years, the Cowboys made 46 trades, signed 29 free agents, and drafted 54 players. The Patriots need this sort of quick action to bring in new blood.

Minnesota already made the stupidest trade in history, so don't expect the Pats to trade John Stevens for eight or nine draft picks, unless he takes up bobsledding. The chances of a blockbuster trade are very slim, so the Pats will have to rely on more conventional methods of recruitment.

With free agency in the NFL, and names like Reggie White, Boomer Esiason and Steve Young available, excitement is in the air. Excuse me, this is New England, the team is not good, the stadium stinks, and the owner wants a one way ticket to St. Louis. Most players would rather play for Tampa Bay – at least it's warm there.

Unfortunately, big time players will go to contenders like Washington, Green Bay and Minnesota. With any luck, Parcells will attract a few impact players to fill in some of the gaps.

The Patriots will have to rebuild through the draft. The Pats have drafted well recently, and hopefully will select Drew Bledsoe with the first pick. If New England wants to emulate Dallas, they need an Aikman-like QB, Bledsoe is the man. The Pats receiving corps of Fryar, Timpson, McMurtry, and the return of Hart Lee Dykes should be potent.

The missing link is at quarterback. If Bledsoe is selected, he will prosper under Parcells, who has a history of teaching tough young quarterbacks the ways of the NFL. Ever heard of Phil Simms?

The Patriots could go into the free agency pool to pick up a veteran QB to play while Bledsoe learns the ropes. There is talk that the Pats will try to pick up Simms, a veteran quarterback, and a good friend of Parcells. If Simms is unavailable, expect the Pats to chase Esiason or Steve Young. Scott Zolak will probably stick around, but expect Hugh Millen and Tom Hodson to join Dan Quayle in the unemployment line.

With two or three added impact players, the defense is among the best in the AFC (for what it's worth). Parcells' trademark is tough defense, give it a year or two, and the defense is top notch.

On the field, the Pats are enthusiastic. They have a new coach, a new system and a newfound hope. Unfortunately, until the Pats figure out who owns the team, and whether the team is going to play in Foxborough, St. Louis, or at a dome in Worcester or Boston, they cannot contend.

Glen Goland is a Collegian correspondent

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

PLAYING HARD – Harper Williams and the rest of the Minuteman basketball team has been hard at practice all week in preparation for Saturday's game against West Virginia.

Madness

continued from page 12

stifling Dean Smith defense.

There's no one who can tell me that with Henderson, the Hoosiers still lose that game to Ohio State on Tuesday night. Give Buckeye coach Randy Ayers a lot of credit. The Buckeyes could have packed it in trailing by 13 midway through the second half, but came back behind the shooting of Jamie Skelton to make Indiana the fifth team to fall from atop the polls this year.

Is there any doubt that Glenn Robinson is the newcomer of the year in college hoops? I hope not. The man only leads the country's best conference (Big Ten) in scoring and is second in rebounding. Others worthy of mention are Jason Kidd of California (he leads the nation with 3.9 steals per game and coaches fired with 1), Othello Harrington of NIT-bound Georgetown, and Yinka Dare (the new Nigerian Nightmare) of George Washington.

And just who is the player of the year? It might have been Calbert Cheaney of Indiana before he disappeared in Sunday's win over Purdue and Tuesday's loss to OSU (you think he misses those Henderson screens?). It might have been Penny Hardaway, but like I said, his team is a bust and he's taking most of the blame. It might have been Grant Hill of Duke, but a recent injury has him on the shelf. And it might have been Jamal Mashburn of Kentucky, but has anyone heard from him lately?

It all comes down to the two big studs of the Big 10: the aforementioned Robinson and Chris Webber of Michigan. Take your pick, both are deserving candidates.

Was I the only one screaming at my television set on Sunday when John Thompson called time-out with 3.6 seconds left and his NIT-bound Hoyas trailing Seton Hall by 10? This borders on the absurd. Actually, it goes way past absurd. What was he thinking: a quick touchdown and a field goal and this baby's headed to OT fellas?

Dr. Tom Davis is easily the coach of the year. He lost his second best player, power forward Chris Street, to a fatal car crash in mid-January. Not only did he help his players cope with the loss of a friend, but he has the Hawkeyes playing some inspired ball. They are currently 18th in the nation and will not be a welcome addition on any team's post-season schedule.

Sean P. Hayden is a Collegian staff member.

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN SPORTS PAGE.
THE COLLEGIAN CAMPUS CENTER ROOM 113

COME CLEAN WITH US
Open 7 days a week 7am - 10pm
SOUTH TOWNE COMMONS LAUNDROMAT
479 West St., South Amherst

Speedwash
Open 24 Hours
11 Pray St., Amherst

HUNAN GOURMET
CHINESE RESTAURANT
The aroma, sound & taste of authentic Chinese cuisine prepared Hunan, Szechuan, Mandarine or Cantonese style - especially for you!
ADVOCATE READERS' CHOICE 1992 1st Place
FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
261 King St., Northampton • 585-0202 • Ample Parking
Open 7 Days A Week
TAKE OUT SERVICE AVAILABLE

Crofts

Continued from page 12

pound-for-pound championship of the world. The first round of Hearns-Hagler was one of the greatest rounds in the history of boxing. Hagler defended his crown as he knocked Hearns silly in round three.

In the late '80s, boxing interest slipped noticeably. This is where Norris and Chavez have got to come in. Both fighters have shown in the past that they are not afraid to fight anyone.

Norris, earlier in his career was knocked into La-La-Land by Julian Jackson. Instead of fighting a tomato-can in his next fight, which would have been acceptable, Norris took on the ever-dangerous John "The Beast" Mugabi. The result? A stunning right cross by Norris led to an equally stunning one round stoppage of Mugabi.

Norris' list of opponents since Mugabi reads like a who's-who- in-boxing. He retired Sugar Ray Leonard, pulverized Meldrick Taylor and stopped Donald "The Cobra" Curry. Clearly, Norris is not afraid of a challenge.

Chavez's greatness comes from his record and skill in the ring. Chavez has a will to win that is unmistakable.

Behind on the scorecards, Chavez knocked out Meldrick Taylor with two seconds left in the 12th and final round. Later on, Chavez tortured "The Macho Man" Hector Camacho for 12 brutal rounds. Looking around, both Chavez and Norris know, it is time for them to fight.

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian columnist.

ice

Continued from page 12

followed by the 5-2 Wolverines with the "Cameltoes" and "Silver Bullets" not far behind.

The Mother Puckers appear to be a team putting things together at 3-2-1. Puckers left wing Doug Saulnier said, "The playoffs here are always interesting — we have an older team, we were the champions two years ago."

An important question for these players is what are the chances of some making next year's UMass squad. Saulnier said maybe 10 players from this program will be on the team, but the league stands for more than just the possibility of being on next year's team.

"I'm just here to have fun, as most guys are," Saulnier said.

However, there are some players putting up some impressive numbers, led by the Hanson Brothers' Will Hawthorne. He leads the league with 15 points and is tied with Gavigan for the goal lead with eight.

One thing unique about this league is that players from rival teams referee other games. An unfortunate factor is the deteriorating ice surface.

Game times for the league are 9 p.m., 10:10 p.m. and 11:15 p.m. weeknights.

Thursday - Friday - Saturday
DANCING
with
D.J. Pete Free
$2.00 Menu Nachos
9:30 - 10:30
Every Night
THE 25 PUB
CELEBRATES 25 YEARS 1968 • 1993 IN AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE
Busch, Busch Light Case cans ..... $9.99 (+ dep)
Miller "High Life" Cans
6 pk.....$2.70 (+ dep) Case.....$9.99 (+ dep)
Catamount "Trio" - Plus Post Road: Mix 'n Match
6 pk.....$4.69 (+ dep) Case.....$17.99 (+ dep)
Gallo 1.5 L Chablis, Rhine, Burgundy, Chenin Blanc, Blush..$3.99
Concha Y Toro Chile Cab Sauv/Sauv Blanc 1.5 L.....$5.79
Firewater 100 proof Cinnamon Schnapps 750 ml...$12.49
Peppermint Schnapps 101 proof 750 ml.....$12.49
Poland Springs Vodka 80 proof 1.75 L.....$9.99
Crown Royal 750 ml.....$14.49
LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes
Open 9 am - 11 pm
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

PERSONALS

ACTIVITIES

Auditions for the UMass Theatre Guild Production of Bedroom Farce Saturday (2/27) at 12 noon; Sun (2/25) at 12 noon or 7 pm all auditions will be in CC804 only one session need be attended ??? Call 545-0415

ANNOUNCEMENTS

EUROPE THIS SUMMER? ONLY $169!! JET THERE ANYTIME FOR $169! REPORTED IN LET'S GO! AND NY TIMES. CARRIBEAN - $189 R/T AIR TO SOMEWHERE SUNNY. CALIFORNIA $129 ONE WAY, EITHER WAY. AIRHITCH @ 212 864-2000

History Honors Society
Phi Alpha Theta
Is now accepting applications
Applications are available in Herter 808
Both Undergraduate and graduate students

UMass Blood Drive
Today 11:00-4:00
Grad. Center - Goodell -- Lobby

AUTO FOR SALE

83 VW Rebbit GTi high miles runs strong dependable many new parts snow tires included $900 or BO call Todd 548-2265

Ford Escort '87
No rust runs great must sell!!
$2000/B.O.
Call 665-2350

72 VW Super Beetle runs strong solid body many new parts minor front end damage easily fixable $500 or BO call Todd 548-2265

COLLEGE PIZZA

SPRING SPECIAL
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings add $1
549-6098
549-6073

FOR RENT

Cape Cod -- group summer rentals -- Waterfront Houses Falmouth Area 508-477-6000

Cape Cod -- Group rentals in all areas for summer season.
Reasonably Priced!
Honey Sperco, Broker,
394-2857 days, 398-9367 evenings

Room downtown. Quiet, private; lease through Aug.; $350/mo inclusive 253-4236 9am - 9pm

FOR SALE

Bose Speakers, Sony Receiver and CD Player $350.00 or B.O. 253-3841 Leave message.

Guns N Roses
2 floor tickets
Mullens Arena 3/19
546-4910

Metallica Photos from Mullins Show 8x10, 11x14. Tape covers. Call 253-9794 after 7 pm. Josh.

OW Ticket To Los Angeles
Use by 3/10 $125
413-586-7865

FOUND

Little Blue Phone Book on Saturday
says "memoranda" on the front
Call 6-6212 to claim

GREEKS AND CLUBS

$1,000 AN HOUR!
Each member of your frat, sorority, team, club, etc. pitches in just one hour and your group can raise $1000 in just a few days! Plus a chance to earn $1000 for yourself! No cost. No obligation.
1-800-932-0528 ext. 65

HEALTH

Condoms by mail discreet. BNK Box 1151 Andover, MA 01810

HELP WANTED

Animal Science Majors work on Cape Cod Day camp in North Falmouth area has several openings for camp counselors to teach children about Farm animals, pet care, ocean ecology, horses, or environmental education. Prefer college student enrolled in Animal Science or other related program. Room and board possible. Contact: Ed Powers, Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 265, Boston, MA 02117 (617)426-9170, or visit table during UMass Camp Day, March 2nd.

COOK WANTED FOR DAY CAMP Day camp in North Falmouth area needs a cook to prepare meals for camp staff. Prepare breakfast and dinner for staff of eight and lunch for 25, Monday-Friday. Approximately 30 hours per week. Room and board possible. Contact Ed Powers at (617)426-9170 or write P.O. Box 265 Boston, MA 02117, or visit table during UMass Camp Day March 2nd.

Camp Staff Openings: Girls' resident/day camps (Stafford Springs, Bristol, CT) Seek administrators, Counselors willing to work and play hard start 6/20. Call 203-677-2667 for application or see Connecticut Yankee Girl Scouts at Camp Day March 2 (Student Union Ballroom) 10-5

Camp Trucking is interviewing for summer positions during spring break. Individuals will learn different phases of business management, handle phones, and have general office assignments. File-maser Pro and Macintosh experience helpful. $7/hr. Relaxed atmosphere. Call 508-853-1744 before March 1.

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT - Make money teaching basic conversational English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room and board and other benefits! Make $2000-$4000+ per month. No previous training or teaching certificate required. For employment programs call (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Postal Jobs Available! Many positions. Great Benefits. call 1-800-436-4365 ext. p-3306

Summer Camp on Cape Cod
Need enthusiastic, dedicated people to work/live with kids. Beautiful location, excellent program.
Competitive Salaries. Call James, at 549-8353 for info and application

INSTRUCTION

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

I need my bookbag back!
Black leather shoulder bag containing extremely important items.
Hampshire DC -- Feb 18
Call 6-7187. No questions asked.

Lost Ring -- Reward
Totman -- Feb 1st
Friendship "LTM"
Call collect 508-827-4555

Lost Wire-rim glasses in the back of the Big Green American pick-up that gave me a ride to school last week. Please call 253-9794 after 9 pm. Ask for Mr. Clark

MUSICIANS

Bands Wanted:
Perform in the
Su Ballroom In April call 546-4812
or 253-9707

PERSONALS

Amande--
Your are truly a beautiful person.
Smile for me and most important,
Smile for yourself.
I Love you with all my heart,
Peter

Congratsultions to AXO's new pledges -- Jennifer, Jane, Alie, Renee, Kristen, Branda, Keri, Christine, & Melissa!
Your Rute!

Happy 21st Birthday Kimoseme
Take off the plaid skirt and have some more tequila -- we're going to get you DRUNK!!
Love,
B.J.J. & R.

Ignorence is Bliss, problem solved with just one kiss -- living colour stain 3/2/93

Jason-- you are a blackbelt in Judo and the keeper of my dreams. Will you give me a chance? Go to SBA library Thurs. 3:45 or reply. Waiting....

John we met at the Pub last Fri.
You gave me the wrong phone # was that intentional??
-- T

Linde,
Have you had a marshmellow today?

Matt Bakar is 21!!!
Happy B-day, now we are coming over to your apt to make long distance calls K&K

RIDE WANTED

I need a ride to Ithaca/Syracuse
Friday Feb. 26 Ricky 6-5260 SS

Rides needed to Waltham, Brandeis, or nearby. Any weekend, will pay. Call Alison 6-5373

To Florida for SB Tampa Orlando or further south. Share driving gas 586-5822 Nandor

ROOMMATE WANTED

